These Are The Things That Goldwyn Knew

FROM the beginning, Goldwyn had little or no trouble shaping and agreeing on the basic policy of this organization. We had certain definite knowledge on which we could work.

1. We knew that the Goldwyn policy must embody those things of which exhibitors approved.

2. We knew that exhibitors desired a staple, sane policy of open bookings.

3. We knew that exhibitors demanded improved productions—an increase in the quality of pictures.

4. We knew exhibitors preferred to conduct business with us through our own branches, instead of through regional franchise middlemen.

5. And we also knew that exhibitors desired new refinements, new ideas, new skill, new stories — in fact, an entirely new type of productions.

Knowing all of these things to be desired, Goldwyn has done them. And that is all there was to the shaping of the Goldwyn policy. . . . Our twenty-five branches are now open in the United States and Canada and our managers are ready to discuss contracts with exhibitors.

K. E. S. E. Abolishes Deposits

DEPOSITS TO BE RETURNED TO EXHIBITORS BY CERTIFIED CHECK

UPON his return to Chicago last week George Kleine, president of K. E. S. E., made the startling announcement of the abolishment of the advance deposit system for the "Keys" Service.

Some few months ago Mr. Kleine made the announcement that any deposits accepted by his organization would be held in a separate fund and that six per cent interest would be paid on it. This has been religiously adhered to and proved very acceptable to the exhibitors. Some few of them even went so far as to deposit for an entire year in advance in order to earn the promised six per cent.

Mr. Kleine, however, now, after consultation with Edison, Selig and Essanay, goes a step further and abolishes this entire system. The money he now has on hand will be returned to the exhibitor and it will not have to be taken out in service as might be thought. It is expected that it will require several weeks to complete the details and audit the books. Just as soon as this work is finished the money will be returned to the exhibitors in the form of certified checks. When asked about the interest that had already been paid Mr. Kleine remarked:

"It has not been definitely decided whether or not this will be deducted from the deposited amount. The matter is being gone over right now and it is thought that the operation of separating this small item from the whole may be so expensive that it will eat up this entire interest and it is more than likely that the deposits will be returned in their entirety and the interest already paid disregarded.

"During the past few months I have visited several of the largest cities in the country and personally interviewed some of the biggest exhibitors and it appalled me the hardships the deposit has been meaning to some of the showmen. I visited one man that had $14,000 up in deposits. I believe that I am speaking conservatively when I say that there are about two million dollars of the exhibitors' money now being held in the form of deposits by the manufacturers.

"If we want to look for the best of the future of this business that money can be used to splendid advantage right now by the exhibitor. I believe that to continue the deposit system at this time would be short-sighted policy.

"The deposit system's day of usefulness is past. It was instituted in order to effect a better credit throughout the industry.

"That day without a doubt is at hand. There is hardly an exhibitor in the country that is not willing to pay for his service before he receives it.

"It is necessary, of course, that our rental charges be protected, and I confidently look for the co-operation of the exhibitors in asking payment of each rental charge before shipment of the film."

Mr. Kleine is of the opinion that every dollar of deposit money his office now has on hand will be returned by the first of August and possibly sooner. Every effort is being put forward to hasten the completion of this work. Exhibitors will certainly appreciate this step by Mr. Kleine and as he has always been recognized as a leader in the industry, there is every reason to believe that many other distributing concerns will quickly follow his initiative.

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay are now releasing fifteen reels each week. From their publicity department comes the announcement that they have already inaugurated a vigorous campaign in behalf of Conquest Pictures which, beginning July 14, they will release a program of seven reels each week, made up of a four-reel feature and three shorter subjects of one reel each.

K. E. S. E. Spells "Keys"

This is a time when conservation of all our natural resources is of prime importance. Realizing this, George Kleine himself is authority for the statement that it isn't necessary to take the trouble to pronounce each letter when you speak of K. E. S. E. service. "Call it 'Keys,'" says Mr. Kleine. "That's easier and quicker and everybody knows what you mean."

"GRADUATES" TURNED DOWN

Motion Picture "Schools" Busy Again, Says Production Manager for Vitagraph—Office Swamped with Victims Carrying "Certificates"

Andre Roosevelt, production manager for Greater Vitagraph, makes the announcement that the Vitagraph Company positively will not engage persons "graduated" or recommended by motion picture "schools."

During the last week the Vitagraph plant has been besieged by boys and girls, men and women, many of whom had been "guaranteed" places in the Vitagraph Company by the people who took their money. The applicants finally became so numerous that Mr. Roosevelt and his assistant, Elmer J. McGovern, were spending most of their time explaining to the victims that they had been buncoed. The climax was reached when a woman about fifty years of age applied for a position, declaring that she had been graduated from a certain school in Manhattan and that she had been assured of a place as a character woman.

Another incident that caused Mr. Roosevelt to issue his ban on "graduates" involved W. P. S. Earle, director of some of Vitagraph's biggest features. A man whom he knew slightly called on Mr. Earle and told him that he had been conducting a school for acting and that he had placed many of his pupils with other motion picture companies. Four, however, had not quite completed their courses, and the instructor, having been called for military service, said he would appreciate it if the Vitagraph Company would give them each a day's work.

Mr. Earle innocently referred the proposition to Mr. Roosevelt, and he, in turn, passed it on to Mr. McGovern. The instructor proposed that Vitagraph pay the students for their time, he to reimburse Vitagraph, a bald proposal that the Vitagraph Company enter into a conspiracy with him so that he could make good on his "guarantee" of providing work for his victims.

The man was ushered from the office and Mr. Roosevelt then issued his statement:

"There may be some good material and available types among these misguided men and women who come from the fake schools," he said, "but we intend to turn them all away. If we engage any of them it will not be because of their schooling, for such engagements would only serve to aid the men who swindle these trustful aspirants.

"If it were possible to do so, I should like to have the district attorney investigate these schools. They charge pupils $5 for a "tryout" to determine if they have any promise, and in all cases they are told they have. Then they are charged $50 for a complete course in motion picture acting. At the end of that time they are handed a piece of film and a few stills and told to go to some producing company, where they are certain to get employment.

"Of course this school evil is not new—in fact, it appeared for a time as though it had been practically wiped out, but from the number of applicants who have been to Vitagraph studio in the last week or two I am convinced that it has taken a new hold. I believe the producing companies should co-operate to suppress these so-called schools and also to save many trustful young men and women from being swindled."

OVER in France they don't get much sleep when they're on the firing line.

Down in Springfield they don't sleep at all, when they're fighting censorship. Ask Bill Sweeney and Fred Hartman, the big guns of the Exhibitors' League. They're the ones that knocked the "sense" out of censor—along with Pegler of Mutual and one or two other verbal machine guns.

The industry in Illinois should award them Carnegie medals for conserving films and the sleep supply.

The Guernsey bill fought hard all night of the closing day of the session and was killed at 7:30 in the morning, Sunday. Having done its work the legislature then adjourned.

The state was freed from state censorship for another two years.

Then Bill and Fred rolled into bed and slept the sleep of the just. They fought our fight through day and night, and you won't forget it, we trust.

It's luxury to sit in the Universal exhibition room. Did you ever try it?

Universal now has a "make-it-pay" department in the Chicago office. It's the publicity department in new clothes and the live and likeable Irv. Mack is running it.

---

J. Van Ronkle, who manages the Chicago Bluebird, has just bought a cheap car. He strolled into the Winton office the other day and booked a $4,800 Winton 6-cylinder feature. He said he didn't know they were making cars so cheap nowadays.

John O. Gilbert, who presides at the Elston Theater at California and Elston avenues, has heard the call of the wild and is soon to go fishing up in the bushes of Wisconsin,—and lakes.

CAUSE FOR LEVITY

Frank R. Abrams, who is the king and general manager of the Cameragraph company of N'Yohrk, was married to Miss Ethel Levey last week.

EVERYBODY knows that Joe Hopp, the king pin of the Exhibitors' League, is a versatile sort of fellow. Everybody knows that he's a regular Prexy Wilson as an executive, and who has not been enthralled, entranced and hypnotized by the silver flow of his vocabulary at some banquet or other?

But did you know that Joe is a double-language printer? Sounds like a double-jointed acrobat, doesn't it? Joe can do all kinds of juggling with the English and German langaviches. Way back in 1886 Joe completed his apprenticeship and manual of printing arms and became a journeyman printer. He used to take English script and make it read on the paper German, and he could turn it back into United States again right in his mouth while you listen.

No wonder he's now Chicago's official film toastmaster.

And another thing, Joe would rather toast that roast.

ENLIST FOR YOUR OWN SAKE

They say that life in the trench is tough
But life in a booth is worse;
The one is risky and raw and rough
But the other's a living curse!

When the sun has baked the building hot
And the arcs are spitting fire,
And the show's behind, as like as not,—
It sure works up your ire!

And then the blasted film will break!
—I'm telling the brasstacks truth;
If you want a snap my boy, enlist.
But don't get into a booth.

You'll learn a deuce of a lot of things at the big Chicago national convention and exposition July 14 to 22—even how to make more money.

You'll rub up against all the big boys in the business.

And you'll always be glad you had sense enough to go.

Remember: Chicago, July 14 to 22.

The Greater Woman, with Marjorie Rambeau (Mutual)—"The star is very good. You may tell your readers that they need not fear to book this kind of show."—Jack Marx, Orpheum Theater, Clarksburg, Va.

"Little Bobby" to Have New Boss

Charles Seay, formerly director for Edison, and until recently a writer of state rights scenarios, has been engaged by Greater Vitagraph to direct little Bobby Connelly. He succeeds Wesley Ruggles, who has been drafted to direct Blue Ribbon features.

Mr. Ruggles, who left Keystone to join Vitagraph a few months ago, was placed in charge of the "Bobby Series," the new feature in which Vitagraph's boy will be featured this fall. Mr. Ruggles worked with Syd Chaplin and Charlie Chaplin while he was with Keystone. A young man himself and a splendid director, Mr. Ruggles was chosen to direct Bobby and carried the little fellow through four of the five pictures that have been completed.

It has not been decided who Mr. Ruggles will direct among the more mature stars, but it is probable that he will take charge of Mildred Manning.

Mr. Seay began work with Bobby Connelly the latter part of last week, and he will carry him through the last five pictures of the "Bobby Series." He and Bobby already are fast friends and Andre Roosevelt, production manager for Vitagraph, thinks they are a good combination. During his connection with the Edison company, Mr. Seay produced a number of "kid" features and he is also known as the director of "A Daughter of the Sea," "Within the Enemy's Lines," and "Fantasma."

Mr. Seay is a native of Atlanta, and a graduate of the University of Sewanee, Tennessee.

WAR COMMITTE APPOINTED

National Association Head Names Committee to Handle All Matters in Which Pictures Can Be Used to Help Government

Following up the splendid work that it has been doing for Uncle Sam in connection with the Liberty Loan, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is planning to continue in co-operation with the Federal Government throughout the period of the war.

To this end President William A. Brady of the National Association appointed a special committee, to be known as the War Co-operation Committee, to handle all matters in which the motion picture can be used to further the interest of the American government in the world war. Cable arrangements were made with D. W. Griffith, the American director, now in Europe, who has been doing special work for the British and French governments, to hurry back to this country and assume the chairmanship of the new committee. Other motion picture interests are represented on the committee by William L. Sherrill, vice-chairman, Frohman Amusement Corporation; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Richard A. Rowland, Metro Pictures Corporation; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; John R. Freuler, Mutual Film Corporation, Chicago; Ricord Gradwell, World Film Corporation; J. A. Berst, Pathe Exchange; Walter W. Irwin, Vitagraph, V. L. S. E.; W. R. Rothacker, Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago; S. A. Lynch, Triangle Distributing Company; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; J. H. Hallberg, United Equipment Corporation; Walter J. Moore, H. C. Miner Lithographing Company; Arthur James, president, Associated Motion Picture Advertisers; Lee A. Ochs, president, National Exhibitors' League of America; Samuel H. Trigger, president, Manhattan Local Exhibitors' League; Louis F. Blumenthal, Auditorium Theater, Jersey City, N. J., and Louis L. Levine, Regent Theater, Brooklyn.

This committee will have its first work in conjunction with Chairman George Creel of the Committee on Public Information, which was recently named by President Wilson to look after this important phase of the matter. Mr. Creel is represented by Kendall Banning, who is in charge of the Division of Motion Pictures for the government's committee.

The purpose of the body of men selected by Mr. Brady is to devise working plans and to be prepared to furnish whatever aid the motion picture interests of the country can put forth to meet such emergencies as the war will bring out and to organize the picture interests of the country in whatever work the federal authorities think they will be useful. The committee is to remain in force as long as the war situation makes it necessary.

The first meeting was held at the offices of the National Association in the Times building June 15, at which time Chairman Creel outlined the purposes of the committee.

Oklahoma League Elects Delegates

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oklahoma held a special meeting June 19 at the Lee Huckins Hotel, Oklahoma City, for the purpose of electing delegates to the Chicago Convention in July. Fred J. Herrington, national organizer, was present. An enthusiastic gathering of forty of the leading exhibitors of the state voted to send the following delegates to the Chicago Convention uninstructed:

President A. B. Moonand, of Shawnee; Secretary L. W. Brophy, of Muskogee; S. H. Jones, of Altus; John Feeney, of Okmulgee; Thomas H. Boland, of Oklahoma City; J. L. Olive, of Chickasha; John Slocum, of Mangum. The following alternates were also chosen: J. H. Molder, of Sapulpa; Maurice Lowenstein, of Oklahoma City; J. S. Clayman, of Cushing; J. L. Carr, of Kingsfisher, and H. W. McCall, of Oklahoma City.

The exhibitors feel that this meeting marks the opening of a greater Oklahoma League, as the members voted to pay all expenses of their president and secretary to the Chicago Convention. This is the first instance where the Oklahoma League has paid the expenses of its officers to attend a national convention.

All the leading cities of the state were represented. Resolutions were passed commending the Oklahoma senators at Washington, P. W. Wells, president of the North Carolina League; C. W. Meighan, president of the Oregon League; G. C. Warner, president of the South Carolina League; Mr. Sams, attorney for the North Carolina League, and Wm. P. Fox, of New York, for the efficient work performed in having the war tax set aside, and leaving the poor man's amusement, the Motion Picture Theater, to escape further taxation.

Join Civic Organization

At a well-attended meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn and Long Island, held June 9 at the Triangle Theater, it was decided that the wisest thing that organization could do was to affiliate itself with the central civic body of the city.

It was pointed out that one of the reasons why the exhibitors always found themselves floundering in abuse and were never recognized as a component and necessary part of the city, was because of their inactivity in civic affairs. That the joining hands with the various civic organizations would be of invaluable help to the exhibitors as a whole was conceded by all.

The affiliation with this civic body it is hoped will tend to encourage co-operation between the people and the exhibitors. The exhibitor has never been considered a part of the city's business organizations and by this move a union between the two interests will be brought about. The screens of the various theaters could be used to promote large civic movements that will be a benefit to all, and in return the exhibitors can demand proper recognition and can get the absolute help of the civic bodies against any pernicious and disastrous proposed legislation. The benefits to be derived from an affiliation of this kind are manifold.

The organization appointed the following as its representatives on the directors' board of the civic body: Mr. Grossman, Mr. Lane, Mr. Harring, Mr. Brandt and Mr. Levine. William Brandt, Louis L. Levine, John Manheimer, Samuel Berman and Ben Title were the delegates chosen to represent Brooklyn exhibitors at the Chicago National Convention.

Pin Plays Important Part

In the twelfth chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," "A Fight for a Franchise," Helen Holmes proves the old adage that "it takes a crook to catch a crook." Burke has proven himself an unscrupulous villain all through the story, and although Helen and Roy Wilson have tried to prove his underhand dealings, they have never been able to trap him. When, therefore, they want to change the contract for the franchise into Copper City which Burke carries in his pocket, Helen goes to police headquarters and asks for a clever pickpocket to do the deed for them, and Lightfingered Tom is allowed to go with them.

Although Lightfingered Tom is a professional, the trick which he plays looks very easy. It is the first one which undoubtedly would occur to any small boy—sticking a pin into Burke's back. It worked beautifully, however, for Burke takes off his coat in his frantic search for the pricking point and Tom snatches the opportunity to change the contracts.

Marguerite, the Amazon

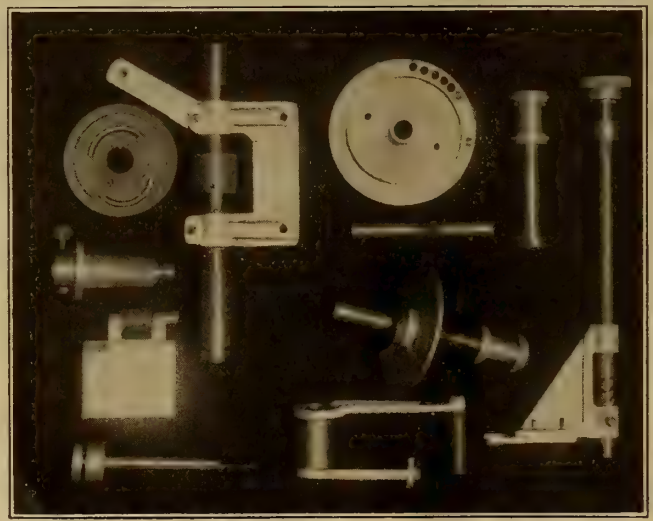
When the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation made its announcement that August 5 would mark the inauguration of an open-booking policy, there was embodied in the announcement a statement to the effect that one of the first productions under this new system was to be an adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Amazons," starring Marguerite Clark.

Though the spirit of the stage version of Pinero's play has been adhered to in the adaptation, certain minor changes have been introduced.

Those who are familiar with the play will recall that "The Amazons" concerns the remarkable history of the Marchioness of Castlejordan and her three delightful daughters, each one of whom is both a source of joy and sorrow to the Marchioness. Though she loves the daughters with all her heart, it is a subject of bitter anguish to her that they were girls instead of boys, and it is her obsession to make them as boyish as possible. To that end she endeavors to dress them almost exclusively in boys' clothes to instill into their feminine hearts as much of the masculine as a continued association with manish sports is capable of accomplishing.

The gymnasium in the Castlejordan home furnishes the setting for some of the most interesting and most delightfully comic scenes in the original play. For four weeks a portion of the Famous Players studio has been given over to the huge gymnasium setting, where Miss Clark and the other members of her cast have been hard at work upon these comic and near-serious episodes. During the course of the production Miss Clark is found using all the various pieces of apparatus which constitute a gymnasium equipment, among them flying trapeze, chest weights, rowing machines, dumb-bells and flying rings.



The escapades of Tommy (Marguerite Clark) upon her escape to London and her efforts to conceal her feminine self beneath a mannish costume, and her panic when she suddenly plunges into the limelight by an impetuous act, form other interesting episodes in the picture.

New Projection Machine

A new portable projector has made its appearance. This is a simple, light and well-constructed machine, which has just been put out by Lockhart & Ord of Toronto, Canada. It is known as the Lockord "Silent" Animatoscope.

F. R. Lockhart called at MOTOGRAPHY's office a short time ago and gave a demonstration of the machine. It is very simple, light, and appears to be practical and durable. The accompanying illustration shows the total of its simple working parts. The machine has a cam-actuated lever-intermittent movement, said lever movement carrying a roller bearing on the film beneath the gate. This method of moving the film through the gate is said to be more practical and less liable to injure the film than any type of intermittent sprocket or claw. The action used in the Lockord machine is not in any sense a "beater" action. It is expected that the Lockord machine can be manufactured for sale at $125 or less. Among its other advantages is the following:

The actuating cam can be so proportioned in its outline as to give any desired ratio of the period of motion to the period of rest of the film in the aperture gate. For example, the ratio of 1 to 4 and 1 to 6, employed in existing types of action, can, by the employment of this new action, be readily increased to the ratio of 1 to 8 or still greater ratios at will. The impossibility of altering the ratios of existing types is well known.

Leagues Elect Convention Delegates

BIG NATIONAL SHOW AT CHICAGO, JULY 14 TO 22, ATTRACTS ALL TRADE

EXHIBITORS' leagues all over the country are busy electing delegates for the big Chicago convention to be held July 14 to 22. Among those who have elected representatives to be sent to the Seventh National Show are the New Jersey league, the Oklahoma, the Maryland, the Brooklyn, the Nebraska, the California and the North Carolina. These are only a few of the leagues which will be represented at the big convention and exposition. It is estimated that there will be fifteen new branches of the M. P. E. L. of America represented.

Uninstructed Delegates Coming

A letter from L. W. Brophy, secretary of the Oklahoma league, states that a very enthusiastic meeting was held when forty of the leading exhibitors of the state voted to send twelve delegates to the Chicago convention. All of them will be uninstructed.

This is only one example of the interest that is now developing the country over in the biggest motion picture event of the year. Not only the sessions of the convention, where a large number of vital questions will come up for discussion and settlement, but also the exposition and displays by the leading manufacturers, along with visits by the stars—all this and the other entertainments, are also of keen interest to progressive exhibitors.

There are only two more weeks before the opening gun of the Seventh National Convention and Exposition will be fired. The trenches are all in first class order and the prediction of the wise ones is—"some Convention."

President Encourages Convention

Some few of the friends of the league have wondered if the Convention should be held this year, on account of the war. In answer we refer them to President Wilson's letter, under date of June 17, to the New York Merchants and Mfg. Exchange in reply to E. P. Ritter, who asked if there should be any attempt to do away with business and commercial conventions, and which reads as follows: "In reply to your letter of June 4, allow me to say that I not only see no reason why commercial conventions should be omitted during the war and should regret to see any instrumentality neglected which has proved serviceable in stimulating business and facilitating its process. This is not only not a time to allow any slowing up of business but is a time when every sensible process of stimulation should be used."

The Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has quite a job on its hands to put over the big Exposition but they are always willing to take on a little more work, for the working days in the Windy City are twenty-four hours long. They were lined up with all the state officers last week in Springfield, Illinois, and finally killed the censorship bill before the legislature.

Arrangements have been made with the Hotel Morrison, Chicago, the latest and most modern hotel, located at Clark and Madison streets, for the official headquarters of the Convention. All delegates should write or wire for reservation, as the management wants to place them where they will be well satisfied.

The big banquet will be held July 19, and the night of July 20 the hotel turns over the beautiful new Terrace Gardens with special entertainment to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

A. L. Randall Company, importers and manufacturers, have taken a $1,200 space at the Exposition and also have made a contract to decorate the Coliseum.

The Sunshine Film Corporation, although only a new producing company, has shown its progressive spirit by taking space in the Exposition. "We are very glad of this opportunity to meet the exhibitors," was the way one of the Sunshine officials put it, "and only wish we could spend thousands instead of hundreds with you."

Many Stars to Shine

R. O. Proctor, the fat and happy representative of Art Dramas, has promised Jean Sothern and Alma Hanlon for Art Dramas day at the Exposition.

Mutual day will be one to be long remembered. Charlie Chaplin, Mary Miles Minter, Helen Holmes and other Mutual stars will be present.

B. W. Aarensen, under whose personal direction are several "Stars" authorizes the announcement that Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Harold Lockwood and Henry B. Walthall will be present at the Exposition. Metro will have a big booth and the Metro-Bushman-Bayne day will be one of the most popular of the Show.

Alice Brady will be present on World-Alice Brady day.

The Committee is working hard on the Red Cross booth and hopes that the stars will send some small article to be placed in the booth and auctioned off by some of the attending stars.

Clarence Caine Dead

Clarence J. Caine, formerly associate editor of MOTOGRAPHY, died Thursday, June 21, at Los Angeles, California, after a lingering illness. He entered the trade paper field after serving his newspaper apprenticeship on the Milwaukee Journal, with which publication he rose to full charge of an ambitious motion picture section. He worked faithfully and exceedingly well for MOTOGRAPHY's interest; an experience which fitted him for the handling of publicity work for the Selig Polyscope Company in Chicago. From that position he was called to New York to take care of Street and Smith's popular motion picture publication. He returned to Chicago to start his optimistic struggle against constantly failing health, and finally went to the Coast last winter in the hope of regaining his strength.

Everybody who knew Clarence liked him, and predicted a brilliant career for him. He leaves a bereaved mother and a host of sorrowing friends. His body was returned to Milwaukee for burial.

PARALTA PLANS REVISED

Kerrigan and Barriscale to Work Under Same Roof—Kane Decides One Big Studio Better than Two Smaller Ones

When the Bessie Barriscale Feature Corporation and the J. Warren Kerrigan Producing Company were formed to release their special productions through Paralta plays, it was the intention of the management of these stars to provide each with a separate studio, staff and company.

Robert T. Kane, vice-president Paralta Plays, Inc.

Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays, was identified with these responsibilities and went to Los Angeles and established offices in that city. On consultation with architects and builders he found labor and material were so high that the erection of separate studios would be inadvisable.

He then considered the lease of two separate establishments. When he figured the cost of double rentals and operating charges, he became convinced that it would be much more advantageous to secure an extraordinarily large studio which could be adapted to the use of both companies.

He then obtained an option on the Clune Studios at Hollywood, which comprised several buildings with grounds of 18 acres. After consideration by Miss Barriscale, Mr. Kerrigan and all concerned, it was decided, in view of the possible great economy, that this studio should be taken by Paralta and let jointly to the Barriscale and Kerrigan companies.

The Clune Studios became Paralta Studios the latter part of May. Since that time alterations, reconstructions and the building of new structures have been rapidly progressing, until today they are considered among the most complete in the land.

To meet the requirements of proposed future production on an unusually large scale, the building of a special indoor stage has been begun. It will be thoroughly equipped with the latest and most efficient electrical system. It will measure 50 by 200 feet and will have a height of 24 feet in the clear, which will permit photography of unusually large interiors. The dressing-room facilities afforded each star consist of a suite of three rooms and bath. These apartments are well furnished and provided with every requirement and luxury that can possibly be desired.

Today the buildings and appurtenances are all so allotted and arranged that each company has practically the accommodations of a separate studio. The work of both "A Man's Man" and "Rose o' Paradise" is being carried on separately and systematically without one in any way inconveniencing the other.

By this policy Paralta has not only eliminated the financial waste to the Kerrigan and Barriscale companies of maintaining separate establishments, but it has, by combining the executive staffs, brought about a situation which will save thousands of dollars each month in salaries and other expenses.

Mr. Kane figured to retain but one joint studio manager and art and technical director. This position is held by Robert Brunton, who is the executive head of the Paralta Studios, representing all interests.

Oscar Apfel is director for Mr. Kerrigan and James Young now holds this position for Miss Barriscale.

Mr. Kane's organization of these joint studios for the Kerrigan and Barriscale companies has proved very gratifying to all concerned, for it will result not only in the saving of large sums of money annually to each corporation, but it gives to each star and company wider facilities in every way than could have been secured in smaller separate studios.

Theater Owners Association Formed

At a snappy meeting held in Chicago June 22 a number of theater owners of that city and surrounding territory held a "get-together" and laid plans for the formation of a new society, to be known as the Motion Picture Theater Owners' Association of Illinois.

H. Schoenstadt, of Schoenstadt & Sons, Chicago, temporary chairman of the meeting, declared that the new organization would apply for a charter immediately and hold its election of permanent officers as soon as the National League took them in as an affiliated body.

"If," he said, "they should refuse to grant us a charter we will continue anyway as an independent body. This is an association of theater owners, not managers.

"We have adopted the slogan of 'All for one and one for all,' and we are going to co-operate with producers and exchange men and support every progressive measure which will really advance the moving picture theater."

"Sunset Features" Coming

General Film will soon be able to meet the demand of its exhibitors for four-reel feature releases with a list of ten or more splendid subjects.

The new four-reel subjects will be known to the trade as "Sunset Features." Each of the subjects will be a drama, and each one will be intended to stand upon its merits as a story. Stories altogether of action, adventure and mystery have been chosen.

Well known and popular stars will be seen in each of the Sunset Features. Among these may be named Ruth Roland, Margaret Landis, Ethel Ritchie, Vola Vale, Katherine Kirkham, Henry King, Neil Hardin, Philo MacCullough and R. Henry Gray.

An announcement of the titles and time of release will shortly be made.

It is pointed out that with the Sunset Features available, exhibitors can book their whole show from General Film, something that has been desired by them for a long time and which General Film has wished to afford them. The matter was deferred until a highly desirable list of longer feature releases could be insured to offer alongside of the many first-class short length features purveyed by the company.

Make It a Reorganization Convention

IT is customary, when a trade convention is less than three weeks away, to tell about the oversubscribing for exhibition space and the enthusiastic co-operation of the producers. This year the enthusiasm has not yet become sufficiently conspicuous to realize all the hopes of the management. There are still a few days left, and the American race has a reputation for last-minute decisions. But it would not surprise us any to find several prominent producing companies missing from the final layout of the Coliseum floor.

The war is a convenient explanation for any unusual conditions this year, and one that is readily accepted. Some of the leading industrial associations have canceled their annual conventions, despite President Wilson's word to go ahead. But we doubt if the war really has anything to do with the apparent failure of some of the picture makers to warm up to the exposition.

If we were asked to lay our finger on a possible source of dissatisfaction, we would say that there has been too much talk about exposition conduct. Charges and counter-charges have flown back and forth, with no visible effect upon those directly concerned, but with a very substantial effect upon the sympathies of the trade. We hope the 1917 event manages to clear the atmosphere.

We are drawing a line of distinction between the exposition and the League convention. We anticipate and hope for a big convention attendance and a history-making session. The League needs some history-making action right now. The more radical the action is, and the more changes it accomplishes, the better the result will be.

The League during the last year has not lived up to expectations. There has been considerable activity within its ranks, but the motion has been mostly up and down rather than forward. The best thing we can say for the League as it is now organized is that it demonstrates beautifully the dominance of an organized minority over a passive majority. Numerically, as compared with the total exhibiting body, the membership of the League is a joke. Yet it makes enough noise to be accepted as the representative voice of fifteen thousand exhibitors.

As we have repeatedly pointed out, the fact that the League membership is insignificant is not the League's fault; it is the exhibitors' fault. It is an association for picture theater men, with most of the picture theater men left out. We have advised them to come in and make it over if they don't like it the way it is. It would not take many new members to vote the whole executive staff out of office—if that seemed desirable—and put in a new one.

But the exhibitors remain passive and indifferent. They will not even undertake to organize a new national body. We have never advised that, because the foundation on which the League is built should be sufficient for a new superstructure. But if it requires the mental stimulus of a new organization to wake them up, someone had better start working on one.

Those who are friends of the League may resent this attitude. We can only maintain that we, too, are friends of the League—such good friends that it distresses us to see it working to no purpose. We are sorry to see it ignored by almost all the exhibitors of this country, when we know how badly they need an association. And we still think the League is sufficient for its purpose—a sufficient framework on which to build a powerful organization of nation-wide scope.

For that is all it is now—a framework; a skeleton. It can be little more than that until it numbers on its membership roll at least one exhibitor in four the country over. Evidently what the League needs most of all is a real organizer—not a political machine builder, but a plain man who can show the small exhibitors why membership is necessary to his best interests.

We hope the convention starting July 14 will put some of the things on the way to accomplishment that have been neglected so far. That we confidently expect any far-reaching upheaval we hesitate to say; but it may come. But the League's friends cannot look for better conditions unless they do their part to make them better. Every picture man who can possibly come to the convention should come now if ever. The League needs the vote of every exhibitor—needs his presence on the convention floor and his voice in the proceedings. The big, strong, thoroughly representative organization may not need an appeal to its constituency; an organization numerically as feeble as the League needs all the appeal that can be made and all the help that can be given it.

Abolishing the Advance Deposit System

EXHIBITORS who favor the abolishment of the advance deposit system (and that probably includes a majority of them) will derive a great deal of satisfaction from this week's announcement by a leading distributor. This concern, whose statement appears on other pages, is about to abandon the whole deposit principle, merely reserving a reasonable period of time for the necessarily large volume of accounting demanded by the action.

The greatest objection to the advance deposit plan was that it tied up, in the aggregate, a very large sum of exhibitors' money. The fact that such deposits were, in most cases, technically unsecured was less important than their removal from circulation.

It may be said, however, that a good many exhibitors questioned whether their money was really out of circulation; whether it was not being used, secretly and without sanction, for the financing of producing operations. This, indeed, if the less weighty, was the most loudly discussed objection of all. Such use of the impounded funds being entirely possible, it was mentally but a step to the belief that it was current practice. No doubt the distributors using the system were properly above suspicion; but an exhibitor with his indignation aroused suspects whom he pleases. The result certainly did not make for the establishment of good will.

The discontinuance of the deposit plan automatically demonstrates that the funds ready to be returned to their owners were merely held in escrow, and not put to improper use. The concern that tried to make working capital of them would have some difficulty in redistributing them.

From the distributor's viewpoint the deposit plan has many advantages. It not only practically assures the customer's allegiance, but guarantees that his bills will be paid. Furthermore, its success is an earmark of quality—since it indicates a demand for its particular brand of pictures.

No producer or distributor of low-grade films could induce exhibitors to hand him their money in advance as a regular practice. And it may be said also that not all exhibitors object to the deposit. The theater owner who can afford it, and whose competitor cannot afford it, does not look wholly with displeasure on the opportunity to take advantage of the situation.

All the more praise, then, to the enterprising eliminator of the deposit system. It is not its advantage or disadvantage to one part of the business which decides its usefulness, but its effect upon the whole industry. He who discards what is bad for the business, even though it be good for himself, establishes good will that is worth more than insurance.

Irwin Wins Against Kalem

COMPLEX CASE INVOLVING GENERAL, FOX AND PATENTS COMPANY

WALTER W. IRWIN, general manager of V. L. S. E., in his private capacity as an attorney, on June 21 obtained a verdict for $3,000, with interest, his total claim against the Kalem Company, representing the Kalem Company's share of a charge of $30,000 against ten companies for professional services in bringing about a settlement of the case of William Fox's Greater New York Film Rental Company against the Patents Company, the General Film Company, the licensed manufacturers and of several other cases instituted by Mr. Fox.

The Kalem Company, as one of the component parts of the General Film Company, was one of the defendants in the Fox suit. Frank J. Marion, as president of the Kalem Company, had refused to recognize Mr. Irwin's claim for legal services. Other defendants in the suit had recognized Mr. Irwin's claim as moderate and just but the Kalem Company took the position that Mr. Irwin, as general counsel for the Vitagraph Company of America, which also was one of the defendants, was not entitled to a professional fee from the Kalem Company.

The victory of Mr. Irwin, which assures him of his belated professional charge of $3,000, with interest and cost of the action, is a direct aftermath of the vigorous fight conducted by William Fox, as owner of the Greater New York Film Rental Company against the Patents Company, the General Film Company and the companies comprising the General Film Company.

Film circles will recall vividly the fight waged by William Fox against the General Film Company in which Mr. Fox brought several suits against the General Film Company and the manufacturers comprising it. These suits were instituted under the Sherman Anti Trust act and demanded damages totaling a tremendous sum.

These suits underwent the usual delays of the law but, after several years, reached the point where they were about to be tried.

It was conceded by all concerned that a settlement out of court would be much preferable to having the actions go to trial. However, there was one great hinderance to any settlement. Each of the defendant companies, going to make up the General Film Company, had its individual attorney.

G. S. Rogers, of the legal firm of Rogers and Rogers, represented Mr. Fox. Mr. Rogers, in behalf of his client, was willing to consider a settlement out of court, but he said such a settlement was impossible so long as there were so many attorneys representing the various defendants, no one of whom possessed the confidence of all the defendants, and of the plaintiff.

After making this explanation Mr. Rogers declared that he would not seriously enter into negotiations unless the same could be conducted by one man representing all of the defendants, and a man in whom Mr. Rogers had absolute confidence.

It was at this point that Mr. Irwin came into the negotiations. At the time he was general counsel for the Vitagraph Company of America as well as general manager of V. L. S. E., and was one of the few lawyers with an intimate knowledge of the motion picture business. His name was suggested to Mr. Rogers as the possible legal representative of all of the defendants, who might be able to affect a settlement.

Negotiations were opened for the settlement of the case.

Eventuaally Mr. Irwin was made an attorney of record. For several months he worked night and day holding numerous meetings with Mr. Rogers. At some of these meetings which lasted all night, Mr. Irwin was accompanied by Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, which was interested in the outcome as one of the defendants, while Mr. Rogers was accompanied by Mr. Fox.

Negotiations were opened and broken off. On several occasions it appeared as if a settlement was impossible. The termination of the meetings was abrupt. First one side would refuse to concede a point and then the other side would be equally stubborn.

Whenever the negotiations were broken off Mr. Irwin and Mr. Smith would succeed in reopening them. Eventually satisfactory terms of settlement were reached. Mr. Irwin finally arranged the settlement of the cases on January 20, 1916, after a continuous session lasting from 11 a. m., on June 19, until 6 a. m., on January 20.

Upon the successful completion of the negotiations Mr. Irwin notified the defendants at a meeting of the General Film Company that his charge for legal services to the defendants were $30,000 apportioned $3,000 to each of the ten defendants. This was considered reasonable when all the facts and circumstances of the settlement were taken into consideration.

Following the settlement of the case Mr. Irwin made an effort to collect $3,000, the pro rata share of the legal charges, from the Kalem Company but was met with a refusal. This refusal was based on the statement of President Marion that while Mr. Irwin had negotiated and consummated the settlement in which the Kalem Company participated yet he had not been retained by the Kalem Company but was working solely for the Vitagraph Company.

Unable to collect the amount due him in any other manner Mr. Irwin brought suit against the Kalem Company. The suit was called on June 19, in the Supreme Court, sitting in New York County, and was heard by Judge Platzek and a jury for two and one-half days, during which time Mr. Irwin detailed his efforts which finally succeeded in consummating the settlement.

A jury verdict for the full amount of a lawyer's bill is almost unprecedented but notwithstanding the jury in the case of W. W. Irwin against the Kalem Company, was out but ten minutes returning a verdict for the full amount asked with interest from the time the claim originally was due.

Frank J. Marion, president of the Kalem Company, appeared as a witness to combat the claim. He underwent an unmerciful cross examination at the hands of Max D. Steuer, attorney for Mr. Irwin. Other witnesses for the Kalem Company were former Judge Moone of Philadelphia, Charles F. Kingsley and Vice-President Wilson of the Edison Company.

capital. Each one of the eighteen containers is packed with six prints of five-act dramas featuring the athletic star.

The American Company enjoys a large foreign trade and daily makes heavy shipments from its Chicago laboratories to all sections of the globe. The export trade has not been curtailed by war-time hazards.

MARRED FILMS TO GO

W. K. Hedwig Tells of Allenbaugh Process—Says It Spells Doom of Rainstorm Films and Eye Torture

According to one noteworthy authority, the hazy, scratched, flaky film is gone forever. In the future the exchangeman will be able to get his money out of the film before it has reached this stage, while the exhibitor will not be annoyed, irritated and embarrassed by showing a picture to his patrons which should be in the junk heap. This has been made possible through the invention of the "Allenbaugh Process," which has just been perfected by Major O. J. Allenbaugh and adopted by the Hedwig Laboratories.

"Exchanges and exhibitors for years have sent film back to the manufacturer complaining that the chemicals and acids used on the film destroyed the picture after the first few runs," says W. K. Hedwig. "This complaint is absolutely ridiculous, at least in the majority of cases, for all films contain a certain amount of moisture which cannot be eliminated during the process of drying, and when such films are used on projection machines, not specially equipped for running them, the emulsion accumulates in the tension springs to such an extent that it forms a sharp, hard edge which cuts the sprocket holes almost through in the first and second run.

"For years we have tried to overcome this by trying various hardening processes which were applied to the film during the time of manufacture, but none of them proved successful.

"One great trouble found by experimenting with various hardening processes was that the emulsion which was treated with excess hardening after a short while began to peel from the celluloid, making the film also useless. The 'Allenbaugh Process' takes care of both of the above mentioned troubles. It does not harden the celluloid nor the emulsion, but leaves the film pliable.

"We found by joining one reel consisting of five hundred feet of film treated by the 'Allenbaugh Process' and five hundred feet of untreated film that the life of the treated part was one hundred per cent longer than the other. There was not a single mark on the treated film and the untreated film showed them after the first few runs.

"I feel that a great service is being performed for the exhibitor and the public, for there need be no more film thrown on the screen in which the picture is hidden in a veritable rainstorm of mars and blotches. The exchangeman in the future will be able to get his money out of his film before it becomes scratched and marred, and the public will not have to look at nor sit through bad, eye-straining pictures."

Ferguson Picture Started

At the Famous-Lasky studios in Fort Lee, Director Maurice Tourneur has been extremely active during the past two weeks supervising the erection of various gigantic sets, the largest ever built at this big plant. In addition to this a complete Arabian village has sprung up in New Jersey with its transplanted palms, its camels, fleet-footed horses and dark-skinned people. These preparations were completed June 24 and on the morning of June 25 the initial scenes were filmed for Elsie Ferguson's first Artcraft picture, "Barbary Sheep." Miss Ferguson will not commence work on this picture until next week, however, inasmuch as she does not appear in the initial scenes now being filmed.

Maurice Tourneur, in speaking of "Barbary Sheep," said: "I am particularly enthusiastic perhaps, because of the fact that I spent many months in the northern part of Africa where this tale is staged and am familiar with the unique atmosphere with which the story deals. It blends with the wonderful setting the lives of a young English nobleman and his wife and a handsome Arab army officer, who plays his seductive arts upon the heroine while her husband is absent. The story is charged with the heat, passion and swift action that befit a daring romance of Algeria. We hope to show the patrons of the screen something new in the way of a swift moving subject staged with every facility of modern film technique and disclosing the talent of one of the greatest artists of the high-class drama."

"The Garden" Selling

The Selig Polyscope Company announces additional sales of territorial rights for "The Garden of Allah," the Selig drama written by Robert Hichens, and featuring Helen Ware supported by Thomas Santschi. The Hy-Art Masterplays Company, Penn avenue at Twenty-first street, Washington, D. C., recently closed a deal for the rights to Maryland, District of Columbia, Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina. The A. G. Fontana Productions, Inc., 1225 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., has purchased "The Garden of Allah" rights for western Pennsylvania and for West Virginia.

The last episode of the "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Grey Seal" series and William Russell in "The Masked Heart. Both appear in Mutual's July 2 schedule.

MUTUAL SCHEDULE

July 2 Sees William Russell in "The Masked Heart," a Powerful Feature, with Unusual Serial Chapters and Comedies

William Russell is the featured star on the Mutual schedule for July 2. Mr. Russell will appear in "The Masked Heart," a story of love and intrigue in which he is a blase society man who is bored by his easy victories over women and goes in quest of an elusive woman.

The other principals in the cast are Francelia Billington, Kathleen Kirkham, William Conklin and Ashton Dearholt.

"The Road Wreckers" is the title of the thirteenth chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," featuring Helen Holmes, which is also scheduled for July 2. A spectacular smashup between a passenger train and a freight makes the big thrill of the chapter.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," ready July 3, show Bizerta, Tunis; a French naval port, and Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, Australia.

On this date also comes the La Salle comedy, "The Girl in the Frame," in which Jean Otto is the principal funmaker.

Mutual Weekly, with its many news topics and patriotic features, will go to the public on July 4.

The Cub Comedy of the week, with George Ovey in the lead, is "Jerry's Gentle Nursing," released July 5, in which Jerry takes care of a gouty invalid, and what he does not do to the invalid and his wheeled chair is not worth reporting.

Reel Life, released July 5, is made up of six subjects—Making jewelry at home, Berry Pickers of the South, Toys of wartime, Making real Men, The Army system, Animated drawings from life, A Saving Grace and Hands Up!

The sixteenth and last chapter of the "Jimmie Dale, alias the Grey Seal" series comes to the screen on July 6. This is entitled "The Victory," and E. K. Lincoln is the lead.

Gale Henry, Universal comedienne, with Milton Sims playing opposite, is working in a one-reel comedy entitled "Her Mistake in Love."

GREATEST FAIRBANKS HIT

New Records in Receipts and Attendance for "Wild and Woolly" Predicted—Exhibitors Plan for Unusual Crowds

The consensus of opinion of those who have already viewed the new Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft picture, "Wild and Woolly," including the trade paper critics, is that this comedy is easily the best ever presented to the screen by the athletic star. Exhibitors all over the country who experienced record-breaking crowds with "In Again—Out Again," have written in to the Artcraft headquarters announcing their preparations in anticipation of the greatest business in the history of their theaters. The Douglas Fairbanks Chapter of the Red Cross, which will be operated in the lobbies of theaters showing "Wild and Woolly" has received the hearty support of exhibitors who readily realize that this stunt will not only prove a novel patriotic act but will boom their own show as well.

That the latest sceen effort of the energetic Douglas out-Fairbanks anything in which he has ever appeared is readily appreciated by every one who has seen it. M. Winkler, the well-known composer of music scores for photoplays and who has viewed every film production in which Fairbanks has ever played, expressed the general opinion as to the merit of this picture last week when he said: "'Wild and Woolly' is positively the best thing Douglas Fairbanks has ever done. Never before has he crammed so much rib-tickling action into a picture. In fact, I have never seen a photoplay that presents such a continuous series of hearty laughs. Those who have praised his inimitable work in the past will have little idea as to what this wonder really is until they see him in 'Wild and Woolly.' Exhibitors will realize new experiences in the way of satisfying their patrons with this film."

Director Allen J. Holubar and his company of Bluebird players of some sixty people are at Santa Cruz Island, off the Santa Barbara, California, coast, where he is filming the marine and exterior scenes for his production, "Sirens of the Sea." Louise Lovely and Jack Mulhall play the leads.

CAST IN COHAN FILM

Anna Nilsson, Mrs. De Wolf Hopper, Joseph Smiley, and Other Artists in "Seven Keys to Baldpate"

One of the features of George M. Cohan's new Artcraft picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," adapted from his popular Broadway stage hit and now being produced, is the exceptionally capable supporting cast which includes many well known artists of the screen and stage. In selecting the members of the cast for the new Cohan subject, Director Hugh Ford evidenced unusual care with the result that he has assembled one of the most notable collections of established favorites ever disclosed in a production of this kind.

Appearing opposite the popular actor-author-producer in his second Artcraft offering is Anna Nilsson, the well-known film actress whose six years before the camera has given her wide experience and popularity. Miss Nilsson's prominent work in "Shenandoah," "Regeneration," the "Who's Guilty?" serial, and other successful film subjects will be remembered by many patrons of the screen.

In the role of Myra Thornhill, another important part which attracted wide attention on the stage, is Mrs. De Wolf Hopper, popularly known as Elda Furry.

Corene Uzzell, whose splendid work under the Famous Players, Pathe, Essanay and Mirror trademarks will be well remembered, is entrusted with the part of Mrs. Norton, another feature character. Miss Uzzell's last appearance on the screen in "On Trial," added greatly to her wide prestige as a film artist. Joe Smiley, who appeared in Mr. Cohan's initial picture, "Broadway Jones," again plays in support of the Yankee Doodle Boy in this production. Mr. Smiley's recent work for Famous Players has made him one of the most prominent artists of his type in films. Another film figure in the Cohan cast is Russell Bassett, the "grand old man" of the cinema.

Other popular players in this picture are G. Warren Cook, who appeared under the Artcraft banner once before in the Mary Pickford picture, "The Pride of the Clan," Armand Cortes, who has played under practically every prominent management both on the screen and the stage. Carlton Macy, who originated the role in which he appears in the screen version of this story, on the stage, Eric Hudson, whose work with many of the big film producers is well known, Paul Everton, Frank Losee and Purnell Pratt.

Addition to Fox Studios

The rapid expansion of the William Fox studios in Hollywood, Cal., goes on unabated. The latest building to be projected is a large glass studio, 60 by 120 feet in area, to be placed on the Western "lot."

The erection of this great glass stage is already under way, and it is expected that the completed structure will be ready for use within three weeks.

To find space for it, a large grove of lemon trees covering the ground had to be chopped down. After the day of film work was done almost every member of the comedy forces walked by without so much as passing a single quip about the yellow fruit about the place, while four-fifths of those in the dramatic section of Fox photoplays were unable to resist the impulse—which proves again the seriousness of funny pictures. 'Twas ever thus!

Two Directors for Fairbanks

The demand from Artcraft Pictures Corporation for an increased number of Douglas Fairbanks pictures has compelled the latter to give thought to the possibilities of employing two directors. While one is cutting and titling a picture, which necessitates from two to three weeks' time, the other director can be progressing with a production, and by the time he has completed the picture director number one can have ordered his sets and with a practical scenario be ready to start work. The fact that Douglas Fairbanks and John Emerson realize that cutting and titling is just as important to the success of a photoplay as the actual production has prompted them to consider the two director scheme, inasmuch as it would be impossible with one director to comply with the demands from Artcraft for more than the originally agreed number of releases, and yet give these pictures the necessary preparation, accurate production, assembling and titling.

With two directors on the job it will mean an increased amount of work on Doug's part, but yet each picture will contain the same detailed treatment given his previous films. The second director will work under the personal supervision of John Emerson, who will thoroughly discuss the action and possibilities of every scene before actual production is started. This same supervision will also obtain in the cutting and titling, in which Douglas Fairbanks and Anita Loos play prominent parts.

We'll give you just seven guesses as to who this civilized wild Indian is. You have probably had him in your house and the results in your cash box. The picture shows him in a gentle little game of tennis at his home in Califilmia. Why is he knocking the ball away from the net? Oh, rats, Doug was up after a high one and just chanced to land on this side.

JANE COWL "SHOT" 120,000 TIMES

GOLDWYN Pictures Corporation, through Samuel Goldfish, its president, has placed at the disposal of the United States' European army prints of all Goldwyn Pictures to be produced during the duration of our soldiers' stay in France.

The offer is made in a letter from Mr. Goldfish to Hon. Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, and is self-explanatory. The letter follows:

Dear Secretary Baker: Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, as a producer of motion pictures, is in full accord with yourself and with other agencies co-operating with you, to provide amusements and clean diversions for the patriotic Americans who will comprise our nation's military fighting forces in Europe.

This corporation, controlling the screen services of Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Maxine Elliott and Mary Garden and others not yet announced, herewith to you as Secretary of War and to the United States Government in behalf of our American army offers one positive print of each and every motion picture production made by the Goldwyn company from the day the first troops are dispatched to France until that day when our troops withdraw at the conclusion of a victorious peace.

These pictures and the stars appearing in them will, we believe, bring pleasure to our soldiers and reproduce for them plays and scenes with which they are familiar in their homeland. The manner of exhibiting the Goldwyn Pictures for our soldiers is left entirely in your own hands, subject to whatever assistance or co-operation you desire us to give. To our knowledge many projection operators have enlisted and will be a part of our army in France, so there will be no difficulty on that score.

Goldwyn likewise desires the privilege of equipping whatever unit of the service that takes this in charge with two standard projection machines, and these will be delivered to you wherever and whenever desired. It occurs to us that you may wish this done in conjunction with a unit of the Red Cross, the representatives of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Y. M. H. A. and such other organizations as may be co-operating with them.—Samuel Goldfish, President, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Goldwyn will be ready to ship prints of its first ten productions, and maybe even more of its pictures, on the first troop transport leaving an Atlantic port for France. The first prints will include pictures of Mae Marsh, Maxine Elliott, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, and prints of Miss Garden's first Goldwyn production will follow shortly afterwards.

Jane Cowl "Shot" 120,000 Times

It requires 80,000 separate pictures to compose a five-reel cinema drama, 96,000 for a six-reeler, 112,000 for one of seven reels, and so on to the ten-part play, which is a photographic processional of 160,000 prints.

There is a distinguished artist of brains and bearing who actually dislikes to be photographed, yet in the development of a comparatively new art she is submitting to have her picture taken, not once but 120,000 times. That artist is Jane Cowl, star of Goldwyn Pictures, star and co-author of "Lilac Time," and creator of the star roles in the original production of "Within the Law" and "Common Clay," respectively.

While Miss Cowl was writing and acting, and making strides in each that was comparable to the seven league boots, she was getting badly out of practice in the matter of having her picture taken. When she appeared at the Goldwyn studio in Fort Lee to begin her first silent drama, which was adapted from a story by Basil King, she frankly admitted she was more nervous than she usually was at curtain time on a "first night." She had dodged single photographs sedulously only to be trapped by 120,000 of them.

The night of her first day at the Goldwyn studio found her nervous and worn.

"I felt as though I had been put through a third degree," said Miss Cowl, as she prepared for her journey back to New York, "and at times I thought I should have to give up under the questioning hum of the camera. I know now that every woman who has carved for herself a career before the camera has done so under conditions that demand quite as much courage as the most difficult of any of the other arts. To be constantly rehearsing, taking and often retaking cinema scenes, requires an iron will and a complete subjugation of nerves. It has been particularly difficult for me."

Miss Cowl will devote her entire summer to the Goldwyn work and the first of her pictures will be completed in the Fort Lee studios before the end of June.

STRONGE PUBLICITY DIRECTOR

Masters Leaves and Changes in Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. Also Make Paul N. Lazarus Advertising Director

Nat S. Stronge, who has been manager of the news service department for Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. for several months, has been made publicity director and is in direct charge of all publicity of the organization.

Paul N. Lazarus, who for more than a year has been assistant advertising manager, has been made advertising director of the organization and is in charge of all advertising, including trade paper, newspaper, fan publications, bill board and exhibitors' helps.

The changes in the publicity and advertising department were made necessary by the departure of E. Lanning Masters, whose connection with Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. ended on June 16.

For more than a year Mr. Masters has been the executive head of both the publicity and advertising departments with the title of publicity and advertising director. With his departure this position is abolished, it being considered unnecessary owing to the close personal co-operation between Mr. Stronge and Mr. Lazarus and their departments.

Mr. Lazarus graduated from the publishing business to the motion picture field. For ten years he was connected with the advertising and promotion departments of several of the leading book and magazine houses. For five years Mr. Lazarus was in the circulation department of the International Magazine Company, publishers of Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Hearst's, Harper's Bazar, Motor Boating and Motor, and was circulation manager of Good Housekeeping when he severed his connection. He joined the Vitagraph Company in 1916, and since that time his advertising layouts and copy have created favorable comment throughout the entire industry.

The chief assistant of Mr. Lazarus in the advertising department is Ben Conlon, who will have charge of heralds, lobby display and paper.

Mr. Stronge is widely known in the picture industry through his connection with MOTOGRAPHY, the motion picture trade journal published at Chicago, and with Sherman-Eliott Company, the western state rights buyers for whom he opened a Chicago office. His acquaintance among exhibitors is probably as large as that of any man in the country. He knows their problems thoroughly and has made himself popular with them by his hearty co-operation at all times. Years of newspaper work has given him an almost universal intimacy in press circles, and as publicity chief for Vitagraph he has welded together all parts of his extensive training for the production of "Exhibitor Angle Publicity" as opposed to the conventional "production boosts."

In the publicity department Mr. Stronge has several assistants, including C. Lin Bonner, who has made his presence felt in the industry by his "Greater Vitagraphics," a press sheet for Vitagraph exhibitors which is "something different."

Gordon Lawrence, another of Mr. Stronge's assistants, has charge of the Vitagraph Exhibitor, a four-page newspaper which is mailed to every exhibitor in the country, and of the plan books, one of which is gotten out on each release.

Albert W. Sobler, another assistant in the publicity department, takes charge of all requests for special stories and for special photographs.

Fire in Chicago Art Dramas

A spurt of flame and a little smoke did away with about 60 reels of film for the Chicago Art Dramas Exchange, on the afternoon of June 22. The loss was about $3,000. In spite of the destruction of the prints, Manager Ralph O. Proctor was able, by means of quick action with the telegraph wires, to meet all his bookings. "We weren't delayed 30 minutes," he stated to MOTOGRAPHY, "and duplicates of every reel are now on hand."

The fire started in the inspection vault, when Rose Roth, assisted by Frances Olson, two of Art Dramas inspection girls, were mounting a new reel. Probably due to static electricity, the film took fire and the girls took flight. None of them were burned, in spite of the fact that the iron-bound room was in flame in a minute. Members of the office force were able, however, to rescue several reels of film and to hold the fire slightly in check by means of water and Pyrene.

About this time the whole building, at 207 South Wabash avenue, was in a hubbub, as there are film exchanges on five floors of the seven stories. There was a great deal of apprehension in all of these, but the fire was confined entirely to the Art Dramas inspection vault; in fact, the handbags and other trinkets of the inspection girls, which had been in the drawer of the inspection table, were found after the fire to have been but slightly injured. The bookkeeping department, in the next room, was not disturbed in the least. These facts prove that the modern inspection room is absolutely fire-tight.

A large quantity of fire-fighting apparatus was called to the scene, and Wabash avenue was lined for blocks with crowds watching the excitement.

One tragical incident in connection with the fire is that about fifteen minutes before it started Manager Proctor had placed several brand new prints in the room and had turned over an $1,800 check for them.

Many Universal Employes Register

Last June 5, which was set apart by Congress as the time when all men between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-one should register for prospective military service against the Central Powers, saw more than one-half of the male employes at Universal City sign the role.

In every department of the Pacific Coast studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company there were many young men who promptly answered the call of the government. Probably in no other industry are there so many young fellows engaged and the list of those available came from the directing, acting, scenario, accounting, property, laboratory and mechanical departments.

NEW ARTCRAFT PRODUCTIONS

Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Elsie Ferguson, George M. Cohan and Geraldine Farrar in Master Pictures for Early Release

The new Artcraft Pictures Corporation schedule includes the production for early release of subjects presenting Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Elsie Ferguson, George M. Cohan and Geraldine Farrar.

Following the completion of Mary Pickford's patriotic picture, "The Little American," staged under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, Miss Pickford will start on her newest vehicle, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," within the next few days. This adaptation from the famous book and play will be produced at the Lasky-Hollywood studio by Marshall Neilan, the young Lasky director who has created wide attention as a result of his exceptional work. The cast for this picture is now being assembled and all preliminary preparations for its actual screening are rapidly nearing completion. After "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Mary Pickford will appear in an adaptation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's well-known book, "The Little Princess," arrangements for the screening of which were made last week.

As his third Artcraft picture, Douglas Fairbanks will present an original story written by himself, the temporary title of which is "The Optimist." This subject will offer a typical Fairbanks photoplay staged by John Emerson. Eileen Percy, who has just signed a year's contract to appear opposite the energetic Douglas as a result of her exceptional work in "Wild and Woolly," to be released June 24, will head the supporting cast. The new Fairbanks story is now being prepared for screening by Anita Loos and will be ready for the camera when the star returns from his vacation shortly.

George M. Cohan's next picture for Artcraft, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," is now being produced at the Famous Players' New York studio. This adaptation from Mr. Cohan's popular stage success is under the direction of Hugh Ford, producer of many film hits under the Famous Players trade mark. Although originally scheduled for production at a later date, the repeated requests from exhibitors for another Cohan picture in the near future, as a result of the sensational success of "Broadway Jones," prompted Mr. Cohan and Artcraft to do this film immediately.

At the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Fort Lee, Elsie Ferguson will start her initial photoplay, "Barbary Sheep," the well-known book by Robert Hitchens, as soon as Maurice Tourneur finishes the picture in which he is now working. Mr. Tourneur will direct Miss Ferguson, who is prepaing to start work very shortly, in that the director's present picture is now rapidly nearing completion. Miss Ferguson recently visited the modern plant at Fort Lee where her first production will be staged, and expressed great delight at its many conveniences and up-to-date installations.

Geraldine Farrar, who arrived in Los Angeles recently to appear in a series of photodramas for Artcraft under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, has contracted a serious case of tonsilitis, which has delayed her activities at the Lasky studio. Mr. De Mille, who has just returned from his first vacation in many years, is at present working on the initial Farrar-Artcraft release in collaboration with Jeanie Macpherson, and it is thought that the star will have fully recovered so as to start work the early part of next week. Although the final title has not as yet been decided upon, it is understood that the story is practically ready for screening and will present a big theme befitting the talents of the famous favorite of the cinema and opera. It is confidently expected that the combined efforts of Farrar and De Mille, as evidenced in "Joan the Woman," will mark another distinct advance in the photoplay art when the new master-picture is released.

Abrams Donates Ambulance

George M. Cohan, now fully established as an Artcraft film star, last week presented to the American Ambulance in Russia organization a fully equipped ambulance donated by Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Mr. Abrams had the machine built especially for the Red Cross in Russia, and in his absence asked the famous actor-author-producer to present the car to Miss Elsa Maxwell, chairman of this body.

Promptly upon being completed, the ambulance was shipped to the Fifty-sixth street studio, where George M. Cohan is now appearing in his second Artcraft picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Miss Maxwell was notified and visited the studio, where the machine was turned over to her with due ceremonies by the popular Yankee Doodle Boy. The ambulance was immediately prepared for shipment and is now en route to Russia, where it will soon see service.

V. L. S. E. Welcomes Trade Press

Greater Vitagraph has refused to join with several of the large distributing companies in their policy of discontinuing private showings to members of the trade press of the country.

After consultation with Walter W. Irwin, general manager of V. L. S. E., the distributing organization of Greater Vitagraph, Nat S. Stronge, publicity director for the organization, announced that V. L. S. E. would continue its usual custom of holding pre-release showing of all features in the V. L. S. E. private projection room every Tuesday afternoon. In making the announcement Mr. Stronge said:

It has been the policy of this organization to treat every one with courtesy. This not only applies to the exhibitors who present our pictures, but to every person with whom we do business. We see no reason why the representatives of the trade press should not receive courtesy similar to that accorded in every other branch of the service.

We notice that some of the distributors give as an excuse for discontinuing courtesies to the trade press that the value of the review is greater if the reviewers are where they may hear the comments made by the audience.

Such an excuse for stopping trade reviews is all wrong from our standpoint. Looking at the matter from a cold, business view it appears to us that such an excuse is a subterfuge rather than a real reason. When the trade paper reviewers have to see a picture at a first-run theater they see it presented in the very best atmosphere, surrounded by all the "trimmings" necessary to make the picture "go across." It is just exactly as reasonable to dress a beautiful, uneducated girl in expensive raiment, tell her that she must not speak for fear of exposing her ignorance, and then place her on inspection. Of course, under such circumstances the woman would pass inspection, an impossible proposition had she opened her mouth and showed her ignorance.

Suppose these distributors and producers who have discontinued projection room showings had gone just a trifle farther and stiuplated that their pictures must be reviewed at either the Strand or the Rialto, the two big New York motion picture houses. Any person who knows anything about the motion picture business knows that the management of these two houses pay such strict attention to their music and to other details of house management that almost any picure presented at either house will be satisfying to the audience. In other words, no matter what the picture, the audience will go away satisfied, not so much on account of the picture but in spite of it.

If the trade paper reviewers were forced to review pictures at the Strand or the Rialto and, if the reviewers were swayed by the remarks of the audience, reviewers would be unnecessary as every picture would be one hundred per cent fine.

We take the attitude that reviewers should be allowed to see pictures in surroundings where their minds will be on the pictures and upon nothing else. This is only possible in the projection room where there is nothing to distract the attention of the reviewers. In these surroundings the reviewers see every weak point in the picture. Beautiful music will not cover the weak points. If they are there the reviewers will see them.

Trade reviews are for the purpose of giving the exhibitors of the country honest criticism and advance advice on pictures to present to their audiences. They are not supposed to be administered as sugar-coated pills but as unadulterated facts.

"Melissa of the Hills"

Mary Miles Minter, under the direction of James Kirkwood, is finishing her next Mutual-American production, "Melissa of the Hills," an adaptation of Maibelle Heikes Justice's story. The story is laid in the hills of Tennessee and deals with mountaineer feuds. Mary Miles Minter, as Melissa, is the daughter of the circuit rider and there are few of the comforts of life for Melissa whose one ambition is to have a new calico dress each year for the revival.

A most unusual scene is that of the revival held for the rough mountaineers. Many interesting incidents occur—the solo singing of Melissa, the uncouth choir, the "getting religion" of a number of sinners and the two old elders taking up the collection which consists mostly of buttons, bullets and pennies.

Spottiswood Aiken plays the lead opposite Miss Minter in this production. He is Melissa's father, the circuit rider of the country around, whose business is that of healing sick souls, comforting the dying and instilling the fear of God into the hearts of the fuedists. But he is sadly unappreciated by the community, which accepts his services with no thought of remuneration.

Others in the cast are Alan Forrest, George Periolat, Perry Banks, Harvey Clark, Frank Thompson, George Ahearn, C. E. Rogers, John Gough, Gertrude Lebrandt, Emma Kluge and Ann Schaefer.

The Universal Nestor Company is filming a one-reel comedy entitled "The Night Cap," under the direction of Roy Clements.

COMING UNIVERSALS

Mary McLaren in "The Plow Woman" Heads Program for Week of July 2—Other Attractions Also Promise Well

Mary MacLaren is the star in the Butterfly picture, "The Plow Woman," which heads the Universal program for the week of July 2. This alone stamps it as a film production of unusual merit, as Miss MacLaren has always been identified with photodramas of the highest type. She will be remembered for her excellent work in a former Butterfly release, "Money Madness."

In the cast supporting the star are Eddie Polo, Kingsley Benedict, Harry De More, L. C. Shumway and others. "The Plow Woman" will be released Monday, July 2. On the same day will appear the Nestor comedy, "Poor Peter Pious," with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

The feature for Tuesday, July 3, is the Gold Seal three-part military drama, "A Young Patriot," with Mignon Anderson in the leading role. This is a photodrama which will arouse the patriotism of all who see it. The story is engrossing and the situation highly dramatic. Supporting Miss Anderson are such well-known screen favorites as J. Morris Foster, Charles Mailes and Roy Stewart. The Victor comedy, "Not Too Thin to Fight," starring Eileen Sedgwick, is the other release of this date.

The chief offering for the Fourth of July will be the two-part L-Ko comedy, "Bombs and Bandits." This is one of the funniest film comedies ever produced by this company and is full of laughs from the very beginning. The regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will also appear on this date.

"Seeds of Redemption," a two-act society drama, will be released under the Rex brand on Thursday, July 5. Claire Mersereau, sister of Violet Mersereau, has the leading role in this picture. The Victor comedy, "Daredevil Dan," featuring Ruth Stonehouse, will also appear on Thursday.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in the principal roles in a two-reel Nestor comedy, "Five Little Widows," which is presented Friday, July 6. The weekly issue of the Universal Screen Magazine also is released on this day.

On Saturday, July 7, the chief offering is the Bison two-part western drama, "The Wrong Man," with Harry Carey in the leading role, supported by Fritzie Ridgeway. This is an exciting story of daring and adventure. Other Saturday releases are the Joker comedy, "The Twitching Hour," with Gale Henry and Milton Sims, and Universal Current Events.

Sunday, July 8, is the date of the release of the Imp drama, "The Girl in the Limousine," featuring Molly Malone and Lee Hill. The other releases are the Powers, "China Awakened," a Hy Mayer travelaugh, and the Big U drama, "The Mad Stampede," with Jane Bernoudy.

During the week the second episode of "The Gray Ghost," the mystery serial founded on the Saturday Evening Post story, "Loot,' by Arthur Somers Roche, will be released. The title of the second episode is "The Mysterious Message."

Bluebird Director Joseph DeGrasse is picturizing Samuel Adams' story, "Triumph," which features Dorothy Phillips.

Agnes Eyre, Chicago Product

Agnes Eyre, who plays the role of Lillian, "The Dazzling Miss Davison's" sister in Marjorie Rambeau's production of the same name, released through Mutual on June 18, has appeared in support of Miss Rambeau in practically all of her Mutual-Powell productions.

Miss Eyre is a Chicago girl, a graduate of the University of Chicago, started her stage career in stock at the College and Marlowe Theaters in that same city and also began her screen work at the Chicago studio of the Essanay Company. She went to another Chicago studio, Selig's, before going east to take up her work with the Frank Powell Producing Company, where she appeared in support of both Miss Rambeau and Nance O'Neil.

New Ovey Comedy

In "Jerry's Hopeless Tangle," the Mutual-Horsley comedy released June 28, George Ovey shows too well chaperoned lovers how to get rid of ever-watchful fathers who interfere with their love-making.

When father become too much of a pest, Jerry just dumped him in a rain barrel and hoisted the barrel to the roof of the house. This Herculean task completed, Jerry and daughter are free to make love to their hearts' content.

A wire from Cecil B. De Mille, received at the headquarters of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, gives sole credit for the story of Mary Pickford's new patriotic photoplay, "The Little American," to Jeanie Macpherson. Although the general impression has been that Mr. De Mille was co-author of this scenario, the well-known director announces that Miss Macpherson was entirely responsible for what is expected to prove the greatest patriotic story ever written for the screen.

Essanay's Little Mary McAlister and the evidence that she is now an honorary sergeant in the U. S. Army.

Little Star Is a Sergeant

Little Mary McAlister, the six-year-old star who is being featured in Essanay's series, "Do Children Count?" is the recipient of one of the most signal honors ever bestowed upon a person in motion pictures by the United States government.

In recognition of the very material work this child has done in collecting funds for the Red Cross, and in recruiting soldiers, the war department has acocrded her the rank of honorary sergeant in the United States army. The formal warrant and chevrons were delivered to her by Captain F. R. Kenney, in charge of the recruiting campaign at Chicago.

Ruth Law, the famous aviatrix, is the only other person of her sex to have been so honored. Miss Law was made a non-commissioned officer for her cross-country flights in behalf of recruiting and the Liberty Bond campaign.

In one afternoon little Miss McAlister collected more than $1,000 for the Red Cross in a Chicago department store. She has also toured the city in an automobile distributing recruiting literature and from street corner stands making speeches urging the crowds which gathered to answer their country's call. It was while on one of these trips, which she had been making unsolicited by the local army authorities, that she attracted the attention of Captain Kenney. He immediately recommended her to the war department for an honorary post in the army and his recommendation was approved.

New Star with Meredith

Mildred Bayly, formerly with Metro, with which company she played important parts with Petrova, under the direction of Burton L. King, has been engaged by Lois Meredith Pictures, Inc., to play the part of "Isabelle," in the first production by that company for release through Superlative Pictures Corporaton.

Miss Bayly is but seventeen years old, and already has shown herself a capable little ingenue. At the "Movie Ball" held at Madison Square Garden last year she received first prize for her beauty, and turned down several offers from producers to join the Metro. Miss Bayly has traveled through Italy, France, Egypt, Palestine, India, Australia, Ceylon, and England, completing an entire trip around the world. This will be Miss Bayly's first screen appearance since her return.

Shifts in Schedule

The original date for circulating "The Little Terror" on the Bluebird program, with Violet Mersereau as the star, was July 23, but owing to delay in securing the negative it has been necessary to move the Mersereau picture to July 30, switching with Dorothy Phillips, in "The Rescue," formerly announced for that date. This will bring Miss Phillips to exhibitors July 23, three weeks after she appears in "Fires of Rebellion."

The date for distributing Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon's comedy drama, "The Clean-Up," remains August 9, but no definite announcements are made after that issue of Bluebird's. There are, however, numerous releases ready for schedule, including attractions for Ella Hall ("Little Miss Fix-It"); Rupert Julian and Ruth Clifford ("My Mother"); Neva Gerber and George Hernandez ("Mr. Opp"); Dorothy Phillips ("Triumph"); and Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon ("The Fourth Glove").

These features being complete, Bluebird directors are turning their attention to the future. Both Joseph De Grasse and Ida May Park are arranging for more Dorothy Phillips pictures; Elmer Clifton, the new director for the Farnum-Vernon combination, and Jack Conway, who directs Ella Hall, are taking no vacation that autumn subjects may be made ready for Bluebird exhibitors.

Johnston vs. Trade Review

Justice Erlanger, in Special Term, Part 4, of the Supreme Court, handed down a decision on Friday, June 15, in the case of William A. Johnston against the Exhibitor's Trade Review, holding that the articles published and attacking Mr. Johnston were libelous, "as involving," according to the Law Journal of June 16, "a personal attack upon the plaintiff beyond the scope of fair criticism directed to his work as an editor."

"Persuasive Peggy" Showing Soon

M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation, has again demonstrated his policy of fairness to those people with whom he comes in daily contact.

Mr. Schlesinger has received numerous offers for Mayfair's first production, "Persuasive Peggy," from state right buyers and exhibitors, but has steadfastly refused to consider any of these offers until after the trade showing which is to take place shortly, the exact date of which will presently be announced in the trade papers.

This is a commendable procedure and justifies the reputation Mr. Schlesinger is creating for both himself and the entire Mayfair organization.

Moreno with Mrs. Castle

Mrs. Vernon Castle, the "best-dressed woman in America," will have as her leading man in her third Pathe feature, Antonio Moreno, one of the most popular male stars of the screen.

Work on this picture has just been begun at the special studio in Fort Lee engaged for the exclusive use of the organization built for the production of the Castle Pathe pictures.

Director Rupert Julian has practically completed "My Mother" in five reels at the Bluebird studios.

ANNUAL MEETING IN CHICAGO

National Association Plans for Gathering in Windy City—Food Administrator Hoover Thanks Screen Organizations for Co-operation

A special meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was held at the offices in the Times Building last week at which the following were present: William A. Brady, president; Walter W. Irwin, chairman of the executive committee; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; Arthur James, Metro Pictures Corporation; Louis L. Levine of Brooklyn and Louis F. Blumenthal of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting of the members of the National Association in the Princess Theater, Chicago, on July 18, and the Congress Hotel in Chicago was designated as the official headquarters of the National Association. The various branches of the organization, consisting of the producers, distributors, supply and equipment companies and the general division comprising individuals and trade publications, are to hold meetings in New York prior to July 1 for the purpose of nominating the directors to represent their respective branches in the Board of Directors to be elected at the annual meeting in Chicago.

Co-operation with the various federal departments was discussed and the following letter from Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator, was presented by President Brady:

Dear Mr. Brady: The offer of motion picture co-operation made on behalf of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., and of its affiliated organization, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., is accepted with thanks, and in order to avoid confusion and conflict of patriotic effort, these organizations are designated as the official motion picture avenues of publicity and patriotic propaganda in behalf of the food administration during the war.

The promptness with which the National Association has responded to aid its country's needs, makes its action doubly valuable. No medium is better able than the screen to undertake the work of informing the public of the country's needs, and I assure you of my very great appreciation of your loyal service.—Herbert Hoover.

A letter from Lieutenant-Governor Edward Schoeneck of New York was read advising that there were 8,000 regular army soldiers stationed at the State Fair Grounds at Syracuse, and that he desired to arrange for moving pictures. He asked the various film companies to furnish, without charge, such pictures as will be of interest to the soldiers. Lieutenant-Governor Schoeneck, who is also president of the New York State Fair Commission, has previously stated that a special day will be set aside during the State Fair in September to be known as motion picture day, and each of the producing companies will be invited to send one of their stars to appear at that time.

In view of the importance of these subjects President Brady appointed a committee consisting of Arthur S. Friend, J. Robert Rubin and Frederick H. Elliott to go to Syracuse and confer with Lieutenant-Governor Schoeneck, State Senator J. Henry Walters, Colonel Wright and Chaplain Chouinard, and to take the necessary steps to put into operation any suggestions made by the state officials and army officers.

The following companies and individuals were unanimously elected to membership:

Balboa Amusement Producing Company, represented by H. M. Horkheimer; Metro Pictures Corporation, as a producer member, represented by Joseph W. Engel; Triangle Distributing Company, represented by S. A. Lynch; Alpha Lithographic Company, represented by George I. Cook; Astra Film Corporation, represented by L. J. Gasnier; Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, represented by Lewis J. Selznick; Otis Lithographic Company, Cleveland, Ohio, represented by W. N. Brewer; Julia Crawford Ivers, Los Angeles; Gardner Hunting, Los Angeles; Charles Bauman, 1476 Broadway; T. O. Eltonhead, Exhibitors' Trade Review, and Jack Cohn, Universal.

Nebraska Exhibitors Organize

A new state branch of the National Exhibitors' League was organized in Nebraska recently, following President Ochs' visit to Omaha. The new organization has already secured its charter from New York and is planning to establish locals throughout the state.

In the election of officers the following drew the honors of starting the new branch on the way: H. M. Thomas, president; Wilfred Ledoux, vice-president, and R. D. Shirley, secretary and treasurer.

At the first meeting plans were lead for a convention to be held in Omaha, June 19, and invitations were sent to every exhibitor in the state. The Nebraskans feel that the league will bring them together and result in a co-operation they have long felt the need of in combating the deposit system and adverse legislation, excessive taxes, etc. They also feel that they can learn a great deal from each other about theater management that will make their houses even better paying propositions than they have been in the past.

Play Without One Sordid Scene

A five-reel drama in which every scene is one of luxury and elegance is the record of the Triangle release, "Her Excellency the Governor," produced under the supervision of Allan Dwan and featuring Elda Millar and Wilfred Lucas. The story is one of society and political life and has a background of richness appropriate for the governor of the state and his associates.

The opening scene is set in a ball room and is a picture of fashionably gowned women and distinguished men. In another seen Sylvia Marlowe, the young woman lieutenant governor, is informally "at home." Her reception room, with its perfectly appointed tea table, Chinese lamps, artistic hangings and furniture, makes a fitting setting for a love scene between her and the governor.

A fashionable country inn, Sylvia's boudoir and lovely exterior scene provide the atmosphere of magnificence that the office scenes, with their massive carved furniture, bronze clocks, thick soft rugs and newest office devices, carry out in detail. Miss Millar wears some exquisite gowns, and her clothes are a material assistance to this play "without one sordid scene."

Frances Marion, the scenario writer who prepared the photodramatic version of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," the new Mary Pickford-Artcraft picture, has arrived at the Lasky studio and is at present consulting with "Little Mary" and Director Marshall Neilan in the presentation of the subject. Miss Marion expects to remain in the west several months.

Rothapfel Wins Trophy

Madame Petrova, the Lasky-Paramount star, whose first Paramount picture was shown at the Rialto Theater, in New York City recently, presented the managing director of that institution, Samuel L. Rothapfel, with a silver trophy, in cup form, as an exemplification of her appreciation of the presentation Mr. Rothapfel gave her production. The presentation of the trophy was made by Madame Petrova on the stage of the theater June 1.

The trophy will remain in the possession of the Rialto management for one year, when it will be presented to some other director in some other community in the United States, and so on for a period of ten years. The trophy is to encourage the improvement of music in motion picture theaters.

It was the manner in which Mr. Rothapfel presented "The Undying Flame" that decided Madame Petrova to set up this trophy for exhibitors throughout the country, encouraging them to follow the footsteps of this progressive exhibitor and managing director.

The Rialto stage, in a semi-circle, upon this presentation, carried out the Egyptian idea in every detail. The portions of the circle were divided into three parts, with the central panel carrying out an Egyptian design, the panel on the left being a reproduction of the great sphinx and the pyramids, while on the right were shown some ancient ruins, the stars and the blue skies of Egypt. The picture opened with a dawn effect of lights, purple borders being thrown against the central panel and with the screen raised. The curtains were slowly drawn aside while eight Egyptian dancing girls passed across the stage to the music of the Prayer from Aida. The stage was then darkened, the central curtains drawn aside, and the first scenes of the picture were shown.

There was a scene in which the queen's favorite, a beautiful young girl, is thrown to the crocodiles. In staging this Mr. Rothapfel conceived the idea of having a woman scream off stage, which startled every person in the audience. Immediately following this is a scene where the Egyptian princess is turned to stone in the arms of the Goddess Isis. This was accompanied by a clash of cymbals and the curtain was drawn over the screen for a brief intermission, during which a chorus of male and female voices sang the Prayer from Aida off stage.

The second half of the picture, as Mr. Rothapfel divided it, opens with a scene in an English army encampment in Egypt. This Mr. Rothapfel preceded by the bugler's assembly call of the British army, and throughout the entire presentation there was maintained an absolute musical atmosphere that helped make the picture an extremely interesting production from the public viewpoint.

Young America to See Christus

It is not often that a clergyman volunteers a suggestion for the exploitation of a motion picture—and still less often, perhaps, that a clergyman's suggestion classes as a "live wire tip" in the picture industry.

It remained, however, for Rev. Wm. Carter, pastor of the Throop avenue Presbyterian church, in Brooklyn, to give Historic Features, Inc., owners of the American rights to "Christus," a suggestion which has appealed strongly to them both as a means of promoting the picture, and of "doing their bit" for Uncle Sam.

Dr. Carter is a director of the Church and School Social Service Bureau, which is interested in educational and uplift work through motion pictures. A close friend of his was in France, several months ago, when "Christus," playing at one of the largest theaters in Paris, was exhibited under the auspices of a special committee, just behind the battle lines to soldiers, wounded and on furlough. The effect of the picture as narrated to Dr. Carter was to inspire every man who saw it with a higher patriotism, and with fresh courage to face death for a righteous cause.

"Every boy in our army and navy training schools, every boy scout, every lad in military school or high school should see your picture," wrote Dr. Carter to Historic Features. "It will inspire them to fill whatever place may be theirs in the service of their country."

As a result of Dr. Carter's recommendation, Historic Features is now arranging for the showing to "Young America" of the photodrama which inspired the soldiers of France.

CAROLINA EXHIBITORS MEET

North Carolina League Elects New Officers—Pays Tribute to Members Who Fought Federal Tax on Theaters

At a meeting brimming full of honest-to-goodness enthusiasm over things actually accomplished, members of the North Carolina Exhibitors' League staged their fourth annual convention on the seashore near Wilmington, North Carolina, June 14 and 15.

Percy W. Wells, of the Howard Wells Amusement Company, president of the league, and Henry B. Varner, its able secretary, were lionized as a result of their effective work in Washington recently when they helped materially in putting the kibosh on the proposed federal tax on moving picture houses.

Both men were cheered repeatedly during their speeches. North Carolina exhibitors feel sure that in Henry B. Varner they have a man who would make an ideal president for the National League. A resolution was passed endorsing him for the national presidency, and a campaign committee was appointed to raise funds for promoting his candidacy. He was elected as one of the delegates to the Chicago Convention. The others selected were: Percy B. Wells, B. S. Aronson, A. F. Sams, S. T. White, H. R. Mason, H. J. Paradis and H. W. Ware.

In the election of new officers for the year Percy W. Wells was elected president; L. J. Taylor, first vice-president; G. W. Pryor, second vice-president; Henry B. Varner, secretary, and Paul Phillips, treasurer.

A resolution urging Red Cross benefit performances one day each year as long as the war lasts was one of the measures adopted by the convention.

"Whereas," the measure read, "the Senate Finance Committee of the United States Congress has recognized the exhibition of motion pictures as one of the factors in the educational work of our country, and has further seen fit to show just consideration to the industry by relieving it of the proposed excessive war tax:

"Therefore, be it resolved: That the members of the North Carolina Motion Picture Exhibitors' League shall set aside one day's receipts each month from the operation of their theaters throughout the state and contribute same to the National Red Cross Society through their respective local chapters or auxiliaries—this resolution to be in effect during the duration of the present world war."

The meeting was one of the best attended the league has ever held.

Louise Glaum, Triangle vampire, who is also called "the peacock woman."

Charlie Ray in a big nature scene in "Sudden Jim," and at the right, William Desmond in Triangle's "Time Locks and Diamonds."

"Sudden Jim" Coming

The Triangle picture version of "Sudden Jim," the Saturday Evening Post story by Clarence Buddington Kelland and now one of the seven best sellers among novels, is being completed this week.

Charles Ray whose drawing power is increasing at a tremendous rate with each succeeding picture, has the title role. For the first time in his screen career the young star will have an opportunity to display his own personality. Heretofore he has appeared as weaklings or country yokels.

In "Sudden Jim" he is a fighting, square-jawed young fellow who takes over a clothes pin factory in Michigan and puts up a hard fight against the combine controlling the industry in that section of the country. He is described as "hell on wheels" and "a cub altruist."

Sylvia Bremer, appearing in support of Ray, is now convalescing from slight injuries sustained during the filming of scenes in the North woods. As soon as she has fully recovered the final episodes will be enacted. In the meantime Ray is taking his first rest since signing his contract with Triangle the first of the year.

His "Pinch Hitter," "Clodhopper" and "Millionaire Vagrant" have proved among the strongest box office attractions ever put out by Triangle, and it is expected that "Sudden Jim" will surpass the high water mark.

Chicago to See "Garden of Allah"

"The Garden of Allah," the Illinois state rights of which are owned by the Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation, will make its Chicago debut for two weeks beginning July 22 at the Colonial Theater.

The Allen Company announces not only the Chicago premier of "The Garden of Allah," but also the acquisition of new territorial rights. This company, one of the latest concerns in the motion picture field, started with the purchase of Michigan and Illinois rights for this film. However, a deal was recently completed with William N. Selig by which the rights were acquired to "The Garden of Allah" for the states of Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

No time nor expense will be spared in making the Chicago showing of "The Garden of Allah" the very last word in motion picture presentment. Elaborate billing, newspaper advertising and theater decorations are included in the plans now nearing completion.

Edmund M. Allen, former warden of the Illinois state penitentiary, is president of the corporation. Associated with him are Joseph M. Harris, Fred C. Aikin, Harry J. Ridings and others.

"The Garden of Allah," featuring Helen Ware, has been shown in Los Angeles, Cleveland, Seattle, Pittsburgh and Indianapolis.

In Cleveland the Keith Hippodrome, seating 4,000 people, was packed to the doors when it was shown. The newspapers devoted unusual space to the reviews, the Cleveland Leader devoting a page to the merits of the drama.

Debut of "Sparkle Comedies"

Still adding to its product, General Film proclaims another new release, the "Sparkle Comedies," beginning at once.

"The Sparkle Comedies" are an innovation in one-reel comedies, and are best described as to their tendency by the name. They are given to sprightly plots farcical in their complications and demanding true humor and good acting throughout. They are, however, described as thoroughly refined and of a nature calculated to prove a boon to houses that want fun without pronounced robustness. It is predicted by General Film officials that these "Sparkle Comedies" will make new stars in a field that is woefully underrepresented, that of light comedy in motion pictures.

The "Sparkle Comedies" are from the studios of the Jaxon Film Co., which has already been producing several series of favorite subjects. These releases are to be had in groups of six and the first group includes "Where Is My Nightie?" "Fresh Air," "The Spy," "The Trunk Route," "The Water Cure" and "Night of Enchantment."

Nell Shipman Returns

Nell Shipman, prominent authoress and star of a score of screen dramas, has just returned from the West Indies, where she has been preparing the manuscript of what will undoubtedly be one of the big screen sensations of 1918, also several manuscripts which have been disposed of to independent producers.

Nell Shipman, who can do about everything that has to do with pictures.

She is now sojourning in California, but expects to return to New York very shortly to personally direct and supervise her story. It is safe to say that no other woman in the industry has achieved the marked success in such widely divergent fields that she has.

Following her successful work with Greater Vitagraph, Fox and Lasky productions, she received several offers to continue her good work before the camera, but the lure of the writing game drew her to the West Indies, which proved to be a most fertile field for material for book, stage and screen.

As activities do not start upon her big picture until September, there will be time for Miss Shipman to consider offers for one or two productions in the meantime, therefore we may see her in some new screen successes before she sails once more for the West Indies.

New Star Combinations

Greater Vitagraph has made several new star combinations, one of which gives Harry Morey a leading woman in the person of Miss Miriam Fouche, who recently scored such a tremendous success as Ustane in "She."

Alice Joyce, with whom Mr. Morey has starred in many notable Vitagraph productions recently, including "Womanhood," "Within the Law" and "The Question," will appear in her next picture with Marc MacDermott playing opposite to her.

Earle Williams has just finished his first picture with Corinne Griffith, who succeeded Dorothy Kelly as his leading woman. Miss Griffith is a magnificent blonde type and a beautiful contrast to the dark type of Williams. Their first picture together is entitled "The Stolen Treaty," to be released in July.

A recent addition to the Vitagraph company is Miss Agnes Eyre, formerly a leading woman with Essanay. Miss Eyre is a Chicago girl, just twenty years old, and has had a gratifying success before the camera. She received her stage training in stock at the College Theater and Marlowe Theater in Chicago, and then went with the Essanay company. While with them she appeared in several notable productions, including "The White Sister" and "The Sting of Victory." She also appeared in several big Selig productions.

Miss Fouche, the other new member of the Vitagraph organization, is the same age as Miss Eyre. She comes from the same state as Corinne Griffith, her home being in Shreveport, Louisiana. Miss Fouche is an alluring type of Southern beauty.

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS AT LYRIC

Former President Lauds Industry for Aid in War—Pays Tribute to "Womanhood" Picture and Its Producer

Former President Roosevelt on June 18, at the Lyric Theater, Oyster Bay, paid tribute to the motion picture industry, and to Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of Greater Vitagraph in particular.

The former President, who had just completed his swing around the country in behalf of home defense and preparedness, volunteered to address his neighbors at a patriotic entertainment given at the Lyric Theater in behalf of the Red Cross. As an accompaniment to Colonel Roosevelt's address, Commodore Blackton arranged for a presentation of "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," Greater Vitagraph's preparedness picture.

It was after the showing of "Womanhood" to a capacity house which paid prices ranging from fifty cents to a dollar and a half, that Colonel Roosevelt paid his tribute to the motion picture industry. He said that to his knowledge the big men of the industry had been working for years in an effort to place the United States on a war basis.

"Commodore Blackton," continued Colonel Roosevelt, "started two years ago in an effort to arouse this country to an understanding of its peril. His foresight was uncanny.

"The picture you have seen here tonight represents just exactly what has happened abroad. All the scenes were taken before the Germans invaded Belgium. But they are absolutely true to life. They show just exactly what would have happened to this country if we were not protected by the Atlantic ocean, the battle fleet of England and the bravery of France. These scenes, as shown in 'Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation,' are purely mythical insofar as representing what has taken place in this country. The scenes all were taken in this country long before Belgium was invaded, and naturally long before the United States declared war on Germany.

"Commodore Blackton saw that Americans must be aroused. When he produced that other preparedness picture of his, 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' the Germans of New England brought every possible influence to bear to prevent the presentation of the picture. They were successful for some time, but eventually it was shown throughout the country, and did a tremendous amount of good.

"When Commodore Blackton was ready to present 'Womanhood' to the public, persons with German sympathies attempted to arouse antagonism against it. They used the false argument that the showing of 'Womanhood' would prevent enlistments because it portrayed the horrors of war. In some few instances I understand these German agents were successful for a time, but eventually the spirit of the American people was aroused and they realized that the picture is an appeal to patriotism and for preparedness."

Colonel Roosevelt, in concluding his address, declared that there is but one false note in the picture, and that is where America is seen to arise above all difficulties, raise a tremendous army and drive out the foreign foe.

"Let us hope," said Colonel Roosevelt, "that such will be the case, but at present we have no good reason to believe it to be so."

Edith Storey With Metro

After two years of endeavor, Metro has finally captured Edith Storey and flashes her signature affixed to a long-time contract as conclusive evidence.

Edith Storey, now with Metro.

Miss Storey has starred in more than a thousand successes. Although young in years, she has had extraordinary experience, for with the birth of the silent drama she appeared in child parts and has progressed with the industry up to her present lofty position.

After affixing her signature to the Metro contract she made the following statement:

"It has long been my ambition to star in Metro plays. Words cannot express my pleasure at having the greatest opportunity of my life come to me at a time when I feel that the best part of my work is ahead of me. The vehicles chosen for me are the highest in character, and I think my work for Metro will be the best in my career."

The first picture in which Miss Storey will appear for Metro will be directed by George D. Baker. Edwin Carewe will direct her second.

Miss Storey was prevented from going to Metro sooner because of contracts that interfered. Metro, however, was satisfied that it would eventually secure her, and production plans preceded the signing of the contract. Six important vehicles have been secured, and these are rapidly being prepared for production. They differ in type, but each has a strong role which gives Miss Storey full opportunity for display of her unusual dramatic talents. It is promised that each of the productions will be of the highest standard, and the average length will be seven reels.

Under a special marketing arrangement these productions are to be sold to the exhibitor at a price which he can afford to pay, and this providing of big productions at a price which is not exorbitant is regarded by the Metro management as one of the important features of the announcement.

Miss Storey had an extended conference last week with Director George D. Baker regarding her first play, at the conclusion of which it was announced that the first production would begin in a very short time.

Hartman Addresses Senators

Some day the question of state censorship may raise its hissing head in your quiet commonwealth, and you will want to know what to say to down it. This is the speech made by Fred W. Hartman of Chicago before the judiciary committee of the Illinois senate June 16, when the Guernsey bill was scuttled and sent to the bottom:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I represent the Illinois branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, a national organization which is opposed to any form of censorship. We have at present state laws which if strictly enforced would subject the parties presenting immoral pictures to a heavy fine or imprisonment. And every municipality and village in the state is governed by the same restriction.

Why pass a bill that will duplicate laws, authority and expense? Why establish a bureau with arbitrary powers? Censorship is un-American and opposed to the rights of the people. Censorship is condemned throughout the United States. Moving pictures have been improved by rapid strides in the last two years.

This speaks well for the industry and if pictures continue to improve at the present rate, we may in the near future be in such a healthy condition that we will not need Major Funkhouser or any censorship. For pictures are cleaned by the insistence of the public on the rules of decency. Exhibitors gain by presenting decent pictures. This is a fact and exhibitors are striving to advance the industry. Mrs. Blanchard mentioned before the senate committee that she was not satisfied with Chicago censorship. But gentlemen, what assurance have you that she will be satisfied with state censorship? None whatever, for she would not be satisfied and would strive for a still higher power which would probably work greater hardships upon the industry. She stated that exhibitors were bound by contracts to accept all features released by any exchange. That was not true. Open booking is being installed at almost all of the exchanges and any manager can use his own judgment and select his own pictures.

Gentlemen, the lady and her comrades have mentioned to you the immoral parts of certain pictures, forgetting to state that immoral pictures are one thousandths part of the films manufactured. They never say one good word for the many educational pictures. Lift the curtain of immorality which they hold before your eyes and see behind it the wonderful good which has been worked by the fifth largest industry in the world. It educates, entertains, and rests the nerves of the masses. It takes them into a different world, gives them a chance to forget their troubles, makes them laugh and go home encouraged.

Kindly remember that we go on record as a local and national organization opposed to the Guernsey Censorship Bill and that this bill, if passed by the senate, will work a hardship not only on manufacturers and exhibitors, but also on the millions of people who seek this most popular form of amusement today. I hope you will see your way clear to defeat this bill.

Additional Offices for Goldwyn

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation now occupies the entire Forty-second street wing on the seventh floor of the Rogers Peet building. The new offices overlooking Forty-second street where the executive and sales organization are located were formally opened June 18 and Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn Pictures and chairman of the Advisory Board, celebrated "moving day" by transferring his office to the newly completed addition. The Goldwyn executive offices now occupy an entire wing of a building almost a city block in length.

Chaplin Answers Draft Call

Charlie Chaplin has responded to the selective draft call, and stood in line waiting his turn to declare himself. He was minus his well known mustache, derby, shabby attire and cane, appearing as nothing other than an everyday young man in a neat business suit. He is now carrying his little blue "ticket to France."

Opening of "Lone Wolf"

Herbert Brenon in presenting his latest Selznick Picture, "The Lone Wolf," at the Broadway Theater, New York, Sunday evening, July 1, will inaugurate a new custom. The opening of the Broadway engagement will reveal this big production not only to the public for the first time, but also to reviewers from the trade papers, state rights buyers, exhibitors and even executives of the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation.

Since the picture has been cut and titled absolutely no one has seen it except the film editor and Mr. Brenon himself. Mr. Brenon has adopted this policy for obvious reasons. He asserts that a picture fine enough to be shown as a Broadway production should be treated as such. Mr. Brenon says:

Klaw & Erlanger, Cohan & Harris or the Shubert Brothers do not give special performances of their new productions for newspapers or friends, and I see no reason why we should treat "The Lone Wolf" in a different manner. We have a great big expensive production which has cost thousands of dollars and months of painstaking effort and we want its premier to be real. We will show it absolutely for the first time at the opening performance at the Broadway. The reviewers and critics will then see the production in its proper setting, with its musical accompaniment, and will have an opportunity to judge its effect upon an audience. All these things are absent at the customary trade showings. We want to present "The Lone Wolf" under the best conditions and I believe that these only obtain at the first public exhibition. For these reasons I have given orders that not a single person be allowed to see the picture before our opening. Outside of two or three employes at the studio and myself no one has seen the film. I believe that the custom of allowing hundreds of people in the film industry to witness a picture before its public presentation is a harmful one from many standpoints.

"The Lone Wolf" will enter into competition when it opens at the Broadway with every first-class production on the White Way, and therefore it should be handled just as these productions.

"Mr. Opp" is being filmed at the Bluebird studios in five reels by Director L. F. Reynolds.

PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

Mae Murray, Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid, Star in Paramount Pictures Issued Week of July 2nd

"At First Sight," starring Mae Murray, and "Big Timber," starring Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid, are the two features which will be issued by Paramount week of July 2. Besides these two five-reel pictures that same week, Paramount will distribute the seventy-third edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the seventy-fourth of the weekly trips around the world, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, and a very Klever Komedy entitled "Oh, Pop," in which Victor Moore is starred.

Mae Murray, who has scored such personal successes in "The Big Sister," "On Record" and "The Primrose Ring," has been given another vehicle to display her inimitable qualifications in this Famous Players production entitled "At First Sight." The story is filled with heart interest, humor, thrills, action and suspense.

It deals with the adventures of pretty Justine Gibbs, the character played by Mae Murray. Justine is a very attractive and highly American type of young woman who rebels against a pre-arranged marriage and follows the dictates of her heart. It is essentially a comedy, and the story is really based upon the efforts of the young woman to win the heart of a young writer, so absorbed in his work that the heroine must take him by storm. A great deal of the charm of the story lies in the quaint and humorous scenes between the absent-minded young writer and the impetuous heroine.

The writer is at work upon a story which closely follows his own and Justine's adventures, and it monopolizes his time and attention to such an extent that Justine sees that the only way she can successfully win his heart, or arouse his interest, is by providing material that will satisfactorily finish the story—which she proceeds to do in a wholly unexpected and original manner of her own.

The cast supporting Miss Murray comprises the following talented players: Sam T. Hardy, Jules Rancourt, Julia Bruns, W. T. Carlton, Nellie Lindreth, William Butler and Edward Sturgis.

"Big Timber," in which Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid are starred, is an adaptation of Bertrand Sinclair's famous story of the same name. The stars are given ample opportunities of displaying their talents, for there are many thrilling scenes, among them a real forest fire in the big timber of California. A large timber tract in the Sierra mountains was used as a setting for this picturesque drama, and many interesting phases of logging operations serve as backgrounds for the action of the story.

The seventy-third edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs deals with four interesting subjects: "Fencing in Japan," "American Match Making," "The Oldest Railroad in the U. S.," and a very amusing cartoon entitled "Otto Luck to the Rescue."

Burton Holmes in his seventy-fourth of the weekly trips around the world, which he has been conducting exclusively for Paramount Pictures Corporation, takes his fellow travelers to see "How California Harvests Wheat."

Exhibitors and patrons who thought that "Bungalowing" and "Commuting" were Victor Moore's best single reel comedies, will be more than pleased with his latest comedy, "Oh, Pop." It is the story of a father who is compelled to take care of his children while mother goes away, and who has also thrust upon him the children of a neighbor who desires to go shopping in the city.

"THE SLACKER"

Metro to Issue Seven-Reel Patriotic Production with Emily Stevens in Leading Role—Historic Characters Appear

"The Slacker," Metro's great seven-reel patriotic photo-drama, written and directed by William Christy Cabanne, will be issued soon as a special production de luxe. Emily Stevens is the star of this feature, and her superb artistry has combined with the directing genius of Cabanne to produce a masterpiece.

"The Slacker" has a powerful story, of special appeal to Americans at this time, dealing with conditions as they are today and as they must be faced. In "The Slacker" Marguerite Christy (Emily Stevens) helps her husband to solve his own problem, as wives throughout America will help their husbands and friends to solve theirs. "The Slacker" is a play that will build patriots.

In addition to a story of force and interest, the production reviews the great events of the nation's history, making a panorama of brave deeds. George Washington, Nathan Hale, Paul Revere, Grant, Lincoln, Francis Scott Key and other patriots are pictured in the most vital moments of their careers. All the allied nations engaged in the present conflict are also represented.

However, the central thought is the most important thing in "The Slacker," and it is powerfully driven home in the story of Robert Wallace (played by Walter Miller), who marries in order to escape military duty. The examples of his younger brother (Eugene Borden) and his best friend (Leo Delaney), who enlist respectively in the army and the navy, fail to move him, but his wife (Emily Stevens), daughter of a long line of patriots, arouses his sense of honor, and accomplishes the regeneration that makes a man of him. Reverently he kisses the flag for which he has sworn to give his life.

As Marguerite Christy, Miss Stevens has the greatest opportunity in her distinguished career. Walter Miller as "the slacker," Leo Delaney as the friend, Eugene Borden as the sailor lad, and Millicent Fisher as a society girl working for the Red Cross, are among those from whom fine pieces of characterization may be expected. William Christy Cabanne has in "The Slacker" added another great item to his list of truly important achievements. "The Slacker" should be of immense aid to the government in the work of recruiting.

STARTS RED CROSS FUND

"Douglas Fairbanks Chapter" to Assist Local Organizations Will Also Prove Big Boost for "Wild and Woolly"

Douglas Fairbanks has organized the "Douglas Fairbanks Chapter" of the Red Cross Fund, which will operate throughout the entire country with the assistance of Artcraft exhibitors showing his new picture, "Wild and Woolly."

The idea was conceived by the popular star and put into execution immediately at this time when the nation-wide plea for funds for this worthy cause is at its height. Exhibitors all over the country showing the new Fairbanks-Artcraft picture, "Wild and Woolly," will present an attractive lobby display with placards urging patrons of the theater to contribute to the Red Cross fund. A coin box will be placed in the lobby so that patrons may donate their "bit" on passing in and out of the theater. The entire receipts taken in this manner will be turned over to the local Red Cross organization.

In addition to being a patriotic act, this idea should prove a big boom for exhibitors showing "Wild and Woolly," inasmuch as it will attract considerable attention to the lobby of the theater and will readily be given space by local newspapers.

Edward Warren will very soon begin work on a story that he has just accepted from John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt. It is described as a thought play of the human heart and understood to be worthy of taking its place in the high standard already set by the Warren productions.

America's Youngest Volunteer

Harold Hollacher, the three-and-a-half-year-old screen tot, who has startled picture audiences with his work in several Famous Players productions, among which are the Mary Pickford release, "Hulda from Holland," and "The Traveling Salesman," with Frank McIntyre, has registered in the hopes of becoming one of Uncle Sam's many protectors.

Master Harold was registered by Blanche S. Handyside, assistant enrollment officer, and is now awaiting the call of the nation.

When told by the enrollment officer that he couldn't register because he was a German, Harold's dignity was aroused and he replied, "I'se an American and I want to fight."

Here are a few of the questions and answers as recorded by the enrollment officer:

Q. "Name?"
A. "Harold Waelde Hollacher."
Q. "Address?"
A. "77 West Eighty-ninth street."
Q. Married? If so, to whom?"
A. "Yes! To Margweet Clark."
Q. "Any children?"
A. "Four."

Master Harold does not allow any soldier whom he meets in the street, no matter how ferocious-looking he may be, to pass him without returning the regular army salute.

Stars Shoot Through Sky

Hazel Dawn and Bert Lytell, the two featured principals in Herbert Brenon's latest Selznick picture, "The Lone Wolf," essayed the dangers of the air last week in the big "punch" scene of "The Lone Wolf."

With Pilot LeGrand of the Staten Island Aviation School they both took several flights at the grounds of the school at Midland Beach, Staten Island. The final scene of "The Lone Wolf" will show a rare effect attained through the nerve and skill of Roy Hunt, photographer for Herbert Brenon. With Miss Dawn and Mr. Lytell in one aeroplane, Hunt ascended in another machine and the pilot, by skillful maneuvering in the air, enabled Hunt to photograph the two principals while both machines were speeding through the air over Staten Island at the rate of fifty miles an hour. It required several hours of flying to accomplish this dangerous feat, as the machine carrying the photographer had to fly directly over the one with the two players.

Miss Dawn was at first badly frightened at the idea of an air flight, but was completely won over to the sport of flying before she finished. Hunt, the photographer, has taken many risks in photographing big productions before, and he is declared by his pals at the Brenon studio to be absolutely without fear. It was doubtful, however, up to the last minute whether Miss Dawn and Mr. Lytell would consent to actually fly. Accordingly all arrangements had been made for dummies to be used in the flight scenes, but when the two players arrived at the location they ordered the dummies thrown away and demonstrated their nerve by actually chasing the clouds.

Exhibitors Like Novelty Ads

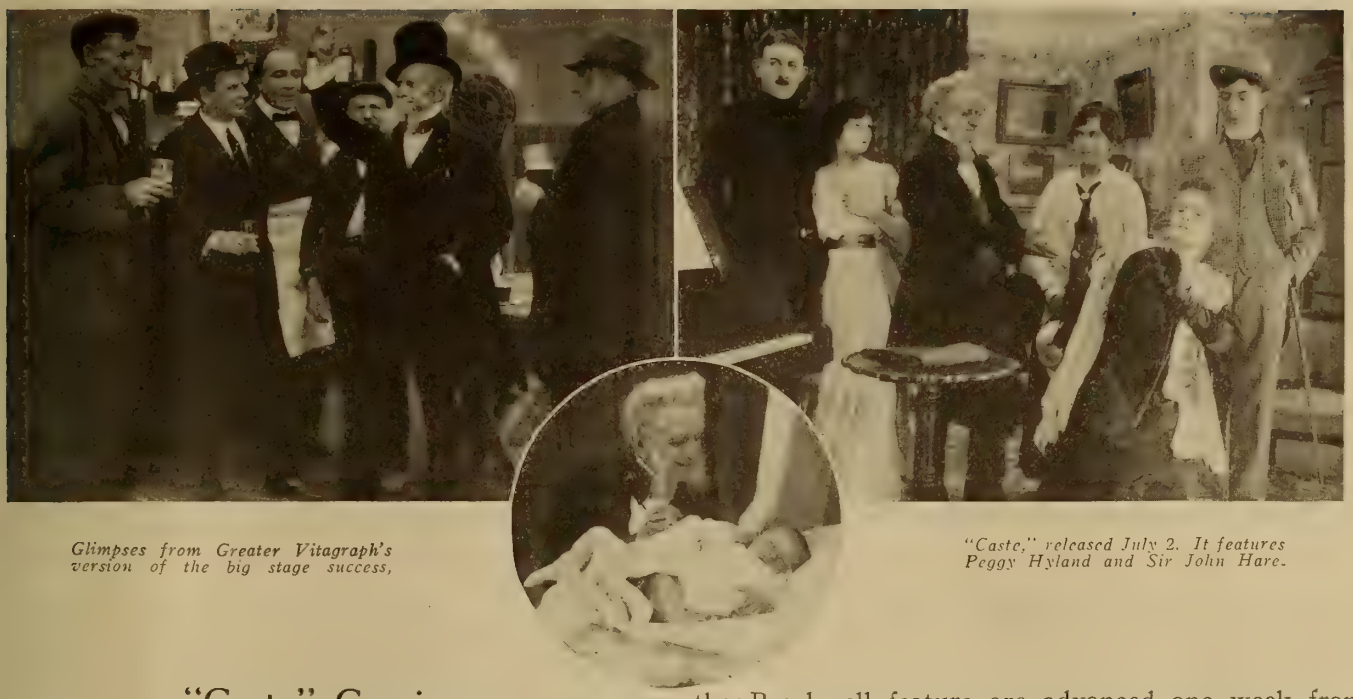
So long as the producer is making up advertising material as well as the pictures themselves, the Essanay Company believes that there should be a more direct route for exhibitors' ideas and criticisms than through the distributing companies.

"We are always endeavoring to secure suggestions from practical exhibitors and fully realize that it is to our advantage to be guided by them," said President Spoor last week. "It is only natural that they have developed their end of the business along the lines which will evoke the best results. As a step toward arousing the co-operative spirit toward the producer among the many capable theater managers in this country we are requesting them to feel free to call upon us at all times for advertising ideas and at the same time to send along anything which would be of use to us in issuing material and pictures to their liking.

"So great was the demand for the novelty advertising on the Linder pictures that we will undoubtedly continue to issue material of this sort on other series and features as soon as we are assured that exhibitors are anxious to make use of such novelties on their five-reel productions.



"Novelty heralds and other unusual material have been issued on the 'Do Children Count?' series featuring Little Mary McAlister.

"Reports from K-E-S-E show that as much advertising is being bought on each subject as is usually taken for features. This serves to indicate that new advertising methods and novelties which are out of the ordinary are becoming more and more appreciated by live showmen."

Reel Fellows to Hold Ball

The Morrison Hotel has been selected as exhibitors' headquarters during the Chicago National Convention. It has also been definitely arranged that one of the big stars attending the show will lead the Reel Fellows' Ball, which will be held in the ball room of the New Morrison. This room will accommodate 1,500 couples.

Director Francis Ford is playing the featured lead and directing the screen version of "John Ermine of the Yellowstone."

Glimpses from Greater Vitagraph's version of the big stage success,

"Caste," released July 2. It features Peggy Hyland and Sir John Hare.

"Caste" Coming

July 2 is the date set for the release of Greater Vitagraph's film version of the famous English play, "Caste." As a legitimate stage attraction, "Caste" is known as one of the standard dramas of the English-speaking stage and has been successfully revived from time to time in this country and in England.

"Caste," as its name implies, deals with the traditional and deeply rooted abhorrance and disdain in which the English aristocrats hold for their humble countrymen—"The lower clawses." It tells of a scion of royalty whose infatuation for a dancing girl of common origin leads to a clandestine marriage. On the eve of the arrival of an heir, he is called to the colors. His mother, a haughty marquise, whose characteristic repugnance for common people she has tried to instill in her more democratic son, learns of his impending departure and hastens to his home. There for the first time she meets her son's wife and disreputable father-in-law and brother-in-law. She learns of her son's marriage and in his absence attempts to gain possession of the child for a cash settlement. The girl spurns the offer, and the marquise, broken in spirit, her pride crushed to earth, renounces her son.

The son, after being reported killed in action, arrives in England on a furlough. He hastens to his wife's home, where a touching reunion is held. The two, with their baby, then go to the marquise's home to reassure her of her son's safety. It is here that filial love scores over class pride, for the marquise, on seeing her son alive, capitulates and welcomes the girl and child into her heart.

Changes in Fox Releases

For the purposes of program balance and of meeting the demand from exhibitors for the quick release of "Smiling George," Walsh's popular subjects, William Fox has made important changes in his schedule of July films, as announced last week.

The revised list of photoplays is: July 1, June Caprice in "Patsy"; July 8, Jane and Katherine Lee in "Two Little Imps"; July 15, Gladys Brockwell in "To Honor and Obey?"; July 22, George Walsh in "The Kid Is Clever."

Under the new order, "Two Little Imps" and the Brockwell feature are advanced one week from the positions they held on the original schedule. Every exhibitor in the country recognizes the drawing power which the famous Lee children have, and he may be sure that in their initial starring vehicle the Fox "Baby Grands" are more attractive than ever.

"To Honor and Obey?" presents Miss Brockwell in an intensely dramatic role and the story propounds its question vividly.

The George Walsh subject which has been added to the program has an unusually clever scenario and a strong supporting cast to interpret it. The chief roles are taken by Mr. Walsh, Doris Pawn, Ralph Lewis, A. Burt Wesner, Clyde Hopkins and Don Likes.

Mr. Walsh has the part of Kirk White, on the trail of adventure. To satisfy his appetite for it, his father arranges for him to take a sea trip with a motion picture company which guarantees a thrill a minute.

The film makers miss the steamer but Kirk doesn't know it. He thinks a band of South American revolutionists are the players, and considers all their doings on shipboard as mere fun. When attempts are made on his life and that of Jane Ogden, a fellow passenger, with whom he is in love, he still thinks the whole affair a huge joke.

Kirk finally realizes the truth when he is knocked unconscious by Ramon Cortez, leader of the band. He regains consciousness in a dungeon in Mexico. There are more thrills and narrow escapes until Kirk and Jane are rescued by a troop of United States cavalry.

Master Carl Rich, the talented little six-year-old "Heavy" who has been seen in V. L. S. E. and Mutual features, has just finished playing a leading role before the Prizmacolor camera that would have taxed the ability of most seasoned players. The work for these new natural color pictures calls for all action being about twice as slow as the movements enacted before the regular black and white camera, and in consequence the registry of emotions requires extra care and the exercise of unusual ability.

EXTENDS OPEN DOOR POLICY

Selznick Throws Advertising and Publicity Service Open to Independents—Will Save Money for Both Producer and Exhibitor

Another phase of the open-door policy of the Selznick organizations developed this week, with the announcement that the Film Advertising Service, a Selznick subsidiary corporation, had decided to offer its facilities in purchasing and other matters to any companies desirous of using them.

The Film Advertising Service was organized several months ago, with Myron Selznick as general manager, to take over the entire purchasing and supply department of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises. The aim was not merely to relieve the parent corporation of that most bothersome of all departments, but to take off its hands also the preparation of designs and material, the search for novelties, and all other related matters.

"It is a curious thing," says Myron Selznick, speaking of the activities of his company, "that with the vast amount of money spent in the film business in the purchase of supplies, there has been no organization of buying. Of course, the big firms are able to protect themselves, but independent producers are paying ridiculous prices for advertising material.

"I decided that the same open door which applies to Selznick booking and to distribution could apply to our business. We are now in a position to take charge of all details of the preparation of material. For instance, an independent producer does not need to go to the expense of organizing a purchasing department. His output of pictures is limited, and it would increase his 'overhead' out of all proportion. We take all this 'overhead' off his budget, and give him better prices than he could get for himself, on account of the volume of business we handle.

"Then, too, if he is handling his pictures on a state rights basis, he doesn't even need to have a shipping room or a storeroom for the paper, cuts, etc. We will keep it in our warehouse, and ship it as ordered. This takes all the machinery of one of the most complicated branches of the business off the shoulders of the producer and saves money for him in prices, office room and salaries."

In addition to the supply service, the Film Advertising Service is also in a position to handle entire publicity campaigns, this branch of the work being under the direction of Randolph Bartlett, publicity manager for the Selznick Enterprises.

Superpictures to Buy Features

Prepared to establish itself as a dominating figure in the motion picture industry, Superpictures, Inc., has started its powerful machinery for buying, producing and marketing feature pictures of unusual quality.

Superpictures, Inc., is the holding company for McClure Pictures, producers of "Seven Deadly Sins," and until last week was the controlling factor in the Triangle Distributing Corporation. Superpictures, Inc., will sell its new features through two channels. It will produce for the state rights market and also release through Triangle, thus thoroughly covering the field for photodramas of merit.

Superpictures, Inc., has withdrawn from the Triangle Distributing Corporation, selling its holding to S. A. Lynch at a substantial profit. Frederick L. Collins, president of Superpictures, Inc., has such confidence in the Triangle organization that he has arranged for Triangle to produce six features to be sold by the state rights method and for the distribution of twelve additional pictures a year through the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

Superpictures, Inc., is prepared to buy any feature of unusual quality. A campaign of nation-wide publicity in newspapers and magazines will be launched behind every photoplay released by this company. McClure publicity, as was demonstrated in the advertising that made "Seven Deadly Sins" a sure-fire box office attraction, is a stout and sturdy worker for every exhibitor that shows a McClure production and McClure publicity will be right on the heels of every Superpicture throughout its run.

State rights buyers will not merely purchase from Superpictures, Inc., prints and permission to show them. They will also purchase the good will demonstrated in the McClure publicity campaigns, that will work to crowd patrons into every theater showing a Superpicture.

New Essanay Features

Two big features are to be released by Essanay within the next week. "The Range Boss," the first, is scheduled for July 16. This will be followed by "The Golden Idiot," July 23. Both films are to be handled by K. E. S. E.

"The Range Boss" is the second of Essanay's series of Westerns, following "Land of Long Shadows," and features Jack Gardner, the former musical comedy star. The story is based on a cowboy romance, and is replete with rapid-fire action of the red-blooded type. The picture was produced on the plains of Arizona and its settings are typical of that picturesque country. Ruth King and Carl Stockdale are the principal leads of Mr. Gardner's supporting company. W. S. VanDyke was the director.

"The Golden Idiot" is Bryant Washburn's next feature. It is comedy-drama of the type which made Mr. Washburn so popular in his Skinner pictures. The star is shown as a beloved vagabond, who takes a 1,000-to-1 chance on a fortune left by his eccentric uncle, and wins out. The picture introduces a three-legged dog for same decidedly novel action. It was produced by Arthur Berthelet.

Each of these pictures has a screen time approximately of sixty-five minutes.

Another 28-Minute Feature

The uninterrupted course of the Black Cat comedy-drama productions from Essanay on the General Film releases is in its third series of ten. The placing of clever people in these "28-minute features" is kept up, Hazel Daly, who was "Honey" in "Skinner's Bubble," appearing as the heroine in "A Corner in Smiths." In the same picture are Rodney La Rock and Robert Bolder, both of whom have been doing work that is hailed as pleasing and consistent. The story is of one Smith, wealthy, who hates his name and wishes to subsidize the obliteration of it by hiring all bachelor Smiths at $2,000 per never to marry. Eddie Jones, down and out, wishes to garner some of this kale, and represents himself as a Smith. Isobel Smith, daughter of the troubled Smith, falls in love with him. There is no happiness for them until Jones proves that he isn't a Smith.

MARY PICKFORD DOING "BIT"

Addresses Crowd at San Francisco Mass Meeting—"Little Mary" Devoting Much Time to Patriotic Work

Known throughout the nation as "America's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford is readily living up to what might be expected of the owner of this title in the present great crisis. Since President Wilson's declaration of war, "Our Mary" has devoted considerable time and personal effort in furthering the cause of her country.

Her latest patriotic demonstration took place last week in San Francisco, when she addressed a gigantic mass meeting of 10,000 people at the Auditorium. The meeting was held to stimulate the purchase of Liberty Bonds and $2,000,000 was subscribed on this occasion. As a result of the great advance publicity, in which Miss Pickford was featured on the front pages of San Francisco dailies, the big Auditorium was jammed to the doors with again as many people outside of the building. As a guest of honor the Artcraft star addressed her many admirers and received an ovation such as even she has never before experienced.

Miss Pickford has also spent much of her time recently at public gatherings to stimulate recruiting for both the American and British armies. By way of backing up her plea for the purchase of Liberty Bonds, she personally subscribed toward this loan up to the extent of $100,000. Another patriotic act by "America's Sweetheart" was recently disclosed when she presented a complete ambulance to the Los Angeles Red Cross for service in France.

Although she has accomplished much for Uncle Sam, Miss Pickford feels that her past efforts will appear insignificant as compared to the great good her new patriotic picture, "The Little American," will do when it is released next month. It is felt that this production presents the famous little actress in what should prove the most stirring patriotic appeal ever filmed. Shown, as it will be, simultaneously all over the country, its effect will prove a hundred-fold greater than any of her many personal appearances and efforts. The picture is now being cut and assembled by Director Cecil B. De Mille and will be released by Artcraft on July 2. Written specially for Miss Pickford by Jeanie Macpherson, who was responsible for the story of "Joan the Woman" and many other screen triumphs, this subject promises to prove the most spectacular and stirring vehicle in which Mary has ever appeared.

Hoyt Comedies Coming

William N. Selig has announced the latest of the Hoyt comedies to be released in K. E. S. E. as follows: July 9, "A Rag Baby"; July 23, "A Runaway Colt"; August 6, "A Dog in the Manger." Each of the Hoyt comedies is two reels in length. The primary releases have achieved instantaneous hits according to the Selig company. Those released are: "A Hole in the Ground," "A Brass Monkey," "A Day and a Night," "A Rag Baby." It is also pointed out that the reviews on the first Hoyt comedies have been universally flattering. The comedies get better as they go along if that were possible. The June 25 release, "A Day and a Night," is cast in a motion picture studio. A rural clergyman comes to the big town in search of a choir. He wanders into a movie studio and they think he is props. Then things happen. According to the Selig Company, scenes connected with the making of motion pictures and never seen by the public are presented in "A Day and a Night." One scene shows the immense studio floor in the Chicago studio of the Selig Company showing film sets, etc. Methods of moving picture production are also presented, including the work of the director on the "side lines." And with it all the Selig Company promises a succession of laugh-provoking situations and climaxes.

Film Men for the Navy

Two of General Film's New York employes have enlisted in the navy. They are Stephen Graham, chief booker of the Twenty-third street exchange, and L. M. Cooper, stock keeper at headquarters, 440 Fourth avenue.

New La Salle Comedy

One poverty-stricken piano tuner felt like a king for a short time in the La Salle comedy released through Mutual, June 26, entitled "Discords in 'A' Flat." It was a mistake, of course, but when the dazed man is received with an ovation, banqueted and toasted, he begins to feel that he doesn't care whether it is a mistake or not.

The tangle was the outcome of Jean Otto receiving news that he had been awarded the Royal Academy prize of $10,000 for a composition, and he mistook the piano tuner for the messenger with the money. When the real messenger arrives it is a sorry time for the innocent piano tuner.

"Discords in 'A' Flat," new La Salle-Mutual.

This tantalizing summer vacation scene is from "Big Timber," which Morosco-Paramount filmed in the Sierras. Kathlyn Williams and Wallace Reid are the featured personages. Wally, off stage, has evidently just disturbed Kathlyn's immersion in a summer novel and a row boat.

TAKE PICTURES? OH NO!

But Daredevil Photographer Gets Self Arrested to Gain Ear of Chief—After that Only Bullets Threaten Life

Getting to the front is not as easy a matter as some people in this country might suppose, according to Merl LaVoy recently returned from the trenches in France, where he secured the war picture, "Heroic France," released through the Mutual Film Corporation.

After many months in London, LaVoy found that getting pictures of British officials was not a simple matter. Downing street was barred to him.

Getting into Scotland Yard is not an easy matter unless one gets into serious difficulties in London. LaVoy found that it would be necessary for him to get himself arrested to get anywhere near the chief of that famous police organization. And so he did.

Refusing to talk until he was taken before the chief, he won the ear of that official and told him what he was doing in London. The official saw the humor in the situation and promised to do what he could to get LaVoy a permit to make pictures in Downing street.

After making the pictures of Mr. Asquith, it was not difficult for LaVoy to get the attention of other British officials with the result that he made good closeups of King George, Queen Mary, and Lord Kitchener.

With these pictures of British war leaders, LaVoy went across the channel to Paris and began his campaign to interest the French officials in a picture which could be used in America to offset the German war pictures which already had been shown here. After having made pictures of President Poincaire, Premier Briand, Georges Clemenceau and other leaders, he found that getting "close-ups" of big men was one thing and getting to the front and making action pictures in the trenches was another.

He went to the head of the American Relief Clearing House in Paris. Officials of this organization saw the importance of showing in the United States pictures which might arouse interest in the work of the Red Cross. The chief of the clearing house obtained the necessary permission for LaVoy to pack his picture outfit clear through to the first line trenches.

That he was allowed plenty of leeway is attested in the assembled film, eight reels.

Through the streets of Verdun, LaVoy, with his camera perched on the front of an automobile takes the spectator. On all sides are ruins.

On foot and by motor LaVoy proceeded across the battle fields, now vast cemeteries.

As an example of the courtesy extended to LaVoy, the pictures of the British Royal Garrison Artillery in action were made with the screen which hides the battery from enemy aviators removed for better photography.

He made several flights in battle planes and from one speeding at better than one hundred miles an hour he shot the encampments "somewhere in France."

Films Better Than Text Books

The value of motion pictures as a supplemental course in teaching history and allied subjects was lauded very highly at the recent meeting in New York of the American Association of Museums, when Dr. G. Clyde Fisher of the Museum of Natural History, in a speech before that body, urged their use to a larger extent in the schools and other institutions of learning throughout the country. Mr. Fisher's one fault to find with the films was that the historical themes that were incorporated into photoplays were sometimes inaccurate as to truth of detail and history.

"It is very difficult," he said, "to get films illustrating historical subjects that have not been spoiled by departures from historical facts or by objectionable features such as silly love stories.

"It is presumed this is due to a real or supposed demand, and it is evident that the right kind of historical motion pictures will be forthcoming as soon as there is demand.

"To see a process in motion pictures is obviously as much better than a still picture or any number of still pictures, as observing the process in nature is better than seeing a cross section of it. Children learn only what they attend to and they attend to only what interests them. It is much easier to get the interest of and hold the attention of pupils with motion pictures than with still pictures or with paragraphs of text."

Upon first glance this might look like a quartette of American army men in ambush with a machine gun, but in reality it's a camera crew, under Director Harry Harvey, and the ambush is the attractive Balboa studios.

TO BUILD NEW STUDIO

United States Motion Picture Corporation Enlarges Plant and Engages New Players for Future Paramount-Black Diamond Comedies

The United States Motion Picture Corporation is enlarging its studio in Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania, and has engaged a number of new players for the future single reel Black Diamond comedies, which will be released by Paramount Pictures Corporation to all exhibitors.

The new studio will be a daylight studio twice as large as the present one, and will contain every possible modern equipment, and much material that is not used in the great majority of picture plants. An entire section of the new place will be used solely for the trick photography employed in Black Diamond comedies.

Additional property has been secured by the company in the vicinity of Wilkes Barre, where the outdoor material will be made. In this section of Pennsylvania there is every possible location to be secured, and the company has purchased a large tract of land where every phase of outdoor pictures can be "shot."

During the past week additional players have been secured by the company which will surround Miss Latrice Joy, the leading lady who has done clever work and won many admirers. A scenario department was recently established by the company and their offer to pay $5 per word for all ideas of fifty words has brought to them hundreds of clever suggestions which are rapidly being turned into scripts for the company. More than 500 ideas were submitted to the company inside of one week, many of which were accepted, while others were returned on the grounds that they were not the type of material that was needed for the company. This new department will turn out some clever stories and with the latest equipment that has been installed for the making of new trick pictures, the future Black Diamond comedies will bid fair to exceed anything of the kind on the market.

New Essanay Features Ready

Exhibitors may look to Bryant Washburn and Jack Gardner for the bulk of their Essanay pictures during the summer and fall months. These two stars are scheduled to average at least one feature apiece each month, and sometimes two.

In addition to these productions, Taylor Holmes is already being filmed in the initial picture of a series he has contracted to appear in under Essanay's banner. This will be released during the summer also, as will one or more features starring Marguerite Clayton.

During July Mr. Washburn will appear in two five-reel pictures. The first of these, entitled "The Man Who Was Afraid," will be released July 2. It is an adaptation of the story by Mary Brecht Pulver, based on the timely theme of the President's call to arms.

Mr. Washburn's second July release will be "The Golden Idiot." This is a comedy-drama of the type best suited to the star's histrionic talents, presenting the adventures of a courtly "knight of the road" and his three-legged dog in the realms of high society.

"The Range Boss" will be Mr. Gardner's July offering. This production is the second of Essanay's series of Westerns, following "Land of Long Shadows," which was released June 18. In "The Range Boss" the former musical comedy star appears as a happy-go-lucky cowboy who frustrates a conspiracy to achieve his own death and mulct a beautiful young Eastern girl of the ranch which she inherited. Trade showings of this production will be given in all K. E. S. E. branch offices, beginning July 10. The film will be released July 16.

During August, Mr. Washburn will appear in "Skinner's Baby," the third of his famous Skinner pictures. In this production he will be supported by the original cast, including Hazel Daly, creator of "Honey." Mr. Gardner will be offered in the third of the Essanay-Westerns, which will be entitled, "Open Places."

Taylor Holmes will head Essanay's September release with "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship."

Exhibitor Lauds "Motherhood"

H. W. McCall, manager of the Liberty Theater, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, attended the pre-view of "Motherhood," the first of Marjorie Rambeau's series of star productions for Mutual, and broke into superlatives in his commendation of the picture. Mr. McCall said:

> I realize in my own mind that a picture must be either wholly novel or powerful in a compelling degree to make me or any other exhibitor who see pictures day in and day out sit up and take notice. Yet I will tell you that "Motherhood" had me going from the very start. I wouldn't have cared if it had taken until daylight to run the picture off; once having started the story I felt that I must see it through.

Arthur Blumenkrohn, business manager for Superlative Pictures Corporation, has completed negotiations with Harry Davenport to direct Irving Cummings in his first release for Superlative.

ACTRESS MADE FIXED STAR

June Elvidge Given New Contract with World-Pictures Corporation—Lew Fields Again Working Under Brady Direction

June Elvidge, the accomplished actress in World-Pictures Brady-made, has been advanced to the front rank of fixed stars in that organization. A new contract between the World Corporation and Miss Elvidge to this effect, covering a term of years, was executed on June 19.

Under this agreement the name of the actress not alone goes into big type in all advertisements of World-Pictures, but is set opposite a much larger sum than formerly upon the weekly salary sheet.

The rise of Miss Elvidge as a favorite of the screen has been extremely rapid and steady. Her very striking beauty gave her a ready beginning in the World studio, where the effectiveness with which she registered upon the screen was immediately realized, with the result that she had better and better roles to portray with every new production.

Another item of interest from the camp of World-Pictures is the fact that Lew Fields is again working under the Brady direction. The great success of "The Man Who Stood Still" is the cause for this renewal of relations.

It was in this comedy that Mr. Fields was enabled to demonstrate that he possessed other qualities as an actor than those of a farceur pure and simple, for his characterization of the soft-hearted old jeweler gained for him the appellation, "the David Warfield of the screen."

Just at present Mr. Brady is again demonstrating his firm belief in the proposition that a photoplay well named has more than half won the battle of popularity.

This demonstration has taken the form of changing the titles of four of the completed pictures awaiting publication.

The picture drama formerly called "Partnership" has had its title shifted to "The Iron Ring." Arthur Ashley, Gerda Holmes and Edward Langford are the featured players. The play originally named "The Waster," starring Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge, with Muriel Ostriche a prominent member of the company, is now titled "Youth."

"Dandy Dick," directed in person by Mr. Brady, will reach the public under the final name, "The Marriage Market," with a cast composed of Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Arthur Ashley and other widely favored World-Pictures actors and actresses. Ethel Clayton's picture play produced under the working title "Chasms" is now known as "Souls Adrift," and the leading male part is played by Milton Sills.

Brenon Drops $2,100 Gamboling

The Lambs gamboled at the Manhattan Opera House in New York city the evening of June 17, and the usual happy time at this event was greatly heightened by a little episode reminiscent of a great upheaval in film circles of about a year back. It is customary at all Lamb gambols to auction off an autographed program with the signatures of all participants. De Wolf Hopper generally officiates at this portion of the entertainment, and if he can run up the bidding to five or six hundred dollars he is fairly well satisfied to knock down the program at that figure.

Imagine his astonishment, therefore, when a bass voice in the front row announced "one thousand dollars" as the very first bid. Craned necks and whispered asides through the audience noted that the "Thousand Dollar Bidder" was no less a personage than William Fox. Quick and snappy, a voice with an English accent proclaimed that eleven hundred dollars capitalized his desire for the program, and the crowd settled back for some fun, since the new bidder was Herbert Brenon. Fox countered with a $2,000 bid and eight Lambs fainted, while De Wolf Hopper, gasping and gulping, finally managed to ask for another bid. Brenon returned to the fray with a bid of $2,100, and Fox decided that discretion was the better part of desire and allowed Brenon to carry off the trophy.

Arthur Levey Visits Chicago

Arthur Levey, well-known exporter and foreign market expert, visited Chicago recently, and incidentally closed the sale of the rights to the American Film Company's timely serial, "Secret of the Submarine," for the territory of Spain and Portugal.

Mr. Levey, it will be remembered, as vice-president and general manager of the Overseas Distributing Co., Inc., placed the distribution of the entire Mutual Program, including serials and superfeatures, throughout the whole of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Fiji Islands, Straits Settlements, India, etc.

Mr. Levey also promoted and arranged the sale of the rights to the entire series of Mutual Chaplin productions, for the territory of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Africa, India, etc., to Walker's Chaplins, Ltd., London, obtaining therefrom close to one-half million dollars, one of the largest sums ever turned over in any other single foreign rights transaction.

"Who Goes There?" Coming

Earle Williams, directed by William Earle, or W. P. S., as he is known in the display sheets, has begun work on "Who Goes There?" a play from the novel by Robert W. Chambers. This is one of six Chambers stories recently chosen for screen adaptation by Greater Vitagraph, following a jury poll among its exhibitors. Another which will get under way at once is "A Soldier of Chance," featuring Harry Morey. Paul Scardon will direct this feature.

"Who Goes There?" will be a special Blue Ribbon feature, in seven or eight parts, and will be ready for release in the early fall. Miss Corinne Griffith appears opposite Mr. Williams in the picture.

Anita Stewart Recovering

After four weeks spent in a sanitarium in Connecticut, Miss Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, has returned to her summer home at Bay Shore, L. I., but she still is unable to resume her work at the studio. Her physicians have ordered that she rest indefinitely to recuperate from overwork.

Miss Patsy De Forest, the little Vitagraph star who was forced to quit work a few weeks ago on account of an eye affliction, returned to the studio in Brooklyn the latter part of last week and has resumed her part in "A Meddler with Destiny," a forthcoming Vitagraph release in which Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith are to be featured.

What Theater Men Are Doing

AN OPEN FORUM FOR EXHIBITORS

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Evansville Is Proud

IN the Strand Theater, Evansville, Indiana, has a photoplay house of which it has just cause to be proud. In appointments and class of pictures shown it is the equal of the best theaters in the country. There is a special stage setting which cost $1,500, and flowers are used for ornamental purposes. The foyer and lobby have tiled floors and the foyer is flanked by marble stairways. An electric fountain surrounded by flowers and backed by a large mirror is also located in the foyer. The music is furnished by a $10,000 Fotoplayer.

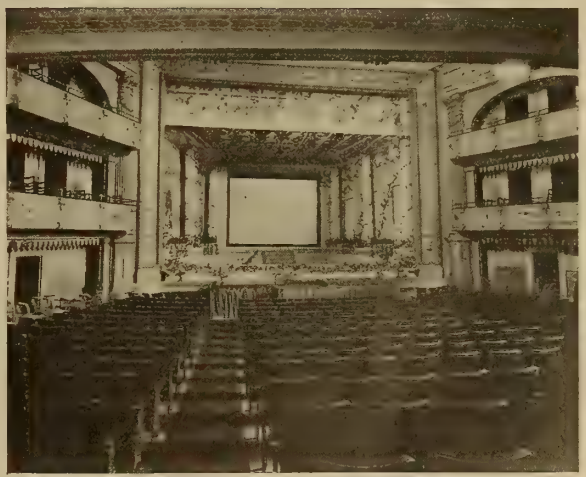
This theater is operated by the Standard Amusement Company, and great credit is due to Manager R. R. Russell for the high class and careful selection of pictures shown. Paramount dramas and Metro comedies are the rule, with one big feature a week, such as "The Common Law," and "Where Are My Children?"

The theater has a seating capacity of 1,500—1,200 on the first two floors and 300 on the third floor. As a result of the care taken in determining what pictures shall be shown, capacity houses are the rule. The house is open from 2:15 to 10:45 p. m., seven days in the week.

The screen is 13x17 feet, and the projection distance 74 feet. Two projectors are used, as very few single-reel subjects are thrown on the screen. The operating booth is located on the first floor, level with the screen. It is made of concrete and is absolutely soundproof. A 4⅛ kw. two-light Westinghouse motor generator converting alternating current to direct current at 75 volts, is located in the operating booth. This set consists of an alternate current motor and a direct current generator.

The motor is rated at 7½ horsepower. It is operated by current furnished by the lighting company. The generator delivers current at 75 volts, but as only 55 volts of the arc is required the generator voltage is reduced to this value by means of non-inflammable, well ventilated resistors having a sufficient number of steps for adjustment purposes.

The motor generator set is capable of furnishing sufficient current for the operation of two projection machines simultaneously for short periods. The object in using a two-light set is, that when a two, three, or four-reel picture is being run, the second reel can be faded in on a second machine simultaneously with the fading out of the first reel on the first machine.



This is accomplished by warming up the carbon on the second machine for about one minute while the other machine is in operation. By using a two-light set there is no variation in voltage, so that there is no interruption to the picture, nor, in the case of a motor driven picture machine, is the speed altered.

Ever See Any Spoken Titles?

Notwithstanding that the Pennsylvania state board of censors have again asserted their authority in forcing the elimination of several important titles, Managing Director Stanley V. Mastbaum, of the Stanley Company, ran throughout the week of June 18 the film version of the play "On Trial," at the Stanley Theater, Philadelphia.

The play achieved wide popularity when presented on the stage, no less than a half dozen companies being employed in the presentation throughout the country. The critics, with marked unanimity, pronounced it one of the strongest plays of the season and the public took such a deep interest in "On Trial" that Cohan and Harris and the author, Elmer Reizenstein, made a fortune out of this drama. There was said to be nothing objectionable in the dialogue or situations and no attempt was made to stop the showing of the play in any part of the country.

The picturization of the drama, while more elaborate as to detail than the spoken play, is nevertheless a faithful offering of the play, and the Essanay Company believed when they had completed it that they had achieved a success of such wholesome tendencies as to make a strong appeal to every class of picture devotees and has been inspected by the premier motion picture men of America. It was not thought for an instant that the titles or any scene would even offend and capable judges are of the opinion that the censors displayed a supersensitiveness that is positively uncalled for.

However, Mr. Mastbaum, bowing gracefully to the edict of the two censors, found a way of demanding the titles by having the title spoken by a competent actor—a novel idea in itself and one which has never been heretofore put into operation in Philadelphia and one which will doubtless prove of considerable interest and novelty.

Instead of flashing the titles on the screen, as is the ordinary method of describing a scene, or situation, these were spoken as they occur and in such a descriptive and audible manner that even those who are slow reading the screen announcements heard them distinctly.

For the Monday evening performance Mr. Mastbaum extended an invitation to a number of the most prominent members of the local judiciary and a number of city officials, and together with the publishers of the local newspapers, the managing editors, editors-in-chief, and dramatic editors, they saw the first showing of "On Trial" at the Stanley.

Gets Most Out of Motography

The following letter recently found in the mail addressed to the editor of Motography is typical of the commendatory remarks that find their way to that publication:

I am enclosing a photo of a bunch of Motography boosters which you may be able to use in your valued journal. I get only one each week, but believe me, it has to go the rounds. You will see "your humble servant" in the center of the group holding on to Motography. If you can use this picture please send me a marked copy of the edition, as once or twice I have failed to get my regular copy.

I'd like to add, while I'm on the subject, that I get more out of Motography than any other film journal. It's all good stuff. With best wishes for your continued success, I beg to remain—C. Evrett Wagner, manager Dreamland Theater, Chester, South Carolina.

Manager Lines Up Patriotic Societies

When "Mothers of France" opened at the Strand Theater, Seattle, the first week in June, it received a very patriotic welcome for the Red Cross Society of Seattle had sold tickets for it all during May, and the Personal Service Association of Company 6, Washington Coast Artillery, sold over 2,000 tickets. Manager Smythe promised the Red Cross 25 per cent of the net profits, and he gave the Personal Service Association of Company 6 fifty per cent of all they sold. He also arranged with the French and British consuls in Seattle to have some French and Canadain soldiers home from the front to address his audiences during the showing.

Strand Dresses for Summer

The Strand Theater of New York and its uniformed staff are now in full summer regalia and present a cool and inviting appearance.

The interior of the house has been entirely transformed. The richly gold embroidery plush draperies have been removed and light, summery-looking hangings of exquisite design and delicate colors have taken their place. Every one of the 3,500 seats has been covered with the same material.

The beautiful red plush proscenium curtain, with hand-embroidered gold decorations has also been removed, and a curtain matching the decorations in the boxes and the seat covers has been suspended in its place.

The ushers, doormen, and porters appear in brand new light gray uniorms trimmed in light blue facings bound with silver braid.

The general effect is most pleasing. The large auditorium seems still larger, and the clean new decorations lend a delightfully restful and cooling atmosphere.

The Strand has the very latest cooling system and has the reputation of being the coolest playhouse in New York City during the summer months. Herold Edal, the managing director, who is a great believer in the "mind over matter" theory, felt that he could greatly enhance the coolness of the theater by changing the interior decorations, and give the house an airy appearance. That Mr. Edel was right is obvious to anyone entering this beautiful and popular playhouse.

Star Turns Home Into Studio

Stage and screen stars who make homes out of their dressing rooms are legion, but actresses who make studios out of their homes are like angels' visits, few and far between. One of these is Norma Talmadge, the petite Selznick-Pictures star, who owns a charming summer home at Beechurst, Long Island.

In the filming of "The Moth," written by John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt from the book of the same name by William Dana Orcott, it was necessary to have a country estate as the background for some of the important scenes. While the director, Edward Jose, was cogitating about a "location" that would answer the purpose, Miss Talmadge came to the rescue with a suggestion that her summer residence be thus employed.

Universal has changed the name of its Bluebird feature, "The Bugler of Algiers," to its original title, "We Are French."

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

HERBERT WEIL of Port Huron, Michigan, has added another theater to his list. He has taken over the Maxine of that city. He already is the proprietor of the Bijou and the Majestic, but figures another iron or two in the fire will still leave him plenty of time for recreation, inasmuch as his recreation is hard work.

When subscriptions to the Liberty Loan closed, it was discovered that employes of the Strand Theater, New York, had bought bonds totaling $7,650.

The owners of the Dixie, a theater in Birmingham, Alabama, that caters to blacks, petitioned the council to be allowed to operate on Sundays. Their petition was granted.

Loew's Bijou, Birmingham, Georgia, has a new manager in the person of H. L. Cardoza, formerly manager of the Forsyth at Atlanta. Mr. Cardoza was among the host of unfortunates who were burned out of house and home during the recent Atlanta fire.

W. R. Howat, manager of the Airdome Theater, Plainville, Kansas, has arranged to give a series of benefits for the Boy Scouts of his section, who have appealed to him for assistance. The programs for the youthful pyramid builders will be run off every Thursday night.

George L. Walker of Grand Junction, Colorado, has acquired a lease to the Palisade Theater of that city and is getting ready to remodel it. James Thompson, hitherto associated with Mr. Walker in the Grand Junction Lyceum, will have charge of the new house.

W. J. Sirk and Charles Copeland, owners of two theaters in North Manchester, Indiana, were arrested June 8 and fined for operating their theaters without licenses. The affidavits against the men were filed by the prosecutor.

The stand of a number of operators of Nashville, Tennessee, who were arrested last spring because they refused to secure their 1917 Operators' License, was recently vindicated in the Circuit Court when it was held that the yearly license tax imposed by the city board was entirely unjustified and should be eliminated.

J. J. Baxter, owner and manager of the Gem Theater, Eureka, Kansas, although still charging an admission price of but 5 cents, and in spite of possible war taxes that are buzzing about exhibitors' ears, feels sure that his theater will "survive." It is in the center of a prosperous community and Mr. Baxter is no calamity howler.

Working on the supposition that a telegram will always arrest attention and be read, the manager of the Family Theater at Sullivan, Indiana, hit upon the clever idea of advertising his first showing of "Youth's Endearing Charm" by having messenger boys deliver telegrams to each house in Sullivan. The telegrams were in the regular Western Union envelopes and written on the regular telegraph blanks. The announcement read:

"I urge you to attend the showing of the first of the Mutual Star Super-productions entitled "Youth's Endearing Charm," featuring Mary Miles Minter. Matinee 2:30; night 6:50."

The two days' convention of the Texas Amusement Men's Association, scheduled to have been held in Galveston, Texas, June 12 and 13, was postponed until July 9 and 10. Notice of the change and the new date of the convention was sent out by E. H. Hulsey, president of the association.

"The Star Spangled Banner" was shown June 14 and 15 in the Strand Theater of Erie, Pennsylvania, for the purpose of arousing interest and increasing enlistments in the United States marine corps. There is no marine recruiting station in Erie, so prospective sea soldiers had to travel to Buffalo in order to enlist.

The Wanderland Theater at Hastings, Nebraska, has been completely remodeled and refinished. This theater, managed by Mrs. Ida M. Walden, with a seating capacity of about 600, has always been very popular, and the changes are bound to make it even more of a community gathering place.

Douglas Fairbanks, "America's greatest exponent of the smile," is appearing at the Rialto this week as the principal feature of an exceptional bill. In "Wild and Woolly" Fairbanks makes his second bow under the Artcraft banner, and Rialto patrons are bowing back in full recognition of his screen ability.

The Lyric Theater of Atlanta, Georgia, has inaugurated a dancing program in conjunction with its regular picture business. The folks of Atlanta see the pictures and then dance afterwards in the palm room to the music furnished by the Lyric orchestra. The dances are held after the show each evening, and are free.

During the past two weeks eight more ushers have resigned their positions at the Strand Theater, New York, in order to join the colors. Bruce Weyman, the baritone favorite, has left the Strand and is now in the aviation corps. Managing Director Edel introduced a new musical novelty last week in the shape of the Strand Peerless Ladies' Quartette.

The "poor man's amusement" in Lima, Ohio, received a jolt a short time ago at the hands of the city council when that body authorized the city solicitor to prepare legislation fixing the license fees according to seating capacity instead of permitting them to remain at $75 a year. Some time ago Lima picture theater managers requested that the city tax be lowered, owing to the fact that new burdens had been added to the theaters by state and federal taxes. The council's answer was as follows: Up to 200 patrons, $50; up to 300, $60; up to 400, $70; up to 500, $80; up to 1,000, $90, and more than 1,000 patrons, $100.

Instead of expending the high school war fund for the purchase of an ambulance to be sent to France the members of the Long Beach, California, high school authorized their committee to purchase a moving picture machine and a Victrola for the new mobilization camp at San Diego. They felt that moving pictures and music would be a greater contribution than an ambulance.

After much discussion it was decided at a meeting of the British Columbia Motion Picture Association, held at Vancouver, to close all picture theaters in that city during the summer months until 5 P. M. The excessive heat and the slimness of matinee attendance was the reason given for the action of the theater men. The new arrangement went into effect June 18.

Laughter aplenty, a touch of pathos, a taste of travel, and a few patriotic screen punches gave variety and life to the bill at the Rialto, New York, last week. "A Roadside Impressario," starring George Beban as a wandering Italian with a huge trained bear, was much appreciated. Charlie Chaplin in "The Immigrant," and "The Land of the Rising Sun," filled out an excellent program.

The Liberty Theater of Portland, Oregon, recently taken over by Jensen and Von Herberg, is undergoing alterations which will cost $38,000. They are putting a $50,000 organ in their new showhouse, which promises to be one of the finest on the west coast. The Liberty will probably open in about 60 days. E. J. Myrick, now manager of the Columbia, will be secretary and managing director of the new Liberty Theater corporation.

A report from the American Medical Association received by theatrical men is causing much jubilation. It is stated that there will probably be a marked improvement in the efficiency of attempts to suppress infantile paralysis this year, owing to knowledge gained of the disease last year. Doctors all over the country are ready to wage a concerted warfare on this scourge should it break out again, and theater men hope that it will not be the menace to their business that it was last summer.

Exhibitions of the film, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," were resumed at the Grand Theater, Cincinnati, Ohio, after an interruption caused by two rapid explosions. The celluloid caught fire and the beautiful maiden in the picture was consumed. She appeared perfectly calm, however, in the new film which I. Libson, manager of the Grand, procured. George E. Nixon, operator, extinguished the flame with a chemical apparatus before firemen could arrive.

Sisk and James of Cherokee, Iowa, according to Cresson Smith, Chicago manager of Metro, have given up their playhouse and taken to the road to devote all their time and energy to raising funds for the Red Cross. Together they have composed and written a song which they expect to give at Red Cross benefits all over the country. They are devoting all their time gratis to the work and while they are away have hired a manager to look after their theatrical interests in Cherokee.

The Valentine Theater, Toledo, Ohio, showed the Battle of the Somme week before last to stimulate Red Cross membership. The picture left a very definite impression upon the minds of those who saw it and contributed materially in the campaign that organization is waging for funds. German prisoners supporting wounded Tommies, and long lines of stretcher bearers and ambulances proved important incidents in driving home the work of the Red Cross and the necessity for its continuance.

Holding that in the very nature of things a picture house must be dark, the Supreme Court of Missouri has declared that theater owners cannot be held responsible for accidents resulting because of the darkness. The decision was handed down when the Yale Amusement Company of Kansas City, Missouri, sued by a woman who had fallen and hurt herself, took the case to the highest tribunal in the state. The court held that people who go to see moving pictures are assuming the risks attendant upon such recreation.

Harry Simon of the Simon Theater, Demopolis, Alabama, did some pioneering when he allowed the churches of his community to hold their annual Rose Show in his playhouse. Prior to this time the churches had been holding the Rose Show in the City Hall. Before the regular performance the public was invited to inspect the roses, placed about the theater in more than sixty vases, and a record attendance was attracted. Mr. Simon converted many people who had never cared for pictures before, by the samples he displayed on this occasion.

The presence of mind and coolness of Manager Thorsen of the Cozy Theater, Marinette, Michigan, saved a stampede and the resulting danger to life and limb when he calmly addressed the audience as though nothing had happened while the front of the playhouse was burning down. He told the people to leave the theater quietly and assured them there was no possible danger. The sills at the foot of the windows and doors were ablaze and the entire audience passed through the curling smoke in good order. A cry of "Fire" at the start, however, and the story might have been different.

Moore Establishes New Studio

Victor Moore, the well known comedian, has returned to New York from his motion picture studio in Jacksonville, Fla., to establish another studio in the metropolis, and to make his plans for the producing of his future single-reel Klever Komedies which are released by Paramount Pictures Corporation to all exhibitors.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent feature of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He has been elected vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you some valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

What Do You Mean, "Strong"?

I am learning to be an operator but I am only fifteen years old and do not wear long pants yet. Just the same I am going to be an operator. I made up the following set of rules which, if carefully observed, I think are sure to put an operator in "strong" with his employer.

I read the list of operator's rules published in MOTOGRAPHY and enjoyed them so much that we pasted them up in the booth. Here are my helps to operators:

If while operating you want to leave the booth for any reason, always do so—the machine does not need watching.

If you enjoy any part of the comedy or feature, stop the machine and run it over; this is particularly pleasing to the audience.

If you are cold and the lamphouse is cold, merely set some film on fire—it was made especially inflammable for this purpose.

When the lights go out and the curtain goes up, this does not mean to start the show. The stage manager is only playing with the lights and the curtain.

When you get tired of seeing the picture—start the slide machine. This is particularly desirable in the middle of the feature.

When sending slides back to the exchange, always manage to have them broken. The manager is proud to have an operator strong enough to break the slides. He also enjoys paying for them.

Always get the reel brands mixed and on the wrong reels. This gives the next operator something to do.

When the carbons burn down and the light gets dark at the bottom of the picture, bring them farther apart. If possible, have the light go out. The audience enjoys waiting for you to start the arc again.

Never clean out the aperture plate. The dirt makes a particularly beautiful border.

If possible be doing something else than operating when a reel ends. Patrons enjoy seeing tail pieces and white screens.

What do you think about my rules? I'm bound to make a good operator if I follow them, am I not?—O. P., Vancouver, Washington.

Your satire on the rules for the booth is very good and I hope that the small per cent of operators that the above rules apply to, and they do apply to some operators, will do with them just what you say that you did with the other rules. They ought to paste them up in the booth and read them every day.

I note in your letter that you are fifteen years old, and learning to be an operator. Do not let the fact that you are only a boy hinder you from your chosen profession, for the projection department of any theater these days is just as much a profession as any of them. I have seen it happen time after time when a manager wanted an operator and a real young man was sent on the job that the manager would say he did not want a "kid." And the only reasonable excuse he could offer was that the operator looked like a boy and as long as he was paying man's wages he wanted a man.

In some ways the manager's argument was all right. For young men from eighteen to twenty-three or four are not as settled in their ways as older men and still have kid ways and ideas. But it is also hard to teach an old dog new tricks and that applies to operators as well as any one else.

Apply yourself to your work and do not be afraid to ask the operator that you are working under the whys and wherefores of the booth and by the time you are old enough to be an I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. member you will be in a position to not only do the work that pertains to the booth but you will get the pay that comes with it and have a satisfied manager in the bargain. The big trouble with many of the boothmen of today is that because they can trim a lamp and thread up a machine they think they are operators. And they're a long way from it.

Films Keep Jumping

I have just a little problem that I would like to have you solve for me. I have a Power's 6A machine, motor drive, which works beautifully except with a single exception. And that is what I want to ask your advice on. Why is it that my picture does quite a little jumping up and down sometimes? Some films are perfectly steady and others are not. I have tightened and loosened the tensions and shoes but without effect. Also kindly tell me how I can get in as a camera man with a film manufacturing concern?—L. P., Aurora, Nebraska.

In regard to the film jumping in some cases and not in others, I would lay the trouble to the perforations of the sprocket holes in the film that is jumping. If, as you say, some of the film goes through the machine perfectly steady and then some of it jumps, that is a pretty good sign that the machine is not to blame for the trouble. If the machine were to blame then none of the film would go through steadily.

You are making the same complaint that is made by other operators and managers. Troubles of your kind are not the fault of the machine or the operator but lie wholly in the film. Either the film is not perforated correctly or the stock is green and shrinks under the intense heat from the projection as it is used the first few times. It is a settled fact that if your machine will project one picture steady, then there is no reason why it should not project the next one steady also.

I had occasion to screen a five-reel feature not so very long ago and the first reel went through the machine without a quiver, the second reel jumped from the title to the tail piece and the next three reels went through just as steadily as the first one. The second reel was returned to the manufacturer and another copy was sent and the second copy went through all right.

I do not know whether you are using new film or not. But whether you are or not I want to mention another fault that is causing operators any amount of trouble, and that is the patches made in the factories. This is not the fault of all makers of film but there are some few manufacturers who do not seem to care how long a patch lasts just so long as it gets the reel out of their hands. One day this last week I had occasion to visit a manager who is interested in several theaters. During our conversation he complained about the operators having several aperture fires and the curtain being dark twice during one show. I took the matter up with the operators and was informed that the trouble was caused by factory patches pulling apart at the lower sprocket. They said they had inspected the film after each run and had made quite a few patches but were still having trouble.

It is troubles like the above that cause no end of trouble both to the exhibitor and operator and, last but not least, the patrons of the house. The average picture fan does not understand the work of the man in the booth and quite naturally when anything goes wrong, no matter what it is or what the cause, the operator gets the blame. The movie fan pays his money at the box office and expects to receive in return, perfect projection. But there are exceptions to all rules and while lots of times delays and stops could be avoided by the operator, still there are times when these delays and stops are unavoidable. Short reels and short sub-titles are the cause for a great many complaints that the operator is speeding the picture and the same party that makes the complaint to the manager does not know or take the trouble to find out that the operator can not make two or three feet of film do the work of twenty feet; all they know is that they did not have time to read the title and the operator must be to blame.

As to the work as camera man I would advise you to make application to several of the manufacturing concerns that produce pictures, giving them the amount of experience that you have had and some reference as to your work.

Strong Advertising for "Parentage"

What is considered an innovation for state rights distributors in the way of advertising is being instituted this week by Frank J. Seng, in conjunction with his exhibitors' campaign on Hobart Henley's "Parentage."

Besides getting out a 20-page ad book, to be used by exhibitors for their local advertising and publicity, Mr. Seng has in preparation a house organ, which will be issued every two weeks. It will be of benefit to the exhibitor in bringing to his attention new ideas of different exhibitors, along with news, views, and money-making ideas, which will be of real service to him in presentation.

Not only will the house organ stimulate business for all concerned, but it will be a means of knitting together all the profit-pulling stunts which are available on "Parentage" and presenting them to the exhibitor for his use.

Believing that the personal touch in advertising is one of the most potent factors in attracting patrons to a theater, especially if it be a localized endorsement, Mr. Seng has originated an idea for a personal endorsement on a 24-sheet stand, which is so flexible that it can be adopted by any exhibitor running "Parentage."

This 24-sheet has been gotten out in addition to the regular colored lithograph 24, which is a modernized version of the Madonna and Child. This new 24-sheet in striking red and black is a personal endorsement of the film, and for the New York showing will have the signature of Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto.

As it is now, the stand reads: "To you and all of your friends. I want you to see Hobart Henley's Thought Film of Real Life, 'Parentage,' a Message. It is a remarkable film. You will like it. It makes you laugh. It makes you think." And on the last sheet the signature of Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto Theater.

This endorsement advertising has added value because it brings the picture and the theater closer to the patrons, and those who trust their theater managers will have added confidnce in the picture, because they have so much faith in his judgment. This is the first time Manager Rothapfel has ever issued a personal endorsement on a film in advertising it to his patrons.

Denies Ownership of Tillie

Editor Motography:—In your issue of June 23 you have an item regarding the K & R Film Co. invading territory controlled by Sidney R. Lust.

Wish to state emphatically that the K & R Film Co. does not own Tillie's Punctured Romance, and have never booked it with anyone.

We are sending a copy of this letter to Mr. Lust, and sincerely trust that you will give it your attention.—K & R Film Company, Inc., Per Pierce Kingsley.

Director Jacques Jaccard, with Marie Walcamp as the featured player, is busily engaged producing the first episode of "The Silent Terror," which is to be made in sixteen episodes of two reels each, and with an outdoor atmosphere, principally laid in the Canadian northwest.

Every exhibitor would do well to follow the example of this little star and get back to the soil and raise a war garden. "A Day on the Farm," this illustration might be called, for it's Juliette Day, the new American-Mutual star. The bottle is labeled "Sarsaparilla."

"The Lincoln Cycle"

Benjamin Chapin's Impersonations a Phenomenal Success. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THAT Benjamin Chapin is a profound student of that great American character—Abraham Lincoln—besides being a forceful, competent actor, every scene of this wonderful group of subjects attests. The picture is presented as one big feature composed of four periods or epochs in the life of Lincoln. They are named, in order, "My Mother," "My Father," "Myself," and "The Call to Arms." In these Mr. Chapin plays the part of both the beloved president and that of "Tom" Lincoln, his father. The pictures are now being presented at the Globe Theater, New York, with the accompaniment of artistic and patriotic settings apropos of the times.

So closely does Mr. Chapin resemble the tall, gaunt figure whose physical characteristics have been implanted in the minds of the American through histories, books of anecdotes from Lincoln's life and pictures, that the startling reality of the figure on the screen causes him to stare in astonishment at this living likeness of the man whose physical self has gone but whose work remains to be appreciated more and more as the years roll by. The first glimpse of Chapin on the screen in his Lincoln impersonation is one of the biggest thrills that awaits the movie fan. But aside from the mere physical aspect of the part the impersonator has made a deep, searching study of his character, the things that influenced "honest Abe's" boyhood, and the mental qualities inculcated through the care of his marvelous mother and his own struggles for enlightenment. With the help of a mother who taught him honesty, purity, a love for the right, and noble life motives it is shown how his great career was launched. The effect that those constant companions of his youth—the Bible, Aesop's Fables and Pilgrim's Progress—had in forming the ideals and practices of his after life is also pointed out.

The four different parts of the film are represented as being told by Lincoln himself or as being the substance of his reflections, and this form is very effective. "My Mother" is a glowing tribute to Lincoln's sainted mother, who was the "pal" of his boyhood days. Mr. Chapin plays the part of Tom Lincoln, whose illiteracy and embarrassment before his more enlightened son is painful to behold. A very clever boy actor takes the part of "Abe." He does wonderfully with the scenes of grief at his mother's death. The actress who takes the part of the mother does splendid work, giving a characterization not soon to be forgotten. "My Father" reveals some real humor in the boyhood of Lincoln and also much pathos. Abe's father, jealous of his son's learning and not convinced that studying books was a worthy or useful pastime, hid the volumes and minimized his son's chances of education. But when a neighbor sought to trick him out of his farm by lying about the wording of a deed (Tom Lincoln was not even able to write his name) and Abe discovered the swindle before it was too late, the repentant father's eyes were opened on the subject of education and he meekly returned the books to his son.

In "Myself" and "The Call to Arms" we have the same inimitable human note, coupled with historic accuracy and the irresistible comedy that distinguishes the first numbers. The White House scenes in the last subject, where Lincoln was calmly meeting the attacks of his advisers and critics and bearing the responsibility of the nation in the crisis that confronted it at that time, are wonderfully impressive and will probably mean most to audiences at the present time. He said that not one star should be lost from our flag, and his words were prophetic. Despite the malicious attacks of his adversaries, who wanted instant war, he held out for peace to the last moment, saying "My way is as straight as a turnpike road, for there is a signboard on the road that bears the single word, 'Union.'"

"The Lincoln Cycle" makes one of the most profitable and satisfying pieces of entertainment that can be found on any screen today. Mr. Chapin has produced his picture so faithfully that it is a historical document of no small worth. The offering partakes of the immortality of the character it tells about. At this time it should surely be in immense demand all over the country.

"The Golden Lotus"

A World Picture in Five Reels, Featuring Regina Badet. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

"THE GOLDEN LOTUS" is another International Service picture for release on the World program. It is a production of unusual vigor and contains many dramatic incidents which are effectively linked together. The tragedy of a woman whose utter folly and heedlessness ends fatally for her, is theme, with its scenes laid in France. Not content with the love of her husband, she seeks that of his son, who was her former lover. Filled with remorse she asks forgiveness for herself before seeking oblivion in suicide.

Regina Badet in "The Golden Lotus."

Regina Badet is a great success in the difficult role of Leah, the erring woman. As a whole it is admirally well played and the characters are well chosen. Under the direction of Louis Mercanton the production has been skillfully handled. The settings and photography are splendid. In the support of Miss Badet are: Martin Bradford, George Corday, Guy Favieres, Paul Guide, Paul Obrey and Louise Sand. If the rest of the Mr. Brady's World International Service pictures are as good as those now obtainable, the list cannot be too long.

Reginald Ramsay, a rising novelist, falls in love with Leah, the mistress of a gambling house run by Govanni. Ashamed of her life of deceit, she promises to marry Reginald if he will trust her and not demand that she disclose her identity. As a token of his love, he gives her a jewel, a golden lotus, which is the title of his latest novel. When Reginald learns the truth, he denounces her. Broken-hearted, he accompanies his friend, Robert Verney, on an expedition to Africa.

A year later, Leah is the victim of an automobile accident, which occurs near the home of Marquis Merricourt. During her convalescence, the Marquis learns to love her. Although she confesses that she has lead a life of deception, the Marquis offers marriage. After the honeymoon, Leah learns that Reginald Ramsay is the son of her husband. Shocked beyond belief, she listens to the story of how a woman has wrecked his son's life.

Upon Reginald's return Leah is more in love with him than ever. He refuses to have anything to do with her. She visits his apartments, where she is found by the Marquis, who has been informed by Govanni of his wife's history. Repulsed by both her husband and her lover she shoots herself.

"Parentage"

Hobart Henley Production, Six Parts, Offered State Rights by Frank J. Seng. Reviewed by George W. Graves

A FILM that has an indisputable moral significance, that casts its bread upon the waters to do good, besides entertaining its audiences is sure to be welcomed by patrons of the moving picture. People seeking amusement but finding merely a dry moral preachment ill cloaked under this name are usually dissatisfied. They feel rather like the man who attends an illustrated lecture, only to find that he must, for the greater part of the time, listen to a dry dissertation on some moral or religious subject, and that the pictures were more or less a bait. In other words, a man who goes to the dramatic screen to be entertained, may feel imposed upon if he discovers that some film maker is taking advantage of this opportunity to preach to him.

While "Parentage" contains a powerful, convincing moral argument—as powerful without doubt as any yet finding its way upon the screen—the film does not stop here by any means. As it stands the moral aspect of the offering stands second to the dramatic and entertaining qualities, although it might have easily been otherwise under less talented handling. The story is one of contrasts. Its theme, stated by a number of subtitles right at the start, is that the parental thought, attitude or regard towards children is an enormous factor in shaping their desires, habits and the course of their mature lives. An "unwanted" child, like "a tender flower born amid Alpine snows," is more apt to give up the struggle altogether or lead a life of dissipation or crime than to survive the terrible odds and gain an equal footing with the fortunate child, whose embryonic thought has been modeled into noble life motives and purity amid the sunshine of parental love. So two instances are taken—one, an "unwanted" and the other the idol of a happy household. The course of the two youths' lives becomes more of a contrast as the story moves on.

The story is simple, yet impressive and dramatic, working up to the situations of power, but most important of all, adhering to its theme. Those in the cast are so well typed that the picture stands out as one of widely diversified human types, and this is a large part of the secret of the successful contrasting to be found in the story. To counterbalance the sombre side we find much cleverly conceived comedy. The sequence showing the jubilant father making a mad rush for home to see his first-born does not occupy a bit too much footage. Everybody in the horse-car, including the driver, knows the excited father's secret ere much pavement has been traversed. Some excellent comedy in a schoolroom, in which a large number of unaffected, spirited child actors hold the center of attention, occupies a large piece of footage, but nobody is likely to cry quit. The passing of notes with such familiar inscriptions as "I love you," etc., eating fruit behind copybooks, covertly copying lessons, pulling girls' hair and all the et cetera of time-hoary schoolroom pranks, make for the most pleasurable kind of entertainment.

The story, by Martin G. Chandler and Hobart Henley, well fulfills its purpose of entertainment. Mr. Henley also directed. In the cast are to be found excellent players. Bert Busby, Barbara Castleton, Gilbert Rooney, William Welsh, Anna Lehr, Mary Grey, Master Matty Roubert, Master Frank Goyette, and others make up an aggregation of histrionic ability such as is seldom found in the same picture at the same time. "Parentage" should be a real sensation in the state rights field.

"The Car of Chance"

Bluebird in Five Parts Released July 9. Reviewed Lapearl Waggoner

WILLIAM WORTHINGTON has directed a nice, ordinary, take-the-whole-family picture with a keen photographer behind the camera. Young people, especially, will like Brownie Vernon as the pretty daughter who would like to defy her parents, and who almost does. They will like, too, the smiling, go-lucky hero, with more good humor than sense, as portrayed by Franklyn Farnum. Honorable mention should most certainly be made of the work of H. J. Bennett, as the millionaire of position, but no scruples. A wholly satisfactory offering; not thrilling, but just pleasant.

The Story—Mrs. James Bennett has money and a pretty daughter. She wants social position and she is quite willing to trade daughter for it. Mr. William Mott Smith has the position and some more money and is more than willing to take Ruth. Ruth, loving Arnold Baird, a harmless, happy young bachelor, left at the death of his father with nothing but a touring car, has a mind of her own and uses it. When Arnold goes to ask Papa Bennett's consent he is told to come back when he has a hundred thousand dollars. His getting it by organizing a jitney bus company during the street car strike, said street cars being owned by Pater Bennett, makes Ruth love him more, wins dad's consent, and makes the audience admire him.

ETHEL CLAYTON is here seen in a role of big appeal,—as a woman who, though wronged by her husband and another woman, seeks not to avenge herself by returning evil for evil but with true womanly charity and love actually protects her husband and the woman from the wrath of the latter's husband. Thus it is that fear teaches its lesson and eyes of the erring wife and the heroine's husband are opened to the real character of their own mates and the folly of departing from the bounds of law and reason. Miss Clayton makes the part that of a really noble woman and one of big sympathy and appeal.

The story is hardly substantial enough for five reels, but it is for the most part entertainingly developed and the scene toward the end where the wife protects her husband and the "other woman" from the murderous design of the latter's husband is quite tense. By acting and pretending that the woman has not been in the house she "stalls" the infuriated husband off and gives the erring wife a chance to escape. The picture was given very good production by Harley Knoles. The work of the cast is one of the essential worthy things of the offering. The players are: George MacQuarrie, Robert Forsyth, Pina Nesbit, Edward Langford, George Cowl, Lew Hart, Edward Reed, Edwin Roe and Ivan Dobble.

The notable features of the picture are a well played lead, good support and good production. The offering makes an estimable program number.

"On Trial"

Essanay Version of Stage Play a Successful Picture. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS stage play, which drew its inspiration from motion pictures, with their "flash back" system, proves to be excellent material for a motion picture. James Young has directed it, in seven reels, with a well chosen cast of players, fine photography and adequate settings. The story and the arrangement form one of the most interesting and entertaining picture plays imaginable. It is a smoothly told drama, and unified. There is no drop in the interest and there is no difficulty in following events. One doesn't think of the time taken or wonder how much longer the film will run. The seven reels seem like one.

The picture is a trial scene, the witnesses' stories being visualized. Director Young has made that court-room a very real place to all who see the picture. Well chosen types of "extras" and cleverly introduced bits of humor and human touches, presented easily and naturally, make it so.

The actors all do fine work. Sydney Ainsworth plays Robert Strickland, a much more human role than those usually given him. He is entirely satisfactory. Little Mary McAlister has the important part of Doris Strickland, and plays it beautifully. It is a peculiarly emotional role for so tiny a player. Barbara Castleton is pleasing as Mrs. Strickland. Harry Dunkinson and Patrick Calhoun, as the attorney for the defense and Trask's secretary, respectively, are excellent. Others in the cast are Director Young as Trask, Corene Uzzell as his wife, John Cossar, the prosecuting attorney, and Richard Baker, the judge.

There is no question about the high entertainment value of the picture in whatever theater shown. The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., controls the play.

The Story: Gerald Trask is shot dead in his home, and Robert Strickland is on trial for his murder. Mrs. Trask and Trask's secretary, Glover, see Strickland fire the shot. The Trask safe is rifled and a large amount of money stolen. The motive seems to be theft.

Strickland pleads guilty and refuses to make any defense. He fights any attempt on the part of the lawyers to solve the mystery. At the trial, against his will, his little daughter is called to the stand. The testimony of Mrs. Trask, of little Doris Strickland and finally of Mrs. Strickland, reveal the story of Trask's villainy and of his wronging of Mrs. Strickland through a false marriage when she was a very young girl.

One member of the jury stands for a verdict of guilty. The others desire Strickland's acquittal, believing him right in avenging his wife. The one member wishes the robbery explained. A recall of witnesses and cross-examination prove the secretary guilty of the theft, and Strickland is acquitted.

"The Man Who Was Afraid"

New Bryant Washburn Play Released July 2 by K. E. S. E. Reviewed by A. E. Curtis

BRYANT WASHBURN'S newest feature, "The Man Who Was Afraid," made by Essanay and released by K. E. S. E. on July 2, should strike a vulnerable spot in the public in small cities. Metropolitan folk are in a position to see more uniformed troops and absorb more of the military atmosphere of preparation than the dwellers in the cities of quality rather than quantity. That is why it is probable that small city audiences will go more eagerly to see "The Man Who Was Afraid" than will big city patrons.

We can readily imagine some such report as this in the "What the Picture Did for Me" department of MOTOGRAPHY in the issue following the release of the picture:

THE MAN WHO WAS AFRAID (Essanay) with Bryant Washburn. "This picture went big, on account of the interest in war at the present time and the talk about slackers and because Bryant Washburn is getting to be a favorite with my patrons."—A. Booker, Any Theater, Medium City, U. S. A.

The play is well produced and follows the book sufficiently to satisfy those who have read the latter. There are some goose pimples in the battle scenes but the real thriller is the leap over the cliff into the water.

Bryant Washburn reaches home in the coward role and also is, of course, an heroic hero when the time comes.

The mother who goes the limit to save her boy from going to war is a human, if not an everyday, character, and she is very well done by Frankie Raymond. Margaret Watts, who is Washburn's sweetheart, looks like a small town girl, which is as it should be here. The army scenes are very interesting.

Here's a bird's eye view of the story:

Young Benton Clune is not a coward at heart. He is a victim of over-zealous mother-love which has grown to exert too great an influence over him. When the President's call to arms comes, Clune's regiment of national guard joyously prepares. Mrs. Clune, however, is terror-stricken. She induces Benton to resign from the unit. His comrades brand him a "slacker," and the girl he loves spurns him. The regiment moves off to the war. Lacerated by the taunts which greet him on all sides, Clune's manhood finally asserts itself. In desperation he defies his mother and hastens to the front. He finds his regiment in a desperate plight. The enemy, in overwhelming numbers, is threatening to annihilate it. The colonel calls for a volunteer to make a perilous trip for reinforcements. Those who had jeered at Clune hold back from what seems inevitable death. The man they had called "slacker," however, steps forth. His trip through the enemy lines forms a series of hair-breadth escapes but proves successful in the end. Thus Benton redeems his honor and wins the girl he loves.

"At First Sight"

Famous Players-Paramount Photoplay Released July 2. Reviewed by George W. Graves

GEORGE MIDDLETON'S story, "At First Sight," combines comedy touches with an interesting exposition of human nature in a way calculated to keep an audience agreeably entertained for the entire time of its showing. Mae

Mae Murray in "At First Sight."

Murray makes one of those always enjoyable piquant and vivacious girl parts sparkle with irresistible human touches, all of her own manufacture, that no one can quite imitate. Robert Leonard's direction makes Mr. Middleton's entertaining and novel tale register in just the right proportions, handling a good cast effectively and bringing out the indispensable quaint character delineations in splendid style.

The story is not of the exciting melodramatic type, neither is it burdened with much intricate detail and superfluous, uninteresting action. It is just a simple little tale about a unique love affair between a vivacious, hero-worshiping girl and an absent-minded, absorbed novelist, her hero, whose story is inspired by the experiences he has with the girl, but who doesn't seem to know when he is in love. The girl at last kills two birds with one stone—arousing him to the fact that the romance is not all on paper and bringing about an exhilarating situation in real life that forms quite the proper twist for the successful completion of his novel.

"At First Sight" is an enjoyable light comedy, with a big slice of the human filling out the necessary ingredients. The picture is easy to watch, because there are no tediously complex situations or unpleasant themes, and it certainly makes an attractive summer offering.

Sam T. Hardy makes the reticent, profession-absorbed, slow-footed novelist a character true to some types in life. Other players are Jules Rancourt, Julia Burns, W. T. Carlton, Nellie Lindereth, William Butler and Edward Sturgis.

"Vanity and Some Sables"

O. Henry Two-Reel Picturization Released Through General. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS picture, showing for the week of June 3 at the Strand Theater, New York, seemed to make a big impression on the patrons of that house. It is, in fact, among the best of these refreshing O. Henry "punch" films. As in the stories already filmed, we find scrupulous attention given to detail, effective direction, good acting, human, convincing types, and the novelty characteristic of all the author's writings. The story, about a vain, reformed crook who makes one last "lift" to improve the personal appearance of his sweetheart and thereby has a close shave with the detectives, is pleasingly and humanly told straight through. There is much effective melodramatic action made more effective through remarkable night photography. A number of thrills accompany the young gang leader's early experiences before he reforms. The "twist" occurs when we learn that the costly sables are not what they seem in price, even if they are in looks, and it is shown that the real sables never were stolen. This climax is brought about in a very deft and delightful way when the detective is about to nab the hero. A nearby cop, familiar with furs, attests their inferiority and pride suffers a fall. The young lover would rather have "done time" than have presented his girl with something cheap. Simultaneous with pride's fall we have the demonstration of a detective's bigness and a girl's subtle reproach.

Wallace MacDonald in the juvenile type character takes the laurels for acting, and this is saying much, for Mildred Manning always handles her parts well. Mr. MacDonald makes a good impression because he doesn't try too hard to do so. He works with repose and conviction and besides this has a likable personality of the sort that registers as human with an audience. Mildred Manning, too, deserves praise for her realistic contribution to the picture. Types and atmosphere number "Vanity and Some Sables" with the best of the other O. Henry productions in this regard.

"The Clodhopper"

Five-Reel Triangle Photoplay Released June 17. Reviewed by G. W. Graves.

A REAL human play with plenty of places for laughter and tears on every hand is this picturization of Monte Katterjohn's story, featuring Charles Ray is a part that gives him a chance to do some of the best acting he has yet performed before the camera. As the "Clodhopper," an awkward rustic who comes to New York and makes a hit without knowing it as an eccentric dancer featuring his original "clodhopper glide" Mr. Ray gives a rendition that is delightfully real, one that holds the spectator's eye and sympathy perpetually.

The story, with its theme of subduing a hard-hearted, self-righteous, proud father, and bringing him to a point where he has to admit that his son is a better man than himself, entertains straight through. The father is a typical, narrow-minded, tyrannical, country town character, the mother is a just as typical patient, tender-hearted wife, always interceding for her boy, and "the clodhopper" is a thoroughly likable, country boy, trying to do his best under the stern rule of his father. When Everett, the clodhopper, asks his father for a new suit in which to attend the country fair with his girl he pleads in vain. But the generous mother comes to the rescue, sends for a suit by mail with her savings and double-crosses her better half. The only trouble with the suit, however, is that it is as pinched and abbreviated as the father's cast-off apparel which he had to wear was loose and ill-fitting.

This mail-ordered suit, together with a flat, insipid looking straw hat, and other weird bits of dress, and the way the accomplished actor wears it will get a peal of laughs from any kind of audience. It is in this guise that Everett, who has come to blows with his cruel father and said good-bye to his sweetheart, comes to New York and is lucky enough to show up at a theater where they are looking for something novel and eccentric to save the show from a dismal failure. His first original dance is a winner. The country lad gallops up and down the stage, dangles his arms, shoots out his feet in all directions, etc., in a regular boob dance, and the audience that sees this film will be in sympathy with the audience in the story which acclaims the "clodhopper glide" as the sleep pinch of the season.

At home, a run is made on the flint-hearted father's bank, but he refuses to ask his successful son for aid, but Everett, come for by his sweetheart, returns to his home town with bags full of money just in time to save the tottering bank in spite of its owner's protest. The father finally comes down off of his high and mighty stand and congratulates his son with due humility.

Margery Wilson was a very fortunate choice for the part of the sweetheart who prevails upon the clodhopper to return and make up with his father. Miss Wilson's works is always attractive and convincing. Charles French makes us hate the old father, and Lydia Knott furnishes the part of the mother with just the right ingredients.

"The Clodhopper" is a delightful mixture of the comic and the pathetic. In fact, the two elements are largely conjoined. The picture is a winner from every angle.

"The Little Orphan"

Ella Hall as a Belgian Orphan in Bluebird Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS picture is in its general outlines similar to other Bluebird offerings featuring Ella Hall, and the star's role is like many others she has played. Therefore an exhibitor whose patrons have liked the star in other plays can be fairly sure of pleasing them with this. There is quite a bit of honor, especially in the early reels, and this goes far to counterbalance the improbabilities which form the story's worst feature.

An element of timeliness which may provide an advertising point is that the leading characters in the story are three Belgian orphans, adopted by three American young men in response to the "Adopt a Belgian Baby" campaign. They wanted three boys but through a mistake a girl is included in the party, which complicates things and forms the basis of the story. Placing the beginning of the story not quite three years ago gives the three orphans a short time in which to grow up, but they manage to do this, and the story ends with the marriage of ward and guardian.

The Story: Three young men decide to adopt three little Belgian boys but by mistake two boys and a girl are sent them. The girl, accompanied by her numerous pets, is something of a problem but one of the men to provide for her. In turn, the little Belgian takes charge of the guardian's affairs, breaking up a love affair with a woman she disapproves of and starting another. But this second affair proves disappointing also and, after she has been sent away to school and returns, a young lady, the little Belgian realizes that the best way for her to provide her guardian with a wife is to marry him herself.

"The Land of the Rising Sun"

First Four Episodes. Released by American Japan Pictures Co. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

"THE LAND OF THE RISING SUN" will be released July 15 on the state rights plan by the American-Japan Pictures Company. These pictures, which are now having a successful run at the Rialto theater, are in ten episodes. They are of great educational value. The Japanese being of an alien race whose manners, customs, dress, mode of living, amusements, food, activities, religion, etc., are so radically different from the ways of our own race, that a series of pictures pertaining to these characteristics will undoubtedly furnish absorbing entertainment for any American audience.

These pictures are splendidly photographed, very expressive and interesting in almost every detail; not less so, perhaps, from their beauty than from the extreme strangeness of everything portrayed. They were filmed in Japan under the personal direction of J. B. Millet.

Episode 1—"First Impressions." Some of the principal features in this episode are scenes showing the most important buildings, gardens, streets and the people in the towns of Yokohama and Tokyo.

Episode 2—"A Night in a Japanese Inn." This is a little comedy concerning the experiences of Percy, an American, in a Japanese inn. It shows the home life of the Japanese and their peculiar method of serving and eating their food.

Episode 3—"Odd Fishing Methods." As meat is scarce in Japan, fishing is an important industry. Cormorant fishing is shown, together with the way in which fish are kept alive until marketed.

Episode 4—"Jap Kiddies." This episode shows the life of the child, the manner in which the little one is carried on its mother's back or that of the nurse-maid, their school life and their games.

"The Price of Pride"

Peerless-World Drama in Five Reels Released June 2. Reviewed by George W. Graves

"SELF-LOVE and wounded pride," as one of the subtitles indicates, seems to be the root of the evil influences that spread broadcast in this drama of family misunderstandings and troubles. The story has a pretty tedious and complicated plot, which may interest some because of its various ramifications, but the general effect is a jumble of convenient situations, garnished with bits that are improbable, and the whole is certainly far from impressive or a savory dramatic repast for those desiring something convincing and entertaining. The film has to its credit a number of well known artists who give creditable performances, and this helps the story considerably, but this, together with good direction and quality production, fails to pull the story out of the slough of the manufactured, the unreal. The illustrative backgrounds given many of the subtitles show careful preparation and they help considerably in emphasizing the thoughts developed. These decorated subtitles have appeared in World Film subjects for some time and they are worth mention.

Carlyle Blackwell plays a double role, as the son of the father whose happy home is broken up by a misunderstood situation kept so by wounded pride, and his half-brother, a gambler, thief and worthless character. The story opens in the happy home of Jeffery Black. Nan Westland, a dear friend of Madge, the wife, is secretly in love with Jeffery. She is unable to control herself, and Madge enters the parlor to find her apparently in the arms of her husband. Madge misconstrues the event, denounces the two and tells Jeffery she never wants to see him again. Jeffery packs up and leaves for parts unknown, but gives Madge a number of hours in which to repent and call him back. Her pride hurt as much as his, she fails to do so, and so the parting is made.

Nan, aware of events, plans to be on the same westward bound train as Jeffery; the two meet, and through reasons of sympathy the two decide to take up life together, although Jeffery admits he does not love the woman. A child is born to the two, but Nan finally realizes that she cannot win Jeffery's love, or get him to marry her, so she marries another man who does love her. About this time a skip of twenty years is made, revealing Jimmie, Nan's son, as a gambler and thief known as "Rodeo." David, Jeffery's child by his first wife, comes to the West as a mining expert, is the exact double of his half-brother. He sends for his sweetheart to join him in the West. Her train is held up by Rodeo. By accident she gets a glimpse of his face and of course believes it to be David, whom she repulses later. David is arrested as the culprit and brought to trial before his own father, Jeffery Black. Madge, who has hurried from the East, is also in the courtroom. About this time Rodeo is arrested and brought wounded to the courthouse. It is not explained why the latter place, however, is not notified in time to prevent the trial of David and his conviction. Anyway, sentence is suspended. Afterwards all the main characters of the play are grouped together in the final scene. Rodeo dies in the arms of his mother, while David brings Madge and Jeffery together.

Carlyle Blackwell's work is only fair in his double role.

"House of Cards"

Catherine Calvert and Frank Mills in Five-Part Art Dramas Release. Reviewed by H. I. Fretz

THE "House of Cards," a photodrama written and directed by Madame Alice Blache, and produced by U. S. Amusement Corporation for the Art Drama program is a message to both men and women. It is a story where the careers of a father and mother count more than the welfare of their child. So absorbed are they in their work, striving to gain from the world, that they forget they started out for happiness. Through the efforts of the child they are brought to see that heir home is but a house of cardsand liable to go under at any time.

Little Kittens Reichert has an important pat as the child Louise, plays it well. Frank Mills as Mannering and Catherine Calvert as Ethel Howard are effetive in their roles. James O'Neil as Norton is good. It is a clean play that strikes home, and one that will be a big box-office attraction. The supporting roles are well cast

Ethel Howard, a young woman of ideals, anxious to have a career, marries Mannering, but insists upon continuing with her work. Devoting all her time to her profession, she neglects her home. Even after their little daughter is born, she remains absorbed in her work, and hires servants to care for the child.

Gradually the husband and wife drift apart. The woman is still engrossed in her work, while the man becomes infatuated with another woman. This woman is the accomplice of the men who are trying to stop the investigation on child labor. She tries to induce Mannering to use his influence with the committee handling the matter, and to take the bribe offered him. He refuses.

Meanwhile, the little girl, being lonely at home and seeing no attention paid to her, decides to run away. With the disappearance of the child, the parents are drawn together.

"The Ghost of Old Morro"

Edison-K. E. S. E. Five-Reel Release of June 25. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AN UNUSUAL production, filmed in Cuba and containing many wild and strikingly beautiful scenes taken among the sea cliffs and about an old castle, is offered to exhibitors in this release. The story itself is a wild, colorful tale, tragic but romantic and full of local color and Spanish atmosphere. It is a picturization of a legend which explains the ghos that haunts an old castle. The beauty of the settings alone would please any audience and there is added a most interesting, unusual story, well set forth and well acted. First honors go to Helen Strickland, who does remarkable work as the old witch one of the most vivid and vigorous character interpretations we have ever seen taken by a woman player. Mabel Trunelle plays the Spanish girl well, and Robert Conness appears as the oficer. There are a number of minor roles vividly set forth.

In fact, vividness is a distinguishing feature of the play. It is "different." It is a tragedy, and there are grisesome incidents, but it is so picturesque and so excellently done, good taste never being sacrificed, that we think all audiences will appreciate it. It will gain immensely by an accompaniment of Spanish and other colorful music, and an artistic exhibitor can arrange special advertising and lobby displays to appeal to the imagination of his patrons. The picture is worthy of being featured.

The Story: In a Spanish seacoast town an old witch-like woman heads a band of outlaws and smugglers. To gain protection for her band, she bribes a revenue officer by arranging a meeting with the daughter of one of the men. When the father learns of this, he curses the old woman, asking that she may suffer through someone dear to her.

The old woman has a daughter cared for in a convent. One day the officer sees the girl and, attracted by her beauty, manages to see her again. He is struck by the innocence of the girl and really loves her. The band of smugglers learn of this and kidnap the girl, intending to use her as a bribe for the officer. The old witch aids in the plan, too late learning the identity of the girl. When she does, she orders the officer killed. Her servants are to carry his body to a high cliff and throw it into the sea. But through the treachery of one of them the officer is allowed to escape and a substitute is sought. The witch's daughter is killed and her body is thrown into the sea. When the officer learns of this, he throws himself into the sea, and the old witch dies of grief. Her spirit returns to haunt the old castle, the scene of her crime and sorrow.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

INVENTORS of first aids to the harassed housewife doubtless beseige the patent office with new inventions when they get a glimple of "Fatty" Arbuckle peeling potatoes in his latest two-reeler, "The Rough House." The plump comedian scores an original hit with his methods of preparing the simple garden vegetables. Paramount will release the comedy.

Charlie Chaplin has been entertaining a number of celebrities at the Lone Star Studios. Prince Paul Troubetzkoy, noted Russian sculptor, painter and poet thinker, accompanied by the princess, spent a number of hours watching Charlie work. Bhai Suchet Singh, B. C. S., educator and philosopher of India, made a special trip to California to see the world famed comedian.

"Pinto," the colt which Helen Holmes recently shipped to her ranch in Utah, last week was given first prize among "high schooled" animals at a local stock fair in that vicinity. This is the horse which Miss Holmes spent the better part of six months training.

Jackie Saunders (Mutual-Horkheimer) is a crack shot with a revolver and can put a hole through a dime at twenty-five feet.

Sherlock Holmes has been out-Sherlocked. "Fatty" Arbuckle holds the new record in his third Paramount-Arbuckle comedy, "The Rough House." Herbert Warren does the trusty Watson role. The latter's screen impersonation is said to be flawless, even the conventional stove polish on his boots having photographed perfectly.

Jackie Saunders, the Mutual-Horkheimer star, has bought memberships in the Red Star for all of her menagerie, even including her turtle. Miss Saunders is passionately fond of animals of all kinds and her greatest worry during the war is the great sacrifice of horses. In an effort to alleviate the sufferings of these dumb beasts she thought of this method of helping by taking out memberships for the animals under her care, in this society which was formed to take the same care of the horses on the battlefield that the Red Cross does of the soldiers.

Yes, George Periolat, the American company's actor who can play "anything," is a dyed-in-the-wool bachelor. George swears he has never yet proposed, but admits having received several offers from eligible spinsters, in fact, he has two letters which he can show to prove his assertions. Some nice girl is going to get him yet.

Roscoe Arbuckle, heavyweight screen champion, has a penchant for Chinese porcelains. His collection is said to be one of the largest in the east.

Ann Murdock (Mutual-Empire) is threatening to have her roadster upholstered in red, white and blue.

Leila Knapp Wyre, Metro's new casting director, is a woman of versatile talents. She is an artist of known ability, a student of interior furnishings and has been a costume designer for many years.

Now that Pauline Frederick has been duly burned to death she has retired to her country place in Jersey while Director Robert G. Vignola completes the rest of her Famous Players-Paramount pictures which depicts the scenes immediately following her untimely demise. The production is called "The Love That Lives."

Marjorie Daw, the clever little Lasky ingenue and protege of Geraldine Farrar, declares that she wishes the war would hurry up and be over. She explains that she has to purchase chewing gum in order to get the tinfoil to aid the Red Cross; and hating to see the gum go to waste, she is forced to chew it despite the fact that she does not like to chew gum and thinks it a most vulgar pastime.

Add little Aida Horton, Greater Vitagraph's three-year-old leading lady to Bobby Connelly, to the list of Liberty Bond holders. The tiny actress instructed her mother to buy one for her. Aida's purchase of a bond makes it unanimous among the Vitagraph kids, for Bobby Connelly and his sister, Helen, already had bought theirs. They also helped along the sale of bonds.

It was one of the meanest days of the rainy season and Kathlyn Williams was one of the last ones to leave the studio. While removing her make-up she heard a dog's plaintive cry. Taking an unbrella she began a search for the animal and unearthed Tweedles from the refuge of a waste-paper barrel. The cold, hungry and shivering dog was wrapped in Miss Williams' coat and taken home by her. And so grateful did the little fellow appear that Miss Williams allowed him to remain. That was two years ago, and no more faithful and self-appointed little guard could anyone ask than the funny-looking little Tweedles, which you are sure to see at the Morosco Studio if you happen in the vicinity of Miss Williams' dressing room.

Carol Halloway makes shirts, men's shirts. She makes them on her machine at home in the evening after her Vitagraph activities. She snips in buttonholes, tacks on buttons, measures the collar and cuffs, and you have a shirt! It is the quandary of the William Duncan "Hearts of Flame" serial company as to what happens to the shirts when Carol has made them. She has been under a variety of suspicions, but Carol's answer to all of them was but to laugh. The solution really is very simple—Carol is a Red Cross worker.

Location man Van Zimmerman of the Lasky studio, recently visited a powder works in the vicinity of Hollywood for the purpose of securing permission to film certain scenes in the neighborhood of the powder plant. Forgetting his name was the same as that of a certain German so-called statesman, Van Zimmerman sent his card to the manager of the plant and was promptly seized by two of the guards. He had a very exciting time endeavoring to explain his peaceful mission.

Marguerite Clark's garden in Rye, New York, will not bloom with roses this summer as it did in 1916. The festive potato blossom and the sweet scent of the onion will replace the rose and the violet in the little Famous Players star's affections this year.

Bryant Washburn, Essanay star, was one of the first to register for the selective draft in his precinct.

A successful career on both stage and screen, in which he has always appeared with the most famous actresses and picture stars, has left Eugene O'Brien with but one regret. He is sorry he did not go into pictures five years ago.

Little Mary McAllister, starring in Essanay's "Do Children Count?" series, is perhaps the busiest child on earth. This six-year-old girl spends anywhere from two to seven hours daily at the studio, gives three more hours to studies under a private tutor, then spends a lot of time besides at play. She is possessed of unlimited spirit and romps through what would seem to other children most tiresome work.

More than half of Essanay's forces, including several stars, registered for President Wilson's selective draft.

L. J. Schlaifer, of 216 Central building, Seattle, Washington, controlling a large and attractive list of money getting State Rights Features, has taken into co-partnership with him Melvin G. Winstock, widely and favorably known throughout the northwest, with A. Bloom as office director.

Crowd of new actors in Santa Barbara. Paul Weigel and Antrim Short engaged to support William Russell in "Pride and the Man" (issue July 30). Charles Marriot, Joe King, Harold Wilson, Gordon Russell, William Kyle and Tote Du Crow to support Juliette Day in debut subject, "Betty and the Buccaneers," now under production. King is Miss Day's leading man.

Difficult role for Al Kauffman, formerly one of America's leading heavyweight pugilists. Has to be knocked out by "Billy" Russell in "Pride and the Man." Loses no caste thereby for "Billy" is American amateur heavyweight champion. Won title with New York Athletic Club.

Quicksand nearly swallowed Mary Miles Minter the other day. Americans out clam hunting. Mary stepped in the ooze. Began to sink from sight. "Help! Help!" Mintered from the rosebuds. "Coming, Coming," Russelled from the hero's lips. A wade, a swim. "My hero," she gasped, smiling. "It takes SAND and it takes it QUICK," exclaimed American chorus. "'Billy' Russell, you're a real hero." Party continued. Good time had by all.

William Russell enlisted in the farm army the other day. Took a day off, went into the hills back of Santa Barbara, purchased a ranch. Steeds for boys at the front and meat for the women in the kitchen. "Town acreage outgrown," "Billy" explains. "Thought I'd expand a little and incidentally do my bit."

At the station she says she is "Daredevil Dan, the Dangerous Dago." Her mother misses her and goes to the station. Mary Ann decides that she will be a cop, as they are mostly all Irish.

Seeds of Redemption—(Two Reels)—Rex—July 5.—With Claire Mersereau, Stanley Walpole and Marguerite Straselle. Rita Ashley is the guest of Mrs. Warren. Jack, the son, is the only one who pays much attention to her. Cora Mailand is the other guest, with designs on Jack. Thomas Houpe lives by a refined form of blackmail. He sends word to Cora, which compels her to go to him. At his rooms he tells her that it ought to be worth something to her to keep her past from Jack Warren. It is the night of the musicale, and Rita dresses up in her old gown. The baby says that Santa Claus will be angry if she doesn't wear the gown he left for her. Rita puts on the dress and goes down. Meanwhile the baby finds Cora's pearls and plants them. That night Houpe and his pal are let in by Cora. Jack,awakened by the noise, shoots and kills Houpe. The house is aroused and the police summoned. Cora is discovered as having aided the thieves and leaves the house. Jack and Rita announce their engagement.

Five Little Widows—(Two Reels)—Nestor—July 6.—Harry Rattenberry and Betty Compton. Eddie receives word that his wealthy uncle in Turkey is sending him his treasures, as he can no longer keep them there safely on account of the war. Of course Eddie fell for the treasures, and so did Betty's father and mother when they heard the news. Eddie goes to meet Mogul Hasson Pfeffer, who is in charge of them. To his dismay he finds that the treasures are five beautiful wives. He is compelled to take them to his home, where the girls are delighted with all they saw. Betty's mother was furious and wouldn't listen to any explanation. Finally Hassan opens the box he is carrying and shows them the jewels. Betty and her mother are reconciled.

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 26.—July 6.—A non-recoil aeroplane gun of large caliber is the first subject. The preparation of a shad for planking is shown in complete detail by Mrs. A. Louise Andrea, the culinary expert. Then comes the making of a mattress. Artificial incubation of eggs, as it is carried out by the New York College of Agriculture at Cornell University is shown. The reel closes with a clay cartoon by Willie Hopkins, the sculptor, called "Sport Friends."

The Wrong Man—(Two Reels)—Bison—July 7.—With Harry Carey, George Berrell and Fritzi Ridgeway. Jack, a prospector, is in love with Alice Malone. Ben is elected as sheriff, for the inhabitants of the village know that he is absolutely harmless. Chip and two pals arrange to hold up the stage. Jack happens to be passing over the ridge and sees their preparations, and, being suspicious, rides toward them. The two outlaws are shot and Chip climbs up on the back of the stage, fires at the driver and is just searching for the bags of money when Jack climbs into the coach. They fight. Chip leaves Jack with the mask that was on his face and rides away. Jack is accused of the theft and taken to the jail. But the guilty one is found and Jack and Alice find happiness in each other.

The Twitching Hour—Joker—July 7.—With Gale Henry and Milton Sims. Cleopatra and Launcelot, employes at the hotel, want to be married. There is a mysterious guest in the hotel, who has a black box which he has placed in the safe. Cleopatra and Launcelot determine to blow up the safe. They succeed and then ride off in a wagon with the mysterious stranger in pursuit. The sheriff comes up and arrests the foreigner as a spy wanted by the government. Cleopatra and Launcelot are given the reward and then they are enabled to marry.

The Mad Stampede—Big U—July 8.—John is thinking of the past, when two cowboys appear. He tells them the story of Lasca. Years before he had ridden the range in Texas and loved a girl, who was as fearless as a man. One day they rode off together. Suddenly the Texas norther was upon them and the cattle all around them were stampeded. John knew that the only thing to do was to shoot his horse and crouch under his body. He tried the plan but the horse ran away and he was thrown off. Lasco then fell over him and with her body protected him from the hoofs of the cattle. When they had passed and he regained consciousness, she was dead. He buried her there on the plain and never forgot her.

China Awakened — Powers—July 8. — Scenic from the Dorsey Expedition. The Yangtze River is the scene of the commencement of this combination scenic from the famous expedition of Doctor Dorsey, with the inimitable art of Hy Mayer. We see steamers leaving Ichang for Hankow. The scene then changes into cartoon. A pagoda at Ichang towers seven stories in height while the houses of the poor are poor and low. Drawings are interspersed with the pictures. Great junks transport the commerce on the broad waters of the river.

The Girl in the Limousine—Imp—July 8.—With Lee Hill, Molly Malone and J. Morris Foster. Dick is startled to see a girl's agonized face at the window of a limousine. She drops a note which reads: "Save me—85 Newton street." Dick follows and finds the girl in an old house. She tells him she has been kidnaped. Two crooks break in, and Dick gives the girl his revolver, while he fights with his fists. Suddenly the girl turns the gun on him. He realizes that she is a decoy. They tie him and leave the girl to guard him. At last the girl unties him and he goes for help. The crooks return and threaten the girl. Dick enters with two policemen and the crooks are made prisoners. The girl is allowed to go free. She tells Dick that she is going home and be straight.

Feature Programs

Butterfly

The Plow Woman—(Five Reels)—July 2.—With Mary MacLaren, H. C. de More, Marie Hazelton and L. C. Shumway. Andy McTavish was a pioneer, God-fearing Scotchman who held that women were but slaves to men, and that they needed no education. His daughter, Mary, was a mother to the little sister. It was through the quick action of Lieutenant Jack Fraser that his claim was saved from the claim-jumpers. Many thrilling scenes take place. Later, Andy believes that Jack is the betrayer of Mary and is about to strike him. Ruth in a frenzy throws herself before Fraser and tells her father that she is Jack's wife and it is her baby and not Mary's. Jack sets out with a troop to find Mary. Reunited again, Mary takes up her mission of service to the others.

Christie Comedies

He Fell on the Beach—Christie—(One Reel)—June 25.—On Sunday at the beach Harry sees a girl, for the moment alone, whom he knows at once to be the girl he must wed. His advances are repulsed by the girl. He sees her from time to time but makes no progress. Harry works for a very jealous man, who has sent several men to the hospital for flirting with his wife. So Harry does not confide in him—but he does write to Bernice Hardfacts of the Wheeze. She advises him to be persistent, follow the girl, meet her in some way.

The boss tells Harry to come up to his house to dinner, so as to be there for a business meeting afterward. On his way up Harry sees the girl and puts the Advice to the Lovelorn into play. The girl doesn't fall for Harry's rush, but calls an officer. Harry gets away, losing the girl. At the boss' house he sees a picture, with inscription leading him to believe it is the jealous employer's wife, and it is—the girl of Harry's dreams. Harry begins to say his prayers as the girl comes in and sees him. Taking him for a burglar or worse, she screams for a policeman. The boss comes rushing in and Harry falls at his feet as the girl denounces the masher. Harry thinks each moment is his last as he says, "Honestly, boss, I didn't know she was your wife." "She isn't my wife, but my cousin," says the boss. "Here comes my wife." So it turns out that Bernice Hardfacts gave the right advice.

Fox

Some Boy—(FIVE REELS)—WILLIAM FOX—JUNE 17.—Featuring George Walsh. A breezy comedy telling about the escapades of a press agent who gets into trouble through his unique methods of getting publicity into print. He wrongs a girl by stealing her jewelry for publicity purposes, but finally makes good by protecting her lands from the unprincipled attempts of business pirates to steal her water rights. The main pirate proves to be the young press agent's father. A storm is about to precipitate at the climax, but the father has to relent in admiration of the boy who has proved he can win something besides "walking papers" from college. Reviewed in this issue.

K. E. S. E.

The Range Boss—ESSANAY—(SCREEN TIME 67 MINS.)—JULY 16.—Out of the effete and civilized East into the rough and primitive West there comes a little party which judged the desert must be larger than all New York and their trail a little longer than the Great White Way. Ruth Harkness, who has inherited the Flying W Ranch from a deceased relative, heads the timid little band. A prim and conventional aunt and uncle and Willard Masten, her fiance, all dolled up according to his Fifth avenue tailor's ideas of the West, accompany her. Headlong the little party plunges into the meshes of a conspiracy of two cowboys to mulct the girl of her holdings. Rex Randerson, a happy-go-lucky ranger with a clear gray eye, steps in to frustrate the plot, and incidentally falls in love with Ruth. This enrages Masten, who joins the conspirators and extends their plot to include Randerson's death. The girl and the ranger are caught in their "death trap" and count themselves lost, but the fearlessness of Rex, in a single-handed battle with the villains, saves the day. Ruth thanks him by consenting to become his bride, and an old-fashioned cowboy wedding culminates the dark adventure.

Master Drama Features

Who's Your Neighbor?—(FIVE REELS)—MASTER DRAMA FEATURES, INC. — With Christine Mayo. This is a propaganda film. It deals with the women who refuse to live clean, honest lives. The theory has been advanced that these women are naturally bad and should be allowed to live in certain districts. Hattie Fenshaw, a woman of questionable character, mixes with society. Her pathetic face wins the respect of her neighbors, who are delighted that such nice people are living in the same apartment house. But when things reach a climax and the real identity of the women is known, it is proven that it would be hopeless to try to do anything for such women. Reviewed in this issue.

Paramount

At First Sight—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS PARAMOUNT — RELEASED JULY 2. — Featuring Mae Murray. A pleasant, romantic story, replete with human and comedy touches, telling about a novelist who, on the search for some new ideas for the completion of a series of stories he has started, runs into a romance, but, in his zeal to "bat his stuff off" on the typewriter, loses sight of the fact that his real life romance needs attention. The girl awakens him speedily enough when she sees that he is not taking her seriously. She springs a real thrill for his benefit, and the picture ends with the completion of a successful novel and the culmination of an amusing courtship. Reviewed in this issue.

"Oh, Pop"—(TWO REELS)—JULY 2.—Featuring Victor Moore. Vic's wife receives a telegram stating that her mother is ill and to come at once. Vic insists that she go, and she consents after he promises to take good care of the children. Vic begins to look after the children and the house, and when Rudolph Carey, his next door neighbor, and his wife bring theirs over for him to watch while they go shopping he has his hands full. He orders three dozen meat balls and a couple of dozen cream puffs, which the children use in playing war. Vic is in the middle of the fight when the neighbors get back and ask "Where are my children?" "Pick them out yourself," says Vic. "I don't know my own."

Triangle

A Dog Catcher's Love—TRIANGLE KEYSTONE—One of the incomparable mixtures of laughs and thrills that can be expected only from the Mack Sennett-Keystone studio. The participants in the action go through air, fire and water in their ludicrous experiences. The thrills include nearly everything on the calendar, some exceptional effects being secured through trick photography. Among the players are Slim Summerville, Glen Cavender, Peggy Pearce, Hal Cooley, Jack Henderson, Harry Breen, and last, but by no means least, "Keystone Teddy," a canine whose intelligence is rare indeed. Edward Cline, the director, took a good many of his scenes aboard a U. S. battleship, giving a note of timeliness to the offering.

The Clodhopper — (FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE—JUNE 17.—Featuring Charles Ray. The very best thing that this distinguished actor has done recently. The story is a comedy-drama telling about the phenomenal rise to success of an awkward, inexperienced country lad, who, driven from his home by a cruel and intolerant father, comes to the city to seek his fortune. After the "clodhopper" is on an enormous salary for a specialty countrified dance which he stumblingly originated, the father's bank, at home, begins to totter. The successful boy returns to his home town just in time to save his father's business from crashing to the ground, and it is a matter of heaping coals of shame on the head of the narrow-minded, cruel father, who sees the error of his way and the worth of his son. Reviewed in this issue.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

A Son of the Hills—(SIX REELS)—VITAGRAPH—JUNE 25.—With Antiono Moreno. Unable to stand the tyranny of a cruel step-mother, Sandy Morley runs away from home. He says good-by to his playmate, Cynthia Starr, and starts out to work for an education. Through the help of John Markham he is enabled to go to college. After graduating with high honors, Sandy is sent back to his home town to superintend the building of a modern factory. Lansing Hartford, a nephew of Markham's, also returns to the South. Cynthia is impressed by the polished Lansing who, during his college days, had a secret affair with a woman. One day he takes Cynthia for a drive. They are forced to spend the night in an abandoned cabin as a shelter from a storm. Lansing convinces Cynthia that she will be the victim of unjustified scandal, and so she marries him. However, the woman with whom Lansing had an affair appears on the scene with her child. Cynthia obtains a divorce and returns to Sandy, whom she realizes she really loves. Reviewed in this issue.

World

The Price of Pride—(FIVE REELS)—PEERLESS—WORLD—JULY 2.—Featuring Carlyle Blackwell. This story hinges on a misunderstanding between husband and wife, a separation being caused at the outset by pride and overbearance. Later on the story takes a skip in time and the experiences of the son, David, and his half-brother (son of the woman with whom the father had eloped) are brought in. The two brothers are doubles. This offers a chance for some good situations when the worthy son is arrested for a robbery committed by the black sheep second son of the runaway husband. Finally matters are cleared up, a reconciliation between husband and wife is effected and the real robber dies of a wound. Reviewed in this issue.

General Program

The Right of Might—SELIG—JUNE 18.—John Willis, the owner of large mills, refuses to spend the money for safety devices for his machines. The plants are closed on this account and are not opened again until John is brought a new vision through Mary Smith, whom he loves. Mary will have none of John until he wakes up to the fact that "might is not right." She tells him the story of a father and daughter thrown out of work by the closing of the mills. The girl marries a crook to get money to feed her parents, but they disown her. A former sweetheart returns, and when found by the husband both the girl and the sweetheart jump to their death through the window. John resolves, when he has heard this story, to install the safety device in his mills and reopen them.

A Ride for Life—JAXON FILM—(ONE REEL)—Pokes and Jabs work in a grocery store, Jabs being the delivery system. When he is unfortunate in love he leaves town and comes back a year later with a traveling street fair. He is now known as "Daredevil Jabs" and does trick ridiig on a bicycle. Pokes and the belle of the town, Ethel, take in the fair. Ethel recognizes her old suitor and soon Pokes is jealous of the hero. He offers to duplicate any trick of Jabs', and while he shows his skill Ethel spoons with Jabs. When he mounts the wheel and starts down the steep runway he plunges far over the tank of water set to receive him and his bicycle commences to act like an aeroplane, skimming over hills and woods and towns. The last seen of him is only a shadow, pedaling zealously into the horizon.

Selig World Library No. 6—JUNE 20.—Washington's Boyhood. George Washington at the age of 16 surveyed the town of Alexandria, Va. This is King street, main thoroughfare, showing Christ Church. The Historic Hotel, at Alexandria, Va., was Washington's headquarters. The Father of His Country made his farewell address to the Continental Army from the steps of this old church. Carlyle House—built at Alexandria in 1745, where Washington received his commission as major in the British army. Human Figures on a Chess Board. Where Uncle Sam Mints His Money. Home of the Seal.

In the Talons of an Eagle—JUNE 23—SELIG.—Carl Venger, employed on the country place of James Steel, a rich bachelor, loves Hinda, the blacksmith's daughter, but she marries Steel. Venger becomes half-crazed with the shock and becomes a hermit. Hilda and Steel are living apparently happy with their little son. One day the child is left alone in the garden and an eagle swoops down, lifts it from the baby carriage and carries it away to its nest. Venger rescues it, and recognizes it as Steel's. He plans to raise the child in ignorance of its parentage, like an animal, and at the age of 25 disclose it to the parents. Venger wakes to discover that his villainy is only a bad dream.

State Rights

Whither Thou Goest—(FIVE REELS)—KLOTZ & STREIMER.—Featuring Orrin Johnson and Rhea Mitchell. A state rights feature of dependable quality. The story tells about Don Van Wye, who marries an actress his proud family believes to be far below his station. He does this merely to save his brother, who was in love with her first, from an unfortunate future. Don had every reason to believe that he was only to live a few months, but with the awakening of a love for his wife comes the news that the doctors estimated wrongly. The mother tries cruel means to cause a separation between the two, for the sake of taking her son back among folk of his station, but true love prevails ultimately and false social standards are not enough to prove to Don that his wife is not worthy.

Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Lasky-Paramount Japanese star, is now at work under the direction of William C. De Mille. Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Walter Long, Mabel Van Buren and Lehua Waipahu-Margaret Loomis are in the cast. Lehua Waipahu will be remembered as the charming Hawaiian girl who played opposite Mr. Hayakawa in "The Bottle Imp" and who changed her name to Margaret Loomis in order to permit the American people to discuss her more freely without imperilling their tongues.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

MAKING COMEDIES A SERIOUS BUSINESS

Times have changed comedies a great deal. The old fashioned knock 'em down and drag 'em out style is no longer the vogue. People who used to roar at such tactics now even forget to smile. In fact it annoys them to see such foolish play. If a person is hit in a comedy now, there must be a reason for it, where there was not even an excuse in years back.

Everything must be thought out carefully. You have to study the effect of every gag from all points, until you feel sure that it is favorable in every way. Few people realize that a comedy is the hardest kind of photoplay to produce, and the man that can produce a real good comedy is a genius. A big five or six-reel feature is produced in from five to six weeks, where a two-reel Keystone takes anywhere from ten weeks to four months to produce, and at twice the cost of a regular drama.

When you see your next good comedy, just think of what I have said, and I am sure you will feel differently about them.

DON'TS FOR PATRONS

Please try to find some other words besides "swell" and "rotten" to describe a picture. Your dictionary will be glad to help you.

Don't utterly condemn a picture just because you do not like the story or the star or some detail or certain treatment of a scene. Judged in this way most masterpieces would be in the junk heap. Judge righteous judgment if you are wise enough—if not, don't judge at all.

Please don't hum or sing to help out the orchestra, the organ, the piano, the orchestrion or whatever furnishes the music. Doing this provokes murder in the heart of your neighbor, and besides it pigeon-holes you as just a plain nut.

Don't believe all the scandal you hear about motion picture people. As Edward Grady would say—half the lies told about motion picture people are not true. The Oriental way is best. When tempted to shy a brick at the poor movie star, stop to consider—is it true; is it kind; is it necessary? It isn't.

STARTS CAREER AT 73

A little old lady recently visited Bluebird's Pacific coast studios with her daughter to see motion pictures made. She spent the morning watching the action before the camera and remained for luncheon at the cafe. Director Rupert Julian, who was then preparing to produce a new feature, was lunching at the same time. When his glance fell upon the old lady he said:

"There is 'My Mother'! She's just the type I have been looking for."

Mr. Julian readily obtained an introduction and it was disclosed that the little old lady was none other than Ruby La Fayette, who, since the late sixties, had been an actress upon the legitimate stage, heading her own company until some twelve years ago, when she and her husband, Major J. P. Curran, also an actor and veteran of the Civil war, settled in Lapassas, Texas.

Julian's play is entitled "My Mother" and the elderly actress was asked if she could play the part. She replied she could and she could not, explaining that she had merely come to Los Angeles to visit her daughter and that on the following evening she was to return to Texas, as her husband had been expecting her and her berth and ticket had been purchased.

She said she had never worked in pictures, but had she known it, nothing would have pleased her more than the opportunity to perpetuate her art upon the screen in a Bluebird photoplay. Various suggestions were offered and finally the actress (who was the original Joyce and Lucile Western in "East Lynne") arranged that she could make the trip to Texas and rearrange her affairs so that she might return to the Bluebird studios and play the part of the mother with Mr. Julian.

She admitted that although she had played with such eminent actors as Booth, Barrett and McCullough, she had never before appeared before the motion picture camera. Now she says she is starting her career all over again at the age of seventy-three years and as a great grandmother, she proposes to be a motion picture star and that her husband plans to join her as soon as he closes his engagement in Texas.

Ruby La Fayette commenced her stage career as an ingenue in a Cincinnati stock company under the management of the famous Barney McCauley and later she played in stock with R. E. Miles, well known a generation ago as a producer. She is full of reminiscences of the stage and she delights in telling the younger actresses at the Bluebird studios of her experiences when stars travelled alone from town to town to head the local stock companies for productions.

"I notice my hair still retains a golden tinge and will not get gray," she said to Ruth Clifford, leading lady for the Julian company. "In my younger days it was golden and I laugh now at how they used to tease me and say "it was touched up'."

SOUTHWESTERN NEWS

By William Noble

The Old Mill Theater at Dallas, Texas, has commenced running kid pictures once a week, one, two, three and five reels in length, and expects to keep it up indefinitely.

The past week has seen a further development in the dispute between J. A. Cressey interests and the Selznick forces at Dallas, Texas. Mr. Cressey has brought suit against Selznick for $100,000 on one account, $40,000 on another account and secured a temporary injunction restraining Selznick from opening offices in Dallas, Texas, or in any way competing with or interfering with the business of the Cressey interests. In the meantime, Claude C. Ezell, who has been employed to handle the "Barrier," one of the Selznick offerings, is marking time until the matter can be adjudicated.

The Mutual Film Corporation at Dallas has advised all of its customers that on and after June 11 it will discontinue paying return charges on film shipments.

The Dallas motion picture market is right up in the top ranks when it comes to participation in the purchase of Liberty Bonds. Pathe Exchange agreed to finance the purchase of Liberty Bonds for every individual in its employ, allowing each man or woman to remit weekly to the New York office in payment of the same. Each of the other exchanges in Dallas is likewise participating and the same is true of all the trade houses.

Artcraft-Paramount Combination has been thoroughly effected in Dallas and the combined forces are at work. H. Owens will be branch manager and Hoyt C. Morrow, sales manager. The offices will be at 1902 Commerce street, the same as the Paramount location.

Earl Steward, former manager of the Shubert Theater in Kansas City, Mo., and afterwards manager of the Majestic Theater, Milwaukee, has been made manager of the Palace Music Hall in Chicago, and has taken charge.

The Elaine Mercantile Company will open a new moving picture house at Helena, Arkansas, in the near future.

The Landers and Peoples Theaters at Springfield, Missouri, have closed down for the summer and will not reopen until the fall season commences.

The Palace Theater has been opened at Hobart, Oklahoma, with Ferris M. Thompson as manager. The theater seats 500 and has a $2,000 Wurlitzer orchestra.

The Metropolitan Theater at Oklahoma City has been rechristened and renamed the Palace, with E. C. Mills as manager. The theater has been remodeled throughout.

The Auditorium Theater at Oklahoma City has been remodeled and the seating capacity increased.

The woman "movie" censors on the Kansas Board of Review are stirred up. A Topeka paper advertised the film "The Birth of a Nation" at a Topeka show house. And if you please, the censors have said that picture should not be shown in Kansas. The women passed "The Birth of a Nation" once, but after being showered with telegrams from Kansas politicians, they reversed their decision, and rejected the picture. A suit was brought before Judge E. L. Fischer to enjoin the women from their recalling order, but he sustained the action of the board. On the day following the advertisement in the Topeka paper, the Kansas Board of Motion Picture Review stood aghast, and were considerably stirred when the following telegram from agents for the film was received: "Dear Miss Simpson: 'Birth of a Nation' showed to a packed house last night. Audience delighted. How is Mrs. Miller?" Miss Simpson was the only censor voting to pass the picture when it was recalled six weeks ago by Mrs. J. M. Miller, chairman of the board, after she had been bombarded with letters and telegrams from politicians.

Anyone familiar with Cleveland, Ohio, remembers the famous Bismarck and Berghoff restaurants, which were owned by Albert Menjou. And now motion picture audiences are becoming familiar with Adolph Jean Menjou, son of the well-known restaurant owner, who will next appear in support of Miss Norma Talmadge in "The Moth." Mr. Menjou, who attended Culver Military Academy and Cornell University, played with the French Strollers in "A Parisian Romance." He has previously appeared on the screen with Marguerite Clark in "The Valentine Girl" and in "The Amazons."

Chicago Notes

THE members of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. subscribed $4,000 to the Liberty Loan, and President Rothacker states that they expect to do equally as well on the next subscription.

John Fiske, formerly employed in the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation at its Chicago offices, left the services of the Mutual May 16.

The insurance inspectors will undoubtedly now make another tour of Chicago exchanges, following the Art Dramas fire. That blaze, however, will go far to prove that inspection rooms are firetight.

Carl H. Pierce, manager of Paramount's exhibitor service department in the home office, spent a few days in the city last week and called upon MOTOGRAPHY. He reports lively business in New York.

"The Seven Cuty Pups," which is being distributed by Universal, was made by the Rothacker Film Mfg. Co. by a special process which permits the animation of halftone cartoons. The picture is a decided novelty.

I. Van Ronkel, Chicago manager of Bluebird features, showed President Laemmle of Universal about the city in regal style during the latter's stay in the windy city. Mr. Van Ronkel has been afraid the income tax collectors would start laying the 33⅓ per cent tax on him pretty soon if he didn't start to blow some of his superfluous cash. He looked around for the car with the greatest initial cost and upkeep, and finally selected a Winton Six. Now with buying gasoline, tires, hiring a chauffeur, paying licenses, fines, etc., he figures he will at least be able to spend some of his money himself. How's that for strategy?

Superpictures is no longer to be found at its old address, 406 Mallers Building. The office has been closed and hereafter exhibitors can book these pictures through the Triangle offices on the same floor.

Through a crossing of conversational wires, MOTOGRAPHY made the mistake last week of stating that it was William J. Sweeney and Robert Levy who were at Springfield fighting the censorship bill. It was Fred Hartman—you know him—who was there with "Bill." And Fred's corking speech before the senate was part of the artillery that killed state censorship in Illinois.

Jack O'Toole breezed into his office in the middle of last week and stayed just long enough to write his name about twice. He then breezed out again. He got into Chicago late in the forenoon from Milwaukee and left early in the afternoon to go back again. When he was seen he was complaining about having to stop off for a while at Kenosha on his way in. He had purchased a ticket clear through, but it seems that in placing his money he had failed to take into account the curves and roughness of the roadbed and the fact that he had selected a seat over the bumpers. At any rate he was still pale about the gills when he was found at his desk.

Jack has been seeing a number of the big exhibitors in the central section during the past two weeks prior to leaving for the Fox managers' convention to be held at the Biltmore, New York, during the week of July 2. He has been getting a line on how the exhibitors want pictures released for the coming season so that when he goes East to make his report he can speak with the intimate knowledge that comes from having carefully felt the pulse of the trade.

Carl Laemmle on his way from Universal City to New York stopped off at Chicago a couple of days last week and glad-handed the men in the Universal office. Mr. Laemmle with his wife and friends had been in the great picture city for two months. He was full of enthusiasm and much pleased with the pictures being turned out this season under the Universal trademark. He declared they were better than ever before, and cited "A Kentucky Cinderella" as typical of the excellence being attained.

Mary Miles Minter had a most exciting experience during the filming of the American-Mutual production "Periwinkle." She went exploring in a cave on the Santa Cruz Islands and did not notice the tide rising until egress was shut off to all but a strong swimmer. Mary is not a strong swimmer but she realized she was in a tight place and so made a desperate attempt. Her strokes were successful and she managed to reach the camp safely.

Chaplin to Get $1,075,000

NATIONAL EXHIBITORS' CIRCUIT SAID TO HAVE SIGNED WORLD'S FIRST COMEDIAN

ALTHOUGH it has not yet been officially announced, the First National Exhibitors' Circuit has made its first big haul. Unless the negotiations which have been made fall through, the circuit will pay Charlie Chaplin $1,075,000 to produce 8 pictures in a year.

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit is an organization composed of most of the leading exhibitors in the United States. It was formed several weeks ago. The complete account of its organization was published in MOTOGRAPHY at that time.

When seen by a representative of MOTOGRAPHY in Chicago on July 2, J. D. Williams of New York, general manager of the circuit, stated that he had nothing to say in regard to the reported Chaplin contract. Aaron Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, big exhibitors of Chicago, made practically the same statement. News, however, of the big contract has also come from Los Angeles and it is probable that Chaplin has made some statement concerning it.

Members of the Big Circuit

The members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit represent 300 of the biggest theaters in the country. The names of the members of the circuit are as follows:

S. L. Rothapfel, Rialto Theater, New York; William Sievers, New Grand Central Theater, St. Louis; E. Mandelbaum, Stillman Theater, Cleveland; Frank G. Hall, Strand Theater, Newark; Nathan H. Gordon, Boston; Rowland & Clark Theaters, Pittsburgh; Jake Wells, Inc., Norfolk, Va.; Big Feature Rights Corporation, Louisville, Ky.; H. Lieber Company, Indianapolis; A. H. Blank, Des Moines, Ia.; Henry Brouse, Ottawa, Canada; J. H. Kunsky, Detroit, Mich.; E. H. Hulsey, Dallas, Texas; Silver Bow Amusement Company, Butte, Mont.; Tom Moore, Washington, D. C.; Peerless Feature Film Exchange, Philadelphia, Pa.; Tom Saxe, Crystal Theater, Milwaukee, Wis.; E. V. Richards, New Orleans, La.; Central Film Company, Chicago, Ill.; T. L. Tally, Los Angeles, Cal.; Greater Theaters Company, Liberty Theater, Seattle, Wash.; Turner & Dahnken, San Francisco, Cal.; Columbia Amusement Company, Columbia Theater, Portland, Ore.; Swanson & Nolan, Denver, Colo.; Western Theater Company, Ltd., Vancouver.

Broadway report has it that the First National has already arranged disposal of the foreign rights to the Chaplin comedies for a sum said to be in the neighborhood of $400,000.

The circuit will continue the purchase of big productions. Essanay's "On Trial" has already been secured and is being handled through the members. It is also very probable that other big stars will be secured by the big new exhibitors' combine. J. D. Williams, general manager of the organization, explained its workings to MOTOGRAPHY as follows:

How Circuit Works

Every member contributes his share of the expenses and gets his share back in service. This organization represents about $30,000,000. The country is divided on a 100 per cent basis, each man having his percentage according to the population of his district. Thus, Illinois is rated at 7 per cent for a picture costing at purchase $100,000. Mr. Jones will have to pay $7,000, and then it is his picture and he can have as many prints as he desires to circulate and rent in his community.

A board of seven directors will purchase the pictures for the organization and they expect to buy some twelve to twenty-four each year. There will, however, be no rules or schedules; the buying will be done whenever worthy productions appear on the horizon. A picture must be of exceptional merit to get on the circuit's schedule. The majority of the directors, five of seven, will have the deciding power in the purchases.

The country is divided into four divisions: Pacific, Middle West, Atlantic, and Southern. Each division is represented by two directors, with the exception of the Southern section, which has one. The directors who will purchase the productions are S. L. Rothapfel, Rialto Theater, New York, president; Harry Schawbe, of The Mastbaum Enterprises of Philadelphia, secretary and treasurer; Aaron J. Jones, Central Film Company, Chicago; Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, who owns a chain of theaters in Indiana; E. H. Hulsey, a circuit owner of Dallas, Texas; Fred D. Dahnken, of Turner & Dahnken, San Francisco; T. L. Tally, vice-president of the National Circuit, Los Angeles.

California is given two directors on account of its importance in the industry.

Circuit Holds Meeting in Chicago

Practically all of the members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit met at their first important meeting at the Congress Hotel, in Chicago, on June 29. All of the members mentioned above were present, with the exception of the Canadian representatives, Henry Brause, of Ottawa, and the representative from Western Theater Company, of Vancouver; Tom Moore of Washington, D. C., E. V. Richards of New Orleans; Turner & Dahnken, of San Francisco and Swanson & Nolan of Denver.

This meeting was in the form of a secret session and very little news was given out to the trade.

"We don't want to give out any news until we are absolutely certain that our negotiations have gone through," said General Manager Williams. "The First National Exhibitors' Circuit will represent in pictures;" he continued, "the 'big time' of the screen, the same as the Orpheum represents the 'big time' in vaudeville. I have organized several big companies of a similar character and I never saw a more loyal and enthusiastic group of men in my life. They are in the organization with their whole hearts and souls and they are bound by ties as vital as any Masonic organzation.

"There are, or will be 50 theaters represented by the circuit who will be able to pay an average of $2,000 a week for film service. The smaller ones, or course, will not pay so much, but the larger ones will be able to pay more."

Means Better Pictures

The plan of distribution upon which the big circuit is working will result in turning over more money for each film to the producers. That, in turn, will mean bigger and better productions. It will also result in longer runs of pictures at larger theaters. This will naturally attract a fresh clientele of patrons from among the classes who now rarely attend picture shows.

The circuit works upon a simple, sound, business basis of efficiency, co-operation and an intensive cultivation of each exhibition field. A great saving of distributing costs is the result. The circuit already has thirty offices throughout the country. These offices are in charge of members who draw no salary from the circuit for their services. Representing, as they do, the drawing power of all of the big cities of the country, the circuit really covers 50 per cent of the patronage of the United States. It is this which enables them to control so much money and it is this clientele which is the biggest asset possessed by the circuit.

Same Plan Used in Australia

The same plan has been in practice in Australia for several years. General Manager Williams, who spent seven years in Australia, organized a $3,000,000 corporation there and the working of that circuit saved its members in actual money $10,000 the first week of its existence. The theaters represented had been buying 12 copies of each picture, when it was found that 4 copies could do the same work.

This, of course, resulted in a big saving in the cost of raw stock alone. The producers were paid the same amount of money as previously. Australia has a population of 5,000,000 and when the comparative population of the United States is considered, it is easy to see that the First National Circuit method of distribution will result in tremendous savings and greater profits for producers.

Chaplin Makes One More for Mutual

It is probable that Chaplin will not begin work for the Exhibitors' Circuit before fall. He is at present completing his twelfth picture for Mutual. It is said that the latter company, which paid him $670,000 for his 12 Mutual pictures, made him an offer of $1,000,000 for his next year's work. Chaplin turned down that proposition and will now receive, according to the story $1,000,000 from the National Circuit for 8 pictures, with a bonus of $75,000 for signing his name to the contract.

"Bing! Bang!"

A new Fox-film comedy will be released July 9. It is called "Bing! Bang!" and was produced under the direction of Charles Parrott who has made so many successful comedies for the Fox organization. Charles Conklin has the leading part.

Screenshine

By Mel

THE Idle Hour Theater of Kansas City, Mo., operated by William Scoville at Twelfth street and Grand Avenue, was recently exhibiting an Arbuckle comedy, when a large crowd of pedestrians was attracted by an unusual "movie stunt." The negro porter was washing the electric light globes on the highest sign on top of the house while standing on a frail scaffolding. The props broke and the negro plunged head foremost to the sidewalk.

The crowd gathered, expecting to pick up his remains. But Rastus rose indignant: "Gracious sakes, folks, git outen my way! I'se gotta git dem globes cleaned 'fore lunch time or ah doan't eat!"

ERUPTION THREATENS BURTON HOLMES' LIFE.

Burton Holmes, the bottomless pit of pictures and lectures with Paramount, cables from Australia that the life of his entire party was threatened a short time ago by an eruption. No, not a boil.—Volcano in Hawaii.

M. J. O'Malley, assistant superintendent of mails, second class department, Chicago, has received a card from his nephew, Pat O'Malley, the dramatic cyclone with Famous Players bearing the news of the arrival of a daughter at Pat's house. That may be better than adding another e to O'Malley.

COME DOWN HARD ON THE "TOG."

L. L. Ballard, who combs Illinois, Iowa and Indiana with a fine tooth comb for World, told us at the Reel Fellers' Club last week, that he was talking with an exhibitor in Indiana recently, who said he had seen something "in Mo-show-graf!"

Remember, boys, there ain't no "show" in Motography even if it is worth twice the price of admission.

Morris Salkin and Charlie Sedell, a pair of Pathe's "sell anything" salesmen, recently did their share in subsidizing the nation's tin industry. Morrie came down to the office the other day with his arm in a sling. He had cranked his Ford until he had dislocated his elbow. And he had to ride down in a street car anyway. That sounds like luxury but what's the difference? He can af-ford it.

HE'D SELL ICE TO ICELAND.

The official reformer of the reformers in Chicago is Mr. Del Goodman, the Pathe purveyor of percolating pictures. He meets with the women's clubs and gives 'em lectures on the beauty of the silent art and the educational value of "The Vicar of Wakefield." And he promises them that if they will help him put the Vicar over big he will make "Les Miserables" for them, not mentioning that Pathe has had that feature on its shelves for the past five years.

Del is also the man who sold Carl Eitel of Bismarck Gardens the little $1,500 idea of running pictures in that hang-out of the Heavy Purses.

Del's little idea and Carl's experiment cost the latter around $1,500.

Thanks, Del, don't care if I do.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION.

If you want to give your film a seductive twist just add a question mark after the title. Of course, that doesn't mean necessarily that your picture is questionable. Here are some of the latest heart wrenching problems staring film fans in the face:

"Whose Wife?"
"Should She Obey?"
"Who's Guilty?"
"What of Your Boy?"
"Who Pays?"
"Do Children Count?"
"Is Marriage Sacred?"
"Are Passions Inherited?"
"Who Shall Take My Life?"
"Who Is Your Neighbor?"
"Is Any Girl Safe?"
"Where Is My Father?"
"Who Knows?"
"Where Are My Children?"
"Would You Forgive?"
"Who's Looney Now?"

Everybody will be looney if this stream of terrible interrogations keeps up.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography *publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. THE SILENT LIE, with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"One of the most powerful productions ever staged from the viewpoint of drama and also of setting, having been staged almost entirely in Canada amid the snow."—S. L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Silent Lie, with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"Very good snow scenes. The picture is good, but the star is a little lifeless for the part she plays. Excellent direction and photography. Business good."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Silent Lie, with Miriam Cooper (Fox)—"A very good all-around drama of the northland. Was well applauded. A picture that will please all."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Final Payment, with Nance O'Neil (Fox)—"A picturesque and well acted story. Star excellent. Played a 'Ham and Bud' comedy with it. Business good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Michigan.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Final Payment, with Nance O'Neil (Fox)—"This star is a great emotional actress, but has not the personality movie fans like. She cannot be classed as a star as far as popularity is concerned. This is a tale of fisher folk in Sicily. Will go over in some localities."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Heart and Soul, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"A decidedly marvelous patriotic picture which draws well. Pleased and was liked by all. The star is good in this vehicle."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"A wonderful picture which went over very big. We played it for a Red Cross benefit, which increased business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"A worth-while patriotic subject. Business good with good weather. Patrons dislike war pictures usually or business would have been better."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"An excellent production which played to excellent business."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

Aladdin From Broadway, with Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"One of the best pictures of the year. A credit to the industry. Good business and well pleased patrons. Good weather."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Sally in a Hurry, with Lillian Walker (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Pretty good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Combat, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"This star is liked here and this picture is splendid, one of the very best we've ever played."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Kentucky.

Her Secret, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"A story of the weaker sex, which turns out in the end with everything patched up. Bill it strong because it will get you money and you have the picture to back you up." Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Hawk, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A good box-office attraction, due to the popularity of the star and the title, that of a great stage play. The picture was liked by the majority of our patrons."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Glory of Yolanda, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A beautiful production, with good drawing power on account of the star's popularity."—S. L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Divorce Game, with Alice Brady (World)—"Not the kind of a picture one would expect from the title, a French comedy drama. The star draws well. Business good."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Crime and Punishment, with Derwent Hall Caine (Pathe)—"A good story with a startling climax. The star is not well known but business was good."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Michigan.

Joy and the Dragon, with Baby Marie Osborne

Pots and Pans Peggy, with Gladys Hulette (Thanhouser-Pathe) — "A very good little picture." — M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Precious Packet, with Lois Meredith (Pathe)—"This picture has a big 'punch.' Drew capacity crowds."—J. E. Murray, Lyric Theater, Elizabeth, N. J.

The Hunting of the Hawk, with William Courtney (Pathe)—"An excellent picture. Everyone was well pleased. Exciting to the last."—J. V. Humphy, Pastime Theater, Canadian, Texas.

When Baby Forgot, with Baby Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"A fine picture. Brought capacity business. The star is well liked."—F. V. Humphy, Pastime Theater, Canadian, Texas.

Darkest Russia, with Alice Brady (World)—"A most powerful production. Drawing power great on account of the star and also the title of the picture. It tells a wonderful story of the interior of the Russian Empire before the revolution."—S. L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Stolen Paradise, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"I would give this a mark of 90 on the basis of 100 being excellent, taking into consideration star, story, settings, box-office value and photography. As a whole this is a good offering."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Stolen Paradise, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"A pretty fair picture. Business very poor."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high-class neighborhood.

The Beloved Adventuress, with Kittie Gordon (World)—"A very ordinary production to good business."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Man Who Forgot, with Robert Warwick (World)—"A good picture, well liked. I ran it for the W. C. T. U.'s."—F. V. Humphy, Pastime Theater, Canadian, Texas.

The Naked Soul, with Susan Grandaise (World)—"Nice setting and photography, but the patrons did not like this offering, although it was praised by all the trade paper reviewers. There is no action to keep the spectators' interest. Star is unknown."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Her Official Fathers, with Dorothy Gish (Triangle)—"The star is good, up to her standard. A very good picture, out of the ordinary. This star draws."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Michigan.—In foreign neighborhood.

Her Father's Keeper, with Irene Howley (Triangle)—"A fine story and photography. One that will please, but the title does not do justice to the story."—

Souls Triumphant, with Lillian Gish (Triangle)—"A good box-office attraction, but there is not much story. Lillian Gish wears only old-fashioned clothes. Triangle must have pulled this from the shelf where they had laid it away."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Wild Winship's Widow, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"A poor title for a picture featuring this star. In the title of a picture is half the drawing power. Business was only fair. The picture is all right as far as plot and story goes."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Gunfighter, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A very good picture which drew capacity crowds."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

Stars and Bars, with Ford Sterling (Keystone)—"This is surely a great comedy, as are all Keystone-Sennetts."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

Bawbs of Blue Ridge, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"An outdoor story that was not liked by all. The star draws fairly well. The role calls for a younger and smaller girl than the star used in this vehicle. Average business."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Millionaire Vagrant, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"A very good picture with many unexpected turns in the story. Plenty of punch and action. Don't be afraid to boost this offering. Ran on a hot night to average business."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater. —In middle class neighborhood.

An Old Fashioned Young Man, with Robert Harron (Triangle)—"Not worthy of special mention; just a picture. Poor business and good weather."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Her Official Fathers, with Dorothy Gish (Triangle)—"The best picture Dorothy Gish has been starred in. More like it would be welcome. Good business, good weather."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Good Bad Man, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"A return engagement. Did a good business but disappointed patrons because the print was in bad shape. Fairbanks is exceptionally popular."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Desert Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"One of Hart's very best. Did a good business and pleased them all. Hart is very popular."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"A 100 per cent picture. Patrons delighted. This is the kind of picture which elevates the entire industry. Make more like it. Good business in Red Cross week."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Cheerful Givers, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"A fair picture. The star has not fully 'arrived' with our patrons. Business good with good weather conditions." —George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Paddy O'Hara, with William Desmond (Triangle) —"The star is not in special favor. Picture liked immensely, though the title means nothing. Fully up to the Ince standards."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Sweetheart of the Doomed, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"A miserable title; fair business only. The star is quite popular. We must have more attractive titles than this to get business."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

An Old Fashioned Young Man, with Robert Harron (Triangle)—"An excellent feature in all ways, but the title does not draw. The star is unusually good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Michigan.—In a foreign neighborhood.

The Gun Fighter, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"About the best we have ever had with this star. He is well liked in this vicinity and received applause. Picture and story wonderful."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Michigan.—In a foreign neighborhood.

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Lasky-Paramount)—"A fairly good picture, which went over pretty fair, although people are not enthusiastic over the star."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater.—Downtown house.

Under Cover, with Hazel Dawn and Owen Moore (Paramount)—"Advertise this strong. It is a play with a punch and is sure to be liked. We had a full house Tuesday night, which is very unusual."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Kentucky.

Sapho, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Very well liked by patrons. Did a fair business in warm weather with lots of Red Cross activities as special competition. A fairly popular star."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Bottle Imp, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"Star is fairly well liked. Fair business. The picture is worth while, but did not draw for us, in spite of good weather."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Sunny Jane, with Jackie Saunders (Horkheimer-Mutual)—"A very interesting comedy drama."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

Sunny Jane, with Jackie Saunders (Horkheimer-Mutual)—"An amusing comedy drama. It pleased everybody. Business great on a two-day run."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Michigan.

Strand Comedies, with Billie Rhodes (Strand-Mutual)—"To anybody wishing good, clean comedy, these are what you want."—Harry Everhart, National Theater, Greenville, Ohio.

The Devil's Assistant, with Marguerita Fischer (Pollard-Mutual)—"Production very good, photography wonderful. The star is very popular among my patrons." S. L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Devil's Assistant, with Marguerita Fischer (Pollard-Mutual)—"Although it is hard to imagine Marguerita Fischer in this role, she does some great acting and pleased the patrons." — Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

The Single Code, with Crane Wilbur (Horsley-Mutual)—"Pleased my audience and played to big business."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

High Play, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"Good picture, good business."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

Beloved Rogues, with Kolb and Dill (American-Mutual)—"My patrons surely liked this picture. The stars are hard to beat for comedy."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

The Cure, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"Played to turn-them-away business and the audience was well satisfied, even if they were jammed in to see it."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard Illinois.

A Dream or Two Ago, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"We are working up a great business on the Minter pictures, and this one keeps up the standard."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

Dulcie's Adventure, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"A good production. The star is well liked. Business very good."—F. V. Humphy, Pastime Theater, Canadian, Texas.

The Cure, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"This picture is fully up to the standard of Chaplin's 'rip-roarers.' Kept the crowd waiting for seats."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Royal Pauper, with Francine Larrimore (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"The star is very good. A pretty story, well told. Business fair."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Michigan.

The Heart of Texas Ryan, with Tom Mix (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Just a fair picture; business ordinary; weather O. K."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Saint's Adventure, with H. B. Walthall (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Very good picture."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

The Danger Trail, with H. B. Warner (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Everyone liked this picture and asked us to book more like it."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

The Breaker, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"A very well liked picture with a star who is rapidly achieving deserved popularity with us. Not so good as 'Skinner's Dress Suit,' but well worth while."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Law of the North, with Shirley Mason (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"This did a good business in warm weather. The picture was well liked although the star is unknown to our patrons."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

The Sidney Drew Comedies (Metro)—"These comedies are without exception the best single-reel comedies we have ever run."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Kentucky.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"This is a very good comedy drama."—Walter B. Sadler, New Dearborn Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

Lady Barnacle, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"Pretty fair picture. Business fair."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Beautiful Lie, with Frances Nelson (Metro)—"A good title and the picture was liked. We heard no complaints. The star does good work. Business good."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Poor Little Rich Girl, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Played this picture for two days to big business. The show is a dandy."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Illinois.

In Again, Out Again, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"They must all like Fairbanks, for they respond at the box-office when we show his pictures. This one is all right and has a thrilling finish.—C. H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Chicago Pathe Exchange Burns

$160,000 WORTH OF FILMS DESTROYED—OTHER EXCHANGES THREATENED

THE Pathe exchange in Chicago was partially destroyed by fire early Sunday morning, July 1.

Manager Bunn estimates that some 4,000 reels of film went up in smoke. These were worth an average of about $40 each, bringing the loss, through prints alone, to some $160,000. Other than films, the main loss was the entire stock of advertising matter. It is estimated that the total loss will be around $300,000. All the records were saved and the offices of the exchange were damaged but little.

The remarkable thing about the fire is the fact that in spite of it Manager Bunn marshalled his forces and met practically every one of the 200 bookings scheduled for Monday, the day following the fire. The only misses were unimportant single reels. Mr. Bunn was able to make this notable record by wiring each Pathe exchange in the middle west territory—Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Kansas City, etc.—to remain open so that he could call upon them for film.

This was the first action Mr. Bunn took when he learned of the fire at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. He next summoned his office force and salesmen and the entire organization stuck to the job all day Sunday and many of them all night Sunday night clearing up the exchange and arranging to meet the usual demands for service. One motor truck load of prints was brought to Chicago from Minneapolis.

Fire Not an Accident

The most serious aspect of the Pathe fire is that it is known for a certainty to have been of incendiary origin. Practically every exchange manager of Chicago has received letters of late threatening explosions and fire unless certain employes of the exchanges, including inspectors and packers, were unionized. Some exchanges have also received returned films soaked in oil. The labor unions have for some time been conducting a destructive warfare against the various phases of the film industry in Chicago, and according to Lewis F. Jacobson, attorney for the producers and exchangemen of Chicago, the Pathe fire originated at the same source as the numerous explosions in picture theaters of the city.

Every Chicago Exchange Under Guard

As a result of the Pathe fire and the threats to other exchanges, every entrance, exit, fire escape and trap door of every exchange in Chicago is under police guard. In addition to the uniformed men there is a secret guard of plain clothes men.

The Pathe fire and the ramifications of the case are being investigated from five different angles: The state's attorney, the city police, the insurance companies, Film Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson, and a secret private investigation is going on. The entire matter from the beginning of the labor troubles to the present will be gone over with a fine tooth comb and every factor brought to light. It is very probable that a number of prosecutions will result. Some arrests of union business agents have already been made.

The fire in the Pathe exchange, which is located on the fourth floor of the Consumers building on State street, also did some $75,000 to $100,000 worth of damage to the building and spread to the Baltimore building next door.

The Mutual Film Corporation, with offices on the eleventh and eighteenth floors of the Consumers building, Universal, on the fifteenth floor, Paramount, on the nineteenth, Artcraft, on the fourteenth, and Feature, on the fourth, directly across the hall from Pathe, suffered no losses.

Steel Doors Blown Out

When the Pathe fire broke out, about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, there were four employes at work in the exchange. They heard a noise as of something dropping in the film vaults and several explosions resulted. The steel doors of the concrete vaults were blown out and flames spurted forth. The detonations were heard throughout the locality and guests in neighboring hotels were frightened.

Manager C. W. Bunn proved himself to be an unusually cool headed executive in the face of the destruction of his film supply. "I'll tell you there is a real business man," said the manager of another film exchange in the building who witnessed the whole affair. "Bunn set to work like a veteran general getting his forces together and meeting the hundred situations which arose after the fire. He had everything moving like clockwork from the start to the finish and he was the coolest man in the building all the time. He deserves a lot of credit for the way he has pulled the exchange out of the emergency."

In an interview with MOTOGRAPHY Mr. Bunn gave all the credit to his loyal force of employes. "We've got prints enough to take care of our bookings coming from New York," he said, "and we'll be straightened around in a day or so without missing more than a very few small bookings."

Chaplin's Next Comedy

Charlie Chaplin is at work on his next comedy for Mutual. While he has not made known definitely the character of the production he has hinted that it will be a "western." If the idea is worked out, it will probably be a burlesque on the typical western "movie."

Mutual's $670,000 a year comedian is back at the Lone Star studio at Los Angeles after a five-day trip to San Francisco with his brother, Syd. When "The Immigrant" was completed Chaplin declared a vacation for all hands and started for northern California with his brother. He showed the strain of the strenuous work on "The Immigrant" and returned after his rest, full of energy and enthusiasm for his forthcoming production.

Edna Purviance, Chaplin's leading woman, hurried to the old home town, Lovelock, Nevada, where she spent the gap between pictures.

Downtown Toronto was almost solidly booked with Mutual productions during the week of June 25. Mutual's familiar trademark was in front of nearly every theater in the business district. Only three were omitted.

NEW FILM COMBINE

Harry A. Sherman to be Head of New Organization Formed in New York to Handle Big State Right Productions

An important new film combination came into existence a few days ago when a group of men, headed by Harry A. Sherman, formed a company which will be known as the Sherman Pictures Corporation.

This enterprising and highly successful film exploiter was formerly the head of the Sherman-Elliott Company of Minneapolis, and is considered one of the most successful men in the state rights market.

Mr. Sherman has taken over the Popular Pictures Corporation and the Sun Photoplay Company, together with the building occupied by these two organizations.

The new combine will be conducted under the title of the Sherman Pictures Corporation. Associated with Mr. Sherman as president are the following men, well known to the film world: Harris P. Wolfberg of Pittsburgh, who owns and operates "The Crisis" in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, and "The Deemster" in Ohio, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; A. J. Bimberg of New York, formerly treasurer of the Popular Pictures Corporation, now the treasurer of the Sherman Pictures Corporation. Others associated with Mr. Sherman in the new enterprise are: Milton M. Goldsmith of New York, of the law firm of Goldsmith & Rosenthal; Colonel Fred Levy, of Louisville, Ky., owner of "Joan, The Woman," "The Crisis," "On Trial," and other big features for his territory, which includes Indiana, Kentucky and seven Southern states, and Oscar Lynch, of the Otis Lithographing Company.

The company is sufficiently capitalized to handle productions of the largest size, and represents one of the strongest picture releasing corporations handling state right pictures exclusively.

The object of the Sherman Pictures Corporation is to assure producers a ready market and a cash profit for their productions instead of monthly statements and percentage arrangements. By assuring profits to manufacturers, a long step is made toward stabilizing the entire industry. Without good attractions picture houses cannot exist. To establish this most desirable condition the Sherman Pictures Corporation is formed.

In addition to the general object, as above stated, the company will do business along these lines:

1. Will purchase outright the world's rights for a good state rights production for cash.
2. Will exploit the world's rights for state right productions for the manufacturer, assuming all the expense of marketing and exploitation.
3. Will advance any reasonable producer the cash to make or complete a satisfactory production.

The Sherman Pictures Corporation will exercise its option in the next few days for several productions, announcements of which will be made through the trade papers.

In speaking of his new venture, Mr. Sherman said:

"After I buy a picture for marketing purposes I have no difficulty in disposing of it, because I leave behind me nothing but satisfied buyers. I intend to do the same in the future. As I have remarked, I am in the market for pictures of the very highest type, for I consider that the market will stand for only such productions as box-office attractions. When I am satisfied that I have such a picture I go the limit. I am willing to do still more. I am willing to back up my judgment with my own money and also render whatever service I can in the various territories to assist my buyers to properly market their purchase.

"I have not altered my opinion in the least that the state right market is the only logical market for productions of size. The purchaser can make money on them and the exhibitor get big returns also."

Universal to Fight Humiston Suit

Universal states that it is placed in a bad light in the stories published about Mrs. Grace Humiston's suit for alleged damages due to displaying moving pictures of her in its "Animated Weekly."

It was because Universal believed her achievement worthy of national as well as local recognition that it took a moving picture of her while she was in a public street.

The title of the picture, "The Woman Who Succeeded Where the Police Failed," they claim is but a reflection of the praise that had been given her by the newspapers. It is pointed out that the newspapers published pictures of Mrs. Humiston without being sued for damages or being accused of holding her up to contempt or ridicule.

The picture itself shows that Mrs. Humiston must have been willing to be photographed, for she smiles and bows into the lens of the camera. A whole battery of cameras was leveled at Mrs. Humiston, but it so happened that Universal's was the only moving picture camera on the spot. They say a distinction between a photograph taken with an ordinary camera and a succession of pictures taken by a moving picture camera is rather hard to make.

Universal thinks that the fact that the public applauded most vigorously when Mrs. Humiston's picture was flashed upon the screen at the Broadway Theater, New York, night after night seems to prove that the people viewed it with the exact opposite of ridicule or contempt.

The defendants declare they cannot afford to withdraw the picture and drop the case because they want to establish once for all the right of a moving picture newspaper or magazine to publish pictures of current events and all persons who figure therein and who are, therefore, the subject of public interest.

Metro Stockholders to Meet

The exchange managers and stockholders of Metro Pictures Corporation will meet at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, this year, instead of at Atlantic City, as heretofore. July 21, the date set for the gathering, was selected because many of the men expected to attend will be in Chicago at the time attending the National Convention.

Exposition Big Exhibitors' Rally

DELEGATES ELECTED—ALL PLANS BOOMING FOR BIG CHICAGO SHOW, JULY 14 TO 22

IT is now certain that the coming National Exposition in Chicago will find more exhibitors gathered together than have ever been in one place before in the history of the industry. During the past week several additional producers, including Fox, have taken space in the big Coliseum, so that it is sure to be a veritable motion picture hall of fame on July 14.

When the exposition opens at the Coliseum, Chicago, on July 14, there will be at least 15 new states under the national banner.

Every day letters are coming in to the League headquarters which show plainly the intense interest that the exhibitors are taking in this year's Convention. North Carolina will send eight delegates and eight alternates. Delegates and exhibitors from Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina have made arrangements for an Exhibitors' League Special, which will consist of two Pullmans and a diner.

Delegates Named

Mississippi will be represented by the following delegates: P. E. Schilling, Greenwood; E. M. Clark, Natchez; A. B. Cook, Jackson; M. Cupero, Canton; Will Isenberg, Greenville, and Miss E. M. Rollins, Grenada. Messrs. Schilling, Clark and Isenberg, accompanied by their wives, will make the trip in automobiles, leaving their respective cities to meet at Memphis, Tennessee, and drive from there to Chicago together.

The exhibitors of the northwest will send the following delegates and alternates: Delegates: James Gilosky, Joseph Friedman and Charles Campbell, St. Paul, Minnesota; C. H. Hitchcock, Ed. Hinz, M. A. Hoppenrath, D. G. Rogers, H. P. Greene, Wm. H. Deeth, C. E. Van Duzee and D. W. Chamberlain, Minneapolis; Thomas Furniss, Duluth, Minnesota; Tom Foster, Stanley, Wisconsin, and C. W. Gates, Aberdeen, South Dakota. Alternates: Oliver A. Rowe, J. B. Reisman, Bert Goldman, Mr. Cameron, R. G. Foster, C. L. Graham, E. U. Carter and Henry Breilein, St. Paul, Minnesota; Wm. A. Steffes, Billy B. Watson, O. C. Stelzner, James Keough and F. W. Thayer, Minneapolis; Archie Miller, Devil's Lake, North Dakota, and Tom Foster, Stanley, Wisconsin.

Stars Contribute to Red Cross Booth

One of the first donations for the Red Cross booth was received from that dainty little star, Mary Miles Minter. It is a little "what you may call it" in delicate colors, something that the women will rave over, but all the exhibitors present on its arrival failed to agree as to its name. Her little note read: "To be sold at Red Cross booth, Motion Picture Exposition, for our dear boys in the trenches. God bless them."

Marguerite Clark has also answered the call and has signified her intention of sending one of her gowns for the contest and also an article for the Red Cross booth.

Anita Stewart has offered her "Goddess Gown," or any other one that the League might request. She will also send articles for the Red Cross booth.

It is hoped that all the stars will send articles for this worthy cause. All the proceeds from the articles will go to the Red Cross. Their booth will be handled by J. W. Champion, executive secretary, Chicago Chapter, American Red Cross.

Estes and Estes, a couple of wide-awake exhibitors of Brooklyn, Michigan, have donated 200 copies of "The Stars and Stripes Were Waving" to the Red Cross booth.

Hotel Morrison, Chicago's most modern and up-to-date hotel, has been chosen as the official headquarters for the Convention. Delegates will kindly write for reservations in order to receive the best and coolest rooms.

Program of the Exposition

The program of the Exposition will be completed very soon. The opening day has been assigned to Goldwyn—Mae Marsh and other Goldwyn stars will be present.

Sunday, June 15, will be Pathe Day—Pearl White, Mrs. Vernon Castle, Florence Reed and other Pathe stars will be featured.

Tuesday, the 17th, will be Butterfly Day, with Violet Mersereau as the featured star.

Wednesday, the 18th, will be World Pictures, Brady-Made, Day. Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton, June Elvidge, Evelyn Greeley, Madge Evans, Carlyle Blackwell and Montague Love will be present.

The closing day has been assigned to Metro, which has promised to have Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Edith Story, Viola Dana, Harold Lockwood and other Metro stars on hand to say good-by to the many exhibitors and friends who will close the most popular Exposition in the United States.

The Exposition will be open Saturday, July 14. The Convention will open Monday, the 16th, at 10 a. m. Delegates are requested to apply at the Hotel Morrison—League Headquarters—with their credentials, in order that they may receive their official badges.

Private Car to Carry Mae Marsh

A private car will carry Mae Marsh to the National Convention. It has been named "The Goldwyn" by the Pullman Company.

Mae Marsh, accompanied by her mother and sister, will leave New York for Chicago on Friday, July 13, on the Twentieth Century Limited. The famous little star of "Intolerance" and "The Birth of a Nation" has been invited to speak to the assembled exhibitors and Chicago public.

"I have never made a speech in my life," said the biggest little star of filmdom, "and I know I shall make an awful failure of it."

However, Miss Marsh has informed Ludwig Schindler, in charge of the convention, that she will try, and having reached the maturity of 20 years she expects to be able to say something, at least.

Exhibitors to See "Movies" Made

Undoubtedly a large number of exhibitors visiting Chicago during the Convention will be interested in seeing how pictures are actually made. For this purpose the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company will hold an open house to all visiting managers and other film men. President Rothacker has given the following instructions as to how to reach the laboratories and studio from the downtown section of Chicago. It might be a good thing for you to clip these out now and slip them into your memorandum book for use when you arrive in the Windy City.

Jump in any taxi and ask any one of the drivers to take you to the Rothacker laboratory-studio; or

Take the Northwestern elevated, get off at Diversey station and walk west four blocks; or,

Take the Lincoln avenue car, get off at Diversey Parkway and walk west two blocks; or,

Take the Southport avenue car, get off at Diversey Parkway and walk east a half block.

INCE WITH PARAMOUNT

Director's Entire Organization in Big Deal Which Goes Into Immediate Effect—Produces for Paramount and Artcraft

Thomas H. Ince, well known director and producer, whose resignation from Triangle Film Corporation was reported two weeks ago, has just completed arrangements with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation whereby all Thomas H. Ince productions will henceforth be released by Artcraft and Paramount.

By the terms of the agreement, which was entered into with Mr. Ince by Adolph Zukor, Hiram Abrams and Walter E. Greene for Famous Players-Lasky, Paramount and Artcraft, respectively, all productions which Mr. Ince supervises personally will be released by Artcraft. This means that they will be grouped with productions starring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, George M. Cohan, Geraldine Farrar, and Elsie Ferguson, and that all other Thomas H. Ince productions will be released with the pictures starring Mme. Petrova, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Billie Burke, Lina Cavalieri, Vivian Martin, Julian Eltinge, Jack Pickford and Sessue Hayakawa. By this arrangement also, Mr. Ince becomes associated with David W. Griffith and Cecil B. De Mille as individual producers for Artcraft.

Mr. Ince will continue to make his producing headquarters in California and expects to return to the Coast in a very short time to begin active work on productions under the new releasing arrangement. He said:

My association with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation comes as the result of careful deliberation and of a painstaking study of motion picture conditions. I have kept much more closely in touch with market conditions than is the case with the average producer and I therefore speak with impartial authority when I say that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has evolved a distribution plan which is for the interests of producer, star and exhibitor.

Furthermore, my own inquiries of exhibitors, made while negotiations with the concern were pending and after my resignation from Triangle, convinced me that Paramount and Artcraft had given the exhibitors just the method of distribution which they most desire. Frankly, I surveyed the field very deliberately before making any new alliance as I was in no hurry to make new connections. I have reached a point where a few dollars more or less do not mean as much to me as happiness in my business relations, and to know that my efforts for the industry are in sympathy with the most progressive and lasting policies.

I therefore stood off in the corner, as it were, and surveyed the motion picture business from a bird's eye view, for the purpose of forming the most impartial opinion possible. When we are actually engaged in a business we cannot always judge it quite so clearly as a complete outsider. It was the outsider's viewpoint which I sought, plus that of the enlightened exhibitor. The result of my observation gave me no choice but to ally myself with Famous Players-Lasky.

Mr. Zukor paid a high compliment to Mr. Ince in a few brief remarks which he made concerning this important transaction. He said:

As a producer and as a man Thomas Ince has always commanded my highest admiration and respect. There is an individuality stamped upon every one of his productions which gives it a flavor all its own. They are full of vitality and of real American manhood—the pictures with a punch which the red-blooded American likes to see. These elements have always been present in every Ince picture and that is why we proffered the tremendous facilities of our distributing organization to Mr. Ince when we learned that he was free to make new distributing arrangements.

The well-recognized genius of Mr. Ince will be untrammeled in the production of his pictures and he will have full rein over his own extremely efficient organization. We may therefore look to Mr. Ince for the best of which he is capable, with his exceptional personality and genius finding complete expression in every production that bears his name.

Convention Honors Stars

June 26 was "Vitagraph Day" at the exposition of the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, held in the Parkway Auditorium, Philadelphia. Miss Miriam Fouche, who recently joined the Vitagraph forces and is working opposite Harry Morey in a new picture, and William Dunn, were the guests of honor for the day.

It was the first time Miss Fouche had made a personal appearance in Philadelphia, and she and Mr. Dunn both scored distinct personal triumphs. The pair were met at the Broad Street station by a special committee from the convention and escorted in automobiles to the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, where apartments had been reserved for them. Later they were guests at dinner, and then followed an automobile ride through the city.

The popularity of the stars was shown when they made their appearance at the exhibition. The main floor of the big Parkway Auditorium, where the booths and other displays were arranged, was packed with about five thousand persons, the majority of them ardent fans, and a great shout went up as the players were announced. They were carried to a platform and there both greeted the exhibitors and their friends.

Miss Fouche and Mr. Dunn, in the official booth on the exhibit floor, held a reception and personally greeted the fans who crowded around them.

The day at the exhibition closed with a banquet, given in the ball room of the Hotel Adelphia.

Lasky Man to War

The first member of the Lasky studio organization to leave for France is Lucien Littlefield, the clever young juvenile and character actor. Littlefield departed recently for the east with the Pasadena Ambulance Corps which, after a brief training on the Atlantic Coast, will be sent to France.

Last Call for the Convention

THIS is the last call for the big convention which starts on the sixteenth of this month. There is just time to instruct your assistant and pack your grip. Even in the improbable event that you had decided not to come, we would urge you to make up your mind now, because there are a lot of affairs that demand your attention.

Of course you already realize what a big return you will get on your expense money and your time. The main appeal now is that the convention needs you—needs all the exhibitors in the country to strengthen it for the fight against its enemies.

If you will do your part, and come, victory will be easy. If you stay away, the motion picture theater business may have another year of trouble. But of course you are coming.

Is Your Theater Good for a Lifetime?

WHEN the average exhibitor puts money into improving his house he wants to get it back immediately in increased attendance or at least he expects good interest on it. If he spends a couple of thousand dollars just in dressing up his theater, and the box office does not respond at once, he feels that he wasted his money.

We have in mind (and you probably have too) two picture theaters that are quite similar in everything ordinarily called essential. Programs, music, capacity, advertising, projection quality, etc., are about the same.

In one theater, though, the green calcimine is peeling off the walls, the plated electroliers are tarnished, the arms of the chairs feel grimy, the whole theater carries the atmosphere of a disused village opry house.

The other theater is plainly, but very carefully decorated in neutral tints of putty and sand color. It is lighted—and well lighted, even during projection—by the indirect system, and most of the light comes from flower boxes along the walls, with ferns overhanging the edges. The aisles are carpeted. The seats—about six hundred of them there are—have white-and-sand striped slip covers that carry an indescribably cool and refreshing air. The whole effect of the theater is delightful.

Plainly, the exhibitor who takes such pains to make his house pleasant should enjoy a bigger patronage, all other things being equal, than the man who lets the paint fall off his ceiling. Yet there is a distinct doubt whether he has any more business than his rival. Both, in fact, constantly fill their houses nearly to capacity—as good a patronage as any exhibitor could expect. So the slovenly exhibitor probably says, "What's the use?" in a satisfied and philosophical tone, while the careful exhibitor says the same thing, with less philosophy and optimism, having spent his money.

But there is a use. An exhibitor who has spent a thousand dollars more in beautifying his theater than another exhibitor is that much better off, with interest and profits on the investment, whether the box office shows it or not.

In the first place, he attracts a better class of patrons—people who are accustomed to correct decoration in their homes and offices, and who are quick to appreciate it—or its absence—elsewhere. Their dimes are no better than those of the people to whom a "bit of broken plaster on the wall" is no unfamiliar sight. Their money is worth no more—but their patronage is. For it spells a more substantial good will—a guarantee of continued patronage, of dependable business, of an established permanency.

Those unfamiliar with big business accounting would be surprised to learn the vast figures—millions of dollars—that are properly credited to "good will" in commercial circles. And good will, in a theater as much as in any other business, means insurance against competition, high valuation if the property is sold, a business upon which the owner can rely for a lifetime, and the valuable appreciation of other business men. These things are certainly worth money.

Nothing succeeds like success, and nothing attracts like the evidence of money. The man who shows that he needs business to live, seldom gets it. The man who has more business than he can handle gets more. The man who sets out to get money makes up as though he already had it, "Putting up a front," we call it—a legitimate means of convincing the other fellow that we are worth his attention.

The theater man who grumbles that he is losing money, that he cannot afford to redecorate and freshen up, does not get much consideration. The man who openly confesses that he is doing well and making money, and who gives evidence of it by spending some of it, command respect, admiration and patronage. He is welcomed to the community's coterie of successful men.

Indifferent management, slipshod music and advertising, shady pictures, may not reduce box office receipts at once, but they are all destroyers of good will. The proprietor of such a show is merely living on his wits from week to week. He has nothing to sell to a possible successor—nothing to insure him against a live competitor.

We would define the most successful exhibitor not necessarily as the one who had the largest patronage, but the one who was piling up the best good will account, who was making his theater a lifetime reliance, and who had gained local recognition as "one of our leading citizens." The exhibitor who knows he can earn ten thousand a year for the next twenty years is infinitely better off than the fellow who aims to "clean up" twenty thousand this year, but doesn't know anything about next year.

German Censorship for American Films

NO one ever questioned the courage of Chicago's censor board. If the newspaper reports quote correctly, it has just given evidence of extraordinary nerve in time of danger. In refusing a permit on a feature film of patriotic character, the board asserted, the newspaper reporter says, that it might offend "our German friends."

This bold and unique explanation for the distruction of American property must command our admiration. It is peculiarly novel to us in that we did not know that we had any "German friends." American friends of German parentage, and American friends who were born in Germany, we have aplenty—and very good friends they are. But Germans, as Germans, are alien enemies, not friends. If the censor board is friendly with them, it strikes us that a government investigation is in order.

Patriotic pictures are not merely the choice of the day; they are a necessity. The more objectionable they are to Germany and the Germans, the better for the prosecution of Ameria's cause. The worst light in which Germany can be shown on the screen, the most revolting exhibition of the treachery and barbarity of "our German friends," must necessarily be but mild and insipid compared to the truth.

For any man, censor or plain citizen, to defend his confiscation of American property on the grounds of friendship for Germans looks to us like plain treason. We would strongly advise that any producer whose picture is held up on such grounds as these communicate at once with the United States Secret Service Department. And, for the sake of American liberty, the pursuit of justice should not stop with the inevitable vindication of the film, but should be continued until these "German friends" and their friends are put wherever it is that the government is putting its internal enemies.

V. L. S. E. to Extend Service

"FAVORITE FILM FEATURES" AND "LITTLE BOBBY" SERIES NEARLY READY

IN answer to numerous inquiries from exhibitors in all sections of the United States Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. has issued a statement declaring that the rental policy of the corporation will remain exactly the same as it has been for several months past.

These inquiries are caused by the change in policy of other distributing companies.

"Continual changes in rental policies," the Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. statement reads, "we find are disastrous to every end of the industry. This is one of the reasons why we have no idea of changing our present policy at least until such a time as our patrons show we are wrong.

"Our present policy contemplates a volume of business at a price equitable to ourselves and to the exhibitors. In other words, our endeavor for months has been to rent pictures at a price at which the exhibitor may make money on every one of our features. In the past we have placed special Blue Ribbon features on our regular weekly release. Every so often it has been our policy to give the exhibitor one or two reels more than they are asked to pay for. We do this by putting a top notch seven reel picture in place of the usual five reel feature. This policy we will continue.

"Greater Vitagraph is continually seeking advice from the exhibitors of the country. It is upon these advices our policy is based. The exhibitors seem to feel that our present policy is correct. The only suggestion they make is that we increase our service."

Increased Service to Start July 23

In answer to the request of the exhibitors that Greater Vitagraph service be increased, the corporation, after working for several months has perfected its plan for a large increase in its service. This increase will start on July 23, and will be further increased on August 6.

The July 23 increase will inaugurate the release of the unit of V. L. S. E. service to be known as "Favorite Film Features." This unit of the service which will be rented at all V. L. S. E. branches throughout the country will be issued in three reels weekly, two of which will be drama and the third comedy, or two comedy and one drama as the case may be.

"Favorite Film Features" consists of Greater Vitagraph reissues, requests for which have been made by exhibitors. All of these reissues have been screened for the executive board of the sales organization and have been re-edited. They are the best of Greater Vitagraph's product of a few years ago.

These reissues are being put out just as if they were new pictures. Paul N. Lazarus, advertising manager for Greater Vitagraph, has been busy several months getting out paper consisting of one and three sheets.

Favorite Film Schedule

The schedule announced for the "Favorite Film Features" release is made up from the week beginning July 23, until the week commencing September 8, inclusive, and consists of:

July 23—"Her Husband," two-reel drama with Clara Kimball Young, Earle Williams, James Lackeye and Darwin Karr. "The Late Mr. Jones," one-reel comedy with Sidney Drew, Louise Beaudet and L. Rogers Lytton.

July 30—"Vengeance of Durand," two-reel drama with Earle Williams, Julia Swayne Gordon, L. Rogers Lytton, Harry Northrup, E. K. Lincoln. "An Elopement at Home," one-reel comedy with Norma Talmadge, Leo Delaney, Van Dyke Brooke, William Shea, Hughie Mack.

August 6—"A Regiment of Two," two-reel comedy with Anita Stewart, Edith Storey, Rose Tapley, Josie Sadler, Harry T. Morey, Sidney Drew, E. K. Lincoln, Ralph Ince, Charlie Edwards. "Happy-Go-Lucky," one-reel drama with Clara Kimball Young, Earle Williams, Rose Tapley, Bobby and Helen Connelly, Edward Elkas.

August 13—"Chains of an Oath," two-reel drama with Earle Williams, Edith Storey, William Shea, Kate Price, William Humphrey. "Betty in the Lion's Den," one-reel comedy with Clara Kimball Young, Josie Sadler, Darwin Karr, James Lackaye, Donald Hall, Charles Wellesley, William Shea.

August 20—"The Violin of M'sieur," two-reel drama with Clara Kimball Young, James Young, Helen Connelly, Etienne Girardot. "Father's Hatband," one-reel comedy with Norma Talmadge, Flora Finch, Leo Delaney, Van Dyke Brooke, Harry Lambert.

August 27—"The Feudists," two-reel comedy with Sidney Drew, John Bunny, Wallie Van, Lillian Walker, Flora Finch, Josie Sadler, Helen Connelly. "The Master Painter," one-reel, with Rosemary Theby, Sidney Drew, Courtney Foote.

September 3—"The Test," two-reel drama with Clara Kimball Young, Harry Northrup, Naomi Childers, Herbert L. Barry. "Fanny's Conspiracy," one-reel comedy with Norma Talmadge, Leo Delaney, Van Dyke Brooke, Ethel Lloyd, Harry Northrup.

September 8—"When Women Go on the Warpath," two-reel comedy with Clara Kimball Young, Sidney Drew, James Young, Flora Finch, Rose Tapley, James Lackaye, William Shea, Kate Price. "How States Are Made," one-reel, with Fred Burns, Anne Schaefer, Robert Thomby.

Bobby Connelly Series to Start August 6

On August 6 Greater Vitagraph will add another unit to its service consisting of the "Bobby Connelly Series." This unit consists of ten one-reel human interest "kid" stories, in which "Bobby" is starred, with a supporting cast consisting of three year old Aida Horton, Helen Connelly, "Bobby's" sister, Mabel Ballin and "Bill" Shea, who has appeared in numerous pictures with "Bobby."

It is predicted by those who have seen the first seven of this series that they will be the cause of many exhibitors substituting these pictures for travelogues, news pictorials and other short and split reel subjects used to fill out the program.

The prediction of the popularity of the "Bobby Connelly Series" is based upon the fact that they are regular youngster stories.

The human side of youngster life is the big appeal of the series augmented by the fact that "Bobby," Helen and little Aida Horton picture this human side.

On August 6 Greater Vitagraph also will begin the release of another series of "Big V" comedies of one reel each.

Edward Warren is busy at work on his second big production under his own banner. It promises to excell even the magnificent settings of "The Warfare of the Flesh," and as is the custom of Edward Warren an all-star cast is being used. A number of well-known actors have been drawn from the legitimate as well as from the picture ranks and they are being fittingly supported by the general cast of four to five hundred people.

Eva Tanguay with Selznick

Eva Tanguay, the vaudeville headliner, is to appear as the star of a great Selznick-Pictures production.

The Eva Tanguay Film Corporation, organized by Harry Weber and Lewis J. Selznick, has begun work at the Selznick Studio.

Miss Tanguay brings to the screen a unique personality, and the largest individual following of any vaudeville artist in the world. She holds the record for business at many of the principal vaudeville houses in America and abroad.

For this reason Miss Tanguay is regarded by a vast number of people as distinctively a vaudeville and musical star. The fact is that her vaudevile success has caused most people to forget that a number of years ago she made a name for herself in dramatic acting. She is, therefore, not merely an artist playing upon a big reputation in another field, but is an actress of remarkable ability returning to her first "love."

"Miss Tanguay's first production," said Mr. Weber, "will be a lavish one in every respect. She will be surrounded by a cast which will be in every way worthy of her talents, and no time, money nor pains will be spared in creating a very unusual photoplay."

In speaking of the new arrival in his rapidly growing constellation of stars, Mr. Selznick said:

"I have been of the opinion for a long time that Miss Tanguay would prove one of the biggest box office attractions in the film business. I am delighted to be able to offer her as a star to exhibitors under my open booking system."

Mutual Tours, released July 10, show Havana, capital of Cuba, Aigues, Mortes, a city of the Crusade and picture a trip up the Nile. Reel Life, the one-reel magazine, released July 12, contains the following subjects: "A Submarine of the Past," "A Square Deal for the Baby," "Whale Meat," "Camp Fire Signal Girls," "A Hasty Pudding," "Professional Etiquette" and animated drawings from life. The Mutual Weekly released July 11, carries the latest news of the world.

New Vitagraph Constellations

In addition to the engagement of Miss Miriam Fouche as leading woman for Harry Morey, Greater Vitagraph announces the acquisition of several other prominent players to its forces during the last week. In one instance, an entirely new star combination has been created and a company organized to support the featured players.

Edward Earle, formerly with Metro, Frohman, Famous Players, Pathe and Edison productions, has been selected to head the company with Betty Howe and Arthur Donaldson has been selected as their chief support. This trio and the company with them is under the direction of Wesley Ruggles, who until recently was little "Bobby" Connelly's director.

The Earle-Howe company began work last week in a big Blue Ribbon feature, "For France," and already have completed a number of the interior scenes. The picture will be ready for early fall release and, as its name indicates, will deal with the great European struggle. In making the picture Mr. Ruggles has obtained the services of several returned soldiers and with their aid, he will reproduce the battle-front atmosphere. One of the men who is assisting Mr. Ruggles in this part of the production has been to the front three times and has been thrice wounded. He wears a decoration as a token of his bravery in battle.

Another new combination announced by Vitagraph is that of Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald, who, though a young man, has had a very successful screen career. He appeared in "Purity," "Youth's Endearing Charms" and numerous other pictures, including American Beauty releases. Miss Manning will be featured in "The Princess of Park Row," a five-reel Blue Ribbon production which will be made under the direction of Ashley Miller. In this new Blue Ribbon feature, William Dunn will play the "heavy."

Betty Howe, who has just rejoined Vitagraph, appeared in many big features during her former connection with the company and is regarded as one of the most charming little actresses on the screen.

Edward Earle, who is an artist as well as an actor, has recently come to the front with a rush as a leading man and his popularity has greatly increased in recent months. Arthur Donaldson, who went into motion pictures after a very successful career on the stage, has been cast for the heavy role opposite Mr. Earle.

What Did Doris Do?

Exhibitors oftentimes prove themselves to be good detectives, particularly in scenting flivver pictures. If you are in the detective class try to figure out the meaning of this telegram, received by MOTOGRAPHY upon the verge of going to press: "Doris Kenyon failing to meet players at station kidnapped her press agent attended Philadelphia ball and through charm and efficient press agent captured honors."

Either Doris kidnapped her press agent or her p.a. attended the ball and through his charm captured the honors. We didn't know that Doris had a date with someone at the station. Anyway, it is apparent that the attractive Miss Kenyon attended the ball and won everybody over by her beauty and charm.

"The House of Gloom," a dramatic five-reel mystery story, is being staged at Universal City.

"Mary Moreland" Coming Soon

Love and business furnish the theme for Marjorie Rambeau's sixth Mutual star production, "Mary Moreland," scheduled for release July 9.

The photodrama is a screen adaptation of Marie Van Vorst's novel, of the same title, one of the most popular pieces of fiction which has been published in a long time. It was produced under the direction of Frank Powell by the Powell Producing corporation at the College Point studios.

Robert Elliott, who has played the leading role with Miss Rambeau in "Motherhood," "The Mirror," and "The Dazzling Miss Davison," appears with her in "Mary Moreland" in the role of Thomas Maughm, Wall street broker, a victim of domestic unhappiness and in love with his stenographer. Mr. Elliott has a long stage career and has appeared for some time before the camera.

Gene LaMoth, Augusta Burmeister, Fraser Tarbutt, and Edna M. Holland compose the supporting cast. The same cast has played with Miss Rambeau in most of her Mutual productions. Mutual branch managers are reporting heavy and increasing bookings of Miss Rambeau's productions, the last of which was "The Dazzling Miss Davison," a mystery story, released June 18.

"Mary Moreland" provides many tense dramatic situations in which Miss Rambeau has an opportunity to display her undoubted ability to great advantage.

The story, opening with an avowal of love between a successful man of affairs, unhappily married, and his stenographer, leads her through a series of temptations, to success and triumph.

The author develops Mary Moreland into a wonderfully strong character, an ideal but thoroughly human American business woman and the story lent itself to accurate picturization.

Art Dramas to Issue Magazine

As a further aid to its exhibitors in advertising their pictures, Harry Raver announces that Art Dramas, Inc., intends to issue a weekly magazine, dealing with Art Dramas generally and specifically, and containing, besides news, advertising suggestions, clip sheets, and other publicity material.

The publication, which is to be known as "Timely Topics," consists of eight pages, eight and one-half by eleven and three-quarters inches in dimension, printed on best grade calendared paper and plentifully illustrated.

Each issue will contain press sheet matter for the current release, and also editorials, comments on the films, special articles on different phases of the film industry and other departments of the regulation trade paper.

It will be a "general interest" paper as well.

Just a few preliminary views of "Mary Moreland," the new Mutual Star Production to appear July 9.

Marjorie Rambeau is the brilliant centerpiece of the play and Robert Elliot is the capable leading man.

REMBUSCH FOR PRESIDENT

Indiana Organization Endorses Its Head for Consideration of National League at Chicago—Holds Rousing Convention

Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Indiana state branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, will be a candidate for the presidency of the National Exhibitors' League at the convention in Chicago, July 16 to 22. Mr. Rembusch was also a candidate for the office last year.

Frank J. Rembusch, of Indiana, candidate for presidency, M. P. E. L. of America.

The announcement of his entrance into the 1917 race was made to Motography through the following resolutions adopted by the last meeting of the state league of Indiana.

Whereas, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Indiana sees the need of a strong national organization under able and conscientious leadership, and inasmuch as F. J. Rembusch, our state president, has always been one of the most able and best workers in the league, being one of the originators and organizers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and one of the fathers and foremost organizers of the motion picture industry; and

Whereas, F. J. Rembusch has always stood for the best interests of the exhibitor against censorship, against advance deposit system, of clean pictures, and for a high ideal in the motion picture trade; and

Whereas, all of the other original organizers of the League have been honored by office in the national organization except F. M. Rembusch, and knowing his fitness and ability through many years of experience as an exhibitor; be it therefore

Resolved, that the delegates for the National Convention at Chicago be instructed to work for the election of F. J. Rembusch as president of the National League and use every good means to bring about his election.

Indiana has elected the following delegates to the national convention, all instructed to make Rembusch the next national president:

Frank J. Rembusch, Shelbyville; Charles Pettijohn, Indianapolis; Ray Andrews, Muncie; Harry Kornblum, Evansville; I. Beitman, Indianapolis; J. T. Keating, Terre Haute; H. H. Johnson, Lafayette; V. W. Young, Gary; D. Hines, South Bend; B. V. Barton, Indianapolis; A. C. Zaring, Indianapolis; Dr. J. M. Rhoades, Indianapolis; W. C. Wansford, Lawrenceburgh; A. Cook, Greencastle; John Victor, Indianapolis; Ira Howard, Winnamac; F. J. Macj, Indianapolis; J. C. Vesey, Ft. Wayne; R. H. Harris, Bloomington; M. J. Whol, Gary; O. G. Murray, Richmond; E. R. Wisher, Indianapolis; Ben D. Crose, Indianapolis; Harry Koch, Indianapolis; Frank G. Wright, Linton; George H. Dunn, Greensburg; William Lipps, Alexandria.

Lee Ochs, national president, who was present, and Mr. Rembusch, discussed various problems of the industry. When the convention came to a consideration of advance deposits they were unanimous in their denunciation of that system and pledged themselves to renew their fight against it.

The effects of a new plan recently inaugurated by President Rembusch and Secretary Andrews to gain new members and finance the state organization delighted the assembly.

A solicitor was engaged to call upon every man in the state and each member was asked to pledge $1 a month to the state organization. The results were that over a hundred new members joined the Indiana League during the last month and $1,200 was subscribed by exhibitors.

Indiana now boasts no less than three hundred live members and expects to raise $6,000 in the ensuing year to carry on the work of the organization.

Fairbanks Works on "Optimist"

With three large seven-passenger automobiles loaded with players, Douglas Fairbanks and Director John Emerson started in search of a mountain peak to resemble the famous Alps, which they discovered sixty miles from the Westcoast Artcraft studio. "The Optimist," an original story by Douglas Fairbanks, shows the latter, who is of a roaming disposition, in the Alps, Africa and South Sea Islands. The story demands these locations and Director John Emercon has been very fortunate in finding the desired atmosphere in California.

Opposite Douglas Fairbanks in his third Artcraft starring vehicle appears Eileen Percy, who recently signed a contract with the Fairbanks organization, that covers a period of one year.

In the development of this Artcraft play, author Fairbanks deals with a theme that comes under the heading of "highbrow" but his treatment is along elemental lines. Therefore, its appeal will include both the intellectual and middle class audiences.

Screen Captures Actor for Good

Taylor Holmes has said goodbye to the speaking stage. He is in the pictures to stay. At least that is the present state of his mind now and he doesn't think it's going to change.

The actor who lead "Bunker Bean" to footlight fame is half filmed in his first Essanay production. It will be his screen debut, practically since the only other experience along this line he has had was in a one-reel picture for the old Bioscope about eight years ago. As he expresses it, "that does not count," for filmland then was still a wilderness of undevelopment.

Mr. Holmes' first Essanay production will be "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," a screen version of the story of that title by Clarence Buddington Kelland which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. He has contracted to star in three pictures for Essanay, and, it is understood, that organization holds an option on his services for further productions. It is possible that he may appear in a film version of "Bunker Bean."

Elect New Officers

The Michigan State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, in the last moments of their recent convention held at the Pantlind Hotel, Grand Rapids, elected the following officers: S. A. Moran of Ann Arbor, president; W. A. McLurell of Savoy, first vice president; F. G. Ongle of Hancock, second vice president; M. Jacobi of Ionia, third vice president; Claude E. Cody of Lansing, secretary, and P. J. Schlossman of Muskegon, treasurer.

Pretty Violet MacMillan is playing the leading part in a five-reel feature, entitled "Nancy's Baby," at Universal City.

Goldwyn Pictures at Chicago

NOTABLES WATCH BIG FILMINGS IN MAE MARSH PICTURE

GOLDWYN Pictures Corporation at last is ready to invite the exhibitors of America to see the first of its productions which have been made since the opening of its New Jersey studios in January. Seven Goldwyn Pictures have been completed and the eighth and ninth productions are about to be started. At least four and perhaps more of these pictures will be shown for the first time to American exhibitors each morning during the exposition of the Exhibitors' League of America in Chicago, July 14 to 22.

Arrangements have been made with Messrs. Jones, Linick & Schaefer whereby Goldwyn will hold a morning trade showing each day at the Colonial Theater on Randolph street and exhibitors will be admitted to these showings by invitation.

Mae Marsh, Goldwyn star, who has been honored by having the first day of the exposition designated as "Mae Marsh Day," will attend several of these morning showings and meet many of these exhibitors.

Samuel Goldfish and other officers of Goldwyn will be present in Chicago throughout the exposition to meet men who have contributed to the growth of the industry.

Mae Marsh Draws Notables

The magnetism of Mae Marsh that makes millions of people go to see her in motion pictures, proves to be equally powerful in the studios over in Fort Lee, for hundreds of notables have visited the studios to watch her work in an immense production now nearing completion.

For the past week upwards of 3,000 persons have worked day and night in the circus scenes for what is thus far the most pretentious of all the Goldwyn productions. In the taking of these scenes Goldwyn not only took over an entire circus, with all of its employes, from stakemen to sideshows and "concessions" but employed more than 2,000 extras and citizens of Fort Lee.

News of the taking of these scenes crossed the Hudson quickly and attracted a gallery of visitors. Among the important personages of the film world attracted to the Goldwyn studios to watch Mae Marsh working in these scenes were Marcus Loew, the New York picture magnate who owns a hundred or more theaters; Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, owner of the Circle Theater in that city; T. L. Tally, the wealthy Los Angeles owner of picture theaters; John H. Kunsky, of Detroit, who has a chain of ten big houses; Nathan Gordon, owner of important theaters in Boston, Lynn, Worcester, Rochester and elsewhere.

Theatrical circles were represented by A. H. Woods the producer, and Kenneth Macgowan, one of the best known of the younger writers on the stage and screen.

Literature and society were represented on the same day by Arthur Train, well known novelist; Mrs. Train and the Misses Train, Mrs. Arthur Woods, wife of the Police Commissioner of New York, and Miss Neysa McMein, cover illustrator on the Saturday Evening Post.

Companies Not to Work on Sunday

An order, which will have a far-reaching effect upon the motion picture organizations with studios in Fort Lee, has been issued by Edward A. White, mayor of the New Jersey City, when he ruled that henceforth no motion picture companies will be allowed to photograph exteriors or do other work "on the lot" on Sunday. The laws of New Jersey vest him with that power.

Mae Marsh as a circus girl in her third Goldwyn, and Madge Kennedy, the Goldwyn comedienne.

Mayor White's new measure regulating the manufacture of film was set forth after he had ordered a cancellation of Sunday picture-taking on the third Mae Marsh production. In this picture, owing to the expense of retaining circus performers, animals and 2,000 "extras," work has been rushed day and night, seven days a week. The desirability of showing the big drama to the national exhibitors at the Chicago convention has been another reason for the long hours at the Goldwyn studios.

Photodrama Halted by Death

Under circumstances in which a less courageous person might have surrendered, Jane Cowl is rapidly completing her first photodrama.

If anyone believes that the paths of the successful are strewn only with roses let him consider the stress under which Jane Cowl has labored in her first Goldwyn production. This reached a climax last week when the death of Elsie Clarens, a member of Miss Cowl's Company, necessitated the retaking of fifteen scenes and the rebuilding of six separate interior sets at the Fort Lee Goldwyn studios.

Miss Cowl began the picturization of one of Basil King's Saturday Evening Post stories under trying conditions. At the time a new drama she had written was in course of rehearsal and Miss Cowl devoted her nights each week to the direction of the play.

She concentrated upon her work in the Goldwyn studios and, under the direction of Arthur Hopkins, her photodrama made rapid progress until last week when the story was brought to a halt by the death of Elsie Clarens.

"For Liberty" Ready Soon

After an exciting two weeks in Canada, Romaine Fielding and the company he is directing in Captain Edwin Bower Hesser's patriotic feature, "For Liberty," is back in Philadelphia, completing the interiors at the Lubin studios. E. K. Lincoln is the star, as a young American officer in the heroic American legion of the Canadian army. Mr. Fielding plays the "heavy," and Barbara Castleton is a very charming heroine, in a role of extreme emotional intensity.

Upon the arrival of the company in Canada, every courtesy was extended to them. Many scenes were made in the vicinity of Quebec with the help of Brigadier General Ragos, the officer commanding Camp Valcartier. After making necessary views there, Mr. Fielding proceeded to Camp Borden, where Major General Logie and his staff extended fullest co-operation and personally appeared in some of the scenes taken.

The feature will be at least seven reels in length, and ready for release this month. No method of distribution has yet been announced.

New Edgar Lewis Drama

With the opening of Edgar Lewis' special production, "The Bar Sinister," at the Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh, come rumors of big preparations under way for a new Edgar Lewis picture which promises to be ready for release in a few weeks.

While "The Bar Sinister" was still running at the Broadway Theater, New York, Edgar Lewis took his company, which included Mitchell Lewis, Hedda Nova and many other artists prominent in the casts of "The Barrier" and "The Bar Sinister," to Ticonderoga and started work upon another special picture.

Bates Has Interesting Career

Wilbur Bates, general publicity man for Paralta Plays, Inc., and the Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan producing companies, has had a most interesting career as a newspaper and theatrical advertising man.

Wilbur Bates, general publicity man for Paralta.

He is a native of Boston. He ran away from home when between 13 and 14 years of age and obtained a position as office boy in a Boston detective agency. He had been reading "Old Sleuth" and "Nick Carter."

When he was but 16 years of age he became connected with the detective staff of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. He began writing little items about his experiences for the Boston Herald and attracted the attention of Charles B. Danforth, the greatest New England city editor of his day, who gave him a job as a reporter when he was but 17 years old.

He remained on the Boston Herald staff about three years and then joined the reportorial staff of the New York World. As a World man he made a national reputation among newspaper men by solving the famous Way murder case at Stony Creek, Connecticut, acting as baggage master at the railroad station for five weeks to conceal his identity.

He became New York correspondent for the Philadelphia Times before he was 21 years of age to escape sensational newspaper work, which he had grown to detest. Some months later he joined the staff of the Philadelphia Press with the understanding he should never be assigned to a police case. A few months later Dr. J. H. Hill, of Millington, Maryland, was murdered by negroes as the result of a political conspiracy.

Because of the importance of the case and Mr. Bates' past record as a newspaper sleuth, he was persuaded to go to Millington and take up the investigation. Dr. Hill was assailed on a Saturday night. Mr. Bates began work on the case on Tuesday. On Thursday nine negroes were in jail charged with this murder.

This case was the turning point in Mr. Bates' career. Seeing nothing ahead of him but sensational newspaper work, which he detested, he listened to his friend, Charles H. Yale, who was putting out "The Devil's Auction" from Philadelpjhia, and went ahead of that famous one night stand spectacle as press agent. Three years later he joined Liebler & Co., and did the newspaper work for their first attraction.

The following season he exploited this firm's production of Hall Caine's "The Christian," with Viola Allen as Glory Quayle. And Mr. Bates has been climbing up in publicity work ever since, until he now holds his present enviable position with Paralta.

NEW FAIRBANKS DIRECTOR

Artcraft's Demand for More Fairbanks Pictures Necessitates Acquisition of Two Co-Directors to Work with John Emerson

As a result of the unusual hits scored by Douglas Fairbanks' first two Artcraft releases, "In Again—Out Again," and "Wild and Woolly" and at the repeated requests of exhibitors all over the country, Artcraft Pictures has notified the popular actor-producer that more pictures than originally called for are demanded. Never in the history of its existence have more remarkable reports of record-breaking business on a production been received by Artcraft than were displayed last week, soon after "Wild and Woolly" made its first public appearance throughout the country. At the Rialto Theater, New York, despite the hot weather, Manager Rothapfel experienced his usual "Fairbanks business," which means capacity attendance with long lines in front of the theater at every performance. This showing has been evidenced everywhere and many requests for continued engagements have already been received by Artcraft.

Thus, closely following the announcement from the Douglas Fairbanks office in California of its consideration of a means of speeding up productions, or rather, the elimination of lost time between pictures, Artcraft last week announced that Mr. Fairbanks has added two directors to his staff in the persons of John W. McDermott and Joseph Henaberry, who will work under the personal supervision of John Emerson. Mr. Emerson will hereafter be known as director general of the Fairbanks organization, and as a result of the assistance of McDermott and Henaberry, will be able to overcome the loss of time as outlined recently in the new working plan of this producing unit.

Anna Nilsson, who plays opposite George M. Cohan in "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Miss Nilsson is the beauty of the "Who's Guilty?" series and many features.

COHAN USING TWO STUDIOS

"Seven Keys to Baldpate," Big Stage Success, Being Made in Famous Players' Fort Lee and New York Studios

In order to save time in the production of George M. Cohan's second Artcraft offering, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," adapted from his former stage success of the same name, both of the Famous Players-Lasky studios in the East are being used. A series of big scenes have already been staged at the Fifty-sixth street studio in New York, where the popular actor-author-producer has peen appearing before the camera daily up until late in the evening for the past three weeks.

At the Fort Lee studio a big exterior hotel set was recently filmed and other scenes are now being taken, while at the New York studio new sets are being built so that George M. and his company may lose no time between scenes. In speaking of the production of this film Director Ford said:

We all feel that the unusual screen qualities of "Seven Keys" will make it a knockout, to use the theatrical term. Everyone who is familiar with the story will readily appreciate what a great scenario we have to work on. Rapid-fire action throughout, with many surprises and a startling climax, is what this story offers to the screen and with the inimitable George M. in the chief role it should easily register even a greater hit than his first film, "Broadway Jones," which was a splendid success.

Anna Nilsson is now Cohan's leading lady, and everyone knows that she is a real beauty.

Don Bartlett, formerly Triangle advertising man in New York, and Washington newspaper man, is now a member of the Vitagraph publicity department in the home office, New York.

Evelyn Nesbit in scenes from "Redemption."

NESBIT FILM SELLING FAST

Purchaser of "Redemption" Sells Part of Territory and Arranges for Bookings Aggregating More Than He Paid for Film

A new phase in the buying of state right productions has cropped out in the course of the disposition of Julius Steger's production of "Redemption" which had such an extended run at the George M. Cohan Theater, Chicago. Mr. Nathan Hirsh, purchaser of New York and Northern New Jersey rights, sold a part of the territory outright and contracted for a sufficient number of bookings of the film to completely cover the cost of the purchase for the entire territory, thus insuring his profits in advance before releasing in the territory.

"Redemption," which features Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, is proving to be one of the best selling state right propositions ever offered. Its run at the Geo. M. Cohan Theater, where it was intended to stay two weeks, and remained five, combined with the invariable popularity it has enjoyed in the many other houses where it is now playing, has brought it forcibly to the attention of the state rights buyers.

The picture is now being shown at the dollar scale of prices ranging from twenty-five cents to one dollar at Keith's Alhambra Theater, New York, and various other theaters in and around New York, including Teller's Shubert, Brooklyn, which plays big legitimate attractions; Proctor's Theater and Roof Garden, Newark; the Shubert Theater, Newark, and the Colonial Theater, Chicago. Everywhere it is playing to enormous business. It will open at the Forest Theater, Philadelphia, shortly.

The men who bought state rights for "Redemption" include some of the leading figures in the film world. Hiram Abrams, one of the biggest men in the business, purchased the New England rights. Jones, Linick and Schaeffer bought the rights for the state of Illinois. Stanley V. Mastbaum, supreme in his territory, bought the rights for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey. The Civilization-Pioneer Film Company bought the rights for the state of New York and Northern New Jersey. Many other big buyers are now negotiating for other choice territory.

GOLDWYN PICTURES POPULAR

Stanley V. Mastbaum, Philadelphia's Biggest Exhibitor, Signs for Goldwyn Pictures at His Stanley Theater—Others Following

Stanley V. Mastbaum, who shares with Marcus Loew of New York the record of controlling or booking more theaters than any other man in the picture industry, has signed for the entire first year's output of twenty-six Goldwyn Pictures for his Stanley Theater, Philadelphia.

This achievement Goldwyn considers as distinctive as its signing of The Strand Theater, New York. The booking of the Goldwyn productions by Mr. Mastbaum may be taken to mean that these pictures will be presented in the hundred or more theaters under the direct control of Pennsylvania's foremost exhibitor.

Goldwyn's managers in its nineteen American branches, as well as the managers of its six Canadian offices, have been on duty since June 11 and announcement is about to be made of the signing of important exhibitors in most of the large American and Canadian centers.

While the formation of this distributing organization has been accomblished in sixty days, the work of preparation for it has extended over a period of ten months. The men chosen by Goldwyn as its field representatives have been selected from the very front rank of film men; with the view to finding the men in each territory who possessed the exhibitors' confidence and friendships in the largest possible measure.

The equipping of all of the branches in the United States has, in the main, been done from New York. In each office a large and completely equipped projection room has been fitted up.

Triangle Talks to Exhibitors

REPLY TO RUMORS—OUTLINE OF FUTURE POLICIES

THE following statement was issued from the offices of the Triangle Distributing Corporation on June 28th to all exhibitors:

During the past few weeks there have been carried in the trade papers and motion picture journals many rumors about the future of Triangle. At first we felt that it would be best not to comment on these one way or the other; but, after due consideration, we feel that the exhibitors are entitled to know the true status of conditions.

For this reason we take great pleasure in announcing to you and to every other exhibitor that the future of Triangle was never more assured than it is at present. A complete reorganization and consolidation of the producing plants has made it possible to bring the production of a picture down to a scientific business basis. All waste is eliminated, making it possible to spend a specified amount of money for each picture, wherein the entire value goes into the production of the picture itself, a plan that has heretofore not been followed.

System of Direction and Criticism

The direction of all Triangle productions will be in the hands of the best directors that can possibly be secured, the plan of organization making it possible for these directors to work almost as one on the production of any picture. In this way, full advantage is given to the exhibitor of every dollar spent upon each production.

After productions have been made by the Triangle Film Company, they will all undergo the most rigid criticisms by people capable of passing on the merits of a production, and when any picture falls below the Triangle standard, it will not be released on the Triangle Program, but another will be substituted in its place, assuring you and every exhibitor of a consistent program of the highest quality at all times.

Star, Production, Service

Our policy of two productions per week makes it possible for us to render to you the most efficient service of any organization releasing pictures. It is a fact well known to every exhibitor that Triangle has made more stars than any other releasing organization. There will be stars in the future Triangle productions such as have been in Triangle productions in the past; but it will be the intent of the Triangle Company to help the exhibitor advertise Triangle pictures and Triangle service at the same time that he is advertising such stars. In other words, we want to make each picture of such value that the exhibitor can advertise from three different angles, namely, the star, the production itself, and the service which it represents. By this means, we will not place you in such position that at some future date you will have to pay an exorbitant price for the star that you yourself have helped to make.

The Triangle program must be sold at equitable prices, and each picture so made that this program will be a valuable asset to any house. We are not coming out with any big story as to how we intend taking care of the exhibitor regardless of all other things, and how unfair others have been to him since the beginning of the picture industry—because we believe that most all exhibitors are fully developed business men able to take care of themselves and understand and see through a fair business proposition when it is submitted.

We are perfectly willing to submit our future business policies to the business men in the exhibiting end and we do not think that we will suffer by the final analysis. Our service will not be excelled by any distributing organization today. It will be our desire to cooperate and assist and help the exhibitor to make the Triangle program an asset to his house. Our pictures will be made from well known plays that carry a real advertising value.

"Alma, Where Do You Live?"

"Alma, Where Do You Live?" should make one of the most popular releases ever offered on a state rights basis. Starring Ruth MacTammany and directed by Hal Clarendon, a really unusual super-feature is offered by The Newfields Producing Corporation, Ralph W. Horne, president, Woolworth Building, New York City. Miss MacTammany is very beautiful, indeed, and has the finished technique acquired during her European operatic career. Even her classic dancing, learned from a famous ballet director in Milan, Italy, has been utilized in the film, where, as the mysterious Alma, she becomes the inspiration of a young artist.

MAGAZINE TO PICTURES

The editor of Photoplay Magazine has been captured by Lewis J. Selznick, who will make him editorial czar of Selznick-Pictures.

Photoplay Magazine is the finest and most complete publication in the world devoted to the popular angles of the picture industry, and Julian Johnson, formerly commanding officer over its columns, is one of the most capable editors in the country. He is a dynamo of creative force and a serious student of the business and art of the screen. He has been editor of Photoplay for the past three years. Following his withdrawal Alfred Cohn of Los Angeles was made western managing editor, Fred J. Smith, formerly of the Motion Picture Mail of New York, eastern managing editor, with General Manager James R. Quirk in general charge in Chicago. Mr. Johnson will remain a contributing editor.

"The Shadow Stage," Mr. Johnson's critical department in Photoplay, has been one of the real constructive forces in the photoplay field. His editorials, under the caption, "Close-ups," have always been thoroughly read by all interested in the industry. His interviews and general magazine articles are exemplary in their refreshing originality and adherence to fact.

Lewis J. Selznick makes the following announcement of the new department in his organization:

I have created the position of editor-in-chief of Selznick-Pictures to make a place for Mr. Johnson in my organization. I have known him for several years, and have watched his work with great interest. I believe there are few men who have made so serious and thorough a study of photoplays as he. His reviews of pictures invariably strike at the vital point, whether in praise or blame. If that sort of brains is of value to a magazine, it is of double value to a producer.

There has always been a place in my organization for some man whom I could trust to watch a production from the time the scenario is accepted until the moment the finished print is placed upon the market. I have always been looking for the man for the job. Mr. Johnson hesitated to leave the magazine field, in which he has made a reputation for himself, but finally consented when I showed him the constructive work and broad possibilities that lay before him in the position I had created. I have determined that nothing shall stand in the way of keeping Selznick-Pictures in the very front rank of progressive motion pictures production, and my engagement of Mr. Johnson is an important step in carrying out this policy. I am proud to have him associated with me.

Mr. Johnson has the following to say:

During my connection with Photoplay Magazine I endeavored to view the film business from a constructive angle, and especially was this true in Photoplay's review department, "The Shadow Stage," which I created. For ten years I had believed in and had practiced, to the extent of my ability, constructive criticism of the drama; and I essayed reviews of photoplays at a period recent as to time, but remote as to swift epochs of the film business, where three years is a century. When I began to write screen reviews, less than three years ago, scarcely any publications except the trade papers printed such things. Now every newspaper of consequence in the United States has its department of film criticism, in the main honest and outspoken.

The first fact that came to my attention as I began to write constructive photoplay reviews was the intense need of such things. The second fact, a realization that if constructive criticism could be applied at the source—applied to the story and the titling before and during the making—it would help more than all the words which might be written afterward. I wondered if there was a manufacturer who had imagination and foresight enough to realize this; and, at the same time, the business initiative and personal sincerity which a really big and successful producer must possess. I have found exactly this combination in Lewis J. Selznick. He is the only reason I left Photoplay Magazine, the most intelligent and fearless publication in its field.

Following Mr. Jonhson's resignation from Photoplay to become editor-in-chief of Selznick-Pictures, he received a telegram from James R. Quirk, general manager of the magazine, which reads:

There may be a better man in America for your new position, but I have never heard of him. I always said Lewis J. Selznick was a rare picker. Your advent into the production end is a step onward for the photoplay, and my sincerest congratulations to you and Mr. Selznick. The three years we have worked together will always be full of fondest memories to me.

FIELDS STARTS SECOND FILM

"The Corner Grocery" to Be His Next Vehicle—Susan Grandaise, French Star, Soon to Join Brady Forces in America

Lew Fields is at work in the Peerless studio, Fort Lee, upon the second of the series of photoplays in which he is to appear for World-Pictures, Brady-Made. This is a screen version of "The Corner Grocer," which is said to have had the longest New York run as a spoken comedy drama that ever was recorded.

The story is of the kind sometimes described as serio-comic. Thus "The Corner Grocer" comes well within the acting gifts of Mr. Fields, whose skillful blending of fun and pathos in "The Man Who Stood Still" is well remembered.

From the offices of the World corporation also comes word that "When True Love Dawns," the last of the series of French photoplays purchased by the Brady International Service for the World-Pictures program, is about to be published. Susan Grandaise is the star of this play, and the cast also includes Albert Singer.

"When True Love Dawns" is said by its American sponsors to contain certain unique features, among them a set of characters and a story without one thought of evil. In spite of this, as a person of sardonic spirit might say, the play carries a remarkably strong and interesting plot. Like others in the series this screen drama was directed by Louis Mercanton whose artistry has been praised in a most emphatic manner.

Miss Grandaise is expected to come to America in person to act for World-Pictures Brady-Made, as soon as she finishes the play upon which she is working with Mr. Mercanton at present "somewhere in France." The uncertainties of ocean travel are such at this time that the date of her coming cannot be stated positively, but it is believed that she will be here before the end of August.

Mr. Brady has already provided himself with several scenarios for the use of Miss Grandaise. These are all on American topics, and the present plan provides that they shall be produced one after the other with no waste of time between plays.

The addition of Miss Grandaise to the list of stars in World-Pictures will naturally create a great deal of interest. She has a sweet and charming personality and an exceedingly delicate and finished style, quite unlike that of any other artist.

Regina Badet, "the vampire of France," who has been seen in this country in "Atonement" and "The Golden Lotus," will not join the forces of World-Pictures for three or four months. She is at present fulfilling a dancing engagement in South America, having contracted for this tour when it became apparent that the making of picture plays in Europe was practically at a standstill for the war period.

"THE LONE WOLF"

Broadway Audiences Express Appreciation of Herbert Brenon's First Fling at Melodrama—Picture Full of Thrills

IF you like hair-breadth escapes and incidents that make the shivers chase up and down your spine, you will find in "The Lone Wolf," Herbert Brenon's newese production, a drama to fill the bill.

"The Lone Wolf" opened last week at the Broadway Theater, New York, and the audiences were carried away with it. They sat tense in their chairs till the last foot had flipped across the screen. The play is Brenson's first adventure into the realm of melodrama and exhibitors and fans hope it will not be the last. "The Lone Wolf" is taken from the popular novel by the same name by Louis Joseph Vance.

A Bunch of Thrillers

An automobile race with a motor boat, a fight in mid-air between two aeroplanes, a fire the like of which has probably never been seen on the screen before, and an auto dropping from a drawbridge at a jack-knife angle into the water below are among the scenes which kept last night's audience in suspense.

From the moment the picture begins the action is swift, and everything moves with an astonishing quickness toward a finish that is at once unexpected and original. An escape in an aeroplane is a feature.

Mr. Brenon's cast is splendid throughout from little Cornish Beck, who plays the part of the Lone Wolf as a child, to Hazel Dawn and Burt Lytell who play the principal roles. Miss Dawn makes an attractive Lucy Shannon, and while her role calls for no extraordinary powers on her part, she is pleasing.

Bert Lytell, who makes his screen debut in this production, is delightful.

Alfred Hickman, as Eckstrom, and Robert Fisher, as Bannon, each give strong performances, while the remainder of the cast consisting of Edward Abeles, William Riley Hatch, Florence Ashbrooke, and William E. Shay are true to type.

The audience in New York was a distinguished one. Among those who were in the audience were Daniel Frohman, Marie Dressler, Louis Joseph Vance, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Auriol Lee, Hazel Dawn, Nance O'Neil and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brenon.

Aeroplane Makes Startling Finish

There is an extremely startling finish to "The Lone Wolf." It makes the audience wonder how on earth the thing was done. As a matter of fact, most of it was done off the earth.

Tex LeGrane, aviation instructor at the Staten Island Aviation school, was brought into the picture, and he unwittingly saved the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation a thousand dollars when the thriller was caught. But it cost a brand new Curtiss biplane.

LeGrane was making some flight scenes for Mr. Brenon in the concluding scene of "The Lone Wolf" and as he started up he accidently deflected one of his rising rudders while about 25 feet off the ground. The machine at once dove to the ground and was completely wrecked, although LeGrane was fortunate to escape with a few bruises and a slight shaking up. As the cameraman was vigorously turning the crank all through the operation he secured a splendid piece of action film.

Now comes the peculiar part of it all. The aeroplane scene which gives the "big punch" to "The Lone Wolf" as laid out by the author, Louis Joseph Vance, shows Michael Lanyard, "The Lone Wolf," and Lucy Shannon, the heroine of the story, escaping from France to England in an aeroplane. They are pursued by members of the "Pack," a crowd of international crooks, in another plane which is wrecked killing its occupants. Mr. Brenon did not, of course, intend to smash an eight or ten thousand dollar fiying machine to show this scene. Instead he would have shown an aeroplane in the air and then his mechanical staff would have built a wrecked machine and it would have been flashed on the screen with the dead aviator lying in the wreckage.

LeGrane's accidental tumble furnished both the fall and the wrecked machine without additional cost to Mr. Brenon since it was his own fault that he fell. Hazel Dawn and Bert Lytell, who were to go up in the next flight were standing by on the location and indulged in mutual congratulations that the fall did not occur during their own flight.

Leonhardt with Goldwyn

Harry L. Leonhardt, former western manager for the Fox Film Corporation, with headquarters in Chicago, has become associated with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. The nature of his new position had not been announced at the time of going to press. At the Chicago Fox office it was stated that as yet no successor to Mr. Leonhardt has been appointed. J. E. O'Toole, Chicago manager, spent the greater part of last week in New York attending the third annual convention of the Fox Film Corporation.

Herbert Brenon, who produced the unusual melodrama, "The Lone Wolf," in the shield, and the aeroplane wrecked in the making of the picture. In front of the machine on the right are seen Mr. Brenon, Bert Lytell, and Hazel Dawn, the leads, and Aviator LeGrane.

"LUST OF THE AGES" FINISHED

Big Film of Ogden Corporation Featuring Lillian Walker—May Be Sold on State Rights Plan

"The Lust of the Ages," the eight-reel feature film directed by Harry Revier with Lillian Walker in the leading role, has just been completed by the Ogden Pictures Corporation of Ogden, Utah.

Miss Walker, in the big production, takes the part of a young woman who has been brought up to abhorrence of the greed for money, an abhorrence passed on to her by her mother whose life was wrecked by the money madness of her husband.

The daughter graduates from Vassar, intellectual, bright, thoughtful. She determines to be an authoress and writes a book on the subject of the curse of money. The book is entitled "The Lust of the Ages."

It is while she is at work on the book that she meets a splendid type of young American who is a successful business man. They fall in love with each other.

During their engagement the young woman discovers symptoms of money lust in her ideal whose constant thought is of "getting ahead" and "putting deals through." She realizes she is in love with a man who is obsessed by the love of money and is in a way to duplicate the tragedy of her mother's life.

The book recites the history of money from its origin, showing the happiness of simple people before they knew the curse of money. This is where the producers of the picture-play have made the best of their opportunity for interesting detail. They have shown the tragedy accumulation of money in the hands of a few has always caused.

The story of "The Lust of the Ages" goes back to the age of barter, when instead of money, the beasts of the fields, cattle, sheep, and goats were traded from one man to another. The biblical incidents relating to Christ driving the money lenders from the temple, and many other wonderfully interesting big scenes of the period are woven allegorically through the plot.

The herds of cattle and other animals were used in some of the big scenes laid in the period before money was introduced in the world as a medium of exchange. The age of barter, showing an ancient city of the Babylonian era with primitive wells, water wheels, and city walls, is depicted in "The Lust of the Ages," and the theme of the story continues on down through the ages to the present day.

The Ogden Pictures Corporation, which produced the pictures, is composed of some of the wealthiest business men in the West. Albert Scowcroft is president of the company; Lester Park, vice-president and general manager, and W. Fred Bossner, secretary-treasurer.

"PERSUASIVE PEGGY"

The Mayfair Film Corporation's Latest Picture Featuring Peggy Hyland has Plenty of Sparkle and Many Pretty Scenes

"Persuasive Peggy" portrays the most universal of themes with a plot that is unique, yet charming, and minus the evidence of juggling. One forgets the screen and breathes and sighs with the wilfull little heroine whose ready wit and sober philosophy solve her many difficulties.

When Peggy wants love, she lets it seek her. She, however, is of immeasurable help in aiding it to find the path to her heart. When she wants to convert her husband to her way of looking at things she manipulates things in such a fashion that it seems to him the only logical way in which they can possibly be viewed.

"Peggy" is willing to give up the thing upon which she has set her heart in order that impending disaster may be averted, and the ties that bind may not be lessened nor strained through misunderstanding.

When this little sylphid wants her husband to grant her a weekly allowance she works a ruse so simple and harmless but withal so successful that any wife might practice it with gratifying results.

Before the play is finished "Peggy" and "Big Ed" find themselves the possessors of the two basic principles upon which all happy marriages are founded—namely, faith and understanding.

The story rings true to life; is full of humorous touches and never loses its grip upon your interest. A moral lesson with a universal appeal is combined with pretty settings and good photography.

Lasky Building Big New Stage

The big production schedule which has been laid out by the Famous-Lasky Corporation in its preparation of Artcraft and Paramount photoplays for release under the new "Star Series Selective Booking" has rendered necessary the erection of still another new stage at the Lasky studio in Hollywood. For the last two years the work of increasing the productive capacities of the studio has been going on almost ceaselessly either in the form of building new stages and administrative buildings or in the remodeling of those which form part of the original equipment of the plant. The Lasky yard itself has been more than doubled in area and Mr. Lasky's ranch outside of Hollywood is continuously being put into service for many big spectacular scenes.

A short time ago, after the completion of stage number three, work was begun upon the building of a huge swimming tank in the yard. With the completion of this tank, the studio manager, Milton E. Hoffman, has now authorized the construction of stage number four immediately adjacent to the tank and so arranged that this stage and the tank can be used simultaneously as settings for any big scenes requiring both water and landscape backgrounds.

The new stage will be 200x80 feet, which is the same size as stages numbers two and three. It is planned to have a number of stars now in the east transferred to the west coast during the summer and this additional stage will be extremely useful in taking care of the needs of the production departments which will be thus increased. It is most highly probable that the first photoplay to be staged on number four will be Geraldine Farrar's first picture of the summer, which will be directed by Cecil B. De Mille.

"Who's Your Neighbor?"

Following the private showing of "Who's Your Neighbor?", the seven-reel sociological cinema spectacle, to exhibitors, state rights buyers and trade newspaper critics, the officers of the Master Drama Features, Inc., 1493 Broadway, New York, have received many bids from buyers for this remarkable screen drama. Said General Manager Herman Becker:

In our desire to produce a photoplay that should stand out head and shoulders above anything and everything of its kind ever produced, we have spared no expense. Written by Willard Mack, author of "Kick In," one of the greatest melodramatic successes ever seen in New York, and a half dozen other successful plays, "Who's Your Neighbor?" was directed by S. Rankin Drew, whose success as a director of super-features has been meteoric. The cast, including such well known favorites as Christine Mayo, Evelyn Brent, Anders Randolf, Frank Morgan and William Sherwood, was chosen carefully with a view to complete harmony of all the characters.

TRIANGLE PROGRAM JULY 8

Louise Glaum and William Desmond Stars—Bessie Love in Circus Story—Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct"

Louise Glaum in "A Strange Transgressor" and William Desmond in "Time Locks and Diamonds" are featured on the Triangle program for the week of July 8.

As Lola Montrose in "A Strange Transgressor," Miss Glaum gives a sympathetic delineation of a woman who has cared only for indolence and luxury until her maternal instinct causes her to make a great sacrifice for the life of her little son.

The star is supported by an exceptional cast of players, including J. Barney Sherry, May Giraci, Colin Chase and Dorcas Matthews. The extraordinary gowns worn by Miss Glaum and the magnificent settings required by the story lend aesthetic qualities to the vigorous drama.

In "Time Locks and Diamonds" William Desmond appears as "Silver Jim" Farrel, a gentleman whose robberies have annoyed the police from New York to Rome. In order to raise money for a former associate, "Silver Jim" calmly removes a famous diamond necklace from under the eyes of its owners. This is his last theft, however, for he is taken voluntary captive by a woman.

A new leading woman, Gloria Hope, makes her entrance to Triangle pictures as the sister of "Silver Jim." Others who have important roles are Robert McKim, Rowland Lee, Mildred Harris, George Beranger, Thomas Guise and Milton Ross.

Due to a change of schedule, "The Sawdust Ring," the widely-heralded circus play starring Bessie Love, will be released the week of July 15 instead of July 29. This will mark the first appearance of the girl star since "Cheerful Givers," and is said to be the most elaborate production in which she has ever been featured. Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct" will be the other attraction on the program. Margery Wilson, who has been promoted to stardom, will appear in support of Miss Bennett.

"Deemster" in Foreign Market

India, Burma, Ceylon and Brazil figured in recent territorial sales on Hall Caine's "The Deemster." David P. Howells bought the rights to the first named three countries and the Pan American Trading Company the rights to Brazil.

Foreign territory on "The Deemster" seems to be going faster than anything else in the market. Practically every country that is open to a venture of this nature has been disposed of by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corp. and J. Frank Brockliss.

"Live in the atmosphere of the character to be played," has evidently become the motto of Jack Sherrill, the popular Frohman Amusement Corporation juvenile star. For the past three weeks, since the completion of his enacting of the leading juvenile role in the Author's Film Corporation production of Otto Hauerbach's sensational Broadway play, "The Silent Witness," young Sherrill has been hard at work under the tutelage of a prominent ex-lightweight champion of the padded ring, putting himself in shape for the lead which he will play in a coming Frohman super-produc-

Advocates Short Films for Summer

One need be no prophet to bespeak success for the activities fostered by H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, whose personality is reflected in the remarkably good work his concern is accomplishing.

H. C. Allen, producing Motoy comedies.

An invitation to express his opinion upon the industry in general and the "Motoy Comedies" in particular met with the breezy and willing response that might have been anticipated. He said:

All that has been accomplished in pictures dwarfs before the tremendous future that lies in proper film interpretation of the work of masters in thought and literature—not "high brow" stuff, which has only an academic appeal to the few, but the great big human appeal expressed in the "mental vernacular of the people."

The productions of George Beban, for instance, are delightful portrayals of life; there is nothing trashy about them and they represent a type of picture we want more of. Humanity, like individuals, is interested in itself; the very fact that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives creates a lively interest in any accurate, artistic portrayal of life.

Motoy Comedies, for instance, are in harmony with the opinion I have expressed insomuch as they are perfectly wholesome, but on other grounds they have a wide-open appeal to all classes of people. Remember, the child is the father of the man and any man or woman who has lost interest in children or has lost contact with that delightful other world in which the child mind lives, is lost.

Motoy Comedies appeal to all right thinking people and draw desirable audiences; they have a universal appeal by virtue of their fascinating interest and the ingenuity of their production. It pays a compliment to an audience to assume that they have a lively interest in things that pertain to life. Only recently an experience in a well-known suburban theater proved this. At an afternoon show, fostered by the women of the community, the exhibitor, either through an error of judgment or atrocious taste, put on a reel that soon developed a dance hall scene with a bar-room and all its concomitants. Some of the ladies in the audience began at once to gather their chickens under their wings preparatory to an immediate departure. The picture was snapped off instantly and a Motoy Comedy was put on; the delight of the audience both adult and juvenile was audibly expressed in no unmistakable manner.

The success of Motoy Comedies lies in the fact that they get quite away from similarity to anything else in the motion picture field. The dolls are well selected; animation is carefully done and the pictures are not long enough to tire. They are crisp and refreshing.

And this is a matter that exhibitors should bear carefully in mind with the approach of the hot summer months. They will be well advised to go more into the open market and avoid booking long features at high prices. Good class stuff with a wide appeal and not long drawn out, will keep the theaters well filled in the hottest weather. Fans are too occupied with the problems of their own fatigue and inconvenience from the heat to add the complicated problems of certain feature films to their own troubles.

"Little Fairy Fix-It," a five-reel production starring Ella Hall, has just been completed at the Bluebird studios.

Vitagraph's latest Aniti Stewart feature, "The Message of the Mouse," released July 9. It is a timely story of intrigue.

ANITA STEWART IN NEW PLAY

Star Has Advantageous Role in "The Message of the Mouse," Vitagraph Patriotic Feature to be Released July 9

On July 9, Greater Vitagraph will present Anita Stewart, the popular star, in a George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester drama of timely interest called "The Message of the Mouse." In this story, which exposes the debased methods employed by unscrupulous international agents, Miss Stewart has one of the most advantageous roles of her conspicuously successful career. She plays the part of Wynn Winthrop, who is the incarnation of feminine patriotism, and whose love for country causes her to be precipitated into the seething midst of intriguers, and enmeshes her in their machinations.

The story tells of five foreign ambassadors, representing as many bankrupt European nations, who formulate a plan to divert fifty billions of capital from America for use in the rebuilding of their countries.

The conspirators' hopes lie in winning Henry Winthrop and his associates, representing billions of capital, from an American marine proposition to an international steamship trust, offering unprecedented concessions as bait. As a preliminary to their proposal, they seek to learn the plans of the American syndicate and in order to obtain this information, employ an unscrupulous intriguer, Hallam Varris, known only as "The Rose" to his subordinates in the spy system.

He contrives to be invited as a guest at a house party in the Winthrop home, using Marcia Elmore, a woman confederate, for his sponsor.

The last night of the house party, Varris has a Winthrop shipyard, near the Winthrop country place, blown up and under cover of the excitement obtains the plans sought.

The night of the explosion part of a message Varris has written to his woman confederate was picked up by a mouse and carried into the room of Wynn. It bore the sign of the rose and words that were to her meaningless. She tossed it into the fire.

With Winthrop's plans in their hands, Varris and the ambassadors proceed with their scheme and win over Winthrop and his associates. The Americans quietly begin withdrawing their capital from scores of institutions they control. Panic, labor riots and bank runs ensue. At this juncture Wynn pleads with her father as an American and a patriot to step in and check the disaster which he does.

That night the mouse appears again and it recalls to her the mysterious paper and the explosion. Connecting the two, she goes to the secret service and tells the chief of a suspicion that the explosion was connected with the economic disasters now under way. At his suggestion, she has another house party and invites everyone who attends the first. By watching Varrie and the woman, Marcia Elmore, she learns that they are the conspirators.

Included in Miss Stewart's supporting cast are such well known players as Julia Swayne Gordon, L. Rogers Lytton, Robert Gaillard and Franklyn Hanna.

King Bee's Young Director

Directors, like poets, are born, not made. It is in the nature of things that Arvid Gillstrom, whose very successful King Bee Billy West comedies are the talk of the picture field just now, should go far. To comparative youth he adds energy and ambition as well as success. He has made fifty comedies of a remarkable type.

Arvid E. Gillstrom, director of King Bee comedies.

Mr. Gillstrom has chosen the technique of picture production as his life work and study. He labors hard, knows dramatic values in his stories, casts with great care, and directs so that everybody understands exactly what he wants of them.

"Gilly" is universally popular. He recently married the lovely young "queen," Ethel Burton. And in course of time he hopes to quit comedy for work with big dramatic twelve-reelers.

He will undoubtedly succeed in his ambition. To personally know this able and industrious young director is to feel sure that he will ultimately do some very unusual work.

Scenes Filmed from Aeroplane

Edward Earle is doing some flying in making scenes for his first Vitagraph picture, "For France." Wesley Ruggles, who is directing the production with Mr. Earle and Betty Howe in the leading roles, has made arrangements to use a battleplane for many of the scenes in the picture.

In the first set of aerial pictures, Mr. Ruggles will act as his own cameraman, as the machine he has obtained will only carry a pilot and two passengers, being of the type now being used on the Ancre and other battlefields in Europe. He will have a regular licensed pilot to drive the machine, and Earle will act as a machine gun operator and scout. To get close-ups of Earle in action, he has had a special camera platform built on the machine, and in addition to posing Earle, he will operate the camera. Later, he plans to take battle scenes from the aeroplane as the machine flies over the armies fighting on the ground.

For the taking of exteriors for "Richard the Brazen," a forthcoming Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, Julian Detmer, a millionaire textile manufacturer, turned over his magnificent estate, "Edgewood," at Tarrytown-on-Hudson. The Vitagraph Company, headed by Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, made numerous trips there and on each occasion they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Detmer.

"The House of Gloom" is the working title of a five-reel mystery photodrama being filmed at Universal City.

Vitagraph Changes

Don Bartlett, formerly advertising manager for the Triangle Distributing Corporation, has joined the publicity department of Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., taking the place of Gordon Lawrence who has been transferred to the sales promotion department of the organization.

Mr. Lawrence takes the place in the sales promotion department of Leon Bamberger, whose resignation took effect on June 23.

H. J. Bayley, manager of the Omaha Exchange for V. L. S. E., has been transferred to take charge of the Minneapolis branch taking the place made vacant through the resignation of W. K. Howard. Mr. Bayley started to work for V. L. S. E. as salesman at the Cleveland branch and worked his way to branch manager.

L. A. Getzler has been appointed manager of the Omaha branch, succeeding Mr. Bayley.

George Balsdon, Jr., manager of the St. Louis V. L. S. E. exchange has been transferred to New York as assistant manager of the New York exchange to assist his father. This change was made owing to the New York City conditions.

H. C. McLaughlin has been appointed manager of the Cincinnati V. L. S. E. exchange, succeeding S. W. Hatch.

Criticisms Free to Exhibitors

Exhibitors who contemplate showing "The Deemster" with Derwent Hall Caine in the stellar role, will do well to write to the press department of the Arrow Film Corporation, 1204 Times Bldg., New York, for a copy of the giant sheet of criticisms on the big Hall Caine feature.

A remarkable assortment of favorable criticisms from metropolitan daily papers all over the country has been assembled and reproduced intact and is now ready for distribution among exhibitors. The sheet can be used around the theater and should be instrumental in creating a healthy demand for admissions. Write for it.

"Submarine Eye" Succeeding

"The Submarine Eye" has met with considerable success in Canada, so much so that the bookings in Montreal and Toronto have been extended for an additional week in each city. There has been such a great demand for the picture that A. J. Small, manager of the Canadian circuit, bought the picture for Hamilton, and will exhibit it at the Grand Opera House in that city.

"The Submarine Eye" is enjoying the same popularity in Ohio, and the manager of the Grand Opera House, Columbus, has booked a second week. The Studebaker Theater, Chicago, has also extended its run.

Very little territory remains to be disposed of, and the Williamson Brothers are now devoting their attention to their next picture which will be released early in 1918.

"What Money Can't Buy," an adaptation of George Broadhurst's popular play of that name, starring Jack Pickford and Louise Huff, will be released by Paramount on July 16.

"The Slacker," Production De Luxe

"The Slacker," Metro's great seven-reel patriotic photodrama written and directed by William Christy Cabanne, will be issued soon as a special production de luxe. Emily Stevens is the star of this feature, and her artistry has combined with the directing genius of Cabanne to produce a masterpiece. "The Slacker" has a powerful story, of special appeal to Americans at this time, dealing with conditions as they are today and as they must be faced. In "The Slacker" Margaret Christy, Emily Stevens, helps her husband to solve his own problem, as wives throughout America will help their busbands and friends to solve theirs. "The Slacker" is a play that will build patriots.

In addition to a story of force and interest, the production reviews the great events of the nation's history, making a panorama of brave deeds. George Washington, Nathan Hale, Paul Revere, Grant, Lincoln, Francis Scott Key and other patriots are pictured, in the most vital moments of their careers. All the allied nations engaged in the present conflict are also represented in patriotic array.

However, the central thought, is the most important thing in "The Slacker" and is powerfully driven home in the story of Robert Wallace, played by Walter Miller, who marries in order to escape military duty. The examples of his younger brother and his best friend, who enlist respectively in the army and the navy, fail to move him. But his wife, daughter of a long line of patriots, arouses his sense of honor, and accomplishes the regeneration that makes a man of him. Reverently he kisses the flag for which he has sworn to give his life.

As Margaret Christy, Miss Stevens has the opportunity of her distinguished career. Walter Miller as "the slacker," Leo Delaney as the friend, Eugene Borden as the sailor-lad, Millicent Fisher as a society girl working for the Red Cross, are among those from whom fine pieces of characterization may be expected.

Various glimpses of "The Slacker," Metro's coming production featuring Emily Stevens. The figures represent the countries at war, and everybody knows "The Spirit of '76," represented in the circle.

New General Exchanges

As a result of the expansion inaugurated by General Manager Harold Bolster in the General Film Company's volume of product, the order has gone out for the opening of three exchanges in as many different cities not now used as distributing centers.

The three new exchanges will be announced soon. It was found necessary to provide them to relieve other exchanges of pressure of business arising out of the larger product being handled.

General Sales Manager S. R. Kent is at present engaged in organizing the staffs of the new exchanges and arranging quarters.

"Sudden Jim" Not Special

Since the announcement that Triangle was to produce "Sudden Jim," the Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Buddington Kelland, now one of the best sellers among novels, many inquiries have been made by exhibitors and fans as to when it will be released and whether or not it will be on the regular program. The date of release has been set for July 22. Although the picture may exceed the standard five-reel length, it will be a program feature.

This play promises to be the biggest box office attraction of the year. Millions read the story when it appeared in the Post and millions more have read it since it appeared in novel form.

Furthermore, it will present Charles Ray in a totally different role than those which he has formerly played. Despite the fact that Ray has played weaklings and "clodhoppers" almost exclusively he stands today among the four or five most popular male stars of the screen. In "Sudden Jim" he will have the opportunity to project his own personality without handicap. He is to be a red-blooded, fighting American, described in the story as "a cub altruist" and "hell on wheels."

Junk Paper Harms Business

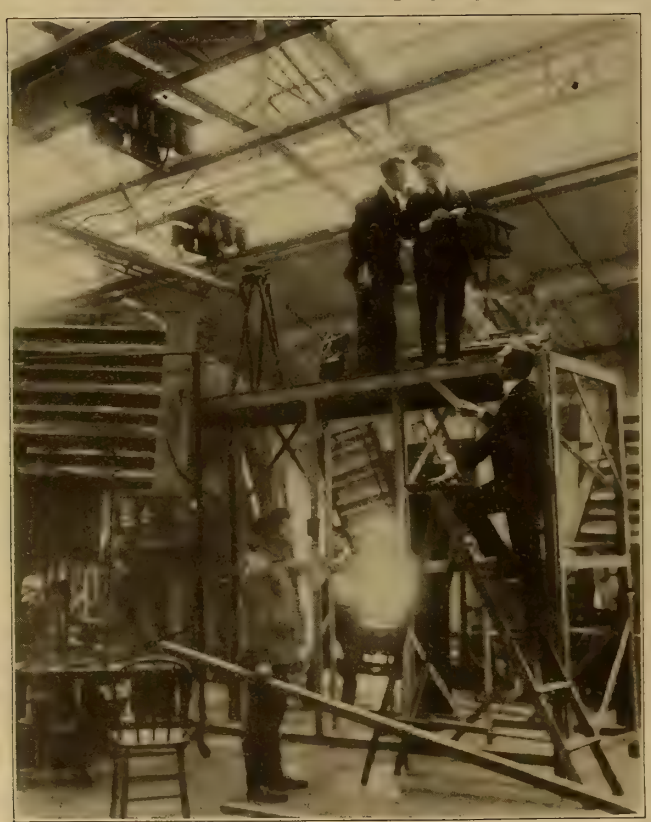
"What's the paper like?" is one of the first questions the up-to-date state rights buyer asks of the man who wants him to take his pictures. Let us suppose it to be a $100,000 feature with a Broadway star. "What's the paper like?" Or a comedy. The same question. The state rights buyer knows that the measure of the impression made by the paper on an exhibitor is the measure of the picture's pulling power, or at any rate largely so. It is chiefly the paper which gets an audience together for the first time.

Does the exhibitor attach the same absolute and relative importance to the paper as the state rights buyer? Most people off-hand would say that he does, but Nat H. Spitzer, vice-president and general manager of the King Bee Films Corporation, is of a contrary opinion.



"The exhibitor," said Mr. Spitzer when questioned on this subject recently, "only too frequently allows himself to be misled in this important matter. He slurs over the question of the paper. He does not put out fresh, bright paper with every picture he books."

"But is that practicable?" Mr. Spitzer was asked.

"Undoubtedly. Mounted paper, for that is where the trouble originates, is not essential; it is not even advisable! It gets dirtier and dirtier with each booking. Dirty paper prejudices a picture because it repels the public. Mounted paper is a great convenience if it is kept clean and shown clean. But it rarely is, except on first runs."

"Lookout Tower" in Studio

A "lookout tower" is used at the Metro-Rolfe studios to enable the director to see every square inch of floor space. Director Carewe's orders are issued by megaphone from this height, from which he calls directions to the 150 actors and actresses playing in the scenes.

"Lookout tower" used in Metro-Rolfe studio.

The "tower" is a vantage point not only for the director but for the photographer as well. The cameraman is able to get views of the entire distance of 125 feet of space visible in an important scene such as an elaborate ball in progress, the great ballroom filled with dancers, the reception room beyond, and a balcony at the further end, giving a view of the whole.

Art Dramas Ahead of Schedule

With productions completed over a month in advance of their release dates, and with others for summer issuance in work, the four studios contributing to Art Dramas program are keeping hard at work at intensive methods of picture making.

At the Apollo studio "When You and I Were Young" is practically completed, although it is not due for release until the middle of July. This week work will be begun on the next Apollo, which has as a working title "Behind the Mask," and which is dated for release the last week of August.

At the Van Dyke studio "Miss Deception," from the story by Joseph Franklin Poland, is being put into shape by Eugene Nowland, who was recently engaged to direct Jean Sothern in this picture In this Miss Sothern has a role of a new sort, which she is handling admirably, according to advance information.

Two pictures are in work at the Erbograph studio. These are "The Road Between," which is being made by Joseph Levering with Marian Swayne in the leading role, and "The Millstone," from the story by Albert Payson Terhune, which Ben M. Goetz is directing. The first of these is nearly finished, while the latter has just been started.

The U. S. Amusement studios are occupied principally with the production of "The Peddler," with Joe Welch in the title role.

"Jack and the Beanstalk"

"Jack and the Beanstalk," the first of the Fox Kiddie Features, will be revealed in all its enchantment at a big Broadway theater within a short time.

The ten reels of "Jack and the Beanstalk" in its completed form represent the result of cutting and assembling from miles of celluloid. Inclusive of the months spent in the erection of the massive settings, and the time devoted to preparation of the long 'script and the casting of several hundred children for various parts in the magnificent pictorial fantasy, it is estimated that practically one year was needed for the film.

The two principals in the cast are a little boy and a little girl who, having heard the tale of the ferocious giant and his depredations, decide to seek the enchanted forest which contains the towering beanstalk.

They slip away from home and go into the woods. Weariness overcomes them and the vision which arises follows the traditional lines.

The tiny city of the villagers is a thing of marvelous ingenuity. One of the picture's features is the town's destruction by the giant.

Patriotic outbursts will probably lift the roofs from many a motion picture theater during the next few weeks when Gaumont's Mutual Weekly No. 130 is shown. This reel of news pictures has views of the first Americans to leave Paris for the front under the stars and stripes.

LASKY SCHEDULE PRETENTIOUS

Thirteen Stars in Twenty-seven Photoplays to Be Completed by September—"Star Series" Selective Booking Schedule Announced

With the departure for California of Jesse L. Lasky, in charge of production of Famous Players-Lasky pictures, announcement is made of the photoplays in course of making or completed to be released through Paramount during the late summer and early autumn months under its new "star series" selective booking plan.

Thirteen of the foremost and most popular stars on the screen will appear in film versions of the writings of many of the greatest authors and playwrights of the past and present.

The plays of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero are recognized as being among the highest contributions to the drama made by any Englishman of the present century. The Pinero play which has been selected by Famous Players-Lasky is his great comedy, "The Amazons," in which Marguerite Clark is to star in the role of Lady Thomasine.

A Mark Twain production of perhaps his greatest and most popular story, "Tom Sawyer," will be made with an all-star boy cast headed by that already popular pair, Jack Pickford and Louise Huff.

W. Somerset Maugham, the distinguished English dramatist whose plays have been successfully received both here and abroad, was recently engaged by Famous Players-Lasky to prepare photoplays especially for its stars. The first of Mr. Maugham's photodramatic contributions will be an adaptation of his own popular play, "The Land of Promise," in which Billie Burke will star. Miss Burke won a distinguished personal success in the stage version of the play a few years ago.

George Broadhurst's popular success, "What Money Can't Buy," has already been adapted by Famous Players-Lasky with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff as leads. Madame Petrova will star in an adaptation of "The Law of the Land."

The "Sub-Deb" series current in the Saturday Evening Post, and written by Mary Roberts Rinehart, are being adapted with Marguerite Clark in the role of the adorable Bab. There will be several of these "Sub-Deb" stories, the first of which will be known as "Bab's Burglar."

Wallace Irwin has been induced to convert "Hashimura Togo" to the screen and Sessue Hayakawa, the well-known Japanese actor, has been appropriately assigned to the stellar role.

Owen Johnson's "Tennessee Shad" and "The Varmint" are being adapted for the screen, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff in the stellar roles.

For Billie Burke, Famous Players-Lasky has chosen Gelett Burgess' story, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," a remarkable tale of adventure which will mark Miss Burke's first appearance in Paramount Pictures, this to be followed by "The Land of Promise," already mentioned, and a third production, the name of which has not yet been decided upon. It is also worthy of note that Gelett Burgess in collaboration with Carolyn Wells, has written a story in which Julian Eltinge, famous feminine impersonator, will make his photoplay debut. It is called "Mrs. Raffles' Career," and is a story of the adventures of a near-society woman and a near-burglaress.

George Middleton, who has contributed a number of original stories and notable adaptations of stage plays to Paramount pictures, will be represented by an adaptation of "A Wife's Strategy," which will star Pauline Frederick. Miss Frederick will also be featured in "The Show Down," which was written for her by Hector Turnbull.

Beulah Marie Dix's contribution to the screen will be "The Ghost House," starring Jack Pickford and Louise Huff.

Charles Kenyon, another notable figure in the world of letters, is the author of "Mexicali Mae," a story of the Mexican border, in which Fannie Ward will star. Miss Ward will also be featured in "The Sunset Trail," by Alice McIver, and in "The Lure of Crooning Waters," by Marion Hill.

Wallace Reid is to star in "The Thing We Love," which was especially written for him by H. B. and M. G. Daniel. George Beban has already completed "Lost in Transit," a unique conception, which presents him in an entirely new light. Vivian Martin is to star in "Little Miss Optimist" and in "The Dogie." Miss Martin will also appear in "Molly Shawn," a delightful Irish characterization.

Madame Petrova during this period will play in "The Lotus Lady," written by herself. "Exile" will be another Petrova picture.

The four studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are all being utilized to their fullest capacity in preparing these productions for release. Many of them are already completed. In the production of these photoplays, the same skillful and talented artists who have contributed so many notable productions to Paramount will be in individual charge, with Cecil B. De Mille supervising the activities of the west coast, and Albert Kaufman serving in like capacity in the east.

We have heard exhibitors remark that actors sometimes make monkeys of themselves. Here's a monkey who made an actor out of himself. Joe was captured by a Universal contract—or by the Universal girls.

"The Brand of Satan" is the current World-Picture Brady-Made, in which Montague Love is the star player. The story is laid in Paris, partly in surroundings of luxury and partly in the underground dives which are the resort of criminals of the most degraded kind. The principal personage has inherited a criminal taint from his father, an escaped murderer, and this supplies the singularly strong psychological interest of the drama.

FILM CONTAINERS

National Association Members Consider Specifications for Film Shipments Proposed by the Bureau of Explosives—Proposed Changes

The Transportation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has held an important meeting at the headquarters in the Times building for the purpose of considering the specifications which have been proposed for film containers by the Bureau of Explosives.

William L. Sherrill, president, Frohman Amusement Corporation, presided as chairman, the following companies being represented: Paramount Pictures Corporation, Allan Rock; Metro Pictures Corporation, W. E. Atkinson; Goldwyn Pictures, R. E. Blaisdell; Artcraft Pictures, H. S. Clark; Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., A. I. Segal; Pathe Exchange, A. E. Rousseau; E. I. S. Dixon, Boardman; World Film Corp., G. J. Shaefer; William L. Sherry Feature Film Co., J. C. Clark.

Walter S. Topping, assistant chief inspector of the Bureau of Explosives, explained the purpose of the specifications and several new types of film shipping cases which in many respects are approved by the Bureau of Explosives, were inspected by the representatives present.

A committee consisting of Allan Rock, of Paramount; H. S. Clark, Artcraft, and A. I. Segal, V. L. S. E., was appointed to submit various types of metal fasteners to be attached to the film cases so as to conform to the proposed regulations, as Inspector Topping stated that it was only a question of time when the use of the web or leather straps which are now used on film cases would be discontinued.

It was estimated that there are about fifty thousand of the square type of film cases now in use by the various branches of the industry, and it is the desire of the committee to devise plans for continuing the use of these cases by conforming to the new specifications, thereby saving the distributing companies and exchanges many thousands of dollars during the year.

A draft of the proposed new specifications for film cases as submitted follows:

PROPOSED AMENDED PARAGRAPH 43

SPECIFICATION FOR MOTION PICTURE FILM CONTAINERS

43. (a) Motion picture films must be packed in inside metal or fiber containers complying with Specification No. 32, and with not more than 1 reel (1,000 feet or less) in each inside container. These inside containers must be packed in strong and tight outside wooden boxes, or in sparkproof metal boxes complying with Specification No. 32.

SHIPPING CONTAINER SPECIFICATION NO. 32

Effective ..... 1917

1. Inside containers used for the shipment of motion picture films, positives or negatives, must comply with the following specifications:

METAL CANS

2. Metal containers must be made of metal not lighter than 30 gauge, U. S. Standard (.0125 inch thick).

FIBER CANS

3. Fiber inside containers must be made of strong and tough vegetable fiber so interwoven as to afford strength and resiliency, and must be not less than 1/16th inch thick. The containers must be so treated as to make them heat-resisting and moisture proof.

COVERS

4. The covers must fit tightly with a lap of not less than ¾ inch, and if necessary to insure tightness, an adhesive strip of tough paper or other suitable material must be used.

OUTSIDE WOODEN BOXES OR CASES

5. Boxes must be made of good, sound, white pine, or any wood of equal or superior strength, dry and well seasoned and without loose knots, or knots liable to get loose in any part. Boxes must be of sufficient strength to carry contents without rupture from shocks incident to ordinary transportation.

OUTSIDE METAL BOXES, CANS, ETC.

6. Metal boxes, cases or cans must be made of sheet iron not less than .02 inch thick, and must be lined throughout with hard fiber board at least one-eighth inch thick, or with some other equivalent insulating material, approved for this purpose by the Bureau of Explosives.

COVERS

7. Covers may be permanently attached to metal boxes, cases or cans by not less than two hinges, or they may be slip covers, closely fitting. The covers must be lined with insulating material of the same character and thickness as required for the body of the container.

Hinge covers must fit tightly against the shoulder of, and lap over the body, or fit tightly inside the body, not less than seven-eighths inch on all sides. A strong metal clasp must fit over staple or eye bolt, and must be provided with a permanent, non-detachable catch to engage in staple or eye bolt.

Telescope or slip covers must fit tightly against the shoulder of, and must lap over or inside the body not less than one and one-half inches. A strong metal strap, permanently secured at one side of the box, must pass over the top of cover, and engage over a staple or eye bolt on the opposite side of box, to which it must be secured by a permanent non-detachable catch. This strap must securely hold the cover in its proper position, so that the sides lap their full depth over or inside the box proper. Leather or web straps will not be permitted.

MARKING

8. Each inside metal or fiber can, and each outside container must be marked to show compliance with this specification. Boxes must be plainly marked with the words "Complies with I. C. C. Spec'n No. 32," or, if desired, this marking may be indicated by a symbol consisting of a rectangle as follows:

I. C. C.-32

The letters and figures in this symbol must be at least one-half-inch high.

This symbol shall be understood to certify that the package complies with all the requirements of this specification.

When offered for shipment the package must also bear such other description as may be required by the I. C. C. Regulations for the particular article contained therein.

Costly Settings in "Masked Heart"

A mysterious woman with a grey mask entirely concealing her features and a wealthy young man who, becoming bored by his easy victories over women, starts out to find an elusive woman whom he can pursue, are the principal characters in "The Masked Heart," the American-Mutual production starring William Russell, which will be released on July 2. The masked woman proves to be a married woman with a delight in flirtations and many complications result which arouse even the blase society man.

There are two magnificent sets in the production, one an immense ball room in which hundreds of dancers in masquerade costumes make a gay scene and divide their time between dancing and merry battles in which confetti and serpentines form the ammunition. Surrounding the dancing floor are boxes filled with beautifully gowned women watching the revelers.

The other unusual scene is a large dinner party where the guests are entertained by a dancing nymph. The center of the table is arranged as a glass stage illuminated from beneath by electric lights, and it is upon this stage that the dancer performs.

Helen Gibson, famous screen daredevil, is working in her second production at Universal City under the direction of J. D. Davis. This picture is being filmed under the working title of "Under False Pretenses."

O. HENRY SERIES INCREASED

Unexampled Bookings Cause Four Additions to Be Made to Series—Rival Five-Reel Features for Drawing Power

Owing to the success of the O. Henry two-reel pictures, General Film announces the original series of sixteen has been increased to twenty. Instead of booking only the sixteen subjects of these Broadway Star Features first contracted for, exhibitors all over the country will have four more available before the two-reel series is complete.

The first ten of the series has been distributed, and General Film has begun on the second ten. This second lot will include these titles: "No Story," "The Love Philtre of Ikey Schoenstein," "A Departmental Case," "Strictly Business," "Specks of Garnered Fruit," "Discounters of Money," "The Coming Out of Maggie," "The Venturers," "The Best Seller" and "The Lonesome Road."

General Sales Manager S. R. Kent has comprehensive reports on the bookings of the O. Henry series which show that in the San Francisco district a seating capacity of 20,000 was booked for the first runs in a few weeks. It included such houses as the fine new Rialto of 2,000 capacity in San Francisco, the Valencia of the same city, 1,000; the Franklin in Oakland, 1,000; the Strand in Fresno, 1,000, and 32 others.

In Los Angeles the Alhambra was the center of sensational press notices for the merit of these two-reelers. Among other big theaters in this district using the O. Henrys is the Columbia of Phoenix, Arizona and the Cabrillo of San Diego, California. The earlier bookings in the Dallas, Texas, district included the Crystal of that city and the Wigwam of San Antonio, and dozens of the best houses throughout that country.

Similar cordiality was displayed in the Kansas City and Denver district.

The Chicago district seating capacity represented 50,000 in the first few weeks of bookings and was led in size by the Logan Square, Cosmopolitan, Crawford, Bryn Mawr, Harvard, Douglas and Chicago Avenue Theaters. St. Louis had the Pageant, Mozart, Olympia, Marquette and many others from the beginning.

The J. H. Kunsky houses in Detroit liked these tabloid features so much that some of them were run two weeks instead of one week, and some of the out-of-town houses ran them a week instead of three days.

This territory, like most of the others, is booked heavily in the principal theaters, and several weeks ago had reached 39 contracts.

In Buffalo, the Palace, 1,200; the Olympic, 1,400; the Victoria, 1,600; the Regent, 1,200, and Morgan, Auburn, New York; Regent, Rochester, 1,600; Strand, Syracuse, 1,800; Columbia, Erie, Pennsylvania; Lumberg, Niagara Falls, New York, and Grand, Bradford, Pennsylvania, 1,000, were some of the notable hosts to O. Henry. The Wilkes-Barre district boasted at the outset 9,500 seating capacity.

Philadelphia had O. Henry in the Stanley V. Mastbaum houses, including the Stanley, 1,800; the Palace, 1,000; and at Atlantic City the Colonial, 1,500. There were also the Liberty, 1,000; the Lafayette, 1,000, the Germantown, 1,000; the Model, 1,000, and the Frankford, 1,500. The Philadelphia district bookings in the first month totaled 40,000 seating capacity, and like all the others increased as the popularity of the O. Henry pictures made itself felt.

In the New York district the Majestic, 1,800; Proctor's Twenty-eighth Street, 1,500; Strand on Broadway 3,000 and in Brooklyn Alhambra 1,200; Duffield, 1,200; Rialto 1,200, Summer, 1,200, are a few of the representative theaters showing the O. Henry pictures.

Prosperity Now Due

That the state rights market is reflecting the beginning of a tremendous business boom is the opinion of Frank Hall, who is rapidly closing contracts with buyers of territorial rights for the special Edgar Lewis production, "The Bar Sinister," and the A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc. Jane Grey feature, "Her Fighting Chance." Mr. Hall says:

When the country decided upon conscription sudden check was noticed in the closing of contracts for territory. A spirit of indecision seemed to be prevalent for a few days but it was really remarkable how quickly business settled back into its usual channels and buyers became even more active than before the slump. Judging from the live interest now being shown in the disposition of territory for "The Bar Sinister" and "Her Fighting Chance," the independent exchanges of the country are equipped to take care of a large number of new state right pictures and are preparing for a strenuous mid-summer drive for business. While pictures with a special advertising angle seem to appeal to buyers most strongly, producers making all high class features should have little trouble selling them at a fair profit.

I share the belief of many of our leading financial experts that this country is entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity and since the show business is one of the first to profit by good times, it is natural that motion picture men should be preparing for a rich harvest about to be reaped.

With everybody working and tremendous sums of money in circulation it is a foregone conclusion that the capacity of our theaters will be inadequate to hold the crowds seeking relaxation and amusement. Exchanges will quickly profit by the prosperity of the theaters and the large demand for good pictures will keep the state rights buyers continually on the alert for new ones.

With this condition in mind many successful exchange men are preparing for a marked increase in business and are therefore showing an interest in state right offering which is exceptional for this season of the year.

"Peacock Woman" of Triangle

Those who have watched the career of Louise Glaum, famous as "the peacock woman" of Triangle pictures, are amazed at the development in her art. From an ingenue of an obscure stock company she has developed into one of the leading emotional actresses of the screen.

"Why Girls Leave Home" was the first play in which she appeared. Then she went into a Chicago stock company. Even at that time people prophesied a future for the girl with the curious personality, the flurry of short curled hair, and the alluring, elfish smile. But none dreamed she would attain success in "vampire" roles.

When she entered pictures it was to continue playing the sweet girl parts in wild western comedies. She was ambitious, never satisfied with such characterizations. Finally she convinced her directors that she could play sirens. Her success in "The Wolf Woman" was instant. She was hailed by some critics as "the vampire supreme."

Still she was not satisfied. She wanted to play parts with a meaning, to appeal to the emotions and sympathies of the public. Her opportunity came with "Sweetheart of the Doomed." Her delineation was little short of a triumph in emotional acting. This was followed by another sympathetic part, that of "Nan" in "Love or Justice." Now Triangle will present her in the title role of "A Strange Transgressor," pictured by J. G. Hawks from the story by John Lynch, one that will fully test her power.

She is to symbolize motherhood, proving that maternal affection is the most influential passion of the world, so great that it dominates even the most selfish and debased woman.

Deemster Selling

Several big deals involving foreign and domestic rights to Hall Caine's "The Deemster," starring Derwent Hall Caine, were closed during the past week by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation.

Harris P. Wolfberg, representing a coterie of midwest capitalists, bought the rights to Ohio, West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania.

The Apex Films, Ltd., of London, through its New York representative, Mr. J. Simonds, purchased the South African rights.

No Padding for King Bee

Exhibitors who complain that many of the features that are offered to them contain a great deal of padding and comparatively little action, exempt the King Bee comedies which are achieving such astonishing popularity just now, from the criticism. If even these Billy West comedies did not excite the most extravagant hilarity they would "hold" simply because they are packed with action—action which springs as it were from the thread of the story.

"The reason for this is simple," said Louis Burstein, the president and general manager of the King Bee Film Corporation. "Our two-reelers are cut down from several thousand feet of developed negative. We are not needlessly extravagant; but we don't stint raw stock.

"And then you will notice that King Bee comedies have very few sub-titles, and those that are employed are short and to the point. It is my aim in supervising these pictures to assure that every foot of the action will be understood in every part of the world, no matter where the pictures are shown."

Vitagraph Summer Releases

V. L. S. E., the distributing organization for Greater Vitagraph productions, has completed its Summer release schedule, including four big features for the month of August, and already is getting its Fall program under way. The Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. list for July includes five Blue Ribbon features, in which five sets of stars will be presented, and is made up as follows:

July 2—"Caste," featuring Peggy Hyland and Sir John Hare, the famous English character actor.

July 9—"The Message of the Mouse," a play by George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester, featuring Anita Stewart.

July 16—"The Stolen Treaty," featuring Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith.

July 23—"Richard the Brazen," featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey.

July 30—"By Right of Possession," featuring Antonio Moreno and Mary Anderson.

The August schedule is as follows:—

August 6—"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," with Sir George Alexander and Hilda Moore, both celebrated English artists.

August 13—"Mary Jane's Pa," featuring Marc MacDermott and Mildred Manning.

August 20—"Transgression," featuring Earle Williams.

August 27—"The Divorcee," featuring Mary Anderson.

These features already have been completed and Greater Vitagraph is working overtime at both its Brooklyn and Hollywood plants on its Autumn and Winter product. In addition to its regular weekly Blue Ribbon feature of five reels, the company will release in the early Fall a super-picture, "Who Goes There?," by Robert W. Chambers.

Screencraft Titles

The American Bioscope Corporation's slogan of "Don't Break Your Program with Slides," seems to have hit home handsomely. The sub-caption of "Good bye, boys, I'm through, sang the slide as he died," seems to have also stirred hundreds of exhibitors to action. J. E. Willis, president and general manager of the American Bioscope Corporation plant in Chicago reports having been forced to add three artists to the staff, building announcement trailers and special stage-sets for Screencraft titles.

The Exhibitor and The Story

THEATER MEN AND PRODUCERS SHOULD CO-OPERATE CLOSELY

By MILDRED CONSIDINE.

(Editor's Note: The following article is one of a series by Miss Considine which will appear in MOTOGRAPHY. These articles will deal with the vital story question from the angles of most interest and value to the exhibitor and producer. Miss Considine is an experienced scenario writer and is thoroughly familiar with every phase of the field.)

MORE about the story and the exhibitor, and then some more, for it is an endless tale. It embraces a question that is now a mere suggestion, but which will, in the very near future assume gigantic proportions, and make its presence felt in every branch of the business.

"Stories More Important Than Stars"

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., says:

"Stories are more important than stars, directors and details of production in the success of moving pictures. The motion picture, as has been said frequently, is the literature of the screen. Therefore, we can compare a picture to a novel, and the public would certainly rather read a good novel with poor illustrations than a poor novel with fine illustrations."

There must be some tangible solution to the problem that every producer has faced in the manufacture and production of pictures which have cost him thousands of dollars to make, and after an initial showing are thrust back on his hands also valueless. It would seem as if the exhibitor should play a much more important part in the distributing of pictures than he has done heretofore.

Abolishing a regular program is one means toward a better arrangement. An exhibitor should be allowed an unhampered choice in his selection of pictures, for surely he knows the audiences of his particular house much better than the producer does.

In the next place, the greatest menace to producers and exhibitors is the waste that covers every angle of the picture game, waste of time, money and good material.

Pictures Should Hold Screen for Longer Runs

When producers realize that it is absolutely necessary for them to reduce in quantity their productions and place the balance to the credit of quality, then a great problem will be solved. If a production is worth thousands of dollars in production, weeks of valuable time of the artists employed, the brains of numerous business men through whose hands it passes in its various stages, then it is surely worth the attention of a community for more than one night in a theater. It is folly, pure and simple, to rush a picture in and out of a theater when people have had barely time enough to realize that it is there. The picture of the future will probably play three nights at the smaller theaters and one week at the larger ones. There is no way out of this bigger and better arrangement.

It's Up to Exhibitor

When the exhibitor takes a more active part than he has previously done and insists that every picture that comes out of a producer's hands be made strong enough to hold the attention of a community for at least three nights, then, and then only, will the producer awaken to his shortcomings and do his share toward catering to the wants of the exhibitor, because the exhibitor holds the fate of the producer in his hands.

Let the exhibitor raise his prices. It must be done sooner or later, and it may mean that business will fall off for a short time, but the ultimate gain will more than cover any losses and establish his business on a firmer, and more profitable basis.

And it will mean the survival of the fittest! Fair, isn't it?

Back of all this looms the importance of the story! Every picture that comes out of a producer's hands should be based on a foundation as firm and reliable as the rock of Gibraltar, and without a good story this cannot be done!

Thomas H. Ince, who in my mind is one of the greatest benefactors to the picture public, inasmuch as he has given us not one or two notable productions but a myriad of fine pictures, should be a shining light to every other producer in the country. I believe Mr. Ince has gone farther in solving the great problem that is facing the industry today than most of his fellow producers.

Thomas H. Ince Talks

I asked Mr. Ince what he thought of the idea of allowing an exhibitor the right to see a brief synopsis of pictures before they are produced.

"I am not sure whether I get your meaning correctly, or not," Mr. Ince said, "but if you mean that an exhibitor should be fully advised as to the nature of a picture that he has contracted to show, I agree with you most emphatically. However, if you imply that the producer should, while a picture is being made tell the exhibitor what is being done, I can only say that it is impossible. The scripts are subject to innumerable changes, some are even abandoned and put aside. A picture has no existence until it issues from the studio in its perfected form and is ready for release.

"I could not give an exhibitor an idea of a picture before it was produced any more than I could furnish him with a photograph of a baby before it was born. What producers do strive to do is to furnish the exhibitor with a brief synopsis of the completed story as soon as possible. This we do at a great expense. The exhibitor is fully advised as to the nature of the story, whether comedy or tragedy, and how it can be placed before his patrons to the best advantage. As to the importance of the story, I think that there can be no difference of opinion between the producer and the exhibitor."

Advise Producer of Patron Demand

This coming from a man of Mr. Ince's knowledge of the film business, should awaken the exhibitor to the fact that there is one very important step to be taken before the producer allows himself to become imbued with even the embryo of an idea. The exhibitor must prepare himself to assume the leadership, for it is he who must dictate to the producer, and he is only capable of doing this when he thoroughly familiarizes himself with the wants of his patrons from every angle.

When the exhibitor is in a position to make the producer understand just what his audiences want, and the producer makes only such pictures, then and only then, will there be no question of dissatisfaction before, during or after production. The exhibitor will feel certain that the producer is working along the lines suggested by himself, and in this way, the producer will also be fortified. If he does otherwise, he will have to assume the losses incurred.

At the Triangle banquet in Chicago a short while ago, tendered to Wm. S. Hart, a speaker paid that actor a very flattering compliment. He dwelt upon the purity of Mr. Hart's characterizations, meaning not, as he explained, the moral fabric of them, but his strict adherence to type, a type that modernism has almost swallowed up in the maelstrom of progression, and which we can only get through the medium of an artist like Mr. Hart, a man who is serious and sincere, and insistant upon lending his genius only when he is sure that his efforts are expended in the right direction.

Mr. Exhibitor, it's up to you to demand the same kind of real stuff from the producers!

Actor and Director Talks

Hobart Henley, actor and director, told me that he had arrived at the conclusion that the sun had set upon the star's unquestioned rule.

"The people want sane stories of real life, built upon incidents and types, not around some star's ability," Mr. Henley said. "And in the future, I shall produce only pictures of this kind, pictures with real incidents scattered through them, gripping because they portray life as we all know it, and might have happened to any one of us, not pictures full of incomprehensible circumstances that have no mission other than to carry the threads of the story along to a smashing climax or punch which has mistakenly appropriated far more importance heretofore than it is entitled to have."

Mr. Exhibitor, why not write your favorite producer and let him know that you and your patrons want the best possible stories that can be had?

Universal Films Pershing in France

That the Universal Film Company's news-film camera man is keeping well abreast of the times, even a considerable distance in advance, is attested by the quick arrival in this country of a reel fresh from France containing an interesting list of the receptions and honors bestowed upon the American "man of the hour," General Pershing, on his arrival in that country. The pictures were rushed to America by a special courier, arriving here nearly a whole week in advance of those of any other company. Immediately on arrival a print was sent to the Capital for the benefit of President Wilson and other prints were rushed out to circulation depots all over the country. The film contains only that which is of the biggest interest at the present time. Among the different public welcomes that the American party received are shown the big reception in Boulogne at the hands of the Honor Guard of French Veterans and that at Paris where the people thronged so eagerly to get a glimpse of "the American" that the gendarmes had to use force. Here Pershing spoke from a balcony. The subtitles throughout are shaped for the purpose of engendering patriotism in this country, those at the last of the reel being particularly inciting to enlistment. Among the remarkable things about this Universal animated special are the many excellent poses of Pershing, some of them taken quite close. It is said that before the advent of this film no movie camera had caught a full view close-up of the distinguished American soldier.

New O. Henry Play

All the subtle humor of which O. Henry could boast is centered in the latest of his stories to be released through General Film in its series of 20 two-reel Broadway Star Features by this noted author. In "Strictly Business" the platonic relations of a pair of vaudeville artists, who travel together in a successful sketch, but who appear off stage on purely formal terms, is made the background for a great dramatic climax, followed by the inimitable comedy anti-climax which O. Henry uses with such galvanic effect in his short stories.

Alice Rodier, who plays the girl in "No Story," another recent O. Henry success, is seen as the vaudeville actress. J. Frank Clendon reappears in this Broadway Star Feature after his former good work in "The Marionettes, "Friends in San Rosario," etc.

Magnates See Goldwyn Circus

T. L. Tally of the West and Marcus Loew of the East met at the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee, New Jersey, last week and were photographed with Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and Alfred Weiss, vice-president of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, out "on the lot" where a pretentious circus spectacle which is featuring Mae Marsh's third play was being photographed.

The two motion picture magnates were among the hundreds of notables of the stage, screen and society who have journeyed across the Hudson river during the past week to see the biggest picture of the current season in the making. Tally owns and conducts a palatial motion picture house in Los Angeles while Marcus Loew controls so many theaters in New York City that no one ever had enough spare time to count them.

AN OPEN FORUM FOR EXHIBITORS

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Royal Theater Fares Royally

ALTHOUGH there are several other theaters in Bellevue, Ohio, Harry L. Moller, owner of the Royal Theater, declares that he really has no serious apposition there because the others don't believe in "live wire" advertising.

As a sample of what he means by live wire advertising Mr. Moller cited the campaign he recently put on in connection with the presentation of "Patria," the preparedness picture featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle.

Among other things in presenting this serial large newspaper displays advertised the fact that the owner of the Royal would present a silver loving cup to the Bellevue merchant who got up the best preparedness window featuring the word "Patria." Thirty-six local merchants went in for the cup and the hottest kind of rivalry resulted.

The newspapers ran the advertising and stories on the novel "stunt" and when the serial was finally thrown on the screen it was only after a parade in which two bands, the fire department and a host of boy scouts had participated. They donated their services free, and according to Mr. Moeller, the only expense he had to stand in connection with sending off "Patria" with a "bang" was the price of the silver loving cup and the newspaper advertising.

Some Very Unusual Lobby Work

The accompanying photographs of the Woodley Theater, Los Angeles, is illustrative of what can be done to draw crowds and get business by cultivating the fine lobby hobby. Edward Holland, manager of the Woodley, is wide awake to the drawing power of the unusual, and realizes the value of good advertising. In regard to the "Teddy at the Throttle" display, he says:

"This engine pulled in so many people that it had to sand its tracks to keep from slipping. And the display itself was very simple. I took the interior of a real engine and surrounded it with a cab made of compo board. Behind this I had a boiler which kept twenty pounds of steam pressure all day. The steam which was allowed to leak through the injector valve created a very realistic effect. In the fire box there was a piece of red silk blown by an electric fan."

"The display for 'A Royal Rogue,' while simple, proved very effective. People like a change. They like to see something new and I believe in giving them what they want."

A Remarkable Record—and Example

(Editorial Note: The record of the exhibitor described in this account is so remarkable that we reprint the article, from PARAMOUNT PROGRESS with the permission of the author, Carl H. Pierce. The employes' conference idea could well be adopted by many houses with good results.)

Eugene Perry, manager of Keith's Riverside Theater, in New York City, who was formerly general manager for Stanley Mastbaum in Philadelphia, has just received a write-up in the New York Evening Sun because of his phenomenal accomplishment in "selling out" the theater every night since the opening of the house on last Christmas.

Mr. Perry has always been noted for his exceptional service to his patrons as well as his facility and ability for running his theater in such a manner as to make his guests feel at home.

During these six months that have elapsed since he opened the theater he has not had a single complaint.

Just lamp all the people waiting to see "Teddy at the Throttle." A crowd like that means that there is some one else at the throttle, too, at the Woodley Theater of Los Angeles. At the right is Manager Holland's splendid decoration for "A Royal Rogue," the Sennett-Keystone comedy.

Those of the exhibitors who used to spend their time standing on the sidewalk discussing politics, or sitting in the office complaining of pictures, picture-service and decreasing business, kindly picture this condition of the Riverside: "Six months—sold out every night—not one complaint."

"The narrowest escape from a complaint was when a new usher directed a lady to the wrong seat. But I watched for the lady with the right coupon and persuaded her to accept two seats in a box, and the situation was saved," says Mr. Perry in the Sun article.

"Every week," continues Mr. Perry, "we have a meeting of all the employes, including the janitor and the scrubwomen, for the good of the theater. And I reward them for helpful suggestions. The result is I receive new ideas and hints that are often very valuable.

"I take great pains to keep up with the season—to make my patrons comfortable—in keeping with which the walls are covered with light flowered cretonne; the seats have on their white slips; the ushers their white suits; and the theater generally is in summer attire, including the stage, which has dainty summer scenery.

"This theater is situated in the heart of the high-priced apartment region," adds Mr. Perry, "and is patronized by people who are used to being shown all sorts of attention. But our employes are on the qui vive—on tiptoe all the time. The result is, our patrons are satisfied."

Have You Had a Red Cross Day?

The value of a Red Cross day at your theater need not be dwelt upon here—as both a patriotic duty and a publicity stimulant its results have been manifest, but a letter written to Edwin Thanhouser treats the exact method of operation from a fresh standpoint.

This for the reason that the communication isn't from an exchange or theater representative in charge of arrangements, but from one of the committee of ladies whom the former succeeded in getting together to make the "Day" a success. But Motography feels that had it been written by an expert picture man it could give no clearer exposition of working methods to be used by exhibitors planning Red Cross or other special patriotic performances.

2587 Bainbridge avenue, New York City, June 23, 1917.

Dear Mr. Thanhouser:

Regarding your request for more information on our very successful "Red Cross Day" at the U. S. Theater here in the Bronx, beg to say it was handled by a committee of the Bedford Park Branch, Bronx Chapter, American Red Cross, consisting of Mrs. W. W. Niles, Mrs. John Philips, Mrs. Charles Barton, and the writer, and Manager M. Z. Fleischman of the U. S. Theater, which is the newest and largest motion picture house in our neighborhood. A number of films were viewed and the committee chose "The Vicar of Wakefield" with Mr. Frederick Warde in the title role, as being a classic, a clean beautiful story, and suitable for young and old. Mr. North, of Pathe, was consulted, and promised that Mr. Warde would appear personally at the performance and speak during the evening.

The benefit was advertised through the territory drained by this theater in various ways. Placards were placed in shop windows, notices were read by the principals of the various schools, and from the pulpits of our churches, and on the Saturday before the benefit we collected all the available automobiles and had an automobile parade. This was headed by a young lady on horseback wearing the uniform of the Woman's Military Reserve, carrying a large Red Cross Flag.

The first car carried a young man in Scotch costume, playing the bag-pipes; next came a number of cars, decorated with banners and flags, filled with young ladies, wearing the official uniform of Red Cross Workers, who distributed literature advertising the performance. The parade traversed all the principal streets, and attracted much attention.

Tickets to half the seating capacity of the theater were sold before hand at an advance of ten cents over the price of the house, and these seats were reserved until 7:30, regular prices prevailing at the box office.

Mr. Warde occupied a box with the clergy, officials of the Red Cross, and others. He made a fine speech, giving an account of the way "The Vicar of Wakefield" was written, and also of the way it came to be filmed. He was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his speech, and was then presented with a sheaf of American Beauty roses, tied with the tricolor and the colors of the Red Cross. The presentation was made by little Constance Nash, daughter of an old friend and admirer of Mr. Warde, dressed as a Red Cross nurse. In accepting the flowers, Mr. Warde made a short but extremely appropriate reply eliciting more applause.

Flowers were sold in the lobby of the theater by young ladies dressed in the Red Cross uniforms, who also acted as ushers. A good sum was thus realized with comparatively little effort. The film was presented twice during the evening, the house being filled to capacity each time.

The audiences were highly pleased and very demonstrative.

Increases Pay of Employes

Owing to the fact that the cost of living has increased to such a great extent, the Lasky studio voluntarily raised the salary of all employes receiving $25.00 a week and less. This raise will be followed automatically six months later by the increase of a similar amount to those who remain with the company. The good news was announced to an assemblage of studio employes recently by Mary Pickford, who, clad in her patriotic costume for "The Little American," urged those present to save their increases and invest them in Liberty Bonds.

McAdoo Lauds Studio Employees

The exceptional showing made by the employes of the Lasky studio in subscribing $185,000 to the Liberty Loan was so noteworthy as to be recognized by Secretary William G. McAdoo himself in a telegram to Cecil B. De Mille, general manager of the studio, which read as follows:

Please accept my warm thanks for your patriotic and loyal support of the Liberty Loan of Nineteen Seventeen. Your assistance has been of the greatest aid in making the Liberty Loan a success.

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THIS has been the worst season for the exhibitor with an airdome theater since the birth of the film industry, according to reports from all over the middle west. The nights have been so cold that it has been impossible to use the open air houses.

The Studebaker Theater, Chicago, began showing "The Lone Wolf" July 1, the same day the big production opened an indefinite engagement at the Broadway Theater, New York. This play is Herbert Brenon's most recent endeavor under the Selznick banner.

A new Pantages Theater in Vancouver, B. C., costing something over $300,000, opened June 18. Manager Alexander Pantages, who was present at the opening, thinks his latest addition is one of the finest of his chain from Chicago to the Pacific Coast.

B. H. Lustig, in promoting the interests of the Dreamland Theater, Los Angeles, is trying out a scheme of printing on his program the name of one patron for each day. The person whose name is printed gets a pair of complimentary tickets for the asking.

The Alamo Theater, Kansas City, Missouri, recently opened its new open air playhouse immediately to the north of the theater, where it will continue its moving picture programs during the entire summer. Mary Pickford in "A Romance of the Redwoods," packed the open air theater on the opening night.

Frank G. Altman, owner of the New Center Theater of Kansas City, Missouri, died at his home, 2114 Benton Boulevard, June 21. Mr. Altman was also the owner of the Altman Building at Eleventh and Walnut streets. His opening of the New Center Theater a few months ago marked his first venture in the film business.

Theater men in places like Louisville, Kentucky, Indianapolis, Indiana, etc., near the great military camps of the country, are getting ready to do a big business this summer despite the hot weather. When the soldier boys go into town for the week end they always take in a picture show or two. This can't help but mean business for the theater men in the locality of the camps.

The New Apollo Theater, Jersey City, New Jersey, presented the "Bar Sinister" at its opening, June 16. The Robinson and Burns Amusement Corporation have laid themselves out in fitting up this addition to their circuit. The house is complete now except for a $10,000 organ which is expected to be in position before the month is over.

George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, donated a print of Bryant Washburn's latest feature, "The Man Who was Afraid," to the First Illinois regiment, to be used for recruiting purposes. The soldiers secured the use of one of the big Chicago theaters and exhibited the picture there amidst a military demonstration. The entire regiment paraded the loop district, headed by the regimental band. Banners were displayed advertising the showing of the picture, admission to the theater being free. Officials of the regiment addressed the crowds between each showing, urging them to join and fight for their country.

As an attraction extraordinary Manager Edel of the Strand Theater, New York, last week presented the new Mary Pickford picture, "The Little American," considered one of the greatest patriotic messages ever seen on the screen.

Dewitt Mott of New York City recently was appointed manager of the Empire Theater, Glens Falls, New York, succeeding Mr. Corr, who has been in charge of that theater since it was taken over by the Cohoes Amusement Company.

As soon as direct current wires can be run into the Mosier Opera House of Elkhart, Indiana, that hall will be opened as a moving picture house. The town officials have been invited to attend the first performance and give the venture their official sanction.

Pictures were recently shown in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church, at South Bend, Indiana. The congregation joined in singing some of the great church hymns from the screen. Pastor James L. Gariner delivered a stirring sermon on the "Revelation of God Through Nature" and illustrated his address with a picture called "Opportunity and a Million Acres."

Arrangements have been completed for the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Brighton Beach, New Jersey, Music Hall for a limited summer engagement beginning June 29. A symphony orchestra of forty men will render the elaborate musical accompaniment. The Brighton Beach Music Hall has been completely redecorated in anticipation of the spectacle's engagement.

In advertising "The Garden of Allah," while playing at the Hippodrome, Cleveland, Ohio, last week, Leon D. Netter "put over" a stunt that added materially to his cash receipts. He arranged to have a caravan, bearing Arabs and Orientals, drawn through the streets of Cleveland. He also used a stage setting that transported the audience to far-off Egypt before the picture started.

Film patrons danced with picture stars and incidentally contributed to the Red Cross the night of June 25, when the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania opened in Philadelphia. There were several picture stars present and anyone who paid his half dollar was admitted to the dance floor in the Parkway Building Auditorium. Many came to see their favorites glide over the waxed floor.

Manager Fred W. Schaeffer of the Victoria Theater, Chicago, recently scored a victory over Major Funkhouser and his censor board when the Major was forced to allow Mr. Schaeffer to continue the showing of "The Birth of a Nation." The production had been running three days at the Victoria when inspectors from the office of the second deputy superintendent of police appeared during a performance and demanded to see the permit.

Mr. Schaeffer declares he was unable to find the paper at the time and the inspectors forced him to discontinue the show. Major Funkhouser declared he never saw the picture and had never issued a permit for it. The missing permit, however, was found finally and the second deputy had to call off his men.

The Strand Theater, New York, presented last week as its principal feature the drama entitled, "The Public Be Damned," with Charles Richman and Mary Fuller in the leading roles. This play, endorsed by food administrator Herbert C. Hoover, is an expose of the present food situation. "The Love Filter of Ikey Schoenstein," another of the O. Henry films, was presented by Manager Edel as an added attraction.

Phay Graffort, a theater manager of Buchanan, Michigan, was recently arrested and fined while going through nearby Niles in more of a hurry than the laws of that city permit. Mr. Graffort said he was only driving 25 miles an hour, but the court told him that was about 15 miles too fast. The Buchananite paid his fine and costs but declared he was going to erase Niles from his touring map.

Plans for a record-breaking exhibitors' convention for the state of Louisiana are still progressing. Every exhibitor in the state has received a summons to be at New Orleans July 4 for a regular time. Members of the league and their wives will be entertained by the New Orleans theater men during the day. At night there will be a supper and ball at the Grunewald Hotel.

An exhibition of "Joan the Woman" was given June 22 and 23 at the Blue Hills Golf Club, Kansas City, Missouri, for the benefit of the Red Cross. A large screen was erected on the terrace of the club and the picture was projected after darkness had fallen. A twenty-piece orchestra played while the film was being shown. Large crowds attended the exhibitions and paid an admission of a dollar each.

"The Garden of Allah" is playing an extended engagement at the Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh, where it drew full houses for the two weeks it was originally scheduled to run. A massive stage setting revealing a vast stretch of desert, with a herd of live camels imported from the New York Hippodrome, was a feature of the presentation. A mixed chorus of thirty voices and an orchestra of forty pieces was also utilized to make the production attractive.

Twenty or more veterans of the Civil War took part in a recent patriotic demonstration held at the Colonial Theater in Belfast, Maine. The boys of '61 shouldered their old Springfield rifles and marched in parade formation down to the picture house, where they went through drills with all the enthusiasm, if not the agility, of a half century ago. Many of the youths caught the fire in the old men's eyes and were found asking questions at the recruiting station later.

One large theater in New Orleans, Louisiana, with a seating capacity of 2,000, recently closed down because of a lack of business. The Lafayette Theater, which had been under the management of Josiah Pearce & Sons for only two short weeks, shut down because it was playing to empty seats. Under the management of the Saenger Amusement Company it proved a profitable business enterprise, but when Pearce & Sons bought it everything went wrong. The house was given poor films and its patronage quickly disappeared. And then nothing could bring the people back.

The picture men of Vancouver, B. C., have changed their minds about closing the theaters during the summer months up until 5 p. m. owing to the furor caused among operators, musicians and other employes who would have been thrown out of work or forced to accept reduced wages by the action. Exhibitors are still worried, however, over the stiff competition being furnished them by the Orpheum as manipulated by Con Jones.

The possibilities for the cent-a-foot tax on film which has been impending in the Pennsylvania legislature for some time is now a dead issue. It is at least disposed of as far as this session of the legislature is concerned. Another snake in the grass which was successfully combated by Pennsylvania exhibitors was the bill which proposed to bar children under 16 years of age from attending picture shows unaccompanied by adults. This bill was sent to the House Judiciary Special Committee, where it died.

Manager H. M. Thomas of the Strand, Omaha, Nebraska, is making use of the "legit" houses in his city during the summer. He will show pictures Saturday and Sunday evenings in the Brandeis Theater, the largest legitimate house in Omaha. In the Brandeis, Mr. Thomas contemplates only the presentation of pictures which have already registered big hits with his patrons. He has engaged the orchestra of the Orpheum, another large horizontal stage house, to play at his Strand during the summer months.

W. H. Clune of Los Angeles is at outs with the city electrician as a result of the latter's refusal to supply him with the necessary juice to illuminate a big American flag he had in front of his Auditorium theater. The big sign merely carried an exhortation beneath urging the purchase of Liberty Bonds. Los Angeles officials accused Mr. Clune of using the flag for advertising, a charge which he promptly denied, declaring that to the contrary it was merely his contribution to the current patriotic displays. Mr. Clune is so incensed over the matter that he is contemplating court action.

While other theater men are scratching their scalps and wondering if the solutions of their financial difficulties don't lie in raising their admission prices, P. G. Armbus of Gering, Nebraska, thinks that he has been charging too much. He recently took over, in addition to his Royal in Gering, the Lyric Theater at Bridgeport. Mr. Armbus had been charging fifteen cents at the Royal, but when he acquired the Lyric he lowered his prices to five and ten cents; prices which will apply to both houses.

The Victoria Theater of Buffalo, New York, runs the following slide advertising the quality of its pictures:

Victoria plays are the expression of a high ideal. They grip with their realism, with their human interest, with their graphic presentation. There are stories sweet with love and romance; stories of life and action, on land and sea; daring and death-defying adventures; sparkling comedies that make your sides ache with laughter.

The Victoria trade-mark stands for the best in motion picture production. It stands for wholesome, harmless amusement for all manner of people.

Victoria plays entertain without offense; they are instructive, satisfying, clean.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent featurre of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He has been elected vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you some valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Thinks Inspectors Have Film Over Eyes

Enclosed you will find a sample of some film taken from "Pass the Prunes," a Victor one-reel comedy from the ——— Film Service. It is a shame that film exchanges send out such stuff and call it inspected. But they cannot get by with it. I have written the manager of the exchange, telling him of the condition of the reel and also about A No. 1 inspection tag.

I am not having much trouble with punch marked films, but I get my share of those that have had a sweet oil bath. It would be a wonderful thing if some one would invent a machine that would not need oil. I am a reader of the projection department of MOTOGRAPHY and it has been a great help to me. We are all working here under a great set of managers. They fire their help every Wednesday night. Our local union is only six months old and we are getting along fine. —Jimmie Smith, Bijou Theater, Corning, New York. Local No. 480 I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O.

From the looks of the film that you sent I think you have all the room in the world to complain of the inspection (?). I do not know how much of the reel was in the condition of this particular piece, but I am satisfied that the part I have was never inspected. Some of the film exchanges keep a few boys or women to rewind the film when it comes into the house and pay them the lowest kind of wages. Exchanges in Indianapolis pay women from $6 to $8 per week, and then tell theater managers and operators when they object to the condition of the films, that they have first class inspection. I do not know how the exchange serving you handles its film, but I do know that they are not inspecting it when they send it out in the condition this is in.

There are times when an exchange has to send out a film without giving it the proper inspection because of getting it in late from the last customer. As a general rule, however, they enclose a notice with the film which explains the reason and asks the operator to inspect the film before using it. That is one thing that I think every operator should do anyway. I admit it is not a pleasant job, but the operators that refuse to do it would avoid a lot of trouble and stops if they would inspect the film first.

I had six years' experience in Indiana and Kentucky as an inspector for a film exchange. My duties were to hunt up the causes of film destruction. Every time I went into a booth on a complaint from the exchange and asked the operator about the trouble, he would declare that it couldn't have happened on his machines. Then I would ask him if he had inspected his film before he had run it and he would have to admit that he hadn't. If he had inspected his film and noticed the damage that had been done he would have saved himself and his manager the annoyance of answering correspondence from the exchange and at the same time he would be helping the exchange locate the trouble.

When a film comes back from a theater to the exchange and the exchange notices that it is damaged, the blame is naturally placed on the theater that used the film last. If an operator wants to play safe he should start in and inspect every reel that he uses. When he comes across a bad patch or damaged film, he should cut out the bad part and give it to the manager with a request that he take up the trouble at once with the exchange. This will protect the operator against stops, helping the next man who has to use the film, and at the same time wake up the film exchange.

I am very glad to hear that you operators of Corning are organized, and that you are getting along so fine, I hope that you will be able to convince the managers of the house you spoke of that they are on the wrong road and should get right.

Machine Keeps Knocking

I am having trouble with one of the two Power's 6A machines that I am using. Can you tell me what to do with it? For some time it has been knocking, and although I have adjusted it time and again I cannot stop the noise in the intermittent movement. It will stop for a day or two and then begin again. I should like to know what to do with it. Also will you please tell me what to use on the working parts of the lamps? I try to keep them clean and have been using oil on them, but they are so stiff after they get heated up.—Louisville, Kentucky.

If I were you I would have the mechanism sent to the factory or to some good repair man and have new parts put in for the intermittent movement. The knocking that you speak of is caused by a worn cam and cross. It might also be caused by a worn bearing or from the set collar on the intermittent shaft working loose, allowing the shaft to slip back and forth through the bearing. I would not lose any time in sending the mechanism to some reliable man or to the factory. As to the working parts of the lamps, do not use oil or grease of any kind on them. Take the lamps apart except the insulated joints, and dip the screws and all the working part in oil, then wipe them off clean and dip them in a box of powdered graphite. Do not wipe the parts off after dipping them in the graphite, for the more that sticks the better.

Lamps should be taken apart at least once every two weeks and given a thorough cleaning and it wouldn't hurt any if they were cleaned oftener than that.

The Exhibitors' Supply Company, 516 Peoples Gas Building, Chicago, Illinois, have opened a branch office at rooms 407 and 408 Stewart Building, Indianapolis, Indiana. R. E. Gumm is the manager of the branch office. Indianapolis and the adjoining territory has needed a supply house for some time and both exhibitors and operators will welcome the new company. Mr. Gumm has been the traveling representative for the Exhibitors' Supply Company in this district for several years and is very well acquainted with most of the exhibitors and operators. The firm expects to carry everything that pertains to the theater.

A letter from a brother in Michigan has been received, and inclosed in the letter were some samples of patches made with a film cement of his own invention. He claims that he has a cement that will make a perfect patch without scraping the emulsion from the film. I do not believe in condemning anything or anyone until I know that they are wrong. For that reason I am holding up his letter to the department until I can get some of the cement and give it a fair trial.

I have had experiences with this sort of thing before so I am just a little skeptical. The sample patches that were sent in are apparently first-class. I would, however, have to see patches made and the film in actual use for a reasonable lenth of time before recommending the cement. Almost any make of film will patch and hold for a day or two but I have never seen a cement yet that would patch a film without scraping the elmusion and still be satisfactory for any length of time.

Elsie Ferguson Screen Vehicle

The matter of supplying a star with a vehicle that she personally feels is particularly adaptable to her capabilities is by no means the most simple procedure in the activities of the producer. At the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Fort Lee one day last week, Elsie Ferguson, the beautiful stage star who is about to make her film debut for Artcraft Pictures, expressed great delight over the subject which has been selected as her initial screen play, "Barbary Sheep."

" 'Barbary Sheep,' " said the popular stage star, "is, I feel, an ideal play for me. The part of Lady Wyverne, the English noblewoman fits me perfectly and in reading Robert Hichens description of the young lady I almost thought he was painting my own picture, even to the color of the hair. I feel confident that I will do the part full justice and that I shall be most happy in the characterization of this role which is the kind I have often hoped to portray, being somewhat similar and yet quite different, from some of my past characterizations.

"The wonderful romantic atmosphere of this mysterious and fascinating story is indeed a fine theme to bring out in a play and after reading the book from cover to cover several times I can readily understand why it has become one of Mr. Hichens' greatest sellers."

NEW DEPARTMENT INSTALLED

Spoor Creates Investigation Department to Find Out What Sales Organization, Theater Owners and Public Want

"Our pictures must be salable" is the order which has gone forth at the Essanay plant following an extensive investigation into the requirements of exhibitors in every part of the country. This does not apply so directly from the standpoint of selling to the exhibitor as to the public. Every subject will be selected and produced with the idea of ultimately suiting the audience before which it is shown.

George K. Spoor, president Essanay.

This policy is the outgrowth of the discovery that hundreds of subjects are being produced without the requirements of the distributing and exhibiting ends of the industry being taken into consideration. Accordingly, Mr. Spoor, president of the Essanay Company, installed an Investigation Department. The object of this department was to discover not only what the sales organizations and theater managers desired, but to keep a record of critic's reviews and secure all available information from the public direct.

As soon as this mass of material had been collected and condensed, a series of weekly conferences was started in which members of every department were asked to take part. Talks were delivered by exhibitors and members of the distributing companies handling Essanay products with the result that every member of the large force now employed at this plant knows just what is expected of the department in which he works in order to produce motion pictures which will have the strongest appeal.

The conferences are still being held weekly. Two hours is devoted every Saturday to the discussion of subjects in preparation and those to be selected for future use. In taking a new scenario under advisement it is looked at from every angle. Its possibilities from the standpoint of the plot, photography, cast, advertising and public appeal are thoroughly gone over.

One department is allowed a half hour each week to explain what co-operation from the other divisions is required in order to increase the efficiency and quality of the work it does. This has been a means of acquainting every one with relative importance of the different branches as well as bring out a spirit of good fellowship and co-operation that has already made itself noticeable in the subjects recently issued.

With two or three companies on the floor all of the time and the Western studio working at top speed, Essanay is as busy as at any time in its history and President Spoor reports great returns.

FOR YOUR BILL

Mutual Offers, for July 9, Marjorie Rambeau in "Mary Moreland" and Other Unusual Screen Material

"Mary Moreland," a picture dramatization of Marie Van Vorst's popular novel, with Marjorie Rambeau in the title role, leads Mutual's schedule for the week of July 9.

"Mary Moreland" is the sixth sense of Miss Rambeau's productions for Mutual. Miss Rambeau has repeated her success before the footlights during her brief career on the screen. "Mary Moreland" follows "The Dazzling Miss Davison," "The Mirror," "The Debt," "Motherhood," and "The Greater Woman," a series in which exhibitors have found high box office value.

"Mary Moreland" is the story of a very ordinary girl from a very ordinary suburban home who, in her career as a stenographer, became a most extraordinary young woman. She won the love of a rich married man. How she resisted the temptation of love and won is the story that the picture tells.

Marjorie Rambeau is admirably cast in "Mary Moreland." The character provides wide opportunity for the display of the emotional talent which she possesses. The supporting cast included Robert Elliott, who played opposite Miss Rambeau in her Powell-Mutual productions and who formally supported Margaret Illington, Gene LaMoth, Augusta Burmester, Fraser Tarbutt and Edna M. Holland. The picture was produced under the direction of Frank Powell at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, College Point, L. I.

Helen Leaps from Trains

"The Trap," is the title of the fourteenth installment of "The Railroad Raiders," Mutual-Signal photonovel, released July 9. Helen Holmes, playing the leading role, makes a daring leap from a moving train, crossing a viaduct, into a river and rescues the hero. Miss Holmes' exploits in "The Railroad Raiders" have been the most sensational of her sensational screen career.

George Ovey's Horsley-Mutual one-reel comedy, "Jerry at the Waldorf," is scheduled for release July 12. Jerry beats his board bill, and gets into a fashionable hotel, where his experience in hunting a bathroom create wild commotion and eventually land Jerry in jail.

Hawaiian atmosphere has been introduced into the La Salle comedy, "When Lula Danced the Hula," on the Mutual schedule for July 10. Grass be girdled Hawaiian girls take a conspicuous part in the one-reel laugh provoker.

Press Humorists Shot at Fort Lee

The American Press Humorists, with their wives and children, were the guests of Goldwyn last week at the company's studios in Fort Lee. More than 100 members of the organization, which is in convention in New York City, made the trip across the Hudson for an inspection of motion pictures in the making and to actively participate in a big circus scene which is being staged as a spectacular feature of Mae Marsh's third production.

The circus scene portrayed was supposedly made in a small city and the humorists, liberally supplied with straw hats of a rustic pattern, gathered on a section of bleacher seats and with a battery of cinema cameras trained upon them and with Charles Horan, assisted by Henry Edward Warner of the Baltimore Sun, as directors, they went through a number of scenes. If the humorists had been hired "extras" at the usual supernumerary rates, the tasks allotted them would have been no more difficult.

After the circus scenes Edgar Guest of the Detroit Free Press, Dan Marquis of the New York Evening Sun, and James Waldron of Judge Weekly, assisted in directing a little scenario that was enacted by some of the better known paragraphers which included Roy K. Moulton of the Evening Mail, Claire Briggs of the New York Tribune, Ted Robinson of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Charles A. Leedy of the Youngstown Telegram, Douglas Malloch of the American Lumberman, E. W. Miller of the Chicago Daily News, R. D. McPhee of the Springfield Union, Dixon Merritt, president of the association, of the Nashville Tennesseean, and Julius Tannen, vaudeville entertainer.

Rupert Julian is producing a highly dramatic five-reel feature at Universal City entitled "The Face of Prentice Tiller," of which he is the star.

"The Masked Heart"

Five Reel American-Mutual Story Appearing July 2. Reviewed by A. E. Curtis

SOMEONE, somewhere, sometime said that it isn't the most worthy thing in the world to do something which has never been done before, but to do best something which has been done oftenest.

There is nothing particularly striking in "The Masked Heart," although some of the scenes delight the eye with their elaboration, color and crowds. But the story is tense and handled by Director Sloman like a man who knows how to handle the various skeins of a story and keep them all knitted closely so there are no loose ends.

There is one strand of bizarre color in the skein. That is the theme of the hero being loved by both mother and daughter, the mother in this case being step and vamp. In other words, the vampire in the case is the second wife of the man who invites the hero to his home, and stepmother of the heroine. This role is very keenly done by Kathleen Kirkham and every audience will enjoy her work. She has been in pictures three years with various companies and you may remember her as Marion Dane in "The Devil's Assistant." And with Bill Russell and Francelia Billington the picture will pull in many places like a free picnic in a shady grove in summer.

Every audience likes to see something which might be something awful—either awful dangerous, awful bad, or awful something. The runaway with the pretty Francelia involved fulfills this function in "The Masked Heart," and probably does it in a manner that will satisfy your audiences.

The Story—At a masked ball Philip Greycourt, a wealthy society man who has tired of his easy conquests of women, becomes interested in a grey-gowned woman who will not remove her mask.

Later invited with his friend Frank Sturtevant to visit the country home of the Villiers, he finds in Helene Villiers the second wife of his host, his lady of the mask. Catherine, the stepdaughter, immediately falls in love with Philip, but he is so infatuated with the mother that he does not notice it.

Helene enjoys a flirtation with Philip and leads him on until finally she invites him into her sitting room, during the absence of her husband. Losing control of himself, Philip clasps Helene into his arms and the returning husband sees the shadow on the curtain. Warned by the maid, Philip runs into the hall and entering the first door, finds himself in Catherine's bedroom. Mr. Villiers finds him there and Philip says he and Catherine are to be married the next day.

After the wedding, Catherine is perfectly happy, not knowing of the attachment between her stepmother and Philip, but Helene tries to still carry on their flirtation and becoming jealous of Catherine, tells her all. Believing Philip still loves Helene, Catherine leaves a note for him and takes passage on a steamer. Philip, however, has grown to love her and throwing Helene aside forever, he boards the boat and sails away with Catherine.

"Who's Your Neighbor?"

Seven-Part Feature Presented by Master Drama Features, Inc. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

THE initial showing of "Who's Your Neighbor," presented by Master Drama Features, Inc., took place at the Broadway theater on June 15. Written by Williard Mack, who is well known for his many Broadway successes, and adapted and produced by S. Rankin Drew, famed as a director, this offering will prove a strong box-office attraction for exhibitors. It is a propaganda picture with a purpose and also a moral. Dealing with the women who refuse to live clean, honest lives, the play shows that it would prove even worse to try to weed them out of the restricted district, as they would go on living the same way in fashionable hotels and apartment houses.

Christine Mayo makes a fascinating and charming Hattie Fenshaw, which part she plays in a most capable manner. Evelyn Brent as Betty Hamlin is sincere and unaffected in her role. The other efficient players in the supporting cast include Anders Randolf, Frank Morgan, Wm. Sherwood, Gladys Fairbanks and Franklyn Hanna. The settings, which are mostly indoor scenes, are splendid, and the photography is excellent. The offering will make a powerful impression in large cities, and with adults who appreciate the truth presented, but it is not a picture for children and therefore its adaptability to a family clientele is uncertain.

Hattie Fenshaw, of disreputable character, is driven out, by a body of reformers, from the restricted neighborhood where she has led a vile and false life. She goes to a prominent hotel, where she determines to show these people that women such as she had better be left alone. At the hotel she is soon recognized and asked to leave. But she has made the acquaintance of Richard Harding, who rents an apartment for her in a fashionable district.

Not satisfied with the money and attentions of Harding, Hattie renews her relations with Dudley Carson, who has broken his engagement with Betty Hamlin. The climax comes when Betty, who is really Harding's daughter, meets her father and brother in Hattie's rooms. Unaware of the character of the woman, Betty had accepted an invitation to her home. Harding shoots and almost kills his daughter. District Attorney Osborne and Mrs. Bowers, with a number of reformers, hear the noise and when they learn who their neighbor is, realize that they had better let these women continue in the error of their ways, as it has been shown from experience that they are naturally bad and always will be.

"The Greater Law"

Five-Reel Bluebird Photoplay, Released July 1. Reviewed by L. M. Albright

THE mad rush for gold and the land of fur-coated mushers and deep snow form the picturesque setting for the action of "The Greater Law." The story is well told and convincing, and the acting of Myrtle Gonzalez as Barbara Henderson, the girl who goes to Yellow Gap to avenge her brother's death, is excellent throughout. Instead of filling the man who slew her brother full of lead, however, she fills a prospector's heart full of love and loses her own. She is very attractive to look upon.

There is only one scene in the story in which one feels that the scenario has been juggled. The scene in which the brother returns after every one believes him dead is impossible. It was put in to give an all-'round happy ending. Lawrence Peyton as Cort Dorian, the lucky prospector who gets the lady sharpshooter, and Jack Curtis as Laberge, the bewhiskered villain, both handle their parts creditably. The photography is good and the snow trails through the pines are exceedingly beautiful.

Story: Barbara's brother falls under the spell of the Yukon and leaves her to make his fortunes in the Klondike. After some months she gets word that he has been killed in a brawl and sets out to avenge his death.

When she arrives at the mining town she meets Cort Dorian, a successful prospector. She refuses, however, to let herself go until she has fulfilled the object of her mission—namely, to shoot the man who killed her brother. She tells Dorian to wait and trust her and goes on with her search. Finally, when she meets Laberge, the unprincipled fellow for whom she has been looking, he tells a story that places the blame upon her lover. She sets out for Yellow Gap, where Dorian is staking a claim and challenges him to a duel. Dorian refuses to shoot, but is not spared by her bullet, which nips him in the shoulder. At this point her brother comes upon the scene alive. Barbara throws down her gun and ministers to the man she has shot. She seeks forgiveness and gets it, and the ending is happy.

"Whither Thou Goest"

Five-Reel State Rights Subject Presented by Klotz & Streimer, Inc. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a plausible, well acted and capably directed film which may be considered very good entertainment. The story does not smack of any particular novelty, but it is told in a straight-forward manner without any strain on credulity and the interest never lags throughout because the dramatic incidents are always presented in an interesting way. The cast is well selected and the members act naturally. There are no violently emotional scenes and the actors are just so many every day men and women, which makes their work register as true to life indeed when we remember that the majority of American people in real life do not act, even though they may have every emotional reason. This doesn't mean, however, that drama can ever be accepted with characters who do not show their emotions. The players in this picture act just enough to be natural—as the majority rule defines the word—and they cannot be accused of wild overacting.

Orrin Johnson and Rhea Mitchell, the featured players, don't impress one as being "actor folk" at all. The effect of their work, and that of the cast to some extent, on the spectator is that he is watching people plucked from the walks of life and shown to him in their adventures as without theatric accompaniment. Both the leads give quality performances. In the supporting cast are Tom Chatterton, Ida Lewis, Henry Belmar and others. The majority of people who see "Whither Thou Goest" will feel that they have enjoyed a pretty good brand of entertainment. Photography is good and the Western desert locations are unusually effective.

Donald Van Wye, suffering with a disease deemed incurable by eminent authorities, determines to move to Arizona in the hope that the climate will be beneficial. However, he learns, both to his own, and his proud mother's displeasure, that Tom, his brother, is in love with Maizie, an actress. Neither the mother nor Don have the right conception of Maizie's character, and Don, to save his brother from an unfortunate match, decides to win the girl himself, believing that he has only a few months to live. Don's suit successful, he takes Maizie as his wife to Arizona and little by little he learns her true worth. Another doctor pronounces him a well man. At this juncture in the story, the vain mother, a slave to society, arrives in the West and pleads with Maizie to give Don up as an earnest of her love and allow him to return to his rightful place in society. Maizie, decided to make the sacrifice, wanders out on the desert. Don, returning home to find his mother and to learn of her activities, is not deceived by her. With the aid of an Indian runner he finds his wife on the desert, exhausted, but still alive.

"A Son of the Hills"

Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon Adaptation in Five Reels. Released June 25. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

IN "A Son of the Hills," a play based on Harriet Comstock's widely read novel of the same name, Antonio Moreno is seen in a most suitable role for this popular star. As Sandy Morley, he portrays a poor but ambitious youth whose sole idea is to secure an education, then go back to Lost Hollow and resurrect the downtrodden people. While the play affords acceptable entertainment, it can only be classed as an average release. As the story advances, it becomes rather drawn out and much of the heart-interest is lost.

Antonio Moreno acts the part of Sandy Morley in a capable and pleasing way. Belle Bruce is charming and convincing in her portrayal of Cynthia Starr. Robert Gaillard has a sympathetic role as Martin Morley. The rest of the cast includes Julia Swayne Gordon, Florence Radinoff, Elaine Ivans and William Balfour. Harry Davenport directed the production.

Sandy Morley is ambitious and wants to do something for the poor inhabitants of Lost Hollow. With this in view, he secretly plans to go to college. Finally, unable to stand the abuse of a stepmother, he bids good-bye to his playmate, Cynthia Starr, and goes out into the world to make his fortune.

He meets John Markham, a Northern capitalist, who takes a great liking to the boy. When Lansing Hartford, Markham's nephew, declines a proposal that he work a year in Markham's factory preparatory to his entering college, Sandy eagerly accepts the opportunity. He graduates with high honors. Markham's faith in him grows steadily. He sends him back to Lost Hollow to superintend the building of a modern factory.

Lansing also returns to the South. Cynthia is greatly impressed with the polished ways of Lansing. One afternoon he takes Cynthia for a ride. A thunder shower comes up, and they are forced to seek shelter in a deserted cabin. Lansing convinces the girl that if she doesn't marry him she will be the victim of an unjust scandal. So they are married.

Some time later, Marion Spaulding, the woman with whom Lansing had an affair, appeals to Cynthia. Realizing that she doesn't love Lansing and that it is his duty to marry Marion, Cynthia succeeds in securing a divorce. She then returns to Sandy, who has never ceased to love her.

"Light in Darkness"

Strong Five-Reel Edison, Released by K. E. S. E. July 9. Report by A. E. Curtis

IF you want a play that will appeal to men, as well as to women, run "Light in Darkness."

This story gets hold of a fellow at the take-off and never lets go till the sign of censorship approval has flipped across the frame. There is one spot where the lovers enarm each other and walk away in a fade-out and the watcher might get the idea that that is a good place to put the period to the romance. But as the film flows on he finds the most interesting part of the story is still to be seen.

There's only one woman in the play—Shirley Mason—and she's sufficient. There are a couple of matrons who fill their niches well, but don't count in the story. That's one reason why "Light in Darkness" is a man's play. And there's no society stuff, no slinky vampire, no deadly rivals, no scattering of pink and puny picture petunias in the path of a story which is strong enough to walk without them.

The calibre of any artist is measured by what he omits. The press sheets do not give the name of the director of this play, but he was an artist—in the vital, rather than the pretty sense of the word. The hero and heroine are convicts, yet there are no trial scenes. A bank fails, yet no crowd of poor is seen storming the doors. When the young man goes to the "pen," there is no weeping family. There is scarcely a villain, except circumstance. The audience is guided through this story without delays or side tracks, and the spectator will enjoy every inch of the 5,000-foot trip.

Shirley Mason should gain steadily in the estimation of the fans, if she continues to play lifelike parts in a lifelike way. She has all the unconscious feminine punch that the majority of stories need. Frank Morgan heroes well, without being heroic, and William Tooker as the deputy sheriff is a home run. The governor of California is made into a mighty interesting man by George Tremble. The sturdy baby may not be an actor as a man, but he's one as an infant that gets everybody's goat. He is cast as a baby and registers 100 per cent at the job.

The story is along a different track from the ordinary, and is solidly constructed. It has no lovey-dovey nor "pretty" stuff. That's why folks with lime in the spine will like it, even if fifteen-year-old stenographers don't.

Here's a periscope view of the plot:

Ramsey Latham, cashier of the Traders' Bank and Trust Company, discovers the insolvency of his organization, finding that the president has withdrawn huge sums. Pierce suicides and the hero, Latham, is convicted for the failure of the bank. Deputy Sheriff Brad Milligan takes Ramsey to the penitentiary. Just as they leave the county jail the door of the prison opens and Hilary Kenyon, a sweet, wistful maiden, steps out, accompanied by a matron. Ramsey looks at her with admiration and slowly she walks down toward him. Her glance drops from his face and falls upon his manacled hands; and once more she looks into his face with sympathy and understanding.

At the penitentiary Ramsey sees Hilary again and realizes that she, too, is to serve a sentence. Once more their eyes meet and then he sees her no more.

Five years pass and the prison directors parole Hilary, after she has served half her sentence. She becomes a maid.

Ramsey is paroled and goes to his ranch, as by the rules of the state, he will not be allowed to engage in any business until he shall have received a full discharge.

Trudging the highroad, Ramsey comes upon Hilary Kenyon, downcast and dejected. The taint of the prison is ineradicable and restraint and suspicion have made her position impossible.

Then each tells of the events which brought them into cells. She was sentenced because, in defending herself from attack, she killed a man, and he, because of the bank failure, has suffered for the crime of another. He leads her away; they marry and go to his ranch.

Two years elapse and over the lives of Ramsey and Hilary and their little baby falls a shadow of evil. The law of the state forbids marriage to those who are out of prison under parole.

Arthur Converse, Ramsey's former treacherous cell mate, makes his appearance at the sheriff's office to inform him that Ramsey Latham has married and broken his parole, and to demand that the law take its course.

Ramsey and Hilary, coddling the baby, who appears to be ill, look up in expectation of a visit from the doctor as the door of their ranch house opens. Sheriff Milligan enters the room and the young folks stand petrified; slowly the horrible truth comes over them; they have broken the law and he has come to make them pay the penalty for their happiness. But Milligan sees the terror in their eyes and his nerve fails him. With assumed lightness and a mighty effort to hide his feelings, he tells them that he has come to congratulate them and to see the baby. Hilary is convinced and in her happiness promises Milligan to name the baby "Brad" after him. Yet as he takes his leave, Ramsey walks to the gate with him. "You fooled Hilary, all right, Sheriff, but I know the parole officer is after me." But Milligan refuses to let Ramsey give up and confides his plan to him. "I may be able to fix it up with the governor. Be ready to start for the capitol in the morning." "No, he isn't a personal friend of mine, but I take it he's a human being."

The governor looks up while Milligan pauses in his story. "Sheriff Milligan, you took a lot for granted." Then it is that all the force of his wide human appeal comes into Milligan's eyes. "Mr. Governor, about how long will it take you to make it all right for the baby?" Ramsey and Hilary are ushered into the office from the outer room and a very appealing scene follows. "Bradley's goin' to be his middle name," says Milligan, addressing the executive and pointing to the baby. "His ma insists that his front name ought to be the same as yours." The governor's human side triumphs and the full pardons are granted.

"New York"

Pathe Gold Rooster in Five Parts, Featuring Florence Reed. Reviewed by L. M. Albright

THIS is a play with all the lurid highlights and deep shadows of a great city. There are riotous scenes in which chorus girls in tights clinch with men in "soul kisses" about a feasting board. Wine flows too freely for decorum. There is tragedy and not a few pistol shots.

The picture, besides presenting the "show life" of New York with all its risque, sordid and brutal qualities, goes the limit to drive the hollowness of the whole thing home. The play is a study of heredity and the "like mother, like daughter" element, pronounced by Oliver King when he finds the girl of the Follies that he married untrue to him, runs throughout.

The action is rapid and the punches many. While the sky clears at the end and the suffering of the main characters is ended, it doesn't clear so quickly nor so completely as to make you feel that the director had grown tired of the play and just wanted to finish it up any old way.

There are a few places where the acting seems a little strained, but there are many where it is tremendously effective. City and country, the good stock of one of New York's best families, and the "rotten" but beautiful stock of one of its worst, are the contrasts.

An audience that is the least bit squeamish, however, or afraid of "close ups" of scantily clad women dancing on tables will disapprove of "New York." A prude would not enjoy it a bit. But for all that, it's the same play that A. H. Woods put on the legitimate stage with great success. And the same people that enjoyed the noisy drama will like the silent version.

The work of Florence Reed and John Miltern, the leading man, is especially impressive. Fania Marinoff, Forrest Winant and Jessie Ralph are all keen in their parts.

The story: Oliver King, a patrician, becomes interested in a chorus girl, who leads him on merely for his money. Learning her true character, he gives her up, but not until after they are married and have a baby. The mother is accidentally killed at a "party." When the baby grows up it develops into a young man with all the inborn vices of the mother. King marries again, and his second wife visits her stepson while he is under the influence of drugs and narcotics. He attacks her and in the struggle she kills him. The case is decided to be a suicide by the coroner's jury, and King and his wife go to the country to get away from their past. The ending draws a curtain of happiness over the turmoil of the rest of the story.

"Borrowed Plumage"

Five-Reel Triangle Subject, Featuring Bessie Barriscale. Reviewed by George W. Graves

DISTINCTIVE, "classy" production was never more pronounced, at least in a regular program subject, than it is in this picture, which, although a costume story with a distinct romantic note, does not follow along in the commonplace rut of such stories. Some excellent comedy dealing with quaint, funny characters, put a great deal of indispensable "pep" into the offering and raises the standard of entertainment one hundred per cent. In fact, by the time the first reel has run off, the spectator is quite satisfied that the whole offering is going to be straight comedy. But later on the elements of excitement and suspense are introduced, leading to a climax that is quite melodramatic.

The serious side of the story is not the best side, since there is nothing particularly novel or effective about the plot outside of its presentation, which is altogether "different." The real attraction and interest inheres in the wonderfully artistic production, the excellent impersonation of the star, with her able support, and the various delectable pieces of comedy. A little village made to represent that of the story, on the Island of St. Mary, near the coast of Scotland, the handsome sets, elaborate costuming, the wonderful photography, lightings, tinting and beauty of the shots taken—all of this testifies to the results of the director's (Raymond B. West's) intention of making his picture one pleasing to the artistic eye. One very beautiful shot was taken from the beach looking seaward towards the ship of Paul Jones looming up in the distance in what appeared to be the rosy light of a dawning day.

Bessie Barriscale makes the part of the vivacious little Irish girl one of continuous delight. She is a "tried and true" actress, and while the part is not as exacting or big as some she has before had, Miss Barriscale makes it a pleasure for the audience and shows that the heavier type of roles are not her only forte. Other players are Arthur Maude, Barney Sherry, Wallace Worsley and Tod Burns.

"Cupid's Rival"

Two-Reel King-Bee Comedy, Featuring Billy West. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

THE entire two reels of "Cupid's Rival" is devoted to fun-making. . It is full of action, entertaining, and contains any number of humorous situations. A certain amount of slapstick comedy has been introduced, without the objectional plays that are so often resorted to. Billy West, as the janitor of the De Luxe Studio Apartments, is the center of attraction.

The story concerns a poor artist, who believes that his sweetheart is untrue. She poses for his professional rival, in order to make enough money to defray the expenses of their coming wedding. Thrilling incidents take place, and through it all, Billy, the janitor, is a prominent figure.

Ethel Burton, as the poor artist's sweetheart, adds much to the fun making of the picture. Ethelyn Gibson as the model plays her part well. Billy West doesn't leave the spectator in doubt as to the fact that he is still a talented comedian. The cast also includes Leo White, Babe Hardy, Budd Rose and Florence McLaughlin.

Arvid E. Gillstrom is credited with the splendid direction of the picture. There are many laughable situations in this offering that make it worth while, and it is sure to be a good attraction. The comedy element has not been forced.

"When Baby Forgot"

Baby Marie Osborne in a New Lasalida-Pathe. Impression by A. E. Curtis

THE little Mary who has been named for the sunshine is a very good little actress, but "When Baby Forgot" left but a series of impressions upon the writer—scattered impressions rather than a definite memory of a strong and well knit plot.

I can see little Miss Marie in a number of interesting and appealing scenelets. I can see her saying her prayer by her mother's side, and then vainly striving to recall it when divorce has taken her mother away. I can see her ill from mother-want, and see the fat and faithful servant save her by bringing the mother back. I can see a little nigger, as black as a new-polished stove, and he is sure to rouse a shower of laughs. I can see the young mother, sincerely played by Margaret Nichols and the young daddy who is handsome, negligent, wealthy and repentant. Then I see the happy-ever-after close.

But the women and children will take to this picture like a duck to a pond. They enjoy, I believe, paddling in such emotions, and they may not miss a plot nor regret the time consumed by the spinning of the picture.

Here is the story. Examine your own impressions.

The little family of three is very happy until the god of Money ordains that the father shall devote his life to the pursuit of gold. Bitterness rises up between the parents. Society flings open its doors to the wife while the husband is buried in his work and the baby is forgotten by both. The result is a separation and Baby Marie goes with her father. There follow days of sunshine and gloom for little Marie. For her mother, the loss of the child is torture.

The baby tries to remember a prayer her mother taught her. She calls upon the various pastors of the city with the plea that they give her a "start" on the prayer, but no one, not even the colored pastor whose church she invades can help. The child becomes ill. Then the faithful butler seeks out someone to give the baby the first lines of the prayer. No one can, till he finds Marie's mother. The mother dashes to the child, whispers the opening lines of the tender little prayer and a double miracle is wrought; the baby regains her health and husband and wife are reunited.

"Some Boy"

William Fox Photoplay in Five Parts Released June 17. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS picture was good for a large number of laughs with the audience where we saw it, and this counts for something, inasmuch as the people were laughing "with" the picture. The thing that brought out more laughs than anything else was the sight of George Walsh, the star, wearing women's clothes. This is a stunt that proceeds from his mind as an enterprising press-agent to capture space for the hotel employing him, in the newspapers. As the "mysterious widow" he makes a hit. The coy smiles, the dainty walk, the womanly gestures, etc., Mr. Walsh has portrayed in a way almost deceiving to the audience. It is hard to believe that the muscular actor could make up as an attractive woman, but facts are hard things. Except for the large mouth that gives him away his woman's smile is a winner—as a woman's smile. This press-agent episode naturally affords a number of ludicrous situations. We find the "widow" taking her puny suitor and throwing him over a wall and accomplishing other muscular feats, and once in a while we get a view of "her" sitting in a chair smoking, with dresses pulled up to the knees.

The press-agent part of the story includes stealing some jewelry for the sake of the publicity. Here Walsh does some climbing around on the outside of the hotel, proving again that he is somewhat of an acrobat. The girl whose jewelry is stolen, is driven away by the noxious limelight before Joyous, the press-agent, has time to restore her gems. He overtakes her on the boat however and returns them, promising to expiate his sin by making a journey to the West and attempting to save the girl's property from the hands of a business pirate. The last half of the story centers around this war of wits, with the pirate proving to be no other person than Joyous' own father, who had sent his son from home at the first of the story. Joyous "puts one over on father," wins the girl, and all ends merrily.

The photography all the way through the offering is of a crystal clearness, and the director, Otis Turner, has certainly provided some interesting comedy detail, handled the players with good effect and given the story the kind of atmosphere that makes it all the more wholesome. William Parker's scenario has given Mr. Walsh a part that enables him to register as a good comedian, and it unfolds a goodly number of sure-fire funny situations. Doris Pawn, as the girl in the case, is an arrestingly dainty and pretty figure on the screen, and this means everything in a part of the kind. She helps the comedy considerably. Other players are Herschel Mayall, Caroline Rankin, Hector Sarno and Velma Whitman, all giving good performances. "Some Boy" is a box-office attraction. It is the kind of picture people are clamoring for more insistently as time advances.

In the African Jungle

Kathleen Williams in a Selig Offering of Two Reels. Released July 2. Reviewed by Lapearl Waggoner

AFTER the wealth of "adult only" pictures that we have finally gotten used to, this two-reeler is refreshing, with its jungle background of skyscraper ferns, palm trees and prairie grass. This is one of the first Selig jungle pictures Kathleen Williams made, with the California brand of sunshine to help make clear photography. Most of the interest will be centered on the tigers, lions, and the faithful elephant, which make of the jungle the living thing you read about.

The story is a simple, plausible one, with some romance and enough adventure. Robert Wayne, a Britisher, is the wild man of the jungle, brought to that state by a blow from a savage arm. Seventeen years later he is discovered by Captain Jones, one of the members of a hunting party. His photograph is incidentally secured and is later shown, by accident, to Robert Wayne's daughter in an English drawing room. She compares the picture with one of her father and believes them to be the same man. A search party is sent to Africa, which Edith and her mother join. Once arrived in the jungle, Edith is captured by a savage chief, who wants her for his harem. She is thrown into a pit of wild animals, and there she sees the wild man, her father, exercise some supernatural power over them, shutting them into a cage. The father's shock at seeing her there restores his memory and he recognizes her as the little girl he left at home, now grown. Father and daughter are rescued by Captain Jones and the horsemen; Captain Jones comes in for no small gratitude. For his reward he receives the hand of Edith, which you know is going to happen all the time.

The thrills of this picture are the kind we used to have when we read Indian tales and Treasure Island, and its wholesome character will recommend it to the small town exhibitor, who wants short ones with action and no problem.

"The Ninth Day," a three-reel western drama, is being produced at Universal City. It features Neal Hart and Janet Eastman.

hubby has taken the baby and moved. Brother sees him take the baby to a boarding school, and then retire to the hotel, where he sends for the doctor. Tony now buys the drug store in order to send his brother-in-law the kind of medicine he wants him to have. Other customers must be served, though, and Tony is about as far from being a druggist as he could be. He secures the services of the village would-be fighter, who knows no more than he. The fun continues for them both until a bomb left by a "black hand" explodes and sends them floating through the air into the boarding schoool. Sister and hubby have meantime made up their differences and just when the school is in the most confusion they call for the baby.

Each of these Hoyt comedies is better than the last, though "A Rag Baby" is not well named. The baby is the sweet and lovable kind, but has small part in the hilarity of the film.

"The Plow Woman"

Five-Reel Butterfly Drama, Released July 1. Reviewed by L. M. Albright

THIS is an improbable picture in which a man curses his wife and kills her because she gives birth to a daughter instead of a son; in which he is struck by lightning when he raises his hand against one of his daughters; and in which Indians shooting Springfield rifles, and others still using bows and arrows, make an attack upon a fortified palisade. The story is rather confusing, and lots of inexplicable changes in character occur. The acting is only fair. Mary MacLaren is beautiful as the daughter of the cursing Andy MacTavish, but is handicapped by her part, and the same is true of the rest.

The story deals with the suffering of a girl who takes the responsibilities of a household upon herself and who suffers constant abuse from her father while making sacrifices for her younger sister. She loves an army officer, who in the end marries her sister. She has to content herself with plowing the fields and working on the farm. Action is engendered in the play by a number of Indian attacks inspired by a halfbreed. During the last of these attacks the halfbreed suddenly determines to defend the girl and is killed in the attempt. Mary, however, is rescued by a troop of soldiers from the fort and goes back to her father and drudgery.

MAYOR THANKS "OUR MARY"

THE mayor, as well as the Liberty Loan committee of San Francisco, recently announced that the $43,000,000 appropriation for the sale of Liberty Bonds had been reached and that Mary Pickford was largely instrumental in obtaining the $11,000,000 shortage which threatened them. At Frisco's big Auditorium this amount was subscribed when a final big mass meeting at which "Our Mary" acted as the guest of honor, took place.

In a letter to the Artcraft star, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., said:

"Your presence at the big Liberty Loan Mass Meeting at the Auditorium on Wednesday night and simple, sincere and convincing message that you there delivered to the people of San Francisco, were so deeply appreciated by all who had to do with the collection of San Francisco's quota of the Liberty Loan, that I, as Mayor, wish to thank you for what you did and to tell you that you will always receive the welcome of a true friend when you come to San Francisco.

"The thousands at the Auditorium knew that your heart was back of every word that you said, and your words were more far reaching than you may have realized. Members of the Liberty Loan Committees here join me in this expression of thanks to you for your participation in our patriotic demonstration."

Miss Pickford was appearing in "The Little American," her great patriotic picture, near San Francisco when she was approached by the Liberty Bonds committee to help them. She gladly consented and will within the next ten days appear at San Jose and several other cities at similar meetings.

Little Bobby Connelly, Greater Vitagraph's juvenile star, fell from the running board of an automobile recently and suffered a fracture of the left arm. This did not cause even a temporary let-up in his work for the Bobby Series in which he is soon to be featured, because his director immediately wrote a scenario in which the broken arm figures prominently, and work is going on as usual. Bobby's injury was a peculiar one and for four hours it was not realized that his arm was broken. When he fell, his mother, who was near, picked him up and examined his arm, but when she asked Bobby if it hurt, he said: "Only a little bit." The X-ray revealed a slight fracture.

Marine scenes are "Fatty's" latest hobby. Mr. Arbuckle of the generous dimensions has been in training as a merman for many weeks. Frequenters of the Long Island and Jersey coasts know him as an intrepid deep sea diver.

One of the veteran female attaches of the Vitagraph studio in Flatbush is dead. She was buried in a little plot near the studio grounds. A funeral attended by actors, stage hands and other workers at the studio was held and there was sincere mourning, because the deceased, while only thirteen years old, had been one of the most valuable workers at the Vitagraph plant and one of the most efficient. She not only had appeared in scores of pictures during her career, but also had been one of the guardians of the studio, protecting wardrobe and scenery from the inroads of rats, mice, etc.

The deceased was "Gasoline," the studio cat.

Eddie Polo, who has attained world-wide fame as a Universal actor and who appears in prominent roles in serial productions, has signed a two-year contract with President Carl Laemmle. He will be featured in productions suited to his physical prowess.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has induced Helen Gibson, made famous by film fans through the world for her fearlessness and daring in the serial, "The Hazards of Helen," to join the acting forces at Universal City and she will be featured in railroad stories.

Overalls, or rather the new "womanalls," threaten to banish all more elaborate costumes from the wardrobe of Norma Talmadge, at least until fall. Not being able to enlist in the army or navy she is going in for gardening with characteristic enthusiasm. Miss Talmadge has been working recently on "The Moth," said to be her most successful screen effort.

The first near-drowning of the season is reported from Santa Barbara. William Russell, the American Film star, and George Fisher, his support, were the principals. Russell was to rescue Fisher from a heavy sea for the camera. Fisher got beyond his depth; Russell was delayed in starting. When the rescue was finally effected, George had but a fighting chance to live. Pulmotors and first-aid exercises won the life-fight. After a while George sat up and remarked: "Gee! I'll bet that'll be the real stuff on the screen." You'll see it in a future feature, as yet untitled.

Pearl White is the star in the new serial, "The Fatal Ring," and the following words of unusual simple and direct advice are worth while not only for those of her own sex, but for men as well, if they have any idea of obtaining fame as motion picture actors:

"I am not particularly keen on giving advice, but that's why I tell the girls who write me, 'Learn to be strong.' There are a few rules that I have adopted myself that may be of some help to any of the young persons aspiring to serial stardom and here they are:

"Learn to breathe deeply. I practice it in the open air, winter and summer, and usually in the unspoiled backwoods if I can get to them. If I didn't, I don't know how I could get out of some of the burning traps in which Pathe's unscrupulous bad men are continually leaving me bound and almost helpless. I have learned to hold my breath with smoke and fire all about me. It's a handy little trick to know.

"Next, do lots of walking. Moving picture work is not all joy riding and if you haven't a good pair of sturdy legs, you'll be carried out on a stretcher.

"Third, learn a few of the tricks that made John L. Sullivan as well known as the King of England. I don't mean you need become a prize-fighter, but accidents will happen. When your partner in adventure, a big husky man, lets a right arm go to put you to sleep as per scene 123 of some scenario, if you can catch it on your forearm instead of your eye, it would help a little, wouldn't it? Also, it's not a bad idea to learn how to do a fall safely, even if not gracefully.

"Fourth, try to eliminate fear. If you must get hurt, dreading it won't avoid it. Timidity—a polite name for lack of courage—is undoubtedly one of the greatest handicaps of the average girl.

"I could carry this on down to tenthly and further, like the old New England preachers, but this is enough for one time. The point is learn to be self-reliant and there is no self-reliance without strength.

"And, of course, there is such a thing as the art of acting. But that deserves a chapter for itself."

Jerry's Star Bout — (One Reel) — Horsley-Mutual—July 19.—Jerry takes his best girl out in his "flivver" and they have a blow-up, with nobody hurt. Jerry makes an attempt to repair the machine, but girlie is peeved at the delay, and when a prize fighter, "Big Noise Bill," out for exercise, stops and offers to take her home in his racer, she accepts his invitation. Arrived at the house, Big Noise Bill makes himself obnoxious to both the girl and her father, so that they are glad to see Jerry coming. Jerry has traded his "flivver" for the policeman's bicycle, much to that worthy's chagrin. He arrives at the home of his girl just as Big Noise Bill is about to leave, and suffers several indignities at his hands. Father has not approved of Jerry's suit for his daughter's hand before, but he tells Jerry that he will consent to the marriage if he will lick the bully. Jerry does it that night with the aid of a rubber bulb filled with ammonia and ends by putting the referee out of commission as well. He has a narrow escape from the hands of the mob, but finally succeeds in leaping from a telegraph pole into his sweetheart's fast-moving automobile.

When Lula Danced the Hula—(One Reel)—La Salle-Mutual—July 10.—Billie is in debt and hounded by collectors. He faces the alternative of marrying Matie, a dancing girl, and being disinherited by his uncle, or taking as his bride Lula, uncle's rich client. He consents to take Lula, and during the engagement they visit the show where Matie dances. Lula is jealous of the applause Matie receives and Billie's evident admiration. She secretly learns to dance, and it is arranged for her to take Matie's place for one evening. Matie has won uncle, too, with her dancing, and he seeks her out. He is fooled by the paint that covers Lula, and just as he embraces her he is confronted by Matie and Billie. Uncle is a good sport and consents to take Lula himself.

Jerry at the Waldorf—(One Reel)—Horsley—July 12.—Jerry ducks his room rent once too often. He is ordered from the house. In attempting to get away with his baggage he drops his trunk on a policeman's head and bumps into the landlady on his exit. He raises the price of a hotel room by exercising his wits in a barroom. He engages a room in a fashionable hotel. He starts for the bathroom, attired in pajamas, and invades a room occupied by a newly married couple. He rushes to cover in a bathroom where he meets an old man who falls into a faint. He administers illuminating gas while he gets into his clothes. Escaping via the fire-escape, he runs into an interesting adventure with a squad of poker-playing policemen, who catch him and take him to jail.

Universal Program

Kitchenella — Joker — July 14. — With Gale Henry, Milton Sims and Charles Haefli. Kitchenella wants to go to the Street Sweepers' ball. Count Jassbo has left a note of vital importance in the toe of one of a pair of old slippers, for his confederate, Mike. The landlady throws them out of the window and Kitchenella finds them. She puts them on, and with a gown made out of a lace curtain and using the workbasket for a hat, goes to the ball. The count and Mike search the feet of every woman in the place, hunting for the slippers, but fail to find them. The next day the count puts an ad in the paper, saying that he will marry the girl who has the mate of the slipper which he found at the ball. Kitchenella had thrown it at her stepsister. She reads the ad and rushes to meet the count. His confederate drops a brick on her head and she collapses, while the count beats it with the slipper.

Meet My Wife—Victor—July 12.—With Neal Hart and Mignon Anderson. The boys of the Flying W and Circle C ranches are fighting. Violet arrives with a tale of woe and all the boys fall for it. She relieves them of their money. Neal thinks Violet his ideal, and is inspired by reading Lochinvar to try to steal her. The boys arrange a championship fight, the loser, who represents one side ,to stay away from Violet. The big fight is on, Neal grabs Violet and runs away with her. He ropes the minister and makes him marry them. When the boys appear he calmly tells them, "Meet my wife."

The Paper Hanger's Revenge—Victor—July 10.—Margaret Whistler, Eileen Sedgwick, Ralph McComas and Charles Haefli. Miss Prued refuses the boss of the paperhangers, so he refuses to finish his job. Newlywed, who has rented the house, determines to do the papering himself. In revenge the boss tells Mrs. Newlywed that her husband is spending all of his time with Miss Prued. She rushes to the place, but is pacified when she sees the receipt for the rent.

Hatton of Headquarters—Imp—July 15.—With Lee Hill and Agnes Vernon. Rose refuses to work as a tool for the gang of which Big Tim is the leader. She loves Hatton, a detective, but her father wants her to marry Tim. The boss goes to her room and tells her that his men are watching for Hatton and intend to kill him. Hatton, who has been hiding, pounces on him and there is a fight in which Tim is knocked senseless. Slim and the other crooks break down the door. In the midst of the fight the police arrive.

Kicked Out—(Two Reels)—Victor—July 13. —With Carter De Haven. Carter, in order to win the girl he loves, must prove himself worthy. He is sent to get an interview with John Dollar who has a hatred for all things connected with nwspapers. Somehow or other a snapshot is taken of Carter and the editor's wife. The film falls into the editor's hands and he orders it developed. In the meanwhile Carter is successful in rescuing John Dollar from some crooks. Out of gratitude Dollar offers Carter anything he wants, and he immediately asks for an interview. Then he hurries to the editor's house with his scoop. The editor is pleased, but the clerk arrives with the printed picture. This proves to be Carter's undoing, for before he can explain the editor grabs him and throws him out. Carter finds himself alone with the "Welcome" doormat under his arm.

Bombs and Bandits — (Two Reels) — L-Ko—July 4.—With Vin Moore, Bill Bevan, Sammy Burns and Dolly Dimples. The Mayor and the Chief of Police are both enamored of the Chief's pretty stenographer. But Dolly gives most of her attention to young Sammy, secretary to the Mayor. The two old chaps each wager $10,000 on the winner of fair Dolly's hand. They place their money with Sammy. The temptation is too great. He calls Dolly and asks her to beat it to Mexico with him. In Mexico they fall into the clutches of the bandit chief and his men. The Mayor receives a message that the two young people are being held for ransom. They immediately call out the police and the railroad cops and set out for Mexico. The advance guard arrives, the bride is saved from a fiery death, but Sammy is heartlessly left to be pushed over the edge, twenty thousand and all.

The Warning—Episode No. 3 of The Gray Ghost—July 9.—With Priscilla Dean and Harry Carter. At the theater, Hildreth sits in a box with two crooks, who are men working for the Gray Ghost. A boy hands Hildreth a message, which says to come to Morn Light's dressing-room. He goes. Morn Light writes on a paper that he is Ted Daly, not to ask any questions, but to meet her at 12 in the private dining-room at Bishop's. Two hours later the Gray Ghost learns that they have been foiled again. Hildreth calls up the Arabin home and finds that Mr. Arabin has not been in New York all day. Morn Light calls up Hildreth to warn him not to return to the hotel. The Gray Ghost enters and goes forward to take her in his arms, but she wards him off with a paper-knife.

Hearts and Flour—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—July 11.—With Eva Novak, Charles Ryckman, Tom Delmar and Bob McKenzie. The grocery boy loves the boss' daughter, and so does the butcher boy. Eva, however, favors the former. When she shows her preference so plainly, it starts a fight, in which the stock of the store suffers severely. Many thrilling incidents take place. Finally Ryck and Eva plan to elope. Ryck manages to exchange the buggy for a car, grabs the minister and makes him marry them, while the disappointed Tom beans the boss with a flower-pot.

Universal Screen Magazine — Issue No. 27—July 13.—A demonstration of the evils of bad sitting postures while working at a desk is the first subject. Exercises to counteract the bad effects of sedentary pursuits are shown. Then comes the manufacture of a baseball, from the winding of the heart of yarn to the stamping of the trade-mark. The Screen Magazine has started a question department, which furnishes a lot of humor. Science is represented by a demonstration of the unsuspected properties of well-known substances. At the end is a clay cartoon by Willie Hopkins entitled "The Vegetable Kingdom."

The Punishment—Big U—July 15.—Big Bill was down on his luck and his family was starving. He rushed into the saloon where a game was in progress and grabbed what money he could lay his hands on. He took the money to his wife and then tried to make his escape. The sheriff with the boys pursued him. When the boys saw the pitiful condition of the family they relented and decided to let him go. They even took up a subscription for his wife, sending her the money with a note saying that they had given Bill a chance to make good.

Minding the Baby—Nestor—July 9.—With Eddie Lyons, Edith Roberts and Lee Moran. Mrs. Youngwed leaves baby with hubby. When the baby cries Mr. Youngwed gets the janitor to make faces at it. They consult the doctor book. The nigger baby from next door crawls in and their baby crawls out. They think that the child has turned black and try all sorts of things. Mrs. Youngwed comes home and is in despair, when the colored woman rushes in with the white baby and the mystery is solved.

In the Rocks of India—(Split Reel)—Powers —July 15.—With Dr. Dorsey. Some of the wonderful rock carvings of India are shown in this educational. Temples cut from the solid rock and then adorned with sculptured elephants and lions are seen. The elephant has been a favorite subject with Indian sculptors for thousands of years. Some of the strange, many-armed gods are seen. Pilgrimages to famous shrines are caught by the camera. All Hindus love pilgrimages. On the same reel is "Monkey Love."

Monkey Love—(Split Reel).—The flirt, a comely young lady monkey, tries to make monkeys of all the other animals in the jungle. The elephant, the leopard and all of them fall for her, but she loves another monkey. They are broken-hearted when she marries him, but their revenge is complete when they see him out walking with a whole row of little monkeys, and the cost of living going up all the time. Released with "In the Rocks of India."

A Limb of Satan—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal —July 10.—With Ruth Stonehouse, Jack Dill and Chester Bennett. Naida is the terror of the orphan asylum. Giovanni, a strolling musician, comes each day to play for her. Finally Naida tells him her loathing for the place and begs him to take her away. One night she slips out to the patiently waiting Giovanni. Two years later Giovanni, who has been failing in health, dies. Naida is found by Hugh Converse, a sculptor, who became blind at the beginning of his career, and is taken home to his mother. Learning that if he had enough money to undergo an operation his sight would be restored, Naida determines to secure the much-needed money. She obtains a place in the home of Mr. Westlake and robs him of $500. However, the guilty one is discovered, but Mr. Westlake takes Hugh's promise that he will repay the money as soon as possible. A year later Hugh's operation has proven successful and he and Naida are happy in their love for each other.

Three Women of France—(Two Reels)—Rex —July 12.—Adelaide Woods, Irene Hunt, Virginia Lee, Richard Ryan and Jack Mulhall. Sister Genevieve, who knew not the sorrow of sin, helped care for wounded soldiers in the hospital. Fifi, on the other hand, had known sin in all its ugliness, but had given everything to the great war, even herself. Lieutenant Dubois was in love with Amiee Renfret, whost husband was in the trenches. She made arrangements to go to Paris with him during his furlough. Wounded, Raoul Renfret was brought to the hospital. When Sister Genevieve saw him, she recalled the days when he and she were sweethearts; they had quarreled and he had never returned. She then became a nun. Fifi sinks to her knees by the bed of Raoul and tells the Sister that he was the first man who ever treated her as a good woman and who made her want to be good in return. Fifi determines that Amiee shall stay there to save him. She goes to the lieutenant and suggests that he take her instead of Amiee. He finally agrees. Fifi had made her final sacrifice.

Double Suspicion—(Two Reels)—Bison—July 14.—With Neal Hart, George Berrell, Joe Rickson and Janet Eastman. Neal is the sheriff of Red Rock County. Joe, a thief, arives in the town with his wife and child. That night Joe breaks into the grocery store. Neal goes to the store to get a package that the storekeeper is to leave for him. Pop, his partner, follows him.

Neal gets the package, but Pop, hiding behind some of the buildings, does not see him leave. Going to the front of the store, Pop sees that some one is robbing the safe and believes that it is Neal. He then enters the place and puts some of his things near the safe, so that the blame of the robbery will be placed on him. He leaves the town. The robbery is discovered and Pop is thought to be the guilty one. Later, Joe is shot, and the money taken from the Red Rock store is found on his body. Pop returns to the town and learns that Neal was not guilty. Neal is given the reward for capturing Joe, and divides it with Joe's wife.

The Reed Case—(FIVE REELS)—BUTTERFLY—JULY 9.—With Allen Holubar and Louise Lovely. Jerry Brennon, a detective, is sent to the Adirondacks for his health. Helen Reed is courted by Schuyler Hastings, whom her mother favors, but of whom the father is doubtful. Helen tells Schuyler that he must do something worth while, for the man she marries must be one whom she can look up to and admire. When Jerry wakes in the morning, two bullets whiz past him and lodge in the bed. Then he finds a note on the door which warns him to get out. Jerry discovers a secret door, and upon forcing it finds a girl huddled on a bed, weeping bitterly. It is Helen, and she tells Jerry how she was kidnaped while shopping. Jerry makes his way to the village and soon returns with the sheriff and his men. When the gangsters arrive a terrific fight takes place, but they are soon overpowered by the sheriff and his men. "The Gent" speaks up and says that Schuyler hired him to kidnap the girl; they were to demand a ransom and he was to receive the glory of rescuing her. Then Jerry proudly introduces his future wife to them all.

The Luck of Roaring Camp—EDISON—K. E. S. E. PROGRAM—JULY 9.—Roaring Camp is a small mining town and has but little use for strangers. The leader of the camp is Old Man Tuttle, who keeps the general store. One afternoon a half-breed drifts into the camp leading a mule, but is invited to "get out." He leaves, hurling curses and vowing to get even. When the stage comes in that afternoon there is a passenger, a half-breed woman, with a baby in her arms. She is half dead from starvation and hardship and dies in the camp, leaving the little girl. The camp adopts her, calling her The Kid. One day she wanders from the camp and is stolen by the half-breed who cursed them. Oakhurst, the clever gambler, sees the half-breed and draws his gun. The half-breed threatens to kill the child if one move is made. Some of the miners, looking for the child, come upon them and a sure and straight shot puts the half-breed out of business. When they come to the child, playing with some bright stones, they find she has a stone streaked with virgin gold. The Kid has been the means of finding a gold mine and again bringing luck to Roaring Camp.

Light in Darkness—EDISON—(FIVE REELS)—K. E. S. E.—JULY 9.—With Shirley Mason and Frank Morgan. Ramsey Latham, cashier of the Traders' Bank and Trust Company, is convicted for violation of the banking laws, when he is perfectly innocent. In the county jail he awaits transportation to the penitentiary. As they are about to start out, prisoners break from the jail and the sheriff cannot go, so Sheriff Brad Milligan from another county takes Latham. The door of the prison opens and Latham sees a sweet, wistful maiden who gives him her sympathy. She is also a prisoner, but he does not know this until arrived at the prison. When they have each been paroled for some months they meet again by accident and soon they are married. Latham takes her to a ranch at Santa Paula which his attorneys have purchased for him. Two years elapse and a little child is born to them. Then the shadow of evil falls over them. It is unlawful for paroled prisoners to marry. Sheriff Milligan visits them, but the sight of their happiness is too much for him, and he leaves, telling Latham he is going to see the Governor. When he has finished his story the Governor gives the two their pardons and the child's second name is Bradley, for the sheriff, but the first is for the Governor.

When Sorrow Weeps—DO CHILDREN COUNT? SERIES—ESSANAY—(SCREEN TIME 25 MINS.)—JULY 18.—Featuring little Mary McAlister. Rags, a penniless orphan, flees from child welfare workers and an orphan asylum. Simultaneously, Caroline Busby, whose husband is a crook, regrets her past and starts for another city. The child and the woman meet and decide to begin life over again together. They are happy for a time, then the woman's husband locates her and demands protection from the police. Caroline wants to live straight and turns her husband over to detectives. He accuses her as his accomplice. The couple and the child are arrested. Busby is sent to prison and his wife discharged. The judge, at the protest of philanthropists, orders the child to an orphan asylum. Grief-stricken over this loss, Caroline hurls herself into a river.

The Uneven Road—DO CHILDREN COUNT? SERIES—ESSANAY—(SCREEN TIME 25 MINS.)—Featuring Little Mary McAllister. Ruin faces Dan Carlson. He has lost his all on "war brides." Worse still, his child, Agnes, is going blind for lack of an operation. Milton Douglass is infatuated with pretty Mrs. Carlson. He discovers Dan's plight and seeks to force his attentions on the latter's wife by offering her money to save her child's eyes. Mrs. Carlson is on the eve of selling herself to Douglass for little Agnes' sake. Carlson is planning suicide. He suddenly meets an old friend, however, who is looking for a factory site and selects a plot of land on which Carlson has an old option. With the money in his hand Carlson races home, arriving just in time to save his wife from her sacrifice.

Captains of Tomorrow—EDISON—K. E. S. E. PROGRAM OF JULY 9.—This picture, in 345 feet, depicts our future captains at the drills and maneuvers at West Point. Afoot and on horse they are shown in inspiring and heart-quickening action. The film is strengthened with appropriate and patriotic sub-titles—quotations from the ringing lines of our country's best poems. It is surcharged with American spirit; thrilling and inspirational.

The Golden Idiot — ESSANAY — (SCREEN TIME 65 MINS.).—Starring Bryant Washburn. Barry Owen and his cousin Walter Woolwich will receive the fortune of their uncle on his death in proportion to the amount they have saved. Walter Woolwich is a broker, a prosperous one. Barry is a reporter and penniless. With his three-legged dog, Pod Barry starts out to win fickle fortune. Faith Fanshawe's automobile has broken down and Barry fixes it. She gives him a fifty cent piece and he keeps it in remembrance of her. He next meets Jeffrey Jarvis, a writer who becomes interested in Pod and Barry and introduces Barry at the Country Club. Here he rescues Faith from drowning and soon they are in love with one another. Barry is too poor to offer Faith his heart, but Uncle Woolwich dies at the time when Walter is swamped by the market and deep in debt. Barry, thus enriched, marries the beautiful Faith.

He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning—EDISON—K. E. S. E. PROGRAM, JULY 9.—Jonah Morpheum liked his bed. He wanted to get to the office on time but he couldn't seem to wake up. Tying a string to his toe and having some one pull the string was tried, but to no avail. When Peggy, the maid, finally got him up he has wild adventures getting to the office, only to be abused by the boss for being late. At the end of the day he gets a big alarm clock and the tenants of the building are driven distracted next morning. In one last attempt to get up, Jonah has a strong rope tied to his feet and has his friend pull the rope when he is passing in the morning. His friend ties the rope to a wagon and Jonah is pulled out; a blast explodes and blows him into the office.

Triangle

Cupid's Rival — (TWO REELS) — KING-BEE.—Featuring Billy West. This is an amusing comedy which shows the trials and troubles of a poor artist and his sweetheart. Billy, the janitor, is an important character. He goes through many exciting experiences. Reviewed in this issue.

World

The Brand of Satan—(FIVE REELS)—WORLD—JULY 9.—Featuring Montagu Love. Jaques Cordet is a criminal prosecutor in France and lives with his mother, Christine. While under the spell of a strange malady Jaques becomes the leader of a band of Apaches, Lazard. As Lazard he meets Marie, daughter of Manuel, the strangler. As Jaques he loves Natalia, the daughter of his mother's old lover, Despard. While in the pesonality of Lazard he robs Despard's home, murdering the butler. Marie finds that he is both men, and tries to make him understand, but does not succeed until as Lazard he attacks Natalia. He is about to give himself up for the murder of the butler when Marie calls his attention to the bomb he has put under his desk, while in the character of Lazard. The premature explosion robs Marie of her life, but not until she swears he is not guilty of the crime. Despard consents to his marriage to Natalia after an operation has cured him of his malady.

General Program

In the African Jungle—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—JULY 2.—Featuring Kathlyn Williams. Seventeen years before the story opens Robert Wayne was felled by a savage blow in the African jungle, lost his memory and became a wild man of the forest, lived as the savages do and learned to handle the fierce animals of the forest in a wonderful way. One day he is discovered by Captain Jones, a British sportsman, who secures his photograph. In an English home he shows the pictures of the jungle to a pretty girl whose father has been lost. She recognizes the picture of the wild man, and a search party is organized, leaving at once for Africa. The father and daughter are reunited in a den of wild beasts, thrown there by the savages, and his uncanny power over the forest animals saves them. Seeing his daughter restores his memory, and the ending is a happy one.

Checkmate — (ONE REEL) — SELIG—JULY 7. — John Strong and his adopted son, Hal, are both fond of chess and play an evenly matched game. Hal, en route to a summer resort, meets Vivian Carew, an unscrupulous woman, and when she finds that he is the adopted son of John Strong she tries to fascinate him by her wiles. Hal becomes very much in love with her, and when Strong appears on the scene refuses to give her up. William Clark, a friend of Strong's, tells him of the woman's past. Then he takes a hand in life's chess game. He visits Vivian Carew and peads with her to give the boy up. When his pleadings fail he tells her of his knowledge of her life. It is Checkmate for the woman, who leaves for Japan immediately, and Strong and the boy resume their chess games.

Strictly Business — (TWO REELS) — O. HENRY FEATURE—GENERAL.—Bob Hart, vaudeville actor, has written a sketch, "Mice Will Play," and he has looked in vain for the right girl to play it with him. One day he sees Cherry in a vaudeville turn and visits her at her boarding house to talk business. At the try-out it makes a big hit and the manager signs it up for a long circuit. That night Bob takes Cherry home and she invites him home and makes him a "strictly business" proposition. After two years successful run on circuit Cherry becomes very nervous one night and instead of shooting the picture's face she shoots Bob in the neck. He falls, she faints and the audience is delighted. Bob is only slightly hurt, but Cherry is heartbroken. When Bob's friend tells him that the girl is "crying her eyes out for him," Bob is incredulous. Cherry, he says, is strictly business. His friend tells him that it is the truth, and then Bob tells him that he and Cherry have been married for two years.

A Candy Jag—(ONE REEL).—Starring Johnny and Emma Ray. Mugsey buys a new suit. The pants are too long and he asks his wife to shorten them. She is too busy with "society," and so is daughter. Mugsey finally has the colored cook cut the trousers. About this time daughter and mother each decide to fix the trousers, and each cuts a generous slice off them. When Mugsey puts them on they are too short for anyone but a young boy. It is a day of happenings for Mugsey. While shopping with mother and daughter in a department store he amuses himself by getting into everything he shouldn't. Finally he sets off a fine firework display, and before they can get to him he cuts some toy balloons and sails away out of their reach.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Chicago Notes

THOS. H. INCE passed through the city last Saturday after having signed up with Paramount in New York.

William Weinshenker has been added to the sales force of the Selznick force.

F. M. Brockell, manager of the Chicago Goldwyn office, was ready on Monday, July 2, to talk business.

Si Griever, in his exchange directly across the hall from Pathe, escaped all loss from the big Pathe fire. Charmed life, Si?

There was a good deal of consternation among big, first run exhibitors, when the news leaked out that Major Funkhouser had held up Mary Pickford's latest play, "The Little American."

The new Goldwyn offices on the third floor of the Orpheum Theater Building are rapidly assuming business like appearances.

S. J. Goldman of the Selznick's office has been spending the past week in Milwaukee amongst the exhibitors and has brought back some fine business.

Harry Weiss, manager of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., of Chicago, expects to start out the last of July on a three weeks' automobile trip in the interests of his firm.

Arrangements have been made by the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation for the use of the Rothacker studio during several weeks in July which they will devote to the production of their first picture featuring Elsie MacKay.

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company has just finished a single reel novelty picture typical of a day at Riverview Park and another single reel novelty

Sid Abel claims that Vitagraph captured State street on June 21, when the Castle and the Orpheum both ran Vitagraph features. The former ran "The Maelstrom" and "The Soul Master" headed the Orpheum bill.

Samuel Smith, a recent guest at the Jackson Hotel, at Halsted and Jackson boulevard, reported to the police last week that a three-reel film owned by him and valued at $2,000, had been stolen from his room. The picture was "In the Hands of the Law."

At the present writing the local Selznick office is handling such new features as "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," "The Barrier," "The Crisis," "On Trial," Redemption," "Parentage," etc.

Fred C. Aikin, one of the most popular men in the motion picture industry, has been elected a guiding spirit of the Edmund M. Allen Film Corp. Despite the fact that Mr. Aikin is busily engaged in the state rights field for the Selig Polyscope Company, he plans to spend a portion of every working day in Allen offices, 29 South LaSalle street, where, in association with Edmund M. Allen, Harry J. Ridings, Joseph Harris and other officers of the Allen Company, a pretentious campaign for "The Garden of Allah" will be formulated and launched.

William H. Maher is going into the theater business with both feet. He has taken over the Shakespeare Theater, 43rd and Ellis, and is said to be eyeing some other desirable showhouses. The Clifton on Wilson avenue, owned by him, must be one of the paying kind, or he wouldn't be expanding right now.

N. J. Baumer, vice-president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, just returned from a tour of observation throughout the East. E. H. Philippi, sales manager for Rothaker, has left for a business trip through Michigan.

A meeting of the executive council of the Advertising Film Producers Association will be held at the Rothacker studio, July 16, which is the opening day of the big convention. During the convention the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will also spend one day inspecting the Rothacker laboratory and studio.

H. E. Gramp of Rockford, Illinois, who fought Sunday closing of theaters in his city to the extent of getting himself arrested, was in Chicago last week. For just two weeks Rockford was filmless on Sundays and then the proposition was put before the people for a referendum vote and the theaters won. Gramp defied the law the first Sunday Rockford went film dry and ran the "Life of Our Savior" for which he was pinched.

When Ralph Proctor's inspection vault gave out a few spurts of fire and smoke last week the other film exchanges in the College building showed how fast they can move. Within fifteen seconds after the alarm, Alfred Hamburger's lieutenant was on the street with his arms full of records. Sid Abel had everything vaulted and his employees out and about the same things happened at the Klein office and the other exchanges. As the girls from the business college were marching to safety, one of them fainted from fright.

Rothacker has just received the first consignment of exposed negative from Charles Hugo, camera operator who is now in the extreme East securing moving pictures typical of life, industries and sceneries of Japan, China, Sumatra, Java, Borneo and India.

Mr. Aikin's years of experience in the film industry and his personal acquaintanceship with all those who are influential in the picture world, points to him as one man in a thousand to be chosen to assist in starting the Edmund H. Allen Company on a prosperous career. The company is planning an elaborate booking and publicity campaign in eight states for "The Garden of Allah."

On Friday night, June 29, the Reel Fellows held another good old fashioned meeting with a smoker and free luncheon, at their attractive club rooms at 207 S. Wabash avenue. Various interesting matters came up for discussion and the Reel Fellows have planned to do some real things at the time of the exposition. One event will be a big movie ball, to be given at the Hotel Morrison, Saturday evening, July 21, the grand march to be lead by several prominent stars.

National Convention Opens

COMPLETE PRCGRAM OF BIG EXFOSITON AT CHICACO JULY 14 to 22

BY the time the majority of MOTOGRAPHY readers peruse this story, the Seventh Annual Motion Picture Exposition and Convention will have thrown open its doors in Chicago.

The exposition at the big Coliseum opens at 11 a. m., Saturday, July 14. The star performer scheduled for the opening is Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. He will address the picture men and their guests and include in his talk a hearty welcome to Illinois and Chicago. At the launching of the 1916 convention, Governor Dunne performed the same function.

The convention opens at the Coliseum Annex, Monday, July 16, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. President Lee A. Ochs will call the meeting to order, and from present indications there will be a record-breaking attendance of exhibitors. There will also be on the floor a number of the prominent producers and other film men. An unusually large number of very vital topics will be taken up at the sessions of the convention.

100,000 at Exposition Last Year

Last year at the close of the convention, it was conservatively estimated that more than 100,000 people visited the Chicago Coliseum. Owing to the fact that the picture industry is continually growing in importance and popular favor, and because of this year's growth over last year, this attendance will undoubtedly be exceeded this year.

Among the attractive and beautiful exhibits to be thrown open to the public gaze, are the following:

Not Too Late to Go

It is still not too late to plan to attend the convention and exposition. Chicago is reached very quickly and the importance and interest of the convention and exposition merit a generous expense of time and effort to be present. Hundreds of additional exhibitors will be present this year and not a single one will regret his visit to Chicago and his share in handling the big questions of the day.

Among the many organizations to hold conventions during the big convention, are the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, the F.I.L.M. Clubs, and others. The National Association will hold its first annual meeting of members on Wednesday, July 18, 11 a. m., at the Princess Theater, Chicago. This will be an important session and members present will represent every branch of the industry.

Stars Contribute to Red Cross

A large number of articles have been sent to the exposition headquarters for the Red Cross booth, which is to be in charge of Chicago's society women. The articles are to be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Mary Miles Minter, and others, have sent in their contributions. All other motion picture players are requested to follow suit. The articles should be sent to the exposition headquarters, 1416 Masonic Temple, Chicago, marked "For the Red Cross booth."

Selig Donates $500

Col. William N. Selig on July 9 turned over the very generous donation of $500 for the exposition to Exposition Director Ludwig Schindler. The Selig Polyscope Company will have no booth of its own but will be represented in the K. E. S. E. booth.

Herrington Runs for Presidency

Fred J. Herrington has announced that he will be a candidate for the presidency of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Mr. Herrington has already served a term as president of the League, having been elected at San Francisco in July, 1915, and remaining in office until the election of Lee A. Ochs at the Chicago Convention of July, 1916. Mr. Harrington left the league free from debt and with a surplus in the treasury.

On retiring from the presidency, Mr. Herrington was appointed National Organizer and has succeeded in bringing into the national body many new states and all of the states which had seceded or become disorganized. Mr. Herrington says he presents himself as a candidate on his record and achievements, believing that actions speak louder than words.

Among the other candidates for the presidency of the League are Lee A. Ochs, present president, H. B. Varner, North Carolina, Rogers of Minneapolis, and Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana.

Farrar Starts Picture Soon

Geraldine Farrar, who will soon make her debut as an Artcraft star under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, is at present making a motor trip with her husband Lou Tellegen. The couple have been touring the northern part of California and are expected back at the Lasky studio very soon.

The Butcher Boy, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"Good slapstick. Good business."—Hardwick Bros., Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

The Crucible, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Second showing. Good business. Good picture."—Hardwick Bros., Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

The Years of the Locust, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"Old-time stuff. A poor title. Fair business."—Hardwick Bros., Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

Womanhood (Vitagraph special)—"A wonderful production. Makes them cry and laugh and think. Brings 'em back. Book it, sure. Good business."—Hardwick Bros., Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

The Magnificent Meddler, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"This is a fair picture with a few laughs and a little old-time horseback riding. Moreno has a part that is good, but he is capable of better things."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Soul Master, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A very nice picture which went over well."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Dawn of Freedom, with Charles Richman (Vitagraph)—"A splendid picture."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Money Magic, with Edith Storey and William Duncan (Vitagraph)—"If Bill Duncan is as good in the new serial that's coming as he is in this picture, 'he's a dinger.' "—A. W. Barth, Amuzu Theater, Carbondale, Illinois.

The Girl Philippa, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"An excellent production. Good business. Pleased patrons."—Hardwick Bros., Lyceum Theater, Clovis, New Mexico.

The Girl Philippa, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"When a picture packs 'em in like this one did for me, I'll say it's good. Can't beat it for drawing power."—A. W. Barth, Amuzu Theater, Carbondale, Illinois.

The Girl Philippa, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A pretty good picture, but it did not draw well. It was a repeat, and I think everyone had seen it the first time."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Hawk, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Excellent business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

Her Secret, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Pretty fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Glory of Yolanda, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Some cast, some directing, some story, some photography, some business! Thanks to Vitagraph!"—A. W. Barth, Amuzu Theater, Carbondale, Illinois.

My Fighting Gentleman, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"A wonderful picture. Business fair. The star is not yet well enough known."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Washington.

Lonesome Town, with Kolb and Dill (American-Mutual)—"Excellent as a comedy feature. Business good."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Washington.

Youth's Endearing Charm, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Star, good; direction, fair; business, fair. The star is not well known here."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Washington.

Periwinkle, with Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)—"Mary Miles Minter is becoming a real box office attraction and this story is one that pleases. It is a nice, clean picture."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

---

The Immigrant, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"An excellent box office attraction. Everybody pleased. Besides, it is a clean comedy."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

The Immigrant, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"A very good picture. Chaplin always packs them in."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

---

Annie for Spite, with Mary Miles Minter (Mutual)—"The star is fast gaining in popularity, and the exhibitor can always be sure of a good, clean, wholesome picture."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

The Serpent's Tooth, with Gail Kane (Mutual)—"Splendid acting, excellent directing, a picture with a punch. Patrons more than pleased."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

---

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A very popular picture which went over well. I can recommend it to any exhibitor as a sure money-getter. Owing to popular demand and not being able to find a better picture to substitute for 'The Little American' (held up by censors), we are running this picture a second week, the first time a picture has ever been played for a second week at this theater."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater.—Downtown house.

---

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Never has a production played at the Strand Theater aroused such enthusiasm as was displayed during the showing of this picture. Without doubt it will rank as Mary Pickford's foremost achievement."—Harold Edel, Strand Theater, New York City.

---

The Pride of the Clan, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"While not as pleasing as 'The Poor Little Rich Girl,' this subject gave excellent satisfaction."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

A Poor Little Rich Girl, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"This is an excellent production which pleased our patrons very much. Mary Pickford at her best."—Harry Tague, Ashland Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

A Romance of the Redwoods, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"A very good story with beautiful settings but not the kind of a play for Mary Pickford. She did not prove a strong drawing card."—Harry Tague, Ashland Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

---

The Little American, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"One of the most beautiful of pictures. It is handled so masterfully by Cecil De Mille that it aroused enthusiasm in everybody who saw it. I have repeated the picture again for two days and expect a record crowd. Business was very good."—Edward Trinz, Oak Park Theater, Oak Park, Illinois.

---

Joan the Woman, with Geraldine Farrar (Cardinal)—"The story had a punch and thrilled all who saw it. It was marvelously beautiful and wonderfully portrayed."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

Ramona, with Adda Gleason (Clune)—"A very good picture with good drawing power, but the print was in bad shape for so beautiful a picture."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

---

Joan the Woman, with Geraldine Farrar (Cardinal)—"A wonderful production. Business excellent."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

---

Musketeers of the Slums, with Charlie Chaplin (Union Film Company)—"This picture is a conglomeration of a number of old Keystone subjects patched together and sold under the guise of a Chaplin subject. The name of Chaplin brought us good business and we were ashamed to face our patrons to refund their money."—F. P. Shirkey, Jacksonville Amusement Company, Pastime Theater, Jacksonville, Ohio.

---

---

On Trial (Essanay special)—"Our patrons liked it better than the play, they said. A fine picture. Entire cast does well."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

---

Mothers of France, with Sarah Bernhardt (World)—"While this is an excellent production, very few people liked the picture. It is too sad."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

---

The Paige Mystery, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"On account of the star we played this picture to capacity business. Picture is a very elaborate production."—Sam L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

---

Camille, with Clara Kimball Young (World)—"The World people are putting out a series of re-issues of Clara Kimball Young pictures which are proving to be great drawing cards on account of the popularity of the star."—Sam L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Price of Pride, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"Every phrase I heard from people passing out complimented this picture. The star does not draw as well as some of the feminine stars on the Brady list."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Divorce Game, with Alice Brady (World)—"A pretty fair picture with pretty fair drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Slave, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"A very elaborate production. Capacity business."—Sam L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

Heart and Soul, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"One of the best subjects this star has appeared in. Entirely away from the vampire style of acting and altogether pleasing."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The New York Peacock, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"A fashion-plate picture made to fit the star's talents. The title is good, but it didn't draw well for us. The women liked it better than the men did."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Millionaire's Double, with Lionel Barrymore (Metro)—"A dandy attraction, full of comedy that people like."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"A very good comedy-drama. Excellent business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Duchess of Doubt, with Emmy Wehlen (Metro)—"Those who were pleased with this offering thought it very good, while others rated it poor. One of those films audiences either like or dislike, there being no half-way rating on it."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"This went over big."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Mary Lawson's Secret, with Charlotte Walker (Pathe)—"A fair production. Photography poor."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

Luke's Lively Life (Pathe)—"A wonderful comedy. Audience well pleased."—William Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colorado.

Her Beloved Enemy, with Doris Grey (Pathe)—"A very good picture. Drawing power very good."—Sam L. Marr, Kozy Theater, Waycross, Georgia.

The Hero of the Hour, with Jack Mulhall (Red Feather-Universal)—"Though weak in plot, this picture filled my house."—J. E. Murray, Lyric Theater, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Shadows and Sunshine, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"This little star certainly draws well for us."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Kentucky.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"A pretty good picture. Business fair."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Danger Trail, with H. B. Warner (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"The ending of this picture is tame, otherwise it is very good."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

The Danger Trail, with H. B. Warner (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"This star is a favorite with our patrons and the story was well accepted. A great fight and beautiful scenes of the north woods."—Mrs. M. M. McFadden, Lincoln Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Crippled Hand, with Ella Hall (Bluebird)—"A beautiful production. Ella Hall always fills my house."—J. E. Murray, Lyric Theater, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

The Little Orphan, with Ella Hall (Bluebird)—"A very good picture, but business was very poor."—Walter B. Sadler, New Dearborn Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Little Orphan, with Ella Hall (Bluebird)—"Fair story, but pleasing to our patrons."—E. O. Weinberg, Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, New York.

The Law That Failed, with Alma Hanlon (Art Dramas)—"We ran this picture three days and it broke all house records for us."—E. E. Ennesfer, Columbia Theater, Kansas City, Missouri.

Serials

Passion, with Shirley Mason (McClure "Seven Deadly Sins" series)—"Each patron was well pleased. Drew fair business."—J. E. Murray, Lyric Theater, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe serial)—"I have shown episodes one and two and am satisfied that this will be a drawing card. While there are plenty of thrills, all the 'dime novel' serial stuff is eliminated and it appears as a sensible, interesting, pleasing story."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Neglected Wife, with Ruth Roland (Pathe serial)—"This does not draw the children's trade, like some of the other serials did. Fair business. No punch to the pictures."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Patria, with Mrs. Vernon Castle (Pathe)—"A fair attraction, well liked by some and disliked by others. Box-office was fairly satisfactory. Serials are not popular with us."—George B. Guthrie, Oregon Theater, Salem, Oregon.

Pickford Film Held Up

"The Little American," the Artcraft patriotic picture starring Mary Pickford, has come under the censorship ban in Chicago, Major Funkhouser, head of the Censorship Board, declaring it "anti-German," and refusing it a permit. This decision has aroused a storm of protest and ridicule from the daily papers of the city, who had devoted many editorials and front-page stories to the affair, championing the Artcraft office in the fight against the ruling.

Even the other members of Funkhouser's board, it is understood, are in favor of passing the Pickford picture and despite a telegraphic endorsement from George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information in Washington, the Major refused to allow the picture to be shown, repudiating his agreement to do so if satisfactory to Mr. Creel.

When "The Little American" was first shown to Mr. Funkhouser and his associates early last week, the former refused to pass it on the grounds that it would offend German-Americans in this country.

The picture has been shown without objection in all the large cities of the United States and in exclusive suburbs.

The latest development in the situation is the instituting of injunction proceedings by Max Goldstine, representing Artcraft in Chicago, against the city to restrain it from interfering with the exhibition of the film.

Exit the Bulky Tripod

By taking the oscillating movement incident to turning the crank away from the motion-picture camera, Arthur R. Selden of Rochester, New York, plans to do away with the usual tripod which is both cumbersome and heavy.

Mr. Selden makes use of a simple tripod of light weight on which the camera is freely mounted so that it can be swung vertically and horizontally to direct the lens on any object. This feature is especially suited to the filming of moving objects, where the conventional tilting and panorama head movement is too slow. The cranking is accomplished by making use of a driving member supported independently of the camera—on the operator's belt, for instance—and operating the camera mechanism through a flexible shaft.—Scientific American.

Exhibitor Writes Clever Letter

An amazing condition of affairs in New Orleans is revealed in probably the most unusual "kick" letter ever received by a motion picture company from an exhibitor.

It was written by R. M. Chisholm, president of the American Amusement and Producing Company, Inc., operators of the big Diamond Theater, New Orleans, known as the finest picture house in the South, to Pathe Exchange, New York. Here it is.

It is not often we register a complaint or make any "kick" on any picture that we personally screen and play, but we feel we have certainly a "kick" coming and you can cancel any more pictures like "Blind Man's Luck," featuring Mollie King. The picture did business, in fact packed the house to the doors and this, too, in very hot weather, but when your intimate friends and busines relations talk about leaving the Crescent City, or more commonly New Orleans, it is time to call a halt.

One of our most prominent attorneys talked very seriously after seeing this picture of relinquishing his practice and moving to New York. Also the vice-president of one of our largest railroads in the South talks about mortgages—something he never did before, and the writer has practically neglected his duties watching the screen. Besides, there are a large number of soldiers stationed here in New Orleans since the war broke out and with Mollie King on the screen our house looks like an encampment.

However, if at any time this young lady has a vacation, we cordially extend an invitation to her to visit New Orleans, on which occasion we will have a private car and a yacht at her disposal.

"Blind Man's Luck" is a Pathe Gold Rooster play —an exciting picture of a crook playing for high stakes pitted against clever detectives with an interesting mystery.

Messrs. D. P. Davis and James W. Edmondson of All Star Features Company, Jacksonville, Florida, were visitors in New York last week. They went home with a contract for Edward Warren's production, "The Warfare of the Flesh," covering practically the entire South.

Screenshine

By Mel

THE FAT OF THE LAND

YOU can use the fat boys in your town to good advantage, if you follow the example of Manager Fennevessy of the Family Theater of Rochester, New York.

As an added attraction on a recent Wednesday, he gave all the fat boys he could gather up a chance to show how Fatty Arbuckle gets laughs. The fat boys went through their paces on the stage and the audience picked the winner, as soon as they could stop laughing.

The fat boys in the neighborhood are now heroes, especially the guy that brought along a whole pie and wanted to sit on the stage till he had consumed all of it. As time was flying it became necessary to apply the hook.

An exhibitor in a small Illinois town wrote to the General Exchange at St. Louis and cancelled a serial because it had a girl in it the young gentlemen fans "went crazy over" and cheered so loudly that, with all the windows open, it "disturbed the neighborhood and the citizens kicked."

This should be a solemn warning to producers.

FOURTH OF JULY FIREWORKS

The other night I went into a picture house with a friend who had a low brow but a high celebration bump and the orchestra played "My Little Brown Jug," and he thought it was the national anthem and stood up.

And I did, too.

Darn him!

Irving Mack, the live-wire press agent that Universal copped from Jones, Linick & Schaffer, is soon to take unto himself a wife. He press-agented himself into the heart of Belle Harris, 2307 Cortez street, and if he isn't drafted into the army pretty soon as a special aid in making gas attacks, he will probably get married in February. We predict Mack will get along first rate even after he is married. His work has fitted him marvelously for telling whoppers and still keeping a straight face.

Screenshine is like the progeny of Belgium. It is always adopted.

A theater of Jackson, Michigan, is the last to see the light—and appropriate it for its program.

Shure, you're welcome. Go to it.

UNHOLY DRAMA

Douglas Fairbanks recently asked the operator at Clune's Los Angeles Theater, how he liked his new Artcraft film, "Wild and Woolly."

"Fine," replied the manipulator of the projection machine, "there isn't a hole in the entire film."

President Calls Film Industry

PICTURES MOBILIZED TO CO-OPERATE WITH GOVERNMENT

PRESIDENT WILSON has called the motion picture industry to the aid of the government during the war. He has asked President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry to organize the industry to co-operate with the government Committee on Public Information, of which George Creel is chairman.

This action of the President is official recognition of the picture industry as one of the important and vital factors in the life of the nation. It is another step in advance for films, due to their power, extensive development and their capacity for influence on the 15,000,000 people who attend picture theaters in the United States every day.

President Wilson's Letter

Following is President Wilson's letter to William A. Brady:

It is in my mind not only to bring the motion picture industry into fullest and most effective contact with the nation's needs, but to give some measure of official recognition to an increasingly important factor in the development of our national life. The film has come to rank as the very high medium for the dissemination of public intelligence, and since it speaks a universal language it lends itself importantly to the presentation of America's plans and purposes.

May I ask you, as chairman by my appointment, to organize the motion picture industry in such manner as to establish direct and authoritative co-operation with the committee on public information, of which George Creel is chairman.

It is much to ask, but my knowledge of the patriotic service already rendered by you and your associates makes me count upon your generous acceptance.

Cordially and sincerely yours—Woodrow Wilson.

Industry's Reply

To President Wilson's letter President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, made the following reply on behalf of the trade:

Dear Mr. President:

I am in receipt of your highly esteemed favor of June 28 requesting me as chairman by your appointment to organize the motion picture industry in such manner as to establish direct and authoritative co-operation with the committee on public information of which Mr. George Creel is chairman.

In the full appreciation of all that is entailed in bringing about the desired conditions under which the motion picture industry will throw its weight to the last ounce into the task confronting the American people, I accept your commission with enthusiasm. The devoted men and women of the motion picture world have already shown their eager loyalty to the country's cause with a spontaneous fervor freely beyond words, and in speaking thus for them I but feebly reflect the noble sentiments which fill their hearts. I hereby assure you of the undivided, conscientious and patriotic support of the entire industry of America. I have the honor to be your obedient servant.—William A. Brady.

The plans for the methods of co-operation between the industry and the Committee on Public Information are not yet complete. However it is probable that the function of the films will be somewhat of the same nature as the great service rendered by exhibitors and other branches of the business in connection with promotion of the Liberty Loan, and with aiding the "Four Minute" speakers now appearing in many theaters.

It is certain that every person and every phase of the industry will get behind President Brady and stand ready to do its share in co-operation with the government in any manner in which the authorities shall direct.

National Association Meets

Two meetings of the National Association have already been held in New York in connection with the industry's work with the government. At one of these meetings, George Creel, chairman of the government committee on public information, was present. At this meeting it was decided to hold a meeting of film representatives in Chicago on July 11. Plans of direct co-operation with the government will be worked out at that time. The committees are now working up a campaign through the picture industry, for the benefit of the Red Cross. The decisions reached at the Washington meeting will come before the association at its first annual meeting in Chicago, July 18, at the time of the National Film Exposition and Convention.

Film Men Go to Washington

The committees appointed to visit Washington and represent the various branches of the industry include the following:

War co-operation committee, officers: William A. Brady, president; D. W. Griffith, chairman; William L. Sherrill, vice-chairman; Arthur James, secretary. Executive committee, representing producers' branch committee, Adolph Zukor, William L. Sherrill and Arthur S. Friend; representing distributors' branch committee, Richard A. Rowland, W. W. Irwin and P. A. Powers; representing exhibitors' branch committee, Lee A. Ochs, Louis F. Blumenthal and L. L. Levine; representing supply and equipment branch committee, J. E. Brulatour, Walter J. Moore and J. H. Hallberg; representing general division, William A. Johnston, John Wylie and Arthur James; new reel committee, P. A. Powers, J. A. Berst and John R. Freuler.

The general committee will consist of: Hiram Abrams, Harry E. Aitken, William A. Brady, Donald J. Bell, J. A. Berst, William Brandt, Louis F. Blumenthal, Harry Bauman, J. Stuart Blackton, J. E. Brulatour, Albert H. T. Banzhoff, James Beecroft, Paul Comelin, W. H. Clune, Joseph F. Coufal, Merritt Crawford, Lynde Denig, W. D. Donaldson, Joseph W. Engel, Arthur S. Friend, Samuel M. Fields, John R. Freuler, William Fox, Ricord Gradwell, Walter E. Greene, Samuel Goldfish, D. W. Griffith, J. H. Hallberg, Siegfried F. Hartman, Gabriel Hess, Thomas H. Ince, Walter W. Irwin, Arthur James, Aaron Jones, C. Francis Jenkins, William A. Johnston, A. H. Kessel, George Kleine, Geoffrey Konta, Jesse L. Lasky, Carl Laemmle, Marcus Loew, Louis L. Levine, S. A. Lynch, Tracey Lewis, E. J. Ludvigh, Mitchel H. Marks, Stanley Mastbaum, Walter J. Moore, Louis B. Mayer, James Cowden Meyers, Theodore Mitchell, Lee A. Ochs, P. A. Powers, Henry Pollock, Richard A. Rowland, Sam. L. Rothapfel, Gustavus A. Rogers, J. Robert Rubin, W. R. Rothaker, Joseph M. Schenck, Lewis J. Selznick, William Sievers, William I. Sherrill, George K. Spoor, Albert E. Smith, Walter N. Seligsburg, L. F. Talley, Samuel H. Trigger, Edwin Thanhouser, A. E. Tugwell, L. D. Wharton, William Wright, Paul H. Woodruff, John Wylie, Nathan Vidaver, Adolph Zukor.

The national committee, representing every State and every large city, has been selected as follows: A. W. B. Johnson, F. M. Rae, S. S. Harris, Frank A. Garbutt, Harry Nolan, L. Z. Poli, Theodore Jelenk, Harry Crandall, C. D. Cooley, William Oldnow, Herman J. Brown, George K. Spoor, Frank J. Rembusch, A. H. Blank, C. E. Glamman, Lee Goldberg, A. J. Gugoll, Alfred S. Black, F. Hutchinson, Jake Wells, Edward J. Fisher, Charles A. Feinler, Samuel M. Fields, M. H. Todd.

SHERMAN ANNOUNCES PLANS

New Company to Aid Producers Handicapped by Lack of Funds—Sliding Scale of Prices to Go

With the coming of the Sherman Pictures Corporation the industry has the first big company organized for the purpose of opening up the state right market. This company comes into the field not only to purchase and sell state right productions, but to take any good picture which has not been completed owing to a lack of funds and advance the producer the money needed to finish it.

In the future a producer who has a good picture for sale need not worry about how to dispose of it. Provided it is up to the Sherman standard a ready market is assured—for it can be sold promptly and for spot cash.

Harry Sherman, president of the new corporation, has created this new standard for quick action. Following the news of his recent purchase of the distribution rights for "I Believe" comes the intimation that the precedent established will be maintained. This enterprising distributor, who has jumped right into the middle of New York activities, should prove a valuable acquisition to the interests of the state right market.

"Of course we are going to make money," said Mr. Sherman recently in speaking of the plans for the new company, "but we are going to make it along lines that will permit all those with whom we do business to make money, too. The producer who has a real good picture will find us ever ready to talk business with him, and, if the production is up to the standard we will be ready to purchase it at a figure that will allow him a good profit. Every picture distributed by us must have qualities which will make it just as popular in Europe, Australia, South Africa and South America as it is here. We don't want sex pictures. We don't want vampire pictures, or anything that has an unsavory flavor to it. What we want are good, clean pictures for those who have clean minds, and we are willing to assist the producer who is ready to give the public the best he has.

"Another thing which is of great importance is this: In the past the state right buyer has never known when to take the producer seriously. The producer has usually set a figure far above the price he hoped to receive so that the state right buyer could cut it way down. In the end the producer has succeeded in getting just what he anticipated he would get. The result has been that the state right buyer has been continually confused and never knows whether he was being treated fairly or not. There will be no more of this, as far as Sherman Pictures Corporation is concerned. The price we set for a certain territory will stand and we will never cut that price one penny. We have figured out just what a picture should bring in every territory and we are going to stick to that price. If we do not get what we ask in that section we will not sell. We prefer to have the picture go back to the shelf than to have a sliding scale."

Gertrude Selby and Neal Burns are now filming a new comedy for the Selburn Comedy Company at the David Horsley studios. The new story is replete with laugh winning situations woven together by an unusually interesting plot. The story deals with the complications met with in the attempt of a bride and groom to be quietly and respectably wed.

Whartons Form New Company

With every convenience, both for the state rights buyer and the motion picture exhibitor, The Whartons, in the handling of their new production, "The Great White Trail," have formed The Wharton Releasing Corporation with offices in New York. Through this new organization they will book their new superfeature directly to the exhibitors of New York territory, selling the rest of the United States through state right buyers. The reservation of the New York territory is the only one which the Whartons intend making.

"We are doing this simply because we believe that in this way we can give our ideas and our service direct to the exhibitors of the state without too heavy an overhead expense," said one of the Whartons recently. "Naturally, without opening nation wide exchanges, this could not be done for the entire country, and so we are limiting our direct booking operations to New York state and the portion of New Jersey that comprises a part of the New York territory. In the rest of the country our products will be handled through the regular channels of the state right buyers—with us behind them.

"By that, we mean that we intend to follow our pictures through the country, not forgetting after a picture has been sold, that it still remains our duty to do our utmost to acquaint the public with the Wharton product and the Wharton standard of quality. However, it would be impossible for us to do this through a system of exchanges, so we will follow the state right plan and then follow the state right man in going to the public."

The offices of the new company are located at 130 West Forty-sixth street, suite 901.

Projection rooms, salesrooms and all other conveniences for the buyer and exhibitor are to be found in the new offices of the corporation. At the present time "The Great White Trail," written and directed by Leopold D. Wharton, is being sold. This will shortly be followed by a new Wharton super-feature, the work of Theodore Wharton.

Making the Convention-Exposition Useful

THE political aspects of this convention have already been sufficiently discussed in recent issues of MOTOGRAPHY. We have suggested how the visiting exhibitors can make themselves valuable to the development of the League. Now we want to show, if we can, how the convention and the exposition can help each visiting exhibitor.

We might lay a great deal of stress on the value of fraternizing, even for a few days, with fellow exhibitors; of the exchange of confidences about the tricks that "put it over," and the bits of showmanship wisdom gathered by hard experience and offered for the asking in these get-together sessions. But that peculiarly valuable feature of trade conventions needs little comment. It is familiar to all who have ever taken advantage of association meetings.

The great feature of a combination exposition and convention like this one is that it is practically a living, materialized, trade paper. The convention itself represents the reading pages. The exposition is the advertising section. The discussions of current topics, the opinions of experienced men on trade subjects, the technical bits of wisdom that are printed from week to week in trade journal pages are here delivered by word of mouth, direct from man to man. The producer policies, the players, the machines, all the ingenious accessories whose printed likenesses appear so often in the trade paper's advertising pages are seen here, for a few days, in actual embodiment.

These things need no new introduction. MOTOGRAPHY and the other trade papers have already presented them throughout the length and breadth of the country. They are old friends, long known by reputation and now greeted in the flesh. It is like reading for a year about a lot of attractive and interesting places, and then, by some miracle, being allowed to spend a week with all of them at once.

The exhibits of projection machines, electrical regulating devices, and all the miscellaneous technical equipment that goes to make a good show or improve a poor one, will doubtless be the objects of absorbed attention. There will be few visitors who already know all that they see, and most of them can learn a good deal. In a good many cases the mere knowledge they gain will make them better exhibitors, whether they buy anything or not. And when it comes to buying, they will see convincing opportunities to add a thousand dollars to their assets in the way of increased popular appeal, and consequently greater attendance, by investing a few dollars.

The attendance of some of the players whose faces, at least, are familiar to all exhibitors will give the visiting theater men a chance to observe degrees of popular favor. The exposition, it should be remembered, is a "fan" show, and the interest the fans display in the personal qualities of the stars may be something of a guide to comparative film values.

A little eavesdropping on the conversations of those same fans as they circulate through the aisles might be productive of a crop of brand new ideas. Since the exhibitors are entirely dependent on their success in pleasing the fans, their criticisms as well as their praises are not to be lightly regarded.

There are a hundred ways in which the live exhibitor who keeps his eyes and ears open can cash in on his trip to Chicago this week. If each visitor does not go home with enough new ideas under his hat to "put it all over" the competitor who didn't attend, it is his own fault.

A liberal education in showmanship is here, and it is free to all who are interested enough to take it.

Pennsylvania's "Rule 27"

SWELLHEADITIS is a disease extremely common throughout the Christian and heathen world. It is, however, extraordinarily—almost universally—prevalent among the members of motion picture censor boards. This (to "give the devil his due") is probably more the fault of the job than of the individuals who hold it. It gives them authority without responsibility, and offers them no rules of practice or definitions of duty except their own vague impressions. Therefore they become arbitrary in their decisions and more arbitrary in their jealous support of those decisions, once they are committed to them.

The Pennsylvania censor board recently approved a picture but found its titles objectionable. The subtitling was eliminated before a permit was issued, and the film was shown without its lettering. The censorial edict, therefore, was strictly obeyed.

But the enterprising exhibitor who first presented the picture saw that it needed the explanatory notes that the missing subtitles had given it. So he resorted to the ingenious device of hiring a professional actor to speak the subtitles, at their proper places, to the audience.

It is obvious that the censor board should have extended its admiration to this clever scheme, which gained its purpose without violating the order, and let it go at that. But censor boards are absolutely lacking in a sense of humor, because no person gifted with that saving sense would ever aspire to serve on such a board. So the Pennsylvania censors were offended. They gathered in indignant session and triumphantly brought forth Rule No. 27. Here it is:

> Rule No. 27.—When an approval seal is issued following the agreement of the applicant to make eliminations suggested by the Board, it shall be issued subject to the condition that no exhibitor of the film shall, in exhibiting the same, produce any eliminated portion thereof by act, publication, utterance, or other means of communication.

If censor boards had any sense of proportion, the Pennsylvania board would realize that its zeal to protect its dignity has led it into a snare. It has undertaken, without any authority or right in the world, to censor publication and utterance. This little group of insignificant political jobholders announces an end of free speech. It will let the exhibitor know what may and may not be said in his theater!

It must be apparent to all Keystone state exhibitors that they need not pay the slightest attention to Rule 27. It is none of the censor board's business what is spoken or published in a theater or out of it. The more "violations" of Rule 27 there are, indeed, the sooner will the board realize that it has made a joke, with itself as the funny part. We hope the theater men will find opportunity to disobey the order early and often.

It is too bad that Dr. Hugo Münsterberg died before he had time to prepare a book on "The Psychology of Censors." In all the broad study of mankind, there is no more interesting subject than an analysis of these queer birds. The holy spectacle that Chicago's Major Funkhouser is just now making of himself with his censorship of patriotism, and the Pennsylvania board's effort to stifle free speech, are mere incidents in a constant passing show of censorial idiocy.

Whether it is that the censor job attracts only mental defectives, or whether its intoxication of authority, like whisky, steals the wits of wise men, we do not know. We can only see that censors are not as other people. No doubt the time will come when even petty politicians will shun the censor job as a mental pestilence, that stupefies the reason and burlesques human intelligence.

VITAGRAPH EXPANDING

Ten Companies at Work in East and Two in West—Two More Soon—Exhibitors Run "Vitagraph Weeks"

In keeping with its recently announced plan for expansion, Greater Vitagraph now is engaged in the greatest period of production in its history.

Ten companies at the big Brooklyn plant and two at the company's western studio in Hollywood now are making pictures for release through V. L. S. E., the company's distributing organization, while the other companies are making O. Henry pictures for release through General Film. This makes twelve companies in actual operation at the Vitagraph plants and two others will be under way within a week.

It is the purpose of Greater Vitagraph and V. L. S. E. to offer to the exhibitors of the country a great variety or program features, including nine different star combinations, high class comedies and a special series featuring little Bobby Connelly, and a big outdoor serial, "The Fighting Trail." These new units will be in addition to the Favorite Film Features, the Paula Blackton Country Life Series and the big special features which the company is now running.

To make this possible, Vitagraph has engaged several new leading women, two star leading men and three new directors.

One of the contributing causes for the great increase in production on the part of Greater Vitagraph is said to be the growing number of theaters which have instituted "Vitagraph Week," during which they run nothing but Vitagraph pictures. With a serial, a Blue Ribbon feature, a comedy and a short reel "kid" feature these theaters find it very easy to make up an attractive program of high quality and the producers are helping them by speeding up production to the limit of studio capacity.

Under present arrangements, every star of the Vitagraph constellation is engaged in production of new features with the exception of Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, both of whom have been forced to lay off on account of illness, but who are expected to be back at work within two weeks.

Many Stars at Work

Besides the Harry Morey-Griffith combination, the following stars are working at the Eastern Vitagraph plant:

Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott, supported by Patsy De Forest, in "An Alabaster Box." This is a Blue Ribbon feature and the first Vitagraph picture directed by Chester Withey, formerly associated with David W. Griffith. It will be on the Fall program of V. L. S. E.

Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald, in "The Princess of Park Row," under direction of Ashley Miller.

Edward Earle and Betty Howe, in "For France," under direction of Wesley Ruggles. Although the title suggests a war play, this is a beautiful romance of present-day France, written by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady. There are a few brief references to war, but they are incidental and serve merely to add thrills to the picture.

Evart Overton and Miriam Fouche, in "Soldiers of Chance," under direction of Paul Scardon. This picture will mark the first appearance of Miss Fouche as a Vitagraph leading woman.

Little Bobby Connelly, in the "Bobby Series," ten one-reel pictures, each a distinct story. The first five of these pictures were directed by Wesley Ruggles and the last batch are nearing completion under the hand of Charles M. Seay. These pictures are declared to be the very best that little Bobby ever has done and they also serve to introduce a brand new baby actress, three-year-old Aida Horton.

Harry Tighe, famous vaudeville headliner, is making a series of comedies under the direction of Archer McMackin. These comedies were written by Mr. Tighe and Mr. McMackin, in his direction of them, brings to Vitagraph the experience gained in producing more than 300 photoplays for various companies. Adele De Garde is Mr. Tighe's leading woman.

Lawrence Semon, with Joe Simberg, Earle Montgomery, and Edward Dunn as his main supports, is rapidly winding up a new series of Big V comedies, which are scheduled for release the first week of August.

At the western plant of Vitagraph, William Duncan and Carol Halloway, his leading woman, are in the final episode of "The Fighting Trail," a big Vitagraph serial. In this picture, which is almost exclusively an outdoor production, there are dozens of thrills to the episode and each chapter serves to introduce one or more brand new "stunts." Mr. Duncan is directing and playing the lead of the picture.

Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburgh, under the direction of William Wolbert, are establishing a record for quick work at the Hollywood plant. Since the latter part of May they have completed two five-reel subjects and are now engaged on a third.

The product of all these combinations will go on the regular program of Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., which announces that every production offered will be up to the Vitagraph standard of excellence in cast, production and story.

Farrar's Leading Man

Wallace Reid, the popular Lasky star, has been selected to again appear opposite Geraldine Farrar in her forthcoming Artcraft picture on which work will be commenced shortly. Mr. Reid played the lead to Miss Farrar in "Joan the Woman" with notable result and is at present enjoying a short vacation before commencing activities on the new production.

Geraldine Farrar has just returned to the Lasky studio after a motoring trip to Lake Tahoe with her husband, Lou-Tellegen. The celebrated diva is now in the hands of a costumer preparing for her first photoplay for Artcraft under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

Peggy Hyland Play

In an interview with Motography, Peggy Hyland, Mayfair's dainty star, spoke of the near release of her first production, "Persuasive Peggy," with much enthusiasm. Exhibitors will undoubtedly be highly pleased with the play.

She explained how the story had first appealed to her in book form and how the cast had been chosen because of their fitness to the roles they created. Every detail was given the greatest attention and her every request and suggestion was put into immediate execution.

Those who have been fortunate enough to see any part of the film proclaim it a great success, but the mere fact that is pleases Miss Hyland speaks for itself, for she is the most severe critic imaginable—particularly when viewing her own work.

Elsie Ferguson Starts Work

Elsie Ferguson last week commenced activities on her initial photoplay for Artcraft, "Barbary Sheep," by Robert Hichens. One of the most attractive dressing rooms ever given a star was prepared for Miss Ferguson by Studio Manager Lowe at the Famous Players-Lasky plant at Fort Lee. The production is being staged under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, who reports rapid progress. Mr. Tourneur is highly enthusiastic over the manner in which the new star is adapting herself to the studio work.

Fairbanks in "Down to Earth"

Douglas Fairbanks has departed for the Yosemite Valley, where he will direct himself in two scenes of his next Artcraft play, the title of which has just been changed to "Down to Earth." While he is securing these scenes, Director John Emerson will supervise the erection of some of the interior settings. These will be ready for Fairbanks upon his return to the West-coast Artcraft Studio and production will then be started on an episode that deals with society life.

He was accompanied to the Yosemite Valley by business manager John Fairbanks, Cameraman Victor Fleming, Glen McWilliams, Joseph Henaberry and James Hogan. The Fairbanks party motored about three hundred miles to the foot of the mountain that leads to Yosemite Valley. Packing the camera outfit, costumes and make-up boxes on six burros, they climbed to the top of this steep mountain and down the other side, until they arrived in the valley. It is expected that Fairbanks will return to the studio in about four days, which is quite a long time to devote for two scenes, but to quote the Artcraft star, "You can't make successful motion pictures with a time clock in mind."

New "Skinner" Play

Following the tremendous success of "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "Skinner's Bubble," Essanay is shortly to release a third picture of this series, the title of which will be "Skinner's Baby."

The drawing power of the previous Skinner productions has not been based on thrills, slap-stick or a strong sex flavoring. They have been clean and wholesome comedy-dramas, hinging on the homely adventures of an "every-day" man and his little spouse. Announcement from Essanay is that "Skinner's Baby" will be a production along exactly similar lines. That this type of screen attraction meets with high public favor has been proven by the nation-wide patronage of the first two units of this series.

Bryant Washburn, creator of the screen version of Skinner, again appears in that role. The original cast, headed by Hazel Daly as Honey, forms his support. By special permission of Henry Irving Dodge, the author of the book, the scenario was written by Harry Beaumont, who has directed the former pictures. Mr. Beaumont is producing the forthcoming one, also.

Tanks Vivid War Picture

One of the most interesting pictures which the war has developed is being shown under the title "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre." The film is owned by the British government, under the title of Government Pictures, Inc., of which W. K. Vanderbilt of New York, is president. Pathe is releasing the unusual picture at some special showings in large cities, under charge of Tom North, who is now in Chicago.

The picture has been shown for some weeks at Orchestra Hall in Chicago. Following its feature runs, Pathe will release the picture through its regular channels without charge to its owners, the proceeds going to the Red Cross.

Audiences throughout the country are intensely interested in seeing the tanks, the biggest fighting vehicles the world has ever created, in action on the European battle fronts. Besides the tanks, there are vividly interesting battle scenes and intimate views into life in the trenches.

"BETTY BE GOOD"

Captain Leslie Peacocke Supports Jackie Saunders in New Mutual Play, Released July 16— Production is Unusual

Miss Jackie Saunders, one of the younger screen stars who have developed original lines in motion picture productions, is happily placed in her latest offering, "Betty Be Good," released by Mutual, July 16, a play that permits full display of Miss Saunders' fascinating frolics of the tomboy type. She is supported by Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke.

"Betty Be Good," is a Mutual-Horkheimer feature written by William M. Ritchey, one of the best known scenario writers in the United States, author of "Who Pays?," "The Unseen Hand" and many other screen dramas. The play was directed by Sherwood MacDonald, "The Man from Yale," who was a successful lawyer, before he entered the picture field and who wrote "Just in Time," "The Goal," "Straws in the Wind," "Rose Among Briars," and many other well known screen successes.

Miss Saunders portrays the character of Betty, madcap daughter of Jonathan Brownlee, a retired capitalist—a role that suits her admirably because it calls for full display of her prankish tricks and keeps the supporting company in fast action.

Miss Saunders took a personal hand in the construction of "Betty Be Good."

She put a couple of fast motor cars and a lot more people into the play before it went into rehearsal. In the completed production "Tomboy Jackie" is seldom still a second and she drives the somewhat sedate Captain Leslie T. Peacocke into bursts of activity that cause that distinguished Britisher to elevate his eyebrows in pained deprecation, despite which he toddles right along in the fiery trail of the star.

Sherwood MacDonald, director of "Betty Be Good," began work as a director after he had worked with some of the best known directors in the country in an advisory capacity.

Among well known productions Mr. MacDonald has directed are "Ill-Starred Bobbie," "Message From Reno," "Adventures of a Madcap," "Rose Among the Briars," "Web of Crime," "Straws in the Wind," "Maid of the Wild," and the Jackie Saunders feature productions, "A Bit of Kindling," "Betty Be Good," "The Wildcat," "The Checkmate," and "Sunny Jane."

Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke, formerly of the famous "Connaught Rangers," who served with his regiment in India and South Africa, and who is one of the best known writers of photodrama in the world, aids Miss Saunders in "Betty Be Good." Captain Peacocke is a splendid actor and his characterization of Jonathan Brownlee is real art.

Another distinguished member of the "Betty Be Good" caste, is the leading man, Arthur Shiely, the handsome Australian.

Battle Scenes in "For France"

Every day for a week Andre Roosevelt, production manager for Vitagraph, and Wesley Ruggles, director, were busy at Huntington, Long Island, making battle pictures which will be incidental features of "For France," a Blue Ribbon production in which Edward Earle and Betty Howe are to be starred.

"For France" is a romantic drama and the war element will be only negligible in the picture, but Director Ruggles has spared no expense in getting his atmosphere perfect. Every uniform, accessory and gun is an accurate copy of those used by the armies in Europe and even the soldiers were chosen according to their nationalities. Through the influence of Captain Johnston, Mr. Ruggles obtained the services of a large number of regulars from Fort Totten and also the Third Battery of the Second Field Artillery of Brooklyn.

One of the big thrills of the picture will be a battle in the air between two aviators, one of whom is Edward Earle. The scene was made Independence Day at the Huntington aviation field and is said to be most realistic, the camera registering the machine gun hits on the defeated plane and showing the machine tumbling to the ground. In making these scenes, Wesley Ruggles rode with Edward Earle, and acting as his own cameraman, took close-ups of the battle while in the air.

A Good Educational

"The Magic of Motive Power," was the title of the Selig feature film released in General Film service on July 9. This production is said to be intensely interesting, presenting as it does the evolution of transportation from the coming of Columbus to the epoch of the deadly submarine.

Willard Louis, who has contributed many delightful comedy bits to the William Fox dramatic subjects, in addition to the "straight" parts which he has had, has been added to the roster of players for the Foxfilm comedy program.

"Betty Be Good" is the mighty good title of this new Horkheimer-Mutual play, featuring Jackie Saunders.

TRIANGLE RELEASES PARALTA

Contract Makes Triangle Distributor for New Exhibitors' Producing Company—First Plays to Be Released in August

S. A. Lynch, president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, which has recently been reorganized, and Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., which includes the producing interests represented by the Bessie Barriscale and J. Warren Kerrigan Features Corporations, signed a contract yesterday by which Triangle becomes the distributor of Paralta productions under the Paralta Plan.

This contract will have a marked influence on moving picture production and distribution. The Paralta interests represent the introduction of over $3,000,000 into the producing end of the moving picture industry by a syndicate headed by Herman Katz, the well-known New York merchant and capitalist, and several others of equal prominence.

This contract has no bearing whatever on Triangle's release of its regular program productions and does not mean that Paralta has been in any way amalgamated, absorbed or taken over by it. The continued separate entity and identity of the Paralta corporations is especially provided for in the contractural relations of the two interests.

The Triangle Distributing Corporation will release the Paralta Plays under the Paralta Plan, which primarily offers to the exhibitor additional days' runs, re-booking privileges and exclusive territory.

The waste in the earning power of great productions can be met, according to the Paralta Plan, by giving exhibitors sole control of a feature picture for one year in an exclusive exhibiting district.

Otherwise, instead of renting it by the day, which is now the rule, the exhibitor will buy control of the picture for one year at substantially no greater cost than he now pays in rentals for feature pictures for one, two or three days' showing.

He can run it as long as he pleases at the first showing, and later can repeat its exhibition as long as he pleases without additional charge. All he does in advertising the picture redounds to his own benefit, for no rival theater in his district can show it. He controls it solely.

This plan gives an exhibitor the opportunity to develop to the utmost the exhibiting possibilities of a star picture in his own exclusive exhibiting district, which means the realization of its full earning power to all concerned.

The actual value of a feature picture lies in the money it draws into the box offices of the theaters in which it is presented. Its potential value lies in its novelty of subject, dramatic interest and merit of photography. The Paralta Plan gives the exhibitor time to make its potential value known to his patrons and its actual value realized in the development of the greatest possible patronage.

The first Paralta plays to be distributed by Triangle will be Bessie Barriscale in Grace Miller White's popular love story, "Rose O'Paradise," and J. Warren Kerrigan in a screen version of Peter B. Kyne's stirring Central American romance, "A Man's Man."

It is said that these productions, which will be ready for release by Triangle in August, will be a very substantial evidence of Paralta's intention to at once claim a conspicuous place in the front rank of leading-producers.

Leonhardt with Goldwyn

Harry Leonhardt, who since the formation of the Fox Film Corporation, has been one of the powerful and able executives of that company, has joined Goldwyn Distributing Corporation as general western manager and has assumed jurisdiction over all of the Goldwyn branches and business in the West, beginning with Denver and including the Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles offices.

Harry Leonhardt, who has joined Goldwyn to manage the entire territory from Denver to Coast.

In signing Mr. Leonhardt, Goldwyn brings into its organization one of the strongest personalities identified with motion picture salesmanship in the entire industry. He leaves the position of general western representative for William Fox. In the four years Harry Leonhardt has become one of the best known men in the sales side of motion pictures. For twenty-five years he has been identified with the most progressive phase of amusements and has covered the entire range of managerial effort from Shakespearean drama to tableaux vivants and modern vaudeville with both the Keith and Proctor interests. His only motion picture connection until now has been with the Fox organization.

Chicagoan on War Committee

Aaron J. Jones, president of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, received a wire from William A. Brady yesterday reading as follows:

At the request of the president of the United States, I invite you to serve as a member of the war co-operation committee of the National Association of the motion picture industry. Signed, William A. Brady.

Mr. Jones accepted and will represent the state of Illinois. This is one of the greatest honors conferred upon members of the great motion picture industry and Mr. Jones will prove an energetic member of Mr. Brady's committee.

Starlets Have Admirers

Every star in filmdom has a devoted circle of admirers, but it is to be doubted whether any screen player has stauncher adherents than Jane and Katherine Lee, the two popular starlets of the William Fox forces who come into their own in "Two Little Imps."

"Two Little Imps" is the first production in which the famous Fox "Baby Grands" have been starred, although both have appeared in thousands of feet of film. Probably the greater part of Jane and Katherine's success in appealing to motion picture fans the world over lies in their thorough lack of affectation.

First Goldwyns Announced

TO FURNISH FILMS TO ARMY—BIG EXHIBITORS SIGN GOLDWYNS

THERE is no longer any mystery or concealment as to the productions to be released by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, for that new company has announced by name, together with the dates of release, its first four productions, as follows:

1. Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus"
2. Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine."
3. Maxine Elliott in "Fighting Odds."
4. Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn."

Goldwyn will inaugurate its releases throughout the world on September 9 with its most widely explointed little star, Mae Marsh, in "Polly of the Circus," Margaret Mayo's celebrated play which made a fortune for its authors and its producers in the dramatic field.

The second Goldwyn picture will present Madge Kennedy, famous comedienne of the stage, in her first screen production, "Baby Mine," also by Margaret Mayo and one of her most successful stage farce-comedies. This production will be released on September 23.

Maxine Elliott, world-famed beauty and dramatic favorite on two continents, makes her first appearance on any screen in Goldwyn's third release, "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb. This will be released October 7.

Jane Cowl, famous emotional star of the stage, is the heroine and star in "The Spreading Dawn," the fourth Goldwyn release, which will be seen throughout the world on October 21.

Already, in addition to these four productions, Goldwyn has completed four other pictures, and by September 1 will have twelve or more completed pictures ready in every detail. This will mean that Goldwyn will always be working six months in advance on its productions, giving its directors, stars and technical staffs ample time to make beautiful pictures slowly and carefully.

Incidentally, in announcing its first releases, an officer of Goldwyn comments upon the smoothness with which a new organization was formed and got under way in production. From the start Goldwyn has followed a fixed routine and system and has not been obliged to deviate from it in any respect. Only one or two minor delays occurred during the first six months of the company's history, and time lost on these was quickly made up under a system of efficient management.

It will be seen that Goldwyn has laid great emphasis upon its stories and that each of these first four productions carries tremendous name value as to authors, production and box office values as to the type of plays selected, and that the company is not following one of the fallacies of the industry in assuming that the star alone is the big element to be taken care of.

Both of Miss Mayo's plays, "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine," have enjoyed tremendous successes not only in the American theater but in foreign lands. "Baby Mine," for example, has been played in France, Germany and Russia in the languages of these lands, and in addition it was translated into Chinese and enjoyed a run of 120 nights in Pekin, opening for the first time under the auspices of imperial patronage and indorsement. Both plays, also, have had the additional value of book publication, and editions of both exceeded 150,000.

"The Spreading Dawn," Jane Cowl's vehicle, appeared first as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post, with a circulation in excess of 2,000,000 copies weekly, and was then published in book form, with editions running in excess of 100,000.

"Fighting Odds," Maxine Elliott's vehicle, is based upon the play "Under Sentence," which had a metropolitan presentation as the joint work of Roi Cooper Megrue and Irvin S. Cobb, both famed in dramatic and periodical literature. In this play, incidentally, the prison element of the original story has been totally eliminated, and Miss Elliott has the role of the wife of a big Detroit captain of industry who comes into conflict with a leader in American finance. In this production the famous international beauty reveals new powers as an emotional actress, and her beauty will provide a topic of national conversation throughout the fall and winter months.

Goldwyn Pictures for U. S. Army

Goldwyn's offer to supply without cost one copy of all Goldwyn productions for the exclusive use of the United States army in France has received the enthusiastic indorsement of Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War.

Goldwyn, in addition to offering one print of each Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Maxine Elliott and Mary Garden production to our American soldiers, also offered to furnish a projection unit of equipment as a gift to the government.

Acknowledging the offer, Secretary Baker writes: "My dear Mr. Goldfish: Your letter of June 22 is received and I am placing it immediately in the hands of Mr. Raymond B. Fosdick, who is at the head of the commission having jurisdiction over the recreational activities of our troops in the various training camps. But before I transmit it to Mr. Fosdick I want to say this personal word of gratitude and appreciation for the offer which you make and for the spirit which animates it."

Mr. Goldfish at once arranged for meetings with Mr. Fosdick, who is a well-known attorney active in the municipal government of New York and one of the country's best informed recreational authorities.

Goldwyn expects to send the first of its productions to France within the next few weeks so that it may provide entertainment for our soldiers who are being whipped into shape close to the firing line on the western front.

The Goldwyn offer is to send one print of each of its pictures to our army abroad during the duration of the war and to provide a standard projection machine and equipment on which the pictures will be shown. Whether these camp showings will be under the direction of the Y. M. C. A., the Red Cross or directly under the auspices of the army staff is a matter for future determination.

Big Exhibitors Sign

In rapid succession the big first-run motion picture theaters throughout America are being linked by contract with Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the entire first year's output of the new organization.

Jones, Linick and Schaefer, owners of a Chicago chain of theaters, including the largest screen houses in the downtown "Loop" district, have signed for all of the Goldwyn productions, which will be exhibited first at the Colonial Theater, in the very heart of the city.

Besides the theaters under their ownership, Jones, Linick and Schaefer are affiliated with Ascher Brothers and other film magnates controlling half a hundred important houses.

Another important contract was concluded with John H. Kunsky for the first-run rights for Goldwyn productions in Detroit. Mr. Kunsky will play Goldwyn Pictures at the finest of his houses, the Madison Theater, and later at his nine other theaters.

W. J. & J. W. Dusenbury, owners of the Grand Theater, Columbus, Ohio, have signed for all 26 Goldwyn Pictures for the next year.

New Paramount Features

Pauline Frederick's latest success, "The Love That Lives," and Vivian Martin and Sessue Hayakawa in "Forbidden Paths," are the two releases Paramount issued the week of July 9. The former is a Famous Players production, the latter comes from the Lasky studio. Surrounding these two features are three single-reel releases; the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the 75th of the series of weekly trips around the world, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he takes his fellow-travelers "In the High Sierras," and a Black Diamond single-reel comedy entitled "Wits and Fits."

Agile Woman in Fun Films

Nimble and active Alice Howell has plunged deep into the comedy field. That man should have a corner on screen comedy was taken for granted until Century Comedies made Alice Howell a star and brought to an issue a point that will hereafter be open for discussion —whether a woman can be as funny as a man in acting for pictures.

Miss Howell has now made four subjects, under the personal direction of J. G. Blystone, an expert in comedy creations who has been her director, under another trade mark, for several seasons. Until "Alice of the Sawdust" was created Miss Howell had never tackled any out and out "circus stunts" in real circus surroundings, and it is believed that never before upon the screen has any woman so callously disregarded the laws of gravity and the heels of an ill-tempered horse. She has soared to the circus-peak on invisible wire, swung through space on swaying handle-bars and performed aerial "stunts" that woman has never before attempted. For this reason President Julius Stern, of Century Comedies, believes that State right buyers will find in "Alice of the Sawdust" a novelty that exhibitors will "coddle to" with alacrity, knowing that the public will find delight in the photographic hazards Miss Howell will bring to them surrounded with laughs.

Proposed Curb on Chicago Censors

The power of Major Funkhouser, head of the Chicago board of motion picture censors, who lately prohibited the showing of "The Little American," Mary Pickford's patriotic picture, may be curbed decidedly if a proposed ordinance, which has been referred to the judiciary committee, is favorably received. The measure provides the chief of police shall refuse issuance of a permit if a picture is ruled "immoral or obscene" by a majority of a board of ten censors, none of whom shall be an official. This would let the major out.

The Metro-Yorke picturization of Clarence B. Kelland's powerful novel, "The Hidden Spring," is the next picture in which Harold Lockwood will be seen on the Metro program, the release date being July 16.

PICKFORD FILM A TRIUMPH

Proclaimed Greater Than "Joan the Woman"—Exhibitors, Critics and Public Unanimous in Praising Timely Masterpiece

Never in the history of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation has a more sensational success been evidenced by one of its releases than was scored last week with the initial presentation of Mary Pickford's spectacular production, staged under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, "The Little American," released at a most opportune time, this patriotic subject is proclaimed the greatest achievement of not only Mary Pickford, but Cecil B. De Mille as well, not even excluding "Joan the Woman."

At the Artcraft headquarters in New York, Walter E. Greene, president of the big distributing company, as well as other executives, has received many congratulatory letters and telegrams from exhibitors all over the country who have already presented the new Pickford offering.

The general consensus of opinion that "The Little American" is Mr. De Mille's greatest work, not even excluding "Joan the Woman," was printed in the New York Sun as follows:

"Cecil B. De Mille has never done a finer picture, not even excluding 'Joan the Woman,' and no producer has excelled his war scenes."

In a telegram to Mr. De Mille last week, Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky organization controlling Artcraft, said: "Viewed Little American, wonderful work. Sorry I cannot grasp your hand and extend personally, congratulations and thanks for this beautiful and artistic production. Such artistic execution gives us just title to the claim of the best in motion pictures."

At the Strand Theater in New York and other first run houses throughout the country, the hot weather did not prevent record-breaking business. Readily conceded to be Mary Pickford's most sensational triumph, "The Little American" is expected to prove the most notable film offering of the season.

Fairbanks in Lavish Production

A communication received at the Artcraft headquarters in New York from the Douglas Fairbanks organization now producing "The Optimist," for August release, announces that this film will be the most lavish offering in the way of sets, in which the popular star has ever appeared. The production also depicts many different locales of the world visited by the hero of the story.

One of the most notable features of Fairbanks' newest Artcraft film is his unusually capable supporting cast which includes such well known screen and stage players as Eileen Percy, Gustave Von Seyfertitz, Charles P. McHugh, Charles Corrard, William H. Keith, Ruth Allen, Herbert Standing, Fred Goodwine, Florence Mayon, David Porter and Bull Montana. The picture is being staged under the direction of John Emerson. Douglas Fairbanks is the author of the story which has been scenarioized by clever little Anita Loos.

Work has begun on the latest Universal railroad drama, "The Dynamite Special," featuring Helen Gibson.

Puts White in Great White Way

Lewis J. Selznick is now the largest single contributor to the whiteness of the Great White Way.

The electric signs used to advertise Selznick-Pictures at Forty-sixth street and Broadway, at Forty-second and Broadway, and on the Broadway Theater itself total the largest number of square feet of illumination used by any one concern.

This apex of electrical display was reached with the completion of the big sign at Forty-second and Broadway, opposite the Rialto Theater, last week, for the advertising of the new Selznick star, Constance Talmadge. Other sections of the same sign are employed for the announcement of the coming Rita Jolivet feature.

At Forty-sixth and Broadway is another Constance Talmadge illumination, and one announcing "The Lone Wolf," while the Broadway Theater display at present is also devoted to the big Brenon production.

These signs cover a total of ten thousand square feet and fifty thousand incandescent bulbs are required to equip them. The power consumption reaches the imposing aggregate of 50,000 kilowatts monthly.

Injunction Against Mabel Normand

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has gone to law to uphold the integrity of a contract entered into between a motion picture producing firm and one of its stars. Suit has been instituted by Goldwyn to obtain an injunction preventing Mabel Normand, screen comedienne, from working for any other concern or individual.

Mabel Normand, whom Goldwyn is enjoining.

Miss Normand entered into a contract on September 16, 1916, with Samuel Goldfish, whereby she was engaged to be starred in motion pictures under his management for a period of two years at a weekly salary of $1,000. Under this contract she was to act exclusively for Mr. Goldfish.

Upon the formation of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation by Mr. Goldfish, Edgar Selwyn, Archibald Selwyn, Arthur Hopkins and their associates, Miss Normand's contract was assigned to Goldwyn. Miss Normand was scheduled to begin working for Goldwyn in its studios on May 1 and arrived in New York soon after that date, manifesting an immediate intention of not entering upon her contract. Her response to notifications as to the date of beginning work proving to be evasive, Goldwyn came into possession of information that Miss Normand planned to work elsewhere and for other individuals.

Injunction is sought for two reasons; first, that she made a valid contract in good faith and should be made to live up to it, and the other that Goldwyn has determined in its own behalf and in behalf of all other producing organizations to test through the medium of the courts the so-called star contracts, which some of the celebrities of the screen ignore or violate whenever the whim or notion strikes them.

It is alleged in the Goldwyn complaint that Miss Normand in violating her contract in this or any other similar manner will inflict upon Goldwyn a monetary loss of half a million dollars and that investments already have been made by the company in costly literary materials fitted to the personality of this particular star, and not at all suited to the personality and capacities of any other star.

The week of July 15 is Greater Vitagraph week in Washington, D. C. During that week the Garden Theater will play a solid Vitagraph week. Also during the same period the two leading Ninth street houses, the Garden and the Strand, will play Vitagraph pictures.

The Cosmos Theater is booked solid throughout the summer on Vitagraph features, and will not show a picture made by any other producing company.

Gale Henry is playing in a lively comedy called "Sarah of the Circus" at Universal City.

New Mary Miles Picture

To Mary Miles Minter, in the stellar role of "Melissa of the Hills," an American Film creation to be distributed to the theaters July 23 and thereafter, falls the lot of showering her youthful charms and attention upon her film father, a kindly itinerant minister of the gospel.

As Melissa she is beloved of all the rude backwoodsmen and a smart city legal fledgling to boot, but they all, with the exception of the young attorney, are ignored utterly that her time may be given to comforting her daddy.

Miss Minter's leading man is the likeable Alan Forrest; her celluloid daddy, that distinguished character man, Spottiswoode Aiken, who comes to the American studios fresh from a long series of screen triumphs elsewhere. Another featured player is George Periolat as a skinflint with a soft heart. His talents are too well known to need exploitation here.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, in presenting the picture, calls attention to the magnificent backgrounds obtained. These were taken in the big-timber regions of California.

Dare Devil Made Director

Earle Montgomery, who has been dare-deviling with Joe Simberg in the Vitagraph Big V Comedies, has been made assistant director to Lawrence Semon in the production of these humorous thrillers; but this does not prevent him from continuing to risk his life each day in company with his partner.

The combination of Simberg and Montgomery, which is one of friendship as well as business, is a union of East and West. The one is a native of Pittsburgh, while the other is a product of Los Angeles. Simberg, who won a reputation as an athlete and physical culture expert before he entered motion pictures, is a New Yorker by adoption.

Montgomery went into the bone-risking, death-defying business as a recreation about three years ago. After watching the stunt artists work for a while, he figured it was a pretty easy life and broke in himself.

"A Daughter of the Southland"

The Selig Polyscope Company announces its latest releases in General Film service. On Monday, July 16, "A Daughter of the Southland" is the title of a two-reel production which carries a romance of the southland during the days of the Civil War. It is said that the drama carries a number of spectacular scenes of battle, not the least of which is the battle between the Monitor and the Merrimac.

New Pathe Serial

Four popular screen favorites have been engaged by Pathe for the production of a new serial which will be released under the title "The Hidden Hand." They are Doris Kenyon, who will be starred in the production, and Arline Pretty, Sheldon Lewis, and Mahlon Hamilton, who will be featured.

Edward Warren claims to have discovered an entirely new star on the picture firmament and he predicts a great future for her. Her name is Helen Hayes Brown and she will appear in Mr. Warren's next production now being rapidly completed at his elaborate studios in Grantwood.

National Association in Chicago

FIRST ANNUAL MEETING HELD—DIRECTORS TO BE ELECTED

THE first annual meeting of the members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is to be held at the Princess Theater, in Chicago, on Wednesday, July 18, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. This is during the national convention and exposition of the M. P. E. L. of America, held at the Chicago Coliseum. The meeting will be presided over by President William A. Brady, who will present his report and call for the reports of the executive secretary, treasurer and the special committees which have been created since the formation of the Association last August.

At this meeting the candidates which have been nominated by the various branches of the organization are to be elected as members of the Board of Directors, to serve for the ensuing year.

During the past week the producers, distributors, supply and equipment concerns and the general division, consisting of individuals and the trade publications, have held meetings and selected their candidates for directors. The producers have nominated the following:

William A. Brady, World Film Corporation; D. W. Griffith, Artcraft Pictures Corporation; William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; Carl Laemmle, Universal Film Company, and Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Distributors have nominated the following: J. A. Berst, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Arthur S. Friend, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Walter W. Irwin, Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.; P. A. Powers, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and Richard A. Rowland, Metro Pictures Corporation.

Supply and Equipment Branch: Donald J. Bell, Bell & Howell, Chicago; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Films; J. H. Hallberg, United Theater Equipment Corporation; Walter J. Moore, H. C. Miner Lithographing Company, and J. F. Skerrett, Nicholas Power Company.

General Division: Paul Gulick, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Arthur James, Metro Pictures Corporation; William A. Johnston, Motion Picture News; Joseph F. Lee, states rights buyer, and Thomas G. Wiley.

More Directors to Be Added

There are 30 members on the Board of Directors of the National Association at the present time, one-third, or ten, of whom are nominated by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Each of the other four branches, above named, nominates five directors, and President Brady has announced that it is his purpose to apply through the regular channel for an increase in the number of directors from the exhibitors from 10 to 14 and from the other branches from five to seven.

This action is taken in view of the growth in the membership of the National Association during the past eight months, and with a view to bringing to the directorate the new men representing important interests who have been helpful in upbuilding the organization and whose advice and counsel will be welcome by the active officials, who have given so much of their time and money during the past year to make the National Association a truly representative organization of the film interests. It is assumed that the various increases in the directorate will be approved at the annual meeting, in which event the producers have recommended that Samuel Goldfish of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and William Fox of the Fox Film Corporation should be nominated as the two additional producer directors.

The distributors have appointed a nominating committee to select their two additional representatives on the board. The supply and equipment division has recommended N. C. Cotabish, National Carbon Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and Joseph F. Coufal, Novelty Slide Company, as the two representatives from this division. Fred J. Beecroft of the Exhibitors' Trade Review and George Irving, motion picture director, have been recommended as the two additional representatives from the general division.

If these plans are made effective, the National Association will have, after July 18, a board of directors of 42 in number as against 30 during the past year.

Headquarters Congress Hotel, Chicago

Many of the officers and directors of the organization are planning to leave for Chicago on Monday, July 16, and arrangements have been made for a special car to be attached to the Twentieth Century Limited.

The headquarters of the National Association in Chicago will be the Congress Hotel and in charge of Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary, who is also making the arrangements for the special car and will accompany the asssociation's officials to Chicago.

Scenario Writers! Attention!

D. C. Harris, treasurer of the Triangle Film Corporation, in a recent letter to MOTOGRAPHY said:

This is to advise you that all scenarios which are to be submitted to the Triangle Film Corporation should be sent to the Scenario Department, Culver City, California, and not to the New York office.

We will be glad to receive all scenarios and will act upon them within ten days. Each scenario will be given a key number.

New Fox Beauty

Winifred Westover is the latest addition to the large number of beautiful girls acting in Henry Lehrman's Sunshine comedies for William Fox. Miss Westover will have a prominent part in a forthcoming Sunshiner.

COMING MUTUALS

Jackie Saunders in "Betty Be Good" Leads Schedule for July 16—Last of "Railroad Raiders" Appears

Jackie Saunders, star in a series of successful productions for Mutual release, heads Mutual's schedule for the week of July 16 in "Betty Be Good," a five-reel comedy drama. "Betty Be Good" was produced by E. D. Horkheimer. It marks the return to the screen of Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, veteran motion picture writer and actor. He plays one of the leading roles in the production.

"Betty Be Good" is a story of love and politics. It provides another "tomboy" role for Miss Saunders, a part in which she is supposed to be a dignified little miss and in which she is even more the harum-scarum girl which has created a demand for her plays from the picture public.

"The Mystery of the Counterfeit Tickets," the fifteenth and final chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," Mutual-Signal photonovel, is scheduled for release July 16. Helen Holmes, heroine of the serial, and the secret service force of the K. & W. railway, run down the raiders. Helen's father, convicted for the crimes of the gang, is freed from prison. The shack in which the gang has made its headquarters and secreted its printing equipment which has turned out counterfeit tick- etc, is burned and blown up, one of the spectacular scenes of the episode.

There are two comedies on the week's schedule, "Jerry's Star Bout," a one-reel Cub featuring George Ovey and "The Kissing Butterfly," a one-reel La Salle. "The Kissing Butterfly" is released Tuesday, July 14, and "Jerry's Star Bout" is on the schedule for Thursday, July 19.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," Gaumont's reel of travel, goes to Avignon, a beautiful and historic city in southeastern France, shows the ruined palace of Tiberius, takes the motion picture traveler to the mysterious Timbuktu and to a city of the Sudan.

Reel Life, the weekly film magazine, released July 19, initiates the spectator into the mysteries of construction of the incandescent lamp, shows a novel bicycle race, shows the raising of cocoanuts, pictures the boy scout signal corps and contains animated cartoons from Life.

Mutual Weekly No. 133 is released July 18 and will contain pictures of the latest news. The Weekly goes to press but two days prior to its release date and its contents are determined by incidents of news importance which occur in the few days preceding release. The Weekly contains a wide range of subjects. No. 131, released July 2, shows the arrival of the American Ambulance corps on the French front, the arrival of Italy's war envoys, the attack on suffragettes at Washington, the arrival of American army surgeons at Blackpool, Eng., and the bread line in Rome, Italy.

Fairyland Scenes in Triangle Play

Those who have seen the studio projection room showings of "In Slumberland," the Triangle production featuring the kiddie stars, Thelma Salter and Georgie Stone, under the direction of Ivin Willatt, say that it is destined to become one of the most popular motion pictures for children ever put upon the American screen.

Hundreds of fantastic settings of marvelous beauty were constructed for the fairyland scenes of the play. Wood nymphs, elfs and mystical spirits of fable land dance through bowers and lovely gardens.

The photographic effects in this picture will puzzle experts, as some of the most complicated triple and quadruple exposure feats ever attempted at the Triangle studios have proved successful.

J. P. Lockney, Jack Livingston, Walter Perry and Laura Sears play the only important adult roles in the production, most of the action revolving about the adventures of the two children in their fairy wonderland.

Ben Turpin in "Black Cat"

An innovation in the Black Cat series of 25-minute features released through General Film is the appearance of Ben Turpin, comedian, in an out-and-out comedy. All of the Black Cat pictures have been comedy-dramas, but Essanay, the producer, made room for the Turpin comedy in this series because of its splendid fun. Turpin has never appeared to better advantage, is the verdict of General Film, than in this release. It is called "Two Laughs" which is completely a misnomer by reason of the laughs numbering many, many times that.

Star of "Cabiria" in "The Warrior"

"The Warrior" is a new and timely battle story of the Alps in which the famous "Cabiria" star, "Maciste," makes his re-appearance at the Criterion Theater, New York, Monday, July 16, for an engagement of four weeks.

The story of "The Warrior" was built around actual conditions on the Italian front in the Alps. Two years were spent in its making and hazards of border warfare in the mountains are shown.

The popularity of "Maciste," already established throughout the world by his appearance in "Cabiria," is greatly enhanced by the fact that in "The Warrior" he is more than an actor, as he is serving his colors at the front and was performing military duty when the production was being staged.

Hector Turnbull, former head of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department, who recently resigned to take up free-lance work, has enlisted as a private in Battery F, First Field Artillery, New York National Guard.

ON TRIANGLE PROGRAM

Bessie Love in Circus Story, "The Sawdust Ring," and Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct," for July 15

Triangle's long-heralded story of circus life, "The Sawdust Ring," starring Bessie Love, will be released July 15 on the same program with "The Mother Instinct," in which Enid Bennett is starred.

As the little barefooted girl who runs away and joins a circus, Bessie Love has given a portrayal that is said to have more accurately measured her ability than any role in which she has hitherto appeared.

The charm of this story by J. V. Jefferson lies in its faithful depiction of youngster life. When the circus comes to town Bessie regards with wide-eyed ecstasy the glittering wagons, the clown band and the daring equestriennes. Immediately she feels the lure of the sawdust, just as every other child has felt it. Her mother is dangerously ill and the little girl is threatened with the poor house. She determines that she shall make her own way without the aid of charity, so, with a boy playmate, she sets forth for the white-topped land of adventure. She is not beaten and persecuted, as many story heroines of her type have been, but in her own way makes a discovery and returns home with a message of happiness for her mother.

Enid Bennett, who last appeared in "The Girl, Glory," will further demonstrate her versatility in the part of a French peasant girl, the daughter of a Brittany fisherman, in "The Mother Instinct." She goes to Paris and finds romance in the Latin Quarter. Her sister Marie, played by Margery Wilson, joins her and the two enjoy the revelries of studio life. When their mother comes to the city in the spring she is shocked to learn that Eleanor has become a mother and is innocently proud of the fatherless babe. Later Marie is arraigned for the murder of Raoul Bergere, a worthless fellow of the Brittany village, and in the courtroom makes a revelation that clears herself and Eleanor of all scandal.

"Sudden Jim" to Be Released July 22

Backing up the recent statement to exhibitors that its program features will from henceforth equal in quality of star, story and production any of the higher-priced independent attractions, Triangle announces the release on July 22d of a production of "Sudden Jim," the popular novel and Saturday Evening Post story, in which Charles Ray will appear as star.

It is understood that this feature was originally intended for one of the special releases which Triangle planned to make the first of each month, but since the re-organization of the company it has been determined to devote the producers' entire efforts toward making each program feature the equal of any special production on the open market.

"Sudden Jim," by Clarence Budington Kelland, was first published as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post. It is now out in novel form and is ranked among the five best-sellers of current fiction. Thus it is estimated without any exaggeration that millions have read the exciting narrative of the boy who took over a clothespin factory in northern Michigan and beat down the combine which was trying to force exorbitant prices on the market.

As a box office power Ray is said to rank among the four or five leading male players of the screen. His popularity is built upon the substantial foundation of histrionic ability. Although a likable, boyish personality has, no doubt, been an element in establishing him as a favorite, the larger part of his success must be attributed to his finished and sympathetic characterizations. Whether playing weaklings, country bumpkins or comedy types he has registered emphatically with both critics and playgoers.

In "Sudden Jim," the star is surrounded by an exceptional cast of players, all of whom have been selected because of particular qualifications for their roles. Sylvia Bremer, the Australian beauty who has appeared with Ray in other pictures, has the leading feminine part. Joseph J. Dowling has brought to life the whimsical character of the judge, who is the political tyrant of the mill town where Sudden Jim makes his fight for success. Georgie Stone, the Triangle Kiddie, is also of the cast. Among the other players are Lydia Knott, William Ellingford and Frank Whitsen.

NEW VITAGRAPH STARS

Six Young and Charming New Players Engaged—More to Follow—See Photographs on Opposite Page

In its plans for expansion of program and speeding up production, recently adopted by Vitagraph, provision was made for the engagement of a large number of new players, men and women, all of whom are known to picture audiences.

Six of the players recently engaged by the company are young women who have won following among the "fans" and are rapidly approaching the pedestals of stardom. They are Corinne Griffith, who has been made leading woman for Earle Williams; Mildred Manning, who was featured in the first of the O. Henry pictures; Miariam Fouche, who will be seen opposite Evart Overton; Agnes Eyre, formerly an Essanay player; Betty Howe, who appeared last with Grace Darling in the Beatrice Fairfax series, and Carol Halloway, who is to be featured with William Duncan in a forthcoming Vitagraph serial, "The Fighting Trail."

These girls, all of whom are young and pretty, are splendid actresses and each was chosen as much for her stage talent as for her good looks. They are all around the twenty year mark and are of the clean, athletic type, lovers of outdoor life, and bubbling with ambition and enthusiasm. Two of them—Miss Griffith and Miss Fouche—are Southern girls and State neighbors. Miss Griffith was born in Texas, but spent most of her life in New Orleans, La., while Miss Fouche was born in Shreveport, Louisiana, and spent a good many years in Texas.

Miss Griffith has been in pictures about eighteen months and has appeared in a number of notable productions, among them "The Yellow Girl," "The Last Man" and "Through the Wall." Her work in all of these features stood out so conspicuously that she was brought East and put opposite to Mr. Williams, which means that she is practically "made" as a motion picture feature.

Although eight of her twenty years was spent in a convent in her native town, Miss Miriam Fouche, before she ever dreamed of being a screen star, spent several years in Texas and there learned to ride a horse and shoot a gun like a regular cowboy. She has been in pictures about a year, but did not make a real impression until she played the role of Ustane in "She," in which Valeska Suratt was starred. Her portrayal of the role was so extraordinary as a dramatic interpretation that she was immediately sought and signed by Vitagraph to appear in Blue Ribbon features.

Carol Halloway is a Massachusetts girl, and is playing opposite to William Duncan in a new Vitagraph serial, "The Fighting Trail," which is scheduled for early release through V. L. S. E., the Vitagraph distributing organization. She is a recruit from the legitimate stage, having played stock engagements in New England and the role of "Youth" in "Everywoman." Prior to joining Vitagraph she appeared in pictures produced by the Lasky, Fine Arts, American, Lubin, Pilot and NYMP organizations. Miss Halloway is a daring horsewoman, an all-round athlete, an expert shot and a sturdy swimmer.

Mildred Manning, who is featured with Marc MacDermott in "Mary Jane's Pa," a Blue Ribbon feature slated for early release, won recognition by her splendid work in the O. Henry series, produced by Vitagraph and released through General Film. She began her stage career in musical comedy and for several years was a member of the Winter Garden company. She started in picture work with the Biograph company, but after a brief time went to Vitagraph.

"For France," a story of present-day romance in France, will mark the return to Vitagraph of Betty Howe, who was with the company for a considerable period and left several months ago to play in the Beatrice Fairfax series with Grace Darling. Among the Vitagraph features she has been seen in are "The Alibi," "The Escapades of Mr. Jack" and "The Scarlet Runner," the big serial feature in which Earle Williams is the star.

Agnes Eyre, the sixth recruit to Vitagraph's beauty and talent class, is a little Chicago girl who won recognition in support of Edna Mayo in several of her Essanay productions. She is a graduate of the University of Chicago and received her stage training at the College and Marlowe Theaters in her native city. She appeared in "The White Sister" and "The Sting of Victory" while with Essanay and later was with the Selig company. Since joining Vitagraph she has been cast in Blue Ribbon features and O. Henry pictures and now is supporting Alice Joyce in a big picture. Miss Eyre will next be seen in "Richard the Brazen" with Alice Joyce and Harry Morey.

Three-Year-Old Star Gets Contract

Vitagraph has added to its list of contract players one of the youngest actresses in the world—Miss Aida Horton, who is three years old.

About six weeks ago, Aida, who is a dainty miss with golden hair, walked into the office of Andre Roosevelt, production manager at the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn, and said she had an ambition to be an actress. Rather, she lisped it. Asked where her mother was, she said she had left her outside "to wait for me." Mr. Roosevelt then asked if she ever had any stage experience and Miss Horton admitted that she had not.

"Then what makes you think you are an actress?" he queried, and Aida, not a bit abashed, replied:

"Cause I want to be."

She was engaged on that speech and her mother was called in to make the arrangements.

At the time, Vitagraph was getting ready to produce the "Bobby Connelly Series," so Miss Horton was put in as Bobby's leading lady and the production of the series was begun.

Little Aida proved a revelation as a natural born artist. She was found to be a perfect photographic subject and also to possess in large quantity that elusive something "screen personality." In addition, she is highly intelligent and never has to be told twice what she is to do. She also has a humorous streak in her and extraordinary powers of mimicry.

A new outdoors stage for World-Pictures Brady-Made has been erected alongside the Peerless studio in Fort Lee. This is said to be the largest al fresco stage in the East, with dimensions equaling 65 by 125 feet. In these summer days four directors are constantly producing within this area, and with the players, cameramen and other employees, hail as a godsend their liberation from temperatures under glass.

Freuler Re-elected President

John R. Freuler was re-elected president of the Mutual Film Corporation at the annual meeting of the board of directors held at the concern's offices at 220 South State Street in Chicago, June 26. This is Mr. Freuler's third term as president of the Mutual, which now ranks as perhaps the largest of the motion picture concerns, having a total releasing output of approximately a million feet of films a week.

"The Mutual will be devoted to a policy which includes the release of two important feature productions a week, beginning in the early autumn," was Mr. Freuler's announcement. "It is also committed absolutely to its policy of 'big stars only.' The star is a permanent institution in the motion picture industry and will continue to be a dominant factor in production."

Other officers of the corporation elected yesterday are: Dr. George W. Hall of Chicago, first vice-president; Crawford Livingston of New York, second vice-president; Samuel S. Hutchinson of Chicago, treasurer; and Samuel M. Field of Wilmette, secretary.

Incidentally, a report that the Mutual Film Corporation was to remove its home offices from Chicago, returning to New York, was officially denied.

Harry Tighe with Vitagraph

After headlining in vaudeville for years, Harry Tighe has plunged headfirst into pictures. Armed with a neatly rolled bundle of comedies, the product of his own agile mentality, he confessed last week to Andre Roosevelt, production manager for Vitagraph, that he had an ambition to pose for the screen. They got together quickly and inside of an hour a deal had been made for Mr. Tighe to appear in a series of his own comedies.

Archer McMackin, formerly director of the Bushman-Bayne pictures and the producer of more than 300 photoplays, was selected to direct Tighe and the picture chosen for his first effort is "The Fixer." Tighe began work immediately and the first day's take, when run off the next morning, showed the big comedian to be a splendid screen subject. It has not been decided how many pictures Tighe will make for Vitagraph, but from indications already at hand, it is said, he probably will appear in an extensive series.

Adele DeGarde, who scored a great personal triumph as Aggie Lynch in "Within the Law," is playing the leading feminine role with Mr. Tighe. She is one of the cleverest little stars of the Vitagraph collection and, because of her toy size, is a splendid foil for the massive Tighe.

Thrilling battle scenes have been secured for the Universal eight-reel special feature, "John Ermine of Yellowstone."

Juanita Hansen Supports Wilbur

David Horsley has just announced that the leading woman for Crane Wilbur, whose features are to be released on Art Dramas program, will be Juanita Hansen, one of the most beautiful and charming stars on the screen. Shirley Huxley, the well known Australian actress, has also been added to the cast.

These two stars will make their first Art Dramas appearance in a western drama in which Mr. Wilbur will be starred.

Miss Hansen has long been an acknowledged favorite of picture audiences. Her career began in comedies, and she soon joined the Bosworth company, where she appeared in "Betty in Search of a Thrill." With Famous Players she appeared in several plays as Jack Pickford's leading woman, and she was starred in the American production, "The Secret of the Submarine." Later she joined Fox, and starred in several successes, notably "The Mediator." Definite release dates for the first Wilbur pictures have not yet been decided upon.

Brady Talks on Program System

By William A. Brady.

"I derive considerable amusement from reading a statement that finds its way into print at rather regular intervals to the effect that the program system is slowly but surely dying off and that there is no hope for the future excepting through the specials. But for these, we are assured every month or so, the whole motion picture industry would be cast up on the rocks and dashed to splinters in no time at all.

"As the manufacturing and distributing corporation with which I am connected is the only concern in this country adhering absolutely to the program in principle and action, I suppose its members are in a better position than other persons to know just how the situation stands. I am therefore able to say positively that the program, so far as the business of World-Pictures may be regarded as an indication, is vastly better off than at any time since the first animated photograph was taken.

"Instead of being in a forward state of decomposition, as the disciples of the specials would have us believe, the program is gaining strength and momentum every minute. It is in no spirit of boastfulness whatsoever, but merely as a matter of actual record that I say the demand for the World-Pictures program is enormously greater at this time than ever before.

"This is important not only in the personal sense but as justifying our stand for the program in the face of constantly arising opportunities to wildcat for large immediate profits. I have said before now that our principle is not a matter of philanthropy or benevolence, but a plan to build up a structure which will stand the test of time.

"We are out for business that will be here next year and ten years hence, instead of trying to grab everything at once and let the future take care of itself.

"The recurring publications of the impending dissolution of the program really mean nothing. There will always be a healthy, solid demand for dependable pictures, which are an insurance beforehand to the exhibitor that he will make a profit, and to the public that it will not be disappointed."

Showing of "Lone Wolf"

The instantaneous success achieved by Herbert Brenon's latest production for Selznick Pictures, "The Lone Wolf," now playing to big business despite the hot weather, at both the Broadway Theater, New York, and the Studebaker Theater, Chicago, has resulted in the formation of plans to open this sensational feature in ten cities early in August as a pre-release showing.

Following the opening in New York and Chicago the Selznick office received many telegrams and letters asking for the picture before the regular release date, about September 1. The dearth of good features in summer and the triumph of the picture in New York and Chicago combined to induce the larger exhibitors to show "The Lone Wolf" in August and it will open on the same day in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Boston, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New Orleans and Detroit.

The New York dailies, without a single dissenting vote, declared "The Lone Wolf" to be a Brenon Triumph and even a better feature than "War Brides." The American said "'The Lone Wolf' at the Broadway is dominated by its director. Like a Belasco-made play, a Brenon-made photo-play bears its own stamp. Mr. Brenon supervises with a painstaking as well as an inspired hand and in this latest presentation of his there are many master strokes."

The Tribune said "There is never a dull moment from start to finish. Things happen in such rapid succession that it leaves one breathless. Nothing quite so exciting has appeared on the screen as the chase by the 'Pack' after 'The Lone Wolf' and 'Lucy Shannon.'" The Sun said "As General Joffre might have said of 'The Lone Wolf' at the Broadway, 'Ca Marche.' In other words it travels some."

All the other New York dailies were equally enthusiastic over the feature. With three distinct punches in the burning of the Hotel Troyon, the automobile falling from the raised jacknife bridge, and the battle between aeroplanes in mid air, this picture will undoubtedly prove to be one of the biggest money getters of the year.

A feature of the Broadway opening was the showing of important scenes in "The Fall of the Romanoffs," the Russian picture Mr. Brenon is directing now with Iliodor the "Mad Monk" of Russia, himself, playing the leading role.

See Japan

Dwight MacDonald, general manager of the American-Japan Pictures Co., reports great interest in their serial "Film Trip," showing Japan and the Japanese, released under the name "The Land of the Rising Sun." Entirely unlike any other travel series, this one combines the scenic with the strictly dramatic—three reels out of the ten having been actually played in Japan by well-known theatrical stars. These three dramatic features are made simply to show the oddity of Japanese customs in an unusual and often amusing way. "A Night in a Japanese Inn" is as funny a comedy as can be imagined, built around the adventures of an American traveler's first night in a Jap-style hotel in an inland town. The discomforts of a chairless room and a wooden pillow are compensated for in an unusual manner by the dainty geisha girls who wait on him.

Although the film is meant for release in ten weekly episodes of one reel each, the editing has been done in such a manner that any combination of reels is possible. It can be played as at the Rialto Theater, New York, where Mr. Rothapfel ran it as an "added feature attraction," in two-reel episodes, or even as two features of five reels each, or as a complete evening's entertainment, in eight or ten reels. The adaptability of the film makes it specially valuable.

The film is now ready for showing to state-rights buyers, together with all the special publicity for its exploitation.

Jacques Jaccard has started on the fourth episode this week of "The Quest of Virginia."

SENNETT WITH PARAMOUNT

Keystone Comedy King to Make Two-Reel Comedies for Release on Paramount Program— Will Work Independently

Mack Sennett, producer of Keystone comedies, has completed arrangements with Paramount Pictures Corporation for the release of all his future productions through Paramount. Sennett is to produce independently, and will issue a two-reel comedy through Paramount every other week.

For several days Mr. Sennett and Charles O. Bauman, business associate with Mr. Sennett in his new enterprises, and formerly vice-president of the New York Motion Pictures Corporation, had been in conference in New York with Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Sennett has gone to the Pacific Coast and will produce his pictures in Edendale, California.

Thomas Ince, who last week announced that he had decided to release productions through Artcraft and Paramount, lost no time in getting busy. Less than twenty-four hours after the deal had been consummated, Ince was headed for the balmy climes of California. Several California towns have offered to build a studio for Ince, without cost to him. It is certain that Ince's studio will be built near Los Angeles, the film-producing center of the United States.

Mack Sennett will probably take this whole splashing harem with him into Paramount pictures, and that being the case, it is nuggets to nickels your fans will follow right along behind.

"Mary Jane's Pa" Full of Appeal

"Mary Jane's Pa" is just a little human interest story woven around a man who deserted his wife and returned after many years to find that she had worked hard and supported herself and their two children.

Overcome with remorse, the deserter "comes back," redeems himself, and eventually regains the respect of his wife and the community. The very touch of human nature is what makes it so appealing. It is without intricacies, runs along smoothly, portraying the emotions of a loving mother. Its very cleanliness is its appeal.

In "Mary Jane's Pa," Eulalie Jensen, as the deserted wife, does such good work that she immediately stands out as a star of the first water. Marc MacDermott, as the husband, is the hard-faced cynic who immediately gains the enmity of his audience until his reformation in the last reel of the picture. Mildred Manning as the "Mary Jane" makes a tremendous hit in the "kid" part.

Louise Glaum, a Sagebrush Siren

Louis Glaum, star of "A Strange Transgressor," released July 8, on the Triangle program, has commenced work on a new play in which she is a siren of the sagebrush during the lariat period of the West.

Miss Glaum always contrives to present characters of striking individuality, carrying out her scheme even to the slightest detail of dress. As "Golden Rule Kate," the part she assumes in the new Triangle picture, she forsakes the vampire haunts of luxury for the rough dance halls of the frontier, eager to conquer the inhabitants of new fields.

The production is being directed by Reginald Barker. Jack Gilbert, one of Triangle's most promising juveniles, has a prominent role in the cast, which includes William Conklin and Mildred Harris.

Norman S. Rose, formerly publicity director for Historic Features, Inc., of New York, which concern exploited "Christus," the popular biblical film, has severed his connection with that company.

PICTURES IN CHINA

American Pictures of no Interest to Chinese—Take Lunches and Stay All Day, Though, to See Own People Act.

By Charles Fang

(Note: Charles Fang is recognized as the cleverest of Chinese motion picture actors. Before entering the field of screen drama he had one of the most pretentious of modern vaudeville acts. For nearly two years he has been acting in Metro pictures with the most pronounced success. His most popular and exacting role was that of the Chinese servant, Wee See, in "The Great Secret." He also played in "Cyclone Higgins, D. D.")

It is not generally known that the Chinese have been making their own pictures for five years past and that the motion picture business in the Celestial Empire is now flourishing and highly organized.

To accomplish this was no easy task, for the Chinese public did not know that it wanted pictures. The public could not formulate a want. It was listless; but the foreign manufacturer determined to show it something it had never thought of and then make it want it. The first pictures shown in China met with no success.

Pay People to Attend Theater

Nobody came at all to the first theaters opened. Finally the manager was obliged to adopt the novel method of paying prominent and leading people to attend for the first time, and in this manner the first motion picture theater came to make money.

Then it was found that the ordinary Chinaman took little or no interest in the stories that passed current elsewhere. He cared naught for plots or imported humor. The dangers through which the hero or heroine passed aroused no interest in the phlegmatic oriental. A picture containing such an all-star cast as Bushman, Bayne, Chaplin, Fairbanks and W. S. Hart would not have awakened a particle of animation on their stolid countenances.

Then it was found that the Chinaman wanted to see pictures of his own people doing things that would seem logical and proper from the Chinese point of view. The hint was taken, and the foreign manufacturer decided to make his photoplays in China. And while this decision was the beginning of the success of motion pictures in China, the difficulty was only half bridges, for up bobbed the problem of Chinese actors.

"No Smilee Less Eatee"

It was a tremendous task to recruit them. Their great defect was, and is yet, a total lack of imagination. Before an actor could be made to exhibit signs of distress or grief, the director had to actually give him a painful thrashing. If the scene called for a dinner table, actual tempting food had to be provided. And in order to make him laugh, it was necessary to make him have a really good time, with lots to eat and drink, and then march him straight in front of the camera.

All these things had to be overcome. "Fatty" Arbuckle throwing a large custard pie squarely into the face of a man dressed in evening clothes and silk hat would never arouse a smile from he Chinese audience. But the sight of some one falling into a deep hole or from a high ladder or a chair being pulled from under some unsuspecting person would arouse much mirth.

Then again, superstition, which plays a large part in Chinese life, causes some actors to absolutely refuse to perform some action necessary for the development of the plot, and the scene halts until a conference is held or a new actor obtained who is not possessed of that particular superstition. The director's lot was not a happy one. The actors cared nothing for scenery and less for "props." The manufacturer of pictures almost had to begin all over again.

In one stock company at Shanghai—the largest in China—there are 300 actors, while another at Hong Kong has almost as many. The writing of scenarios for these studios was a long and laborious task. Of course there was no temperamental star to fit nor any dangerous "stunts" to be performed. Likewise, there was no censor to chop out some of the most cherished scenes. But finally success crowned the efforts of the pioneers and a Chinese actor is now recognized as a prominent person and one to be much respected.

Juggling Parrot Gets Chinaman's Goat

Metro Pictures are popular in China. The Chinese like plays that shows scenes in American cities. One of the most attractive and bewildering stunts for them is the "Animated Cartoon" of the Metro Parrot juggling letters. In many of the Chinese theaters the patrons remain all day. Meals are brought to the theaters and only hunger and the tired feeling from standing can drive the people out. They believe that they have a right to remain in the theater so long as it is kept open, regardless of the fact that they must see the same show several times.

In fact, the complaint is general that the pictures —even seven reelers—are far too short. And so for serials they never keep track of the number of episodes. It is well nigh impossible to exhaust the patience of a Chinese audience.

But the men who put China on the map, in so far as concerns motion pictures, are deserving of every credit, for besides being a new industry there, it has had a tendency to broaden the mind of the population, and now that a Chinese republic has been brought into existence, I look forward to a great development in the quality and quantity of Chinese motion pictures.

Jack Gardner, Essanay's newest star, will be seen next in "The Range Boss," scheduled for release through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, July 16.

"Giving Becky a Chance" is an attractive Morosco-Paramount offering, which is pleasing the persnickety public in the picture palaces in all the provinces.

Charlie Ray at a New One

Charles Ray, who has been enjoying a two weeks' rest since enacting the strenuous scenes for "Sudden Jim," has commenced work on a new Triangle production under the direction of Victor L. Schertzinger. It is announced that he will have a part in the new play similar to that in the Saturday Evening Post story, which will mark his transition from diffident "clod-hopper" to a more virile and heroic character.

More Paramounts for Open Market

Paramount Pictures Corporation, through its executive office, announced to all exhibitors throughout the country this week that it had placed its third set of pictures upon the open market, available now to all exhibitors irrespective of the franchise clause in their program contracts. This makes a total of 156 Paramount pictures that have been offered to all exhibitors, and the list contains some of the greatest productions that have ever been made by the Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas producing companies.

The first 104 Paramount pictures were placed on the open market by Paramount about two months ago and so successful was this move that the executives of this corporation decided upon their present step. These additional fifty-two pictures now offered on the open booking plan contain some of the best known and most successful productions that were ever issued by Paramount. They include such successes as "The Cheat," which proved to be one of the greatest money getters exhibitors have ever had; "Esmeralda," "Madam Butterfly," "The Girl of Yesterday," "The Foundling," "Still Waters," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Mice and Men," "Out of the Drifts," "Zaza," "Bella Donna," "Lydia Gilmore" and "The Spider."

In this set of fifty-two pictures will also be found the first productions in which Geraldine Farrar appeared, "Carmen," and "Temptation," which have been among the biggest box office attractions ever offered exhibitors.

Bluebird at Convention

Tuesday of convention week will be "Bluebird Day" at the Coliseum with pretty Violet Mersereau holding personal court with exhibitors and the public. This favorite ingenue of the Bluebird flock is the only star at present in the East and it will devolve upon her to represent the other Bluebirders in passing out souvenirs and the well known "glad hand" to the surging crowds.

The Red Cross Booth has been made the object of special solicitude by the stars of Bluebird who are compelled to remain on the west coast and create features for autumn distribution. Dorothy Phillips, Ruth Clifford, Ella Hall, Ida May Park, Claire Du Brey, Gretchen Lederer and other pretty members of the flock have contributed dolls, fancy work and embroidered pieces for sale at the Red Cross headquarters and it is hoped that their donations will have an appreciable effect upon the cash totals in the final count.

Serials Pay—New Signal-Mutual

The box office value of the serial—a subject of dispute among exhibitors—has been so affirmatively answered by the fifteen chapter photonovel, "The Railroad Raiders," just completed for Mutual by the Signal Film Corporation, that work will be started at once at the Signal studios on a new serial featuring Helen Holmes.

Among exhibitors the subject of serials often comes up for discussion. It is a question which perhaps has been more thoroughly debated by exhibitors than any other booking problem.

"Money talks" so plainly that exhibitors most skeptical of the serial have been convinced by the last two Helen Holmes photonovels, "A Lass of the Lumberlands" and "The Railroad Raiders." There are standing orders by the score in Mutual exchanges for the next Holmes serial despite the fact that exhibitors who have scheduled it do not yet know the title of the production—nothing except that it will be produced for Mutual by Signal and will star Helen Holmes. That's enough.

F. O. Webber, owner and manager of the Comet Theater, Roanoke, Virginia, broke nine years' record in box office receipts with "A Lass of the Lumberlands," the Helen Holmes Mutual-Signal photonovel.

Mr. Webber's correspondence with the Washington office of the Mutual Film Corporation, covering the period from the date he booked "A Lass" until the projection of the last chapter, is highly interesting in that it shows how his enthusiasm mounted like the thermometer on an August day.

After the first chapter had run, Mr. Webber wrote:

Helen Holmes in "A Lass of the Lumberlands" stood them out all day Saturday. Everything you have said about this thrilling serial is correct and we came near breaking all records with the opening chapter. Weather was only fair, so we expect to break box office records yet with it. We are more than pleased and thank you for the booking.

Three weeks later Mr. Webber sent this letter:

We broke all records in history of theater for nine years standing by biggest box office receipts. Over two thousand paid admissions and hundreds turned away. You certainly made good on this fourth chapter.

Two weeks later he wrote again:

Helen Holmes in "A Lass of the Lumberlands" packing 'em in each Saturday. When will you have another Helen Holmes serial?

His rising enthusiasm is revealed in a letter which came three weeks afterward:

We certainly regret that next Saturday gives us the last of the Helen Holmes serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Incidentally it has broken every house record. No other serial we have ever seen can compare with it. Let us hope there are more like it.

When "The Railroad Raiders" was announced, this letter came from Mr. Webber:

I notice in Reel Life that there is to be another Helen Holmes serial. Please let us know immediately if we can get it and when it will be released.

Lena Baskette, Universal's clever child actress, is working in "The Heart of Mariana," a two-reel photoplay.

GENERAL GROWING

Addition of Four Reels a Week Soon, Called "Sunset Features," to Be Followed by More Until Volume Is Attained

With the promise of a four-reel feature release each week to top off its present regular supply of shorter length features, General Film is well on its way to its recently predicted increase of product. The new product is being put on gradually, since the greatest of discrimination is being employed, but a product double what it was a week ago is already in sight.

General Film will in a very short time have ready for release a group of not less than ten four-reel dramatic subjects with popular stars in them, upon which the finishing touches are being placed in the laboratory. These will be marketed probably under the name of Sunset Features, to distinguish them from the many shorter length features with which the exhibitor and public are already familiar. General Manager Harold Bolster predicts that these will be hardly launched before there will be other additions of subjects different from the General Film product already being distributed.

Including the new product now on the way, General Film has a list rather formidable for bulk and noteworthy for consistent character. It includes in current releases:

Dramas: A 4-reel series; the Selig 2-reelers and 1-reelers; the O. Henry 2-reel Broadway Star Features.

Comedy Dramas: The "Black Cat" Features from Essanay in 25-minute lengths; 2-reel O. Henry Broadway Star Feature comedy-drama subjects which alternate with O .Henry drama releases.

Series: "The Further Adventures of Stingaree," with True Boardman, in 15 episodes (Kalem). The "Sparkle Comedies," 1 reel; "Pokes and Jabs," 1 reel; Johnny and Emma Ray, 1 reel; Ham and Bud, 1 reel; Bicket comedies, 1 reel; Selig 1 and 2 reel comedies.

Educational: Selig World Library, 1 reel, weekly.

The augmenting of product has taken place spontaneously and in a period devoted by General Film mainly to reinforcing and aligning the organization toward a bigger and more efficient sales service, and in the midst of the introduction of concentrated merchandizing methods. This part of the task has been so nearly completed that the attention of the management is now given more freely to the increase of subjects to be handled by its improved machinery.

Art Dramas Releases Wilbur Plays

After careful consideration David Horsley has selected the Art Dramas Program as the best medium for releasing his Crane Wilbur special features.

The Crane Wilbur Features, several of which are already completed, will be placed on the Art Dramas Program in the near future. The initial pictures of the series are entitled "Eye of Evil," "Third Generation," and "Unto the End."

The exact date on which this star will make his debut on the Art Dramas Program will be announced shortly.

It is also announced that a series of Western dramas starring this popular player is in preparation. These will of a new sort and will satisfy a genuine demand, for western productions have been so scarce of late as to be something of a novelty. There is little doubt but that Crane Wilbur's forthcoming westerns will go far toward re-establishing that particular style of picture once more in high favor.

Mr. Wilbur has been with David Horsley for several years, during which time his pictures were released through Mutual. Among his latest successes are: "The Morals of Men," "The Painted Lie," "The King of Make-Believe," "The Love Liar," "A Law Unto Himself," "Wasted Years," "The Conscience of John David," etc.

Before joining Horsley Mr. Wilbur was with Lubin, where he starred in "The Road of Strife" and other important productions. With Pathe he was leading man in "The Perils of Pauline" and other serials.

Previous to entering photoplay work, he had considerable stage experience. For seven years he toured with Mrs. Fiske as her leading man. His first stage appearance was at the age of fifteen, and he has been busy ever since. He is now twenty-eight years old.

"The Deemster" Shown in Tents

Warren & Clarke, the out-door showmen who bought the state rights to Hall Caine's massive photoplay, "The Deemster," with Derwent Hall Caine in the stellar role, for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, purpose sending out the big spectacle under a black-top tent and exploiting it just as if it were a circus. It is their intention to feature "The Deemster" as the principal attraction, but to surround it with side-shows, and the regulation concessions that accompany a circus.

Decorated circus wagons, floats and flats, together with equestrians, clowns and all the other peoples and paraphernalia that go to make up a circus outfit will be part and parcel of the equipment.

A special car for projecting machines and motion picture equipment will be a distinct part of the caravan. Half a dozen expert operators and several first class electricians will be engaged to look after the projection department. A film printing outfit will be carried and newspaper criticisms and other complimentary notices of the attraction will be flashed upon metallic screens.

The novelty of the enterprise is depended upon to attract the natives from far and near, just as they are lured out when the old fashioned circus comes to town.

Circus billposting will be resorted to in a manner never before dreamed of in conjunction with a motion picture.

"The Deemster" is now running at the La Salle Theater, Chicago, under the management of Warren & Clarke and under the direction of W. J. Dunn.

Marcus Loew is exhibiting this big feature in all his New York Theaters simultaneously.

Theater Extends Run

An indication of the unusual appeal and box office value of the latest Frohman Amusement Corporation super-production "God's Man," is the exceptional success which that production has enjoyed through the past week's run at the Goodwin Theater, Newark, N. J. Although the original booking was for but four days, the management of the house extended the engagement for another four days, and at the termination of this second period were prevented from a further extension only because of the inability of the Mammoth Film Corporation, distributors of the production for the northern New Jersey territory, to withhold a print from other bookings.

Margery Wilson, who has been elevated to stardom by Triangle. She has recently appeared as leading woman for Charles Ray and William S. Hart.

New Triangle Leading Woman

Margery Wilson, who as a leading woman has won a tremendous following among the motion picture fans throughout the country, has signed a three years extension of her present contract and in the future will be featured as a star.

"She has been elected to stardom by the public, not by the producers" is the statement issued by Triangle. "The interest which fans have taken in her as a personality and the desire of exhibitors to feature her name in advertising productions in which she appeared led us to give her stellar honors. We do not believe in the "divine right" star system, but we do believe in the star system of popular vote. Whenever a player earns the following and the critical esteem that Miss Wilson has, that player will be advanced to a higher position, just as an efficient person in another line of business is promoted.

Miss Wilson's latest appearance was in "The Clodhopper," in which she had the leading feminine role opposite Charles Ray. She will also appear in support of Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct," to be released July 15. Among other Triangle successes that have presented her in leading parts are "Wolf Lowry," "The Desert Man," "The Last of the Ingrams," "The Gun-Fighter," and "The Bride of Hate."

Miss Wilson is a Kentuckian and is true to the southern type of beauty, possessing large black eyes, dark, wavy hair and a dashing, spirited manner.

Russian Film in Washington

Russian films made their debut in America on June 27, when the Russian Art Film Corporation showed "The Queen of Spades" to the Russian Commission in Washington. The exhibition was given at the New Willard Hotel as a part of the reception tendered the Commission by the National Press Club.

"The Queen of Spades," by the great Russian poet, Pushkin, is the first of a group of Russian-made pictures brought over here by Nathan S. Kaplan. The Russian Art Film Corporation, of which Mr. Kaplan is president, has studios in Petrograd and Moscow, and has in their productions some of the most prominent dramatic actors and actresses abroad. This picture has been staged with the care for detail and the extravagance in settings and costumes for which foreign productions are noted. It is about five reels in length, and will be released soon. "The Queen of Spades" will be reviewed at length in MOTOGRAPHY at that time.

Representatives of the trade press were the guests of the Russian Art Film Corporation at the premier presentation in Washington. The party left New York in a special car attached to the Congressional limited, arriving in Washington just enough before the showing to allow the married men to post card their wives, and thus prove that they really were away and not at a poker party.

After the show the executives of the film company and the press men hurried back to the station and caught the midnight train for New York. This part of the entertainment was under the charge of H. H. Van Loan, of Shepard and Van Loan, who is known as a perfect host and deserves the title.

Seven Reeler on Triangle Program

An innovation in program features is the seven-reel production, "The Flame of the Yukon," starring Dorothy Dalton, which Triangle released on July 1 with "Her Excellency, the Governor."

The spectacular effects and dramatic power of this picture will doubtlessly place it among the greatest of Triangle achievements. The fact that it is two reels longer than the regular program plays might indicate that it was designed as a "special." This is not the case, however. The story by Monte M. Katterjohn demanded seven acts in order to realize its full power and coherent development. For that reason it was decided to deviate from the standard. The same policy will be followed with other Triangle plays that merit greater length than five reels.

Miss Dalton as "The Flame," presents a picturesque figure as the Carmen of Alaska, queen triumphant of the Midas dance hall, during the stampede of gold-crazed prospectors to the banks of the Yukon, in '95. Kenneth Harlan as "the stranger," gives a performance that will establish him in the first ranks of popular male players. Melbourne MacDowell, veteran stage actor and husband of the late Fanny Davenport, makes his screen debut as the grim, crooked proprietor of the dance hall where "The Flame" holds sway. Margaret Thompson, Carl Ullman and May Palmer are among the other principals. Over five hundred extras were used in some of the scenes, as well as a company of Eskimos with their sledges and dog teams.

Essanay's Child Series

"When Sorrow Weeps" and "The Uneven Road," are the two units of Essanay's series, "Do Children Count?" which are due for current release. This series features little Mary McAllister, the six-year-old star who recently was appointed a sergeant in the regular army in recognition by the war department of her work for the Red Cross and in recruiting men for the army. Charles Mortimer Peck, author, designed the series as a cycle of problems arising out of the rearing of children, and gleaned many of his plots from records of the divorce and juvenile courts.

The first of these two units, who presents the case of an orphaned child, was released July 18. It strikes a blow at so-called child-welfare workers who break up the little heroine's comfortable home because they believe it is not a fit place for her to live. The second, to be released July 25, portrays the haps and mishaps of a child who has been "spoiled" by her parents.

These productions, twelve in number, are being released each week, by General Film. All reference to birth control and sex propaganda has been carefully avoided in them. Each has a screen time, approximately, of twenty-five minutes, and is a picture complete in itself.

A story of the west, entitled "Joan of the Cattle Land," is being filmed at Universal City.

New Series of Single Reelers

The first two releases of a comedy series to be known as "Girls You Know" by James Montgomery Flagg, produced by Town & Country Films, Inc., are completed. Pretty girls, humorous situations and titles in satire, make these comedies something very different from anything else that has been produced.

The first is the story of "The Screen Fan," the typical small town girl who is camera struck. Her experiences as an extra and her dream as a film star make a story of honest fun. The second, the story of "The Vacation Girl" is a humorous character study of the business girl who eats, sleeps and talks vacation from April until her week is over. The next in line will be "The Romantic Girl," "The Blasé Miss," "The Patriotic Girl," etc. Each production is a humorous story of a different type of American girl. A different pretty girl is starred in each picture, a type for each story. This series will create a new appeal and give the exhibitor something unique for his program.

Mr. Flagg's national reputation as an illustrator and humorous writer prompted him to write this series of comedies. He is personally writing the scenarios, the titles, and, making an exceptionally attractive water-color poster of the girl in each story, which is to be used for the exhibitor's advertising, one sheets, etc.

The producers of this series will announce their distributing arrangements in the next week or so. They are busy with Mr. Flagg completing scenarios and production plans to cover a series of not less than twenty-five comedies.

Speakers See Pickford Film

At the request of Edward Harding, chairman of the executive board of the National Committee of Patriotic and Defense Societies, the new Mary Pickford-Artcraft spectacle, "The Little American," was shown at the Speakers' Training Camp last week at Chautauqua, New York. At this camp well known speakers from all over the country gathered to receive instructions and training to help them in their tour of the nation to inspire patriotism and acquaint the public with the needs of the war. Many college professors and other notables at the training camp viewed Miss Pickford's new film showing conditions across the ocean on the French front.

Triangle did a good thing when it made "American, That's All." It is now drawing all over the country.

Foursquare Feature Started

George Backer, president of the George Backer Film Corporation, is starting on his first Foursquare super-state-rights picture, which will be released through M. H. Hoffman, Inc.

Mr. Backer first secured a big story. It has an absorbing theme, it has suspense, drama, contrast, and several situations that grip. Finally, this story has a climax that comes from splendid cumulative development. The outcome is in doubt almost up to the climax itself.

Mr. Backer has secured for the cast of this Foursquare photoplay an array of talent that, in its entirety, is one of the strongest which any state-rights picture has had in years. Ruth Roland and Milton Sills are the featured stars. Other nationally famous stage and screen stars in the cast are Leah Baird, J. Herbert Frank, Ollie Kirby and George Larkin.

The settings and furnishings will reflect the Backer ideal—simplicity in art. The direction is to be made by Robert Ellis, who, while one of the youngest in the profession, was trained in the school that developed Marshall Neilan who was a director colleague of Mr. Ellis until recently.

The new Backer super-feature is being made in the studios at 318 West Forty-eighth street, and will be ready for release in September.

Where Were the Camera Men?

A band of 150 Mexicans, who were engaged by Director Paul Powell for "The Kid Is Clever," almost kidnapped Doris Pawn the leading lady of that picture last week.

In true bandit style a detachment of these Mexicans held up Miss Pawn's machine one night as it was returning to the studios. They threw the chauffeur our of the car, turned around and headed for San Diego and the Mexican border.

George Walsh had left the "location" shortly after Doris. His machine met hers on the road. He stopped, turned around and lit out after the Mexicans. When those dusky chaps heard the roar of George's racer they knew the jig was up. They stopped Miss Pawn's car and scrambled out just as George dashed up, grinding his machine to a halt.

Essanay Stars at Convention

Besides appearing on the special nights set aside for them the Essanay stars will be on hand to meet their friends every day of the convention at Chicago, July 14 to 21. A night has already been given over to K. E. S. E., Inc., and the stars and stock company as well will be in attendance on this night, as they will also on the night set aside for Essanay.

Bryant Washburn has been honored by the Chicago Daily News and will meet his friends at that booth. One of the assistants at the Red Cross booth will be Little Mary McAlister, who has done such extraordinary work in the campaign carried on by that organization in Chicago. She will spend part of her time in this booth and part in the K. E. S. E. booth.

Those who will be on hand on Essanay and K. E. S. E. nights are: Bryant Washburn, Taylor Holmes, Mary McAlister, Marguerite Clayton, Hazel Daly, Virginia Valli, Helen Ferguson and John Cossar.

Marion Davies in Picture Debut

Another stage beauty has been lured into pictures, Miss Marion Davies of "Oh Boy" at the Princess Theater, New York, having left that success to begin active work on the final scenes of her own story, "Runaway Romany." Miss Davies was obtained by George W. Lederer for his Ardsley Art Film Corporation. It is expected that "Runaway Romany" will be kept within seven reels and be ready for production in the fall.

Marion Davies, taking a screen vacation from musical comedy.

Miss Davies wrote the story of "Runaway Romany" when not playing eight performances a week at the Princess. She carried the rough scenario to Mr. Lederer, who accepted it. Then he asked Miss Davies to create for the screen the heroine she had conceived in her mind.

The story of "Runaway Romany," as outlined by Miss Davies, is as the title signifies, a gypsy story. The young actress will be seen as Firefly, favorite of a gypsy camp, in which she has lived since she was stolen from her father, a wealthy mine owner, when she was only two years old. As she grows into womanhood her father takes into his house an impostor, who seeks his money and pretends to be his own child. In the development of this theme of restoration and restitution no element of successful and unexpected screen production has been overlooked. An unusual cast, including Joseph Kilgour, Pedro de Cordoba, Matt Moore, Ormi Hawley and Gladden James will be seen in support of Miss Davies.

"For Liberty" Being Filmed

Rapid progress is being made in the production of "For Liberty," Edwin Bower Hesser's story of the "American Legion" of the Canadian army, which is being directed by Romaine Fielding for the S-M Films Corporation of Philadelphia.

Mr. Fielding has been in Canada for two weeks with the company, and has been accorded every aid by the Canadian military authorities in making the big war scenes. First going to Montreal, then to Camp Valcartier, taking some scenes in Quebec City, and then proceeding to Toronto, the very spirit of the military situation has been caught.

The company is now working at Camp Borden, Ontario, the finest of Canadian training camps. The training of soldiers in modern trench warfare, as it will be practised in the United States army, is shown, and actual "front line" conditions are being duplicated in the battle scenes, which are being made with the assistance of officers returned from the front.

E. K. Lincoln plays the stellar role, that of a young American who enlisted in the Canadian army. Romaine Fielding himself interprets the "heavy," and Barbara Castleton is the heroine. The studio scenes are to be taken in Philadelphia, where Ira M. Lowyr, general manager of S-M, is arranging the sets at the Lubin studios.

Selznick Buys "Parentage"

Lewis J. Selznick has secured the rights to "Parentage" for the territory covered by his New York and Chicago exchanges.

S. L. Rothapfel of New York's Rialto booked the picture for the first public showing, held at the Rialto, July 8. Aaron Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schafer, the Chicago associates of Lewis J. Selznick, booked the film for the Colonial, Chicago, for the week of the National Convention.

All the reviews were phrased in terms of highest praise, and state rights buyers besieged Frank J. Seng with offers for the picture for their territories. For the present, however, Mr. Seng has refused to consider any offers whatever, except to release the rights mentioned to Lewis J. Selznick. He says no more territory will be apportioned until exhibitors have an opportunity to see the picture under normal exhibiting conditions.

"Parentage" is a unique picture, in that it hammers home a distinct lesson without permitting the audience to suspect that this is being done, so cleverly has the entertaining element of the production been kept dominant.

Vitagraph Hit by Enlistments

The laboratories, print department, scenario department and other sections of the big Vitagraph plant have given their quota to Uncle Sam during the last few weeks and nearly a score of husky young men now are training in one branch or another in the Federal service. To be exact, eighteen men, many of them beyond the draft age, have enlisted from the Flatbush studio.

Victor Smith, a brother of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, left his position as production manager and now is in training for an officer's commission at Plattsburg. Henry Bergman, of the scenario department, also is in camp at Plattsburg.

From the laboratory department, four men have enlisted in the Fourteenth Infantry.

Edward Dunn, one of the Big V comedians, has enlisted in the Thirteenth Regiment and expects to leave for duty about July 15. The Quartermaster Officers, Reserve Corps has claimed four men. William Courtney, of the scenario department, has a captain's commission, as has Percy Pulver. Donald Weiss is a sergeant and P. J. Gallagher, of the purchasing department, has an application in the same branch.

Leigh Levering, one of the dare-devil stunt men, has been made a master engineer in the First New York Reserves and Louis Eklund has also nominated the engineer corps. George Plympton, of the scenario department, is a member of the First Regiment, New York National Guard.

Eugene Mullen, editor of the scenario department, expects any day to receive an assignment to special duty in the army. He has been in personal communication with the Secretary of War, following an offer of his services, and is eagerly awaiting orders.

"Sirens of the Sea," featuring Louise Lovely and Jack Mulhall, is being staged at Santa Cruz Island.

GREAT SEND-OFF FOR SERIAL

V. L. S. E. to Spend $100,000 on Bill Posting Alone in Advertising New Serial, "The Fighting Trail."

V. L. S. E., the distributing organization for Greater Vitagraph, is mapping out one of the greatest billboard campaigns in the history of pictures in connection with the marketing of "The Fighting Trail," a new serial which the Vitagraph company has been making at its plant in Hollywood. It is planned to divide the paper display into three sections—advance, release and continuing. At least $100,000 will be spent for bill-posting, in addition to the cost of the paper, and the campaign, consisting of 24-sheets, 6-sheets, and 3-sheets, will cover the entire period of the picture's run. The billboarding will be national in extent and will embrace every city and town in the country.

In making "The Fighting Trail," the Vitagraph company has endeavored to produce something entirely different from anything else that ever has been done in serial making, and, judging from the first few episodes, which are ready for marketing, has succeeded. The serial is said to set an absolutely new standard in that 95 per cent of the scenes are exteriors, the interior situations being few and far between.

The appeal of the great outdoors runs all through the picture, which is to be in fifteen episodes. The situations develop naturally and there are no forced climaxes. Another interesting feature is that there is nothing "stagey" about the situations, particular care having been taken to guard against this. "The Fighting Trail" is replete with thrills and the "stunts" have the virtue of originality.

The star of "The Fighting Trail" is William Duncan, who also directed the picture, and Carol Halloway appears in the leading feminine role. Both Duncan and Miss Halloway perform some remarkable feats of riding and mountain climbing, their roles calling at times for extraordinary courage.

"The Fighting Trail" will be released early in the fall, but the advertising campaign will precede it by several weeks, and V. L. S. E. is making preparations to give the exhibitors the greatest possible amount of co-operation in making the picture a winner.

Five New Art Drama Releases

Five productions of unusual merit are promised for release by Art Dramas during the month of July.

The productions are: "The Peddler," "Miss Deception," "When You and I Were Young," "The Millstone," and an untitled feature from the U. S. Amusement Corporation.

"The Peddler" was originally intended to be a special, but the demand from exchanges persuaded the producers to make it a regular program release.

This picture will mark Joe Welch's first important screen appearance. This actor, who has been in vaudeville and on the legitimate stage for over thirty years. has done practically no photoplay work. Some years ago, when motion pictures were in the earlier experimental stage, he starred in a small release, but on account of the crudity of production methods he did not continue in the studios, but returned to the stage.

"The Peddler," will be the first release of the month. Frederic Chapin, who made the adaptation of Hal Reid's masterpiece, followed his original so closely that the screen play will be an exact reproduction of the stage success.

An all-star cast has been selected for its enaction. Catherine Calvert is chief in support of the star, this being her second picture appearance.

In the role of the peddler's son is Sidney Mason, who has appeared in many Paramount and Universal plays, in support of Valentine Grast, Marguerite Courtot and others. He was most recently with Bluebird, where he was Violet Mersereau's leading man. In other roles are Kittens Reichert and Cally Crute. Herbert Blanche directed the production.

The second picture of the month is entitled "Miss Deception," and is from the pen of Joseph Franklin Poland. This latest script of his gives Jean Sothern an opportunity to portray a role different from anything she has hitherto attempted. She is a society girl who pretends to be an uncultured westerner in order to enjoy the sensation of fooling her acquaintances.

Eugene Nowland directed "Miss Deception," and Edwin Stanley is the leading man. Others in the cast are Mary Moore and Jack Newton.

Following "Miss Deception," which is a Van Dyke production, comes "When You and I Were Young," from the Apollo studios. Alma Hanlon is starred in this, and Harry Benham is the leading man. Robert B. Mantell, Jr., son of the famous tragedian, has an important role.

"When You and I Were Young" tells an appealing story of youth and romance, and has for its settings the contrasting locales of a small country town and New York's Bohemian quarter. The story deals with the struggles of two young people who come to the city to succeed as artists. A unique method of screening this was adopted, whereby the scenes of the play are visualized as a magazine story, which the heroine has written of her own experiences.

The Erbograph drama, "The Millstone," follows this. It is a picturization of Albert Payson Terhune's remarkable story of the same name in the June number of the Red Book, and is a narrative of strength and intensity.

A star of international reputation will enact the principal female role in this picture. As contracts are still pending her name has not yet been announced. The role is one which requires much.

The fifth production of the month will come from the U. S. Amusement Corporation studios. It is as yet untitled.

Conquest Pictures Draw

George Kleine, distributor of Conquest Pictures produced by the Edison Studio, announces that his branch offices throughout the K. E. S. E. organization report unusual interest in these pictures, especially the program feature of seven reels which Mr. Kleine is offering with the privilege allowed exhibitors of selecting any one from it.

The first program scheduled for publication, July 14th, embraces a four-reel feature, "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," written by Albert Stearns; "The Luck of Roaring Camp," and "Skylarking on Skiis," two reels; "He Coldn't Get Up in the Morning," and "Captains of Tomorrow," one reel.

There is a strong appeal to the whole family in Conquest Programs as arranged by Mr. Kleine—pictures appealing with the same force to adults and juveniles. Mr. Kleine is releasing a seven-reel Conquest Program each week.

Violet Mersereau Feted in South

The most unique trip ever taken by a photo play star was completed last week by Violet Mersereau, Bluebird star, who went to Atlanta and Birmingham as guest of Marcus Loew and proved a veritable sensation. Intended only to appear in the evening three days in each city, the crowds were so enormous that she appeared in the afternoon also. She broke all records for attendance at the theaters during her stay. From her arrival in each city until her departure she was feted and showered with honors. Hundreds of invitations for luncheons, dinners, and private affairs were showered on her from the finest people of the South.

Violet Mersereau, who has been touring the South in Loew Theaters.

A band of ten pieces and a crowd of young girl admirers were at the station in Atlanta when she arrived there Thursday evening. It was intended that she should appear on the stage at Loew's Grand at 9 o'clock, but at seven the crowd was so insistent that she appeared at 7:30, and again at 10 o'clock. A visit to the East Lake Country Club, as guest of Atlanta society, was next on the program. A committee of officers of the Sixth Division, Officers Training Corps, stationed at Fort McPherson, then asked her to say a few words to the regiment at its last farewell dinner, before splitting into various army units. She did so, and was elected sponsor of the regiment, soon to leave for France.

The following afternoon the officers called on Miss Mersereau at the hotel and carried her away to their cantonments, where a special drill was held in her honor, and she was presented with a military decoration. Saturday night seventeen of the officers appeared with her on the stage of the Grand Theater, and several hundred more were in the audience.

In Birmingham Miss Mersereau was guest of Mayor Ward and Mr. Hanson, owner of the Birmingham News, on her first day in the city. Dinners, at country clubs, motor drives in and about the city, shopping tours and ovations twice a day on the stage of Loew's Bijou Theater followed for the next three days, winding up with a big dance in her honor held on the night of her departure. Everywhere she went she was followed by big crowds, and the big hearted, hospitable people of the South opened their arms to her.

C. Eddy Eckels, editing director of the ScreeNews Magazine, is having a merry time leading a 24-hour-a-day simple life. "Big success," shouted C. Eddy, as he dashed off for another ScreeNews location. The American Bioscope Corporation were forced to issue thirty-two prints of the first number of this diversified reel of variety and ten half reels of the ScreeNews Supplement.

New Fox Policy

William Fox has just issued an announcement that Fox Film Corporation will adopt a new policy for release of its photoplays. What this policy will be, Mr. Fox says, will be determined by letters from motion picture exhibitors expressing their desires. Declaration of the new methods will be made on July 15, and the policy will become effective on September 2.

"In inviting the exhibitors' views," said Mr. Fox. "I have foremost in mind the question of what policy of release and contract will be most acceptable to them. Whether we will adopt a booking system by stars or a program policy depends upon the answers we receive.

"Fox Film Corporation will release a number of special de luxe pictures, from seven to ten reels, after September 2. It is our belief that these special pictures are of exceptional merit. Under what policy should they be released?"

Harry Sherman Buys Serial

Announcement is made by Dwight Macdonald, general manager of the America-Japan Pictures Company, New York, that the rights to the serial film-trip, "The Land of the Rising Sun," have been sold for the United States and Canada to Harry Sherman. The rights for the rest of the world are retained under Mr. Macdonald's control, and will be disposed of by him to foreign buyers.

"The Land of the Rising Sun" made a great success at the Rialto, where it was shown serially. There are now ten distinct titles in the series, each of which has lithographs, and all sorts of publicity matter to make it independently bookable, if necessary.

As re-edited, the picture can be booked either as a ten week serial, of one reel weekly, as a five week serial, in two reel episodes, or as a complete production. The advertising campaign has been prepared by the Hesser Publicity Bureau, and will be taken over by Harry Sherman, who will offer the serial to state rights buyers.

Hoffman Acquires "Silent Witness"

The world rights of "The Silent Witness," the picturized version of the play of that name by Otto Hauerbach which made so strong an impression on the New York theater going public in its extended run, has been acquired by M. H. Hoffman, Inc., for Sanger and Jordan.

This is the third super-feature secured for Foursquare release by this progressive organization—the other two being "The Sin Woman" and "Madame Sherry." The cast of the "The Silent Witness," headed by Gertrude McCoy, is said to be of splendid balance and strong in dramatic quality.

The Carlyle Blackwell-June Elvidge picture play, "The Waster," will go to the public the first week in August as "Youth." The hero of this World-Picture Brady-Made is a rah-rah boy who tries to sop up all the champagne in New York and is sent away by his father to work on a dam in Tennessee. Here he falls in love with a girl doctor, perceives the error of his ways and bids a long farewell to the red-eyed monster, alcohol.

AN OPEN FORUM FOR EXHIBITORS

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Mastbaum Fights Censors

CENSORS of motion pictures are in bad more or less all over the country. During the past few weeks, through the determination and fearlessness of one man—Stanley V. Mastbaum—the members of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors find themselves in particularly bad with thousands of motion picture fans who reside in Philadelphia and its vicinity.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, big exhibitor of Philadelphia.

Week after week producers and exhibitors have suffered delay and the loss of large sums of money because of the prejudice and bigotry of the two persons who comprise this Board. Costly films were made useless. Stories were so cut and slashed that the authors were unable to recognize them. Useless expense, irritating delays, and in many instances, great public disappointment occurred, and still do, but beyond a protest the film men as a general rule seemed to consider themselves helpless. Not so with Mr. Mastbaum. He decided that his patrons, and they number many thousands every day at the Stanley Theater alone, were entitled to see the pictures in their entirety. With him, to feel that the public would be defrauded otherwise, was to act decisively. In the case of "The Easiest Way" the astute censors ordered the title eliminated on the absurd ground that it "meant prostitution." Mr. Mastbaum promptly took the case to court and a fair judge decided that the title should stand. Whether this decision rankled in the minds of the censors is not known, but the fact is that when "On Trial" booked for the Stanley came before them they promtly eliminated five sub-titles and thus made the picture difficult to follow. Mr. Mastbaum, with his characteristic energy again took the case to court. This time he did not evoke the majesty of the legal court, but he went straight to that great tribunal of public opinion as represented by the people and the press. He screened "On Trial," and when it was necessary for the eliminated sub-titles to appear he had a well-known actor read them.

The actor appeared in the garb of ye old town crier, with lantern and parchment proclamation which contained a sizzling roast and this departure scored a tremendous hit and the theater was packed to the doors at every performance.

Following the bold innovation, Mr. Mastbaum was deluged with letters censuring the censors and commending his course. Not only that, the public press, in declaring that they could see nothing objectionable in the sub-titles, also made pertinent comment on the manner in which the censorship is conducted in this state by two narrow-minded persons. Both press and public were unanimous in the opinion that the censors had gone too far and had succeeded in making themselves even more ridiculous that ever. The Public Ledger a few days ago came out in its conservative and influential editorial columns, and voiced the sentiments of the movie fans in a strong article which was headed "Making a Censorship Ridiculous," and said:

"The curious spectacle was presented in one of the larger moving-picture theaters in this city during the past week of what was in effect an open defiance of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors of Motion Pictures. In the exercise of its functions the board had ordered the omission of certain titles in a film play, "On Trial," a production already familiar to theatergoers as one of the strongest and best dramatic entertainments seen in Philadelphia within recent years. These particular titles were regarded by the owners of the theater and of the film as absolutely essential to the proper understanding of the story as it was developed on the screen, and they further contended that as neither play nor titles were "sacrilegious, obscene, indecent, or immoral, or such as to tend to debase or corrupt morals," they decided to appeal from the judgment of the censors, not to the courts, but to their patrons. They therefore presented the play, and when the forbidden titles were reached in the story the words were read from the platform by an actor clad in the costume of a street crier of the eighteenth century.

Picture houses are omnipresent in Japan, according to Motor Travel. The Nipponese seem to be of just the right temperament to appreciate the graces of the silent craft. Above is a through-the-crowd glimpse of the picture house at Toyahashi, somewhere in the land of the w. k. cherry blooms.

This photograph shows one of the reasons for the big success of Commodore Blackton's "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," at the Eckel Theater, Syracuse, N. Y. The young lady mounted upon the white steed bore a striking resemblance to Miss Naomi Childers as she appears in the picture as a modern Joan of Arc. Young ladies in white were attired as Red Cross nurses and acted as ushers.

"By this simple device the prohibition of the censors was nullified, and in this instance righly so, for here was nothing in the titles to which any reasonable objection could have been taken. On the contrary, their omission from the film would have made the story unintelligible to many of the spectators, and the only effect of what would seem to have been a senseless and arbitrary exercise of power has been to make the censors ridiculous, and to weaken whatever respect the public may have in the soundness of their decisions in other cases. In appealing to the public in this way the management of the Stanley Theater has revealed the absurdity of a censorship that is applied without judgment or discretion. It is too late at this session of the Legislature to secure any modification of the law under which the board is operating, but it is within the power of the Governor to select censors possessing some breadth of vision and who will exercise their powers with greater judgment and catholicity of judgment and with more tact than was shown in the case of the play 'On Trial.'

"Unless something shall be done to bring the censorship within the realms of sound reason and common sense, public opinion will demand its abolition altogether. If it be granted that censorship of this sort is ever necessary it is of the first importance that it be guided with intelligence. Otherwise it will defeat its own purpose, and much of the good work which has been done in preventing the exhibition of lewd and demoralizing pictures will be discredited and nullified."

A Big Stage Set

Elaborate stage sets are gradually making their appearance in connection with the showing of special pictures and offer theaters an excellent opportunity to give their patrons something new from time to time in the line of pleasing decoration as a change for the eye. Frank Hall took advantage of scenic effects when he presented "The Bar Sinister" at the Broadway Theater, New York, and also during its run at the Pitt Theater, Pittsburgh. He plunged his audiences into the atmosphere of the drama even before the first scene of the picture was thrown on the screen.

"The Bar Sinister" stage set is an exact copy of scenes from the picture. A large Southern home is in the foreground with a cabin down stage left, while up stage right is seen the turpentine "still" which plays such an important part in the story. Turpentine forests form the background which is a beautifully painted panorama drop. Colored singers occupy about five minutes between the finishing of the overture and the starting of the picture, and as the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home" die out, the main title is thrown upon the front of the house. The two center pillars of the house are then drawn up into the flies and the screen lowered until it centers in the handsome frame formed by the other two pillars, the porch and the roof of the mansion.

The two middle pillars of this splendid set disappear into the flies and the screen is lowered to take their place. The arrangement is used in presenting "The Bar Sinister," which has a Southern theme.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

THE exhibitors of Kansas are having an interesting time getting their censor board to pass pictures they have already bought and paid for. J. C. Fox, proprietor of the Holland Theater, Wichita, made a trip last week to Kansas City to see if there was any way to get pictures back before the board after they had once been rejected.

The Metropolitan Theater at Oklahoma City has been remodeled throughout. It has been renamed the Palace. E. C. Mills is the manager of this temple dedicated to the gentle business of affording real pleasure.

P. H. Sexton, proprietor of the Sexton Theater, Great Falls, Montana, has installed a house sign, said to be one of the most elaborate electric theater signs in the northwest. It is at least the most brilliant "set piece" of Great Falls.

The John H. Kunsky Company of Detroit, Michigan, announces the removal of its executive offices from the twenty-second floor of the Dime Bank building to more commodious quarters on the fifth floor of the new Madison Theater building.

Exhibitors in the Kansas City territory were recently surprised to learn that L. B. Flinton, son of A. D. Flinton, district manager of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, had been made a full fledged second lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

The Tacoma Theater of Indianapolis, Indiana, has started to put out a monthly bulletin of its programs. The big attractions for each day are listed so that a patron has but to glance through the bill to see if there is any particular feature that must be "taken in."

To encourage its patrons in singing the words of the national airs when played in the Rialto Theater, New York, the management distributed souvenir song books last week containing the words and music to thirty of our patriotic airs. In honor of Independence Day the books were handsomely bound in the national colors.

A suit in replevin has been instituted by the Italian Film Importing Company of Philadelphia against Gayle Burlingame of Columbia, Pennsylvania, manager of the Columbia Opera House. The war pictures, "Fighting With the Allies," and the "Italian Austrian War," valued at $400 and held by Burlingame, are the basis of the suit.

It is reported that 700 cinema theaters have been closed in England because of the burden of the war tax. A resolution was recently passed by the Cinematograph Association of Great Britain urging the House of Commons not to make any further increases in the tax on admissions.

The Milo Theater, Cleveland, recently was the scene of a gas attack. Someone exploded a sniff bomb that had the most odoriferous of the German bombs smelling like attar of roses. The Milo has been having trouble with the unions for some time. Albert Dolan, an operator, was arrested, charged with assault and battery. He pleaded not guilty and was released.

Congress has been asked by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to appropriate $250,000 for recreational purposes for enlisted men. It is not known yet what the money will be used for, but it is a safe bet that no small part of it will be spent to provide moving picture entertainment for the jackies at training stations and camps.

N. P. Hyiatt of the Orpheum Theater, Webster City, Iowa, has been called East on military duty. Mr. Hyiatt enjoys the distinction of being a colonel in the Iowa National Guard. This just goes to show that besides being of invaluable service to the government through their screen service that some exhibitors are even able to actively command whole regiments on the battlefront.

E. H. Hulsey has commenced improvements on the Hippodrome Theater at Waco, Texas. There will be a marine garden, new electrical effects, a complete set of stage scenery to fit different kinds of pictures. The ushers will wear uniforms, patrons will be supplied with ice water while remaining in their seats, and the house force will have fire drills.

A new theater with a seating capacity of 1,400 will soon be in course of construction at Junction City, Kansas. Fort Riley, the government training camp, is but a short distance away, so that the Junction City theater will have the army encampment to draw from. The new project which is being undertaken by a group of men from Salina, Kansas, will cost $30,000.

One of the best known picture men in Maine met death June 26, when P. J. Powers of Caribou was killed in an auto accident at Presque Isle Bridge. Friends of Mr. Power were plunged in gloom when the tragic news of his fate was conveyed to them. He was the proprietor of the Gem Theater and had always been one of the leaders in the picture industry of his state.

In a snappy, sixteen-page program published weekly in the interests of the Mutual Theater Company of Marion, Indiana, Dolly Spurr, the editor, has found MOTOGRAPHY'S editorials of great help in giving the patrons of the Royal Grand Theater some real mental pabulum to take away with them. A number of these editorials have been used and she says the people like them very much.

Frank W. Noble, owner of a picture theater at Sheldon street and Roosevelt avenue, Indianapolis, made complaint last week of two colored patrolmen who annoyed patrons of his theater and who tried to scare him into contributing to the Bell charity fund. According to Noble the patrolmen stood in front of his theater and asked those who entered for their names and addresses. Mr. Noble says he has been informed that he was in arrears in his payments to the Bell fund which is maintained by contributions from Indianapolis theater owners who operate their places on Sundays. He says that for a long time he contributed to the fund but that recently he took up personal charity work in his own vicinity and helped people whom he knew were in urgent need of assistance.

The Lyceum Theater, Spring City, Utah, is caring for the comfort of its patrons during the hot weather by distributing with tickets neat but inexpensive fans. American flags are conspicuous in the design of the fan and the center is occupied by a veteran telling the story of the flag to his grandchildren. J. R. Baxter, Jr., is manager of the Lyceum.

Declaring that parents with children affected with whooping cough are failing to report their cases and are even taking their children to picture theaters, Dr. John B. Anderson, health officer of Spokane, Washington, announced last week that the picture houses of that city would have to be closed down unless children with the disease were excluded. Whooping cough, it is said, has spread into an epidemic.

A. C. Zaring, proprietor of the North Star Theater, Indianapolis, Indiana, recently co-operated with the Indianapolis Traction and Terminal Company in giving a couple hundred little orphans a good time. The kiddies were brought to the theater in special cars furnished by the transportation company, and Mr. Zaring entertained the children with a program of pictures he had selected purposely for them.

Exhibitors of Des Moines, Iowa, are anticipating a very noticeable increase in their patronage as soon as the divisions of the new draft army are alloted to their respective cantonments. With the 35,000 men from the states of Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota and Minnesota, all looking for a cheap form of amusement, the picture houses are bound to get their share of the boys in khaki.

The Madison Theater, Broadway and Grand Circus Park, Detroit, was host July 5 and 6 to Rose Tapley, the Vitagraph star. Miss Tapley told the patrons of the Madison, one of the John H. Kunsky string of theaters, how motion pictures are made. While she made her address, views of the Vitagraph studios were shown and intimate studies of many of the company's stars at work and in their dressing rooms were presented. The audience was delighted with the words from the little screen twinkler and was anything but backward about showing it.

Stanley V. Mastbaum, first exhibitor of the state of Pennsylvania, and one of the leading theatrical figures of the country left June 30 for the Canadian wilds to be gone during the month of July. Mr. Mastbaum has been so busy with his manifold interests in the amusement industry, and in the booking of the one hundred and six theaters he controls, that he has been unable to enjoy a vacation for a number of years. He hopes, however, to try out the philosophy of Isaac Walton, and lie around in the sun for awhile this time.

Roy and L. M. Crawford, owners of the Grand Theater, Topeka, Kansas, were arrested June 16 for showing the "Birth of a Nation." Both, however, gave bond and proceeded to prepare for a court battle. The charge was that they were advertising and exhibiting a film that had not the approval of the state board of censors. The Kansas board passed the picture once and then recalled it again. The recall was issued May 9 and the review was supposed to have been held within the next thirty days. The film, however, has not been turned in yet; and as the case progresses it gets more interesting.

P. C. Havill, the alert manager of the Prairie theater, 5748 Prairie avenue, Chicago, knows how to co-operate with his community. He meets with the Parent-Teachers' Association of his vicinity and they co-operate with him in advertising his children's matinees announcing the coming bills through the schools. He is soon to give a matinee performance for the benefit of the Red Cross, 50 per cent of the proceeds of which will go to that organization. Such things as this tend to put a house in solid with its community.

A new quarter of a million dollar theater is to be built on North Main street, Dayton, Ohio, on the site formerly occupied by the Baptist church. Contrary to plans usually adopted in motion picture houses, the Dayton will be equipped with a regular stage so that theatrical productions can be presented if the management desires. The new playhouse will accommodate 2,500 persons and is under the management of a company headed by Charles W. Dale, president; Harry J. Williams, vice-president, and Frank B. Wright, secretary.

A new theater with a seating capacity of 10,000 is the venture recently started by a company headed by Felix Isman of New York. This mammoth of the theatrical world will be built on the Eighth avenue block now occupied by the New York Railways car barns at a cost estimated close to a million. Such theaters as this, twice the size of any now in existence, are possibly only because acoustics, which for years limited the seating capacity of the legitimate house, can play no part in the picture theater where sight is the only thing that counts.

The Hippodrome Theater at Youngstown, Ohio, during the run of "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," packed the house at every performance through the use of novel advertising stunts. One of the best of the pullers was worked through the engagement of Captain Stanley Huntley Lewis, widely known as a preparedness advocate, to tour the city in an automobile decorated with American flags, and upon which a machine gun was mounted. He was accompanied by a young woman attired as Joan of Arc, who sang patriotic songs. The captain made preparedness speeches.

That W. S. McLaren, manager of the Majestic and Colonial Theaters, Jackson, Michigan, believes in unique and catchy ways of advertising is shown by a card sent out with four or five inches of film attached, under the caption, "Our little lesson in boosting." "Bunk," the card says, "is a boomerang. If the Majestic boosted a picture to the skies and you paid your money to see something worth while, and in return spent a wretched hour or so viewing a second rate film, you'd become vexed. The Majestic would suffer. You'd shun us. Thus bunk would be a boomerang. That's why the Majestic has always been a one hundred per cent house. It is not merely a standard Jackson institution. It is a leader by right and a guide to others."

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent feature of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He has been elected vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you some valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Picture Jumps

I am a reader of the projection department of MOTOGRAPHY and have received some very good information through your columns.

Keep up the good work. You know that none of us are too good to ask for help, so here I go to tell you my troubles.

I am running two 6A Power's machines and they are about three years old, I should judge. When I run a picture under fifteen minutes to the reel my picture jumps all over the screen, but when I run at fifteen minutes or more to the reel the picture looks like it was nailed to the screen and you cannot see a quiver in it.

I tore the machines down and found that some of the parts were worn. I put on a new cross and spindle, a new intermittent sprocket and a new cam on each machine. The tension springs and aperture plates seemed to be in good condition so I did not change them. I thought that after doing this that I would have my troubles settled, but I soon found out that I was not through with them yet.

The picture is just about the same at is was—fine at fifteen minutes or more but jumps at less than that. If you can tell me what to do I will be more than thankful to you for the information.

Not very long ago I had a little experience that taught me a lesson in the care of the machines and I mention it because it may happen to some of the other readers if they do not look over their machines carefully each day.

I had been running about two hours when all of a sudden the top loop of the film on one of the machines jumped out. I stopped the machine and threaded up again and I no more than started when it jumped again. I thought that there was something wrong with the film but on examination I found the film in good condition. Then I commenced to hunt the trouble on the machine and the first thing I found was a loose top sprocket. The set screw had in some way worked loose. How it happened to do that I can't tell, but right there I made a resolve to go over all parts of the machines at least once a day and be sure that every part was in its place and had the proper adjustment.—Ben. Burton, Hamilton, Ohio.

He Runs 'Em Too Fast

The trouble that you are having with your pictures when you run them in less than fifteen minutes to the thousand feet is caused by the fact that you are running at that speed. It is the best proof in the world that that is the cause when you say that you get a perfect picture when you run fifteen minutes or more to the reel.

I do not know whose fault it is that you have occasion to run under fifteen minutes to the reel. Some managers insist that the operator speed up the machines when the house gets a little crowded and then complain if the operator does not get as good results when the machine is running at the rate of one thousand feet in twelve or thirteen minutes as he gets when running at fifteen to seventeen minutes.

Then on the other hand an operator will towards the last of a day's work speed up the machines so that he can get through work a few minutes earlier.

So in your case of trouble, I do not know who is to blame but I really think that you and the manager are both to blame. If the manager is the cause of the speeding of the machine, you are to blame also for doing it. If you have any pride in your work you will inform him that to speed your machine causes bad results on the screen and that you are the party that gets the credit for those results and that your reputation as an operator is at stake and that you cannot afford to jeopardize your reputation by speeding the machines and showing poor projection on the screen.

On the other hand, if you yourself are the cause of the speeding, then he is just as guilty as you are for allowing you to do it. If you or anyone else that is interested will take the trouble to inquire among the managers of any town or city as to how business is you will find that the managers that have a complaint are the very ones who allow their operators to speed the machines.

They are so narrow between the eyes that they can only see the few dimes that are standing out in front of the house on a busy night and they have the machines speeded up so that they can get in those few dimes. They do not stop to think that they have a house full of people who have already spent their dimes and expect to see a first class show in return, but instead of seeing a first class show they see a good subject murdered.

Titles and subtitles appear and disappear before they can be read and just as you say in your letter, the picture is all over the screen and when these people leave the house they go out with a complaint instead of going out with a feeling that they have seen something that was worth their money. When these same people get ready to see another picture, they will go to a show where they can see the picture projected right, and eventually the manager who has been so anxious to get the few extra dimes will be found complaining about poor business and wonder why it is.

In the younger days of the picture business the public would come and look at anything that was put on the screen and it did not make much difference how it was put on. I have worked in a booth many a Saturday night and run one thousand feet of film that was composed of two subjects and the minute the house was crowded have the manager tell me to cut off one subject and run five hundred feet, and the patrons stood for it because they did not know any better.

Those days are a thing of the past and the prosperous manager of today insists that the projection of the film shall be as near perfect as possible and good box office receipts are the result. You say that you learned a lesson when you discovered your trouble with the loose top sprocket; now learn one more,—do not speed your machines.

Be Ready for Emergencies

I am a reader of MOTOGRAPHY and have had three years' experience as an operator. I was sent to put on a special show at a small town near here the other day and got up against a proposition that I had never met before.

The outfit that was sent out for me to use consisted of a Power's 6A machine with a 110 rheostat and fifty feet of cable. On arriving at the hall where I was to work I discovered that the only current that I could get was 220 volt. I did not have any extra resistance and did not have time to send back for any more, so that for a few minutes I was up a tree as to what to do.

I finally decided to experiment and here is what I did. I connected one side of the 220 volt circuit through the rheostat and into the lamp and to the top carbon. Then I ran a piece of asbestos wire from the bottom carbon to a water pipe in the corner of the hall. I tested out and found that I had a very good light. I know that this way of connecting up a machine is not right, but it sure helped me out of some trouble and I thought that I would send it in so that if any of the other operators ever got up against it like I did that they would know what to do.—Arthur Lyday, Indianapolis, Ind.

Your system as far as getting a light is concerned is all right, but I would not advise you or anyone else to let the light company or the fire underwriters catch you doing it. When going out on a special show you should carry either a 220-volt rheostat or two 110-volt ones and then you are pretty well prepared for cases like you just mention.

About a Fan

I have a theater that seats one hundred and seventy people and the house is sixty-five feet long and twenty-two feet wide with a fourteen-foot ceiling. I want to put in some kind of a fan for ventilation. I have my own electric light plant and use 60 volts of current from the generator. Can I get a fan for that voltage? An early answer will be appreciated.—J. B. McCarty, Kempton, Ind.

For your size house it would require a 24-inch exhaust fan to change the air for proper ventilation. I do not know whether the manufacturers of these fans carry 60-volt fans in stock or not but if they do not they can wind one for that voltage for you.

Screen Club's "First Reel" July 29

Screen Club members are making extensive preparations for the "First Reel" which is the name given to the first annual Screen Club entertainment to be held at the Casino Theater, New York, on Sunday night, July 29.

Edward C. White, the well known theatrical manager, is in full charge of the arrangements, working in conjunction with the board of governors and the entertainment committee.

An elaborate program, which includes the personal appearance of the most celebrated stars in the screen world is rapidly nearing completion and promises to be the most unique and interesting performance of its kind ever seen upon the stage. The club is fully alive to the wonderful possibilities the motion picture art offers for an entertainment of unusual qualities and is preparing to make their annual "Reel" an affair that will attract wide attention each season.

The Casino Theater was selected for the "First Reel" because of the large number of well arranged boxes it contains and its large seating capacity. The price of the boxes are $50 each, and the rapidity with which they are being spoken for by the heads of large motion picture corporations promises a representative audience of men prominent in the industry. All reserved seats will sell at $2.50.

Special committees in charge of talent, music, programs, etc., have been appointed and are hard at work. An elaborate program edited and managed by Harold Z. Levine will contain a complete history of motion pictures from their inception to the present day and promises to set a new pace for souvenir programs.

The entertainment will be followed by a reception, cabaret and dance tendered by the club to the large number of artists, patrons and patronesses at the club house.

Corinne Griffith in New Play

On July 16, Greater Vitagraph will present a new star in the person of Miss Corinne Griffith, a former southern society belle. Miss Griffith's rise started with her part in "The Last Man," and after making a name for herself in short reel subjects in the west, she was transferred to the Vitagraph eastern studio to play with Earle Williams. The play which marks her debut in a stellar role is a secret service drama of pulsating interest called "The Stolen Treaty."

The new Williams-Griffith play is of timely interest, its main theme dealing with a clique of foreign blackmailers who secure possession of a treaty between the United States and a foreign kingdom.

Earle Williams is again seen in a mystery role, the kind with which he has had a marked success in some of his most recent offerings. He plays the part of Geoffrey Wynne, ostensibly a hair-brained society fop, but in reality a renowned secret service man, who regains possession of the treaty and brings about the apprehension of the blackmailers.

Miss Griffith interprets the part of Mr. Williams' betrothed, whose quest for adventure leads her to assist him in frustrating the plot to force a payment of $15,000,000 from the government for the return of the treaty.

Lesser Enterprise Completed

Since his recent announcement of his plans for the launching of a national organization of state right buyers, which aroused considerable conjecture in the trade, Sol L. Lesser has been continually occupied with the development of his project and it is now authentically announced that the organization will convene in New York on August 7.

The organization, which is the result of a careful and prolonged study of general conditions, is in a position to purchase the rights to feature productions outright for the entire United States and Canada, and propositions will be considered at the time of the convention.

Practically all of the United States and Canada are already covered, and the men identified with the enterprise are men whose keen judgment and financial success in the film industry determine unquestionably their desirability as members of the organization.

A tentative meeting of the organization has been held in San Francisco, attended by those actively affiliated.

Enid Bennett in New Play

One of the most notable casts ever assembled for a Triangle play will be seen in "The Mother Instinct," picturized by Lambert Hillyer from the story by Maude Pettus, and starring Enid Bennett.

Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct."

Besides the star, who is now one of the most popular girls on the screen, there is a long list of players each of whom might claim an individual following.

In the most important role next to that of the star is Margery Wilson, who has appeared opposite William S. Hart in numerous productions and who had the leading feminine role with Charles Ray in "The Clodhopper." So great an interest has been manifested in Miss Wilson by both exhibitors and fans that she has literally been forced to stardom, and will soon start work on a play in which she enjoys all the glory of stellar honors.

Gertrude Claire, the sweet-faced mother in numerous features starring Charles Ray and Frank Keenan, and who more recently created the delightful comedy character of governess to Olive Thomas in "Madcap Madge," appears as Mother Coutierre, a charming old French woman.

Active Foreign Market Soon

The rapidity with which Frank Hall is disposing of the foreign rights to "The Bar Sinister" and "Her Fighting Chance" is causing interesting speculation as to the immediate future of the foreign market. Miss Edna Williams, whose activities in disposing of film outside of the United States have made her a prominent figure in the industry for several years and through whose efforts much of the foreign territory for Frank Hall's productions has been disposed of, considers New York the legitimate center for all film markets of the world. According to Miss Williams, the close of the war will see New York in the position formerly held by London as the central distributing point. Many buyers are now doing business through New York who bought only in London before the war and it is natural that, their connections once made, they will continue to do so. Scandanavian buyers, for instance, now deal direct and have been among the most active purchasers of film for several weeks.

The limited amount of producing now done outside of America has made our pictures more popular than ever and it is doubtful whether other countries will be able to compete with us for a long time to come. The only possible exception in this regard is Italy where the public have been educated to accept the artistic and the beautiful in pictures irrespective of the story value and still prefer extra footage with long drawn out scenes showing attractive backgrounds in place of our closely cut scenes full of action.

Miss Williams sees a great future for American films in Russia which she expects to see develop rapidly into a picture loving country as soon as its millions are given an opportunity to become acquainted with the facination of the photodrama. Russia alone has enough prospective picture fans to keep all the American producers busy making productions for that country.

New Dustin Farnum Plays

One of the most welcome announcements which William Fox has made in the series of important notices he has issued recently is that concerning Dustin Farnum, a favorite of both the silent and the spoken drama for years.

"Dustin Farnum, who has been absent from the screen as well as the speaking stage for the last ten months," Mr. Fox has said, will be seen in 'The Scarlet Pimpernel,' by Baroness D'Orcy; 'Durand of the Bad Lands,' by Maibelle Heikes Justice; 'North of Fifty-Three,' by Bertrand Sinclair, and 'The Spy,' by George Bronson Howard."

Opera Star with Paramount

Another important addition has been made to the long list of stars in Paramount Pictures by the engagement of Lina Cavalieri, the internationally celebrated Italian operatic star and noted beauty, who has contracted to appear in productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation exclusively for a period of one year. According to the agreement just entered into, Mme. Cavalieri will star in two Paramount Pictures, one to be staged in September and the other in the spring. This arrangement is made in order that the diva will not have to interrupt her triumphal operatic career as the star of the Chicago Opera Company, where she has been enjoying a tremendous personal success.

Lina Cavalieri, grand opera star, to silently sing in Paramount pictures.

The acquisition of Mme. Cavalieri is an extremely important one both for Paramount and its exhibitors because of the fact that she is one of the best known women of the professional world, her reputation being international and her beauty having been the source of almost endless newspaper and magazine comment for the past several years.

"The Little Boy Scout"

Five-Part Famous Players-Paramount Play Released June 28. Reviewed by George W. Graves

OF special interest at this time, "The Little Boy Scout" has a great deal of camp life detail, including scenes of the soldiers at the border and many interesting angles on the life of a present-day American boy scout. In fact, the timeliness of the offering seems to have been the first consideration, since the story with its ordinary characters and slight suspenseless plot only has the effect of being an excuse for the introduction of all this army and boy scout detail, which, inasmuch as it contains much that is human and even humorous, may satisfy audiences who are willing to overlook the undeniable flimsiness of the story. The picture should certainly have an appeal to boy scouts and those interested in the organization.

Ann Pennington in "The Little Boy Scout."

As it is with the star, so it is with the whole cast—nobody has anything to do, that is, of course, in the way of real emotional portrayal. Ann Pennington is a rather attractive little figure on the screen and she has a few mannerisms that are quite captivating, but as far as dramatic portrayal is concerned we have nothing to judge by, since her role is kept in the smiles-and-daintiness class with no attempt made at the exposition of the deeper qualities and emotions. Tom Moore was a very fortunate choice for the part of the scout master, playing well a number of bits of boyish diffidence and making a very likable sort of personality. The cast includes Fraunie Fraunholtz, Marcia Harris, George Burton and Harry Lee. Director Francis J. Grandon maintained a very fine atmosphere throughout the picture and succeeded in making the army and scout settings quite interesting with drills, signaling, etc.

The story runs through the first reels as a perfectly serious drama, but toward the end we have a very weak treatment when the author or producers begin to "kid" the action by means of subtitles, coinciding with the spectator's already formed view as to the play's ineffective attempt to be real or serious. The spectator is pretty sure to take the Mexican uncle from whom the girl runs away to escape an obnoxious marriage, as a sort of musical comedy character, but when, toward the end of the story, we find such subtitles as "and the villain still pursued her," and "the flivver wouldn't fliv," the impression is formed that the producer realizes the dramatic elements of his story are becoming so unreal that they are straying farther and farther toward the domain of the satirical comedy and he no longer tries to be serious. This letting a story get away from the author's original intent and wander whither it will, is ineffective, to say the least. It is our opinion that as a straight comedy, "The Little Boy Scout" would have registered more effectively.

The story proceeds to relate how the girl, Justine, runs away from her uncle, living in Mexico, and is able to reach the home of her aunt, living in Lowell, Mass., with the help of the contributions given her by an American regiment at the border. The uncle, intending to marry the girl to his son in order to gain possession of her mine holdings, pursues her to America, but is defeated at every turn. Finally he is on the verge of success, but his plans receive a final blow—the girl has married the "soldier man" she met down on the border, now scout master in the city of Lowell, and the uncle now has no claim over her.

"The Little Boy Scout" is a picture of only fair entertainment value.

"The Lone Wolf"

Powerful Herbert Brenon Picture Showing in Big Cities. Reviewed by C. R. Condon

"THE LONE WOLF" is an event in Herbert Brenon's brilliant career. Likewise, it elbows its way into the ranks of pictures extraordinary.

The picture deals with a big idea, and treats it in a big way. All through the series of incidents, sufficiently interesting in themselves, one feels that an important question or theory is being worked out. In other words, there is a reason for the picture. Some haven't even an excuse, but here is a photoplay that justifies itself in its story and the way that it is put on.

Herbert Brenon's forceful personality scintillates right through the picture. Although it is his first modern melodrama, it lacks none of the necessary elements of exciting situations, surprising developments, quick action and strong denouement. Combined with these merits are the artistic touches seen in his masterful presentation of "The Daughter of the Gods" and the air of finesse with which he handled "War Brides."

For general circulation "The Lone Wolf" is a better production than "War Brides." Its story, by Louis Joseph Vance, is of a type very popular in the present day—whenever it is found. Themes like this are not an everyday occurrence. From Mr. Brenon, however, we expect well-made pictures with stories that will stand up. He exerts great care in testing his ingredients before starting upon a picture, aiming always towards superiority. In this way and by his past productions, he has established for his brand a standard which is none too easy to reach. To say, then, that this is a fine Brenon picture is recommending it unreservedly to exhibitors as a picture that they will want to book.

"The Lone Wolf" is a big subject in its film form. In a large theater that hasn't got the prohibitive overhead of a Broadway house, it should run from three days to several weeks with great results. At the Broadway Theater, New York, it was a two or two and a quarter hour performance. This length could be cut a little without impairing the story. In fact, it would improve it in one or two instances where the action doubles back on itself. One instance of this is where "The Wolf," after much danger, secures the Ombre jewels, risks much to keep them, and finally returns them, later going back and obtaining the string again. Bert Lytell plays the name role, with Hazel Dawn as Lucy Shannon, the only important woman character. Others in the cast are Cornish Beck, Stephen Grattan, Alfred Hickman, Ben Graham, Robert Fisher, William Riley Hatch, Joseph Chailles, William E. Shay, Edward Abeles, Florence Ashbrooke and Juliet Brenon.

The Story: Marcel, an orphan waif and drudge at a Paris hotel and later known as "The Lone Wolf," receives his first instructions in crime at the hands of Burke, an international criminal. One of Burke's gang informs the police that a job is to be pulled off, and in trying to escape, Burke is shot and the boy captured and sent to a reform school. Many years pass and "The Lone Wolf" is operating as a thief against the wishes of a gang of criminals known as "The Pack." Lucy Shannon is a trained nurse caring for De Moriban, the leader of the pack. When "The Lone Wolf" is asked to join the pack he refuses and defies them. They set out to either make him join them or kill him, and during one of his encounters with them he meets and falls in love with Lucy. He determines to go straight, and returns some jewels he has stolen, after having secured the plans of a submarine invention from one of the members of the pack.

He bargains with the French minister of war to get safe conduct to England, offering the plans as payment, and after many thrilling adventures and escapes he reaches England with Lucy after an aeroplane trip and a battle in the sky.

Marian Swayne in Five-Part Art Dramas Offering. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

THE charming little Marian Swayne has the title role in this comedy-drama, an Erbograph production for release on the Art Dramas program. The delightful work of the star rather than the quality of the story is what makes this picture so pleasing and interesting. It contains numerous complications which are, for the most part, solved by the cleverness of the girl and her lover, Davey.

The elaborate interior settings are splendid and the photography is excellent. Bradley Barker as Davey is earnest and sincere in his portrayal. Marian Swayne as Polly is the one bright figure in the picture. Her pleasant ways and graceful manner will win the hearts of all. Frank Andrews as Abbott, the father, is convincing. Others in the cast are, Armand Cortes, Gladys Fairbanks, and Kirke Brown. Joseph Levering directed the play.

Polly is the daughter of a scientist, who has made a fortune through an important discovery. Now that they are rich, Sarah, the wife, is anxious to go to the city and enter society. But Polly and her father are perfectly happy and contented on the farm.

Upon their arrival in the city they are beset by a number of social gangsters, who pass themselves off as members of nobility. The mother soon ascends the social ladder and determines that Polly shall marry a title. The butterfly life does not satisfy Polly, who wants to do something worth while. The opportunity comes when the father is almost ruined by a clique of gangsters. It is through the capable Polly that their plans are discovered. Then she induces her parents to return to the farm where she is once more happy with Davey, who has waited patiently for her.

"Mary Moreland"

Marjorie Rambeau in Powell-Mutual Feature of July 9. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

MARIE VAN VORST'S novel, which was published serially in Harper's Bazaar, has been transferrd to the screen, under the direction of Frank Powell, with Marjorie Rambeau as the secretary-heroine. Lavish settings have been provided, most of them interiors, with a few exterior scenes of unusual beauty. The theme is the "eternal triangle," with a few unexepccted twists, and its appeal is chiefly to those who like society drama, without much action. The progress of the play is draggy throughout. The acting of the individual players is good, but since there are no lighter scenes and the same mood of sadness prevails in all situations, the result is monotony. The effect of the play is depressing, in spite of a happy ending.

In the supporting cast are Robert Elliott, Gene LaMoth, Augusta Burmester, Fraser Parbutt and Edna M. Holland.

The Story: Thomas Maughm and his wife have drifted apart, for Mrs. Maughm is extravagant and frivolous. Maughm and his secretary, Mary Moreland, are in love with each other. Her sympathy for Maughm leads Mary to consent to elope with him, but before their plans are carried out, Mary meets Mrs. Maughm and realizes that the woman still loves her husband. She tries to bring about a reconciliation but in vain.

Later Maughm is persuaded not to divorce his wife for he learns that she is to have a child. Mrs. Maughm, who discovers that her husband loves Mary Moreland, goes to the girl and offers her money if she will go away. Mary refuses the money but goes away, resolved not to be a factor in the case any longer.

Then, in another position, she learns a business secret which Maughm must know to protect his fortune, and she goes to Maughm's hunting camp in the mountains. After telling him the facts, Mary leaves and does not see Maughm for nearly a year. Then, returning home to visit her mother, she again meets Maughm, who tells her that Mrs. Maughm died when the baby was born, and asks her to be his wife.

Jack Gardner in Essanay-K. E. S. E. Western Play of July 16. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

WITH excellent western atmosphere, fine photography and well selected comedy touches, this second of the Essanay series of plays starring Jack Gardner should be well received in any theater. The star is more at home before the camera in this picture and has lost any self-consciousness which might have been noticed in the earlier plays, while his leading lady, Ruth King, has a much more attractive role in this than in "The Land of Long Shadows." Carl Stockdale, in the role of the easterner who is to marry the girl, is miscast. He is not convincing in the part he is called on to play.

Charles Allen Seltzer directed the story and has made it entertaining and real. Its progress is unforced and natural. There isn't much to the story, but there is much action and suspense toward the close, humor throughout, and beautifully photographed outdoor scenes. An exhibitor can offer the picture with confidence.

The Story: Ruth Harkness, an eastern girl, inherits a western cattle ranch. Accompanied by her uncle and aunt and by William Masten, whom she is engaged to marry, she arrives at the ranch. The party has been helped out of difficulty along the way by Rex Randerson, a carefree cowboy, and when Ruth learns that he is the man recommended for a position as boss of the ranch, she gladly employs him.

Rex falls in love with Ruth and wins the hatred of Masten. When Rex learns of Masten's affair with the innocent daughter of a neighbor, Masten plots to have Rex killed. To add to Rex's troubles, the girl's father believes him the guilty man and tries to kill him. After much excitement and rapid riding, Rex escapes, and later proves his innocence and marries Ruth.

"Come Through"

Universal Seven-Reel Special a Fine "Crook" Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE value of a good story in a picture is proved by this praiseworthy offering written by George Bronson Howard, made by Universal studios. While acting, directing and camera work are all first class, it is the story itself which holds one's fascinated attention. Another remarkable feature of this play is that, instead of beginning well and then becoming obvious and trite, as many stories do, this one begins in a rather ordinary fashion and the end seems obvious until, in the third reel, there is a new twist and from that point until the close one's attention never wanders.

To Herbert Rawlinson, as Joseph Court, "The Possum," first acting honors go. He makes the chivalrous "crook," who proves more of a man than the others in the heroine's life, a most fascinating character. The supporting cast is a capable, well balanced one. Alice Lake plays the heroine. George Webb, Roy Stewart, Charles Mailes, Margaret Whistler, William Dyer and Jean Hathaway are all well cast and do good work.

The exhibitor can safely book and "boost" this picture. It will go in any theater. It is especially well fitted for the summer season, when an exciting, entertaining and wholesome picture proves refreshing. It is an especially clean play with no objectionable "underworld" phases.

The picture has been booked for an indefinite run at "The Playhouse," a Michigan avenue theater in Chicago, and has won very favorable press notices in the daily papers.

The Story: Velma Gay and Archie Craig are in love with each other, neither is wealthy and each is ambitious to marry money. So Velma becomes engaged to Buck Lindsay, a western miner, and Archie is to be the third husband of a wealthy woman. However, the lovers carry on a secret correspondence which Buck discovers. Angry, he plans to force the two to marry. But he chances upon "The Possum," who has entered the house to steal Velma's pearl necklace; he mistakes him for Velma's lover and at the point of a gun, the robber finds himself being married to a girl he never saw before.

Archie Craig fails Velma at this critical time, and "The Possum" befriends the girl. The crook's determination to "go straight," his winning of Velma's love, their career on the stage and final, victorious battle against their enemies forms the best part of the story.

"Paws of the Bear"

Triangle War and Mystery Drama in Five Reels Released June 17. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a rather attractive mixture of mystery and melodrama with some good "war stuff" at the beginning. The story largely concerns itself with a hunt for papers which are supposed to be hostile to the Russian government. In fact, we hear from the lips of a Russian official that they are. After the "war stuff" has sufficed to show the first meeting of the hero, an American traveler, and the heroine, a Russian patriot, and their sensational escape from the hands of the Germans in Belgium, the story shifts to the high seas. Here the lovers meet again on a boat bound for America. A German, a college friend of the hero, entrusts "the papers" to the latter, and there is a good deal of mystery and suspense worked up over the prolonged and vain search made by a Russian secret service man and the heroine for the packet which they must intercept before its arrival in Washington. In spite of Olga, the Russian girl, and the other spy, the American keeps the papers safe and succeeds in delivering them to their destination. The hero finally wins the hand of his Russian sweetheart by informing her that the papers were not really inimical to Russia. This is not at all convincing, since the Russian official who had commissioned Olga in the beginning of the story had said that the delivery of the papers would result seriously for Russia.

The director, Reginald Barker, has provided the film with at least one thrill—so much of a thrill, in fact, that it is likely to provoke laughter in the sudden and clean manner of its working the desired end. This occurs when the hero and heroine are stood up before a German firing squad in Belgium. It's pretty nearly all over when—Zowie!—a bomb is dropped from an airplane above scattering the firing squad to the four winds. This was a well handled thrill. The scenes on the ocean have every appearance of being taken there; realistic settings and clear photography are big assets of the pictures. With capable direction and a story that certainly must be called entertaining in spite of weak spots, the offering has pretty nearly all the qualities demanded by the average spectator. It is not a war drama, and it might be well to inform patrons of this since the public is being served with war in so many forms that it is getting just a little tired of the subject for amusement purposes. The picture is essentially a mystery or detective drama, although the first few scenes would indicate otherwise.

"An attractive mixture of mystery, melodrama and war stuff."

William Desmond and Clara Williams, in the leading parts, acquit themselves creditably in every scene. No one would think of wishing an improvemest in their work. Robert McKim, as the villain, also pleases thoroughly. The story was written by J. G. Hawks.

"When True Love Dawns"

Brady-International Service-World Photoplay in Five Parts. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE second foreign-produced picture featuring Susan Grandaise does not depart a hair's breadth from the superlative quality of the first in acting and direction and it has a story that is better than that of the first, one that deals with human, normal and refined people, keeping the actions of its characters always well within the bounds of common sense. It is a delight to watch people on the screen who act as you and I and persons of our acquaintance would under the same circumstances. The audience never loses sight of the fact that each character is good at heart and magnanimous and although temptations harass many of the participants of the play each person at the final show down is ready to sacrifice for the other. And this is the way in actual life among people who are really "white," and it is gratifying to note that here is a picture that deals with real humans. Because of this condition the principal characters all have sympathetic roles.

The exquisite grace of the star's acting lends charm to every scene; it is a delight to watch her every movement. Amid beautiful scenic settings this true artist, aided by an unusually talented cast, brings out all the beauty, refinement and grace of a wonderful character, who, although not immune from the deceitful wiles of a subtle temptation, convinces the spectator as a character drawn straight from the ranks of life. The story has a simple construction; it is clearly told through masterly direction and the spectator is certainly kept interested in all the characters. Crystal clear photography reveals beauteous bits of scenery that vie with those of the first Susan Grandaise picture. These sunny out-of-door scenes are enough to make anyone feel the call of nature. Director Louis Mercanton treated his picture with the hand of a dramatic craftsman and the eye of a trained artist.

The story is about the sacrifice of a girl who consents to marry a wealthy man much her senior and give up her youthful lover for the sake of saving her grandmother's estates and therefore her grandmother's life. After her marriage the temptation comes to the woman to give up her false life and elope with her former lover. At this point her husband proves his love for her by quietly stepping out of the way after he has learned the secret. Not willing to live without his wife the husband tries to do away with himself, but he is miraculously saved, and simultaneous with the realization of the deep love hidden beneath the impassive surface of her husband she experiences the dawn of true love and her other affair dissolves as a thing of small moment.

The exhibitor can feel assured that this picture is as big and satisfying production as the first Susan Grandaise subject, and then he can make even an additional allowance for the more real story and better treatment. "When True Love Dawns" will be appreciated wherever true lovers of dramatic and pictorial art are to be found.

Selig-Hoyt Two-Reel Comedy Released Through K. E. S. E. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

GOOD trick photography, a large amount of "rough stuff," much of it coarse and none of it very original, little humor in story of acting,—of such elements is this latest Hoyt farce manufactured. It is scarcely an offering for a high class audience, but it will find an appreciative audience among a less fastidious clientele. The swift action and the trick photography, the camera manipulation being really clever, will win laughs among the devotees of slap-stick farces.

The players are those which have appeared in previous Hoyt comedies and play their parts with speed and vigor. The story is a rural farce, dealing with the troubles encountered by suitor of a country girl, whose father does not approve of the affair. Everything from barnyard animals to airplanes are used as comedy properties.

"The Beloved Adventuress"

Kitty Gordon in Peerless-World Offering Released July 16. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

IN this picture Kitty Gordon, as Juliette La Monde, plays the vampire in a most successful manner without sacrificing her mother instinct towards her sister, as is shown in the varied characteristics of her emotional role. For years she lives with another woman's husband, but gives it all up in order that her little sister should have a proper start in life.

The entire cast does creditable work. Lillian Cook is sweet and charming as the innocent little sister. Jack Drumier plays the part of Robert Nicholson, a stern and unforgiving Englishman, while Robert Forsyth portrays Doctor Stewart, an old-fashioned family physician. The rest of the cast is composed of Inez Shannon, Madge Evans, Edward Elkas, Frederick Truesdell, William Sherwood, Pinns Nesbit, R. Payton Gibbs and Katherine Johnston. William A. Brady directed the play. The photography and settings are fine.

Morgan Grant is in love with Juliette La Monde, a musical comedy star. He has grown weary of married life and wishes to be free. Martha's religion prevents her giving Morgan his freedom, but she promises to go away and never see him again. Considering Juliette a disgrace to the family, her step-father, Robert Nicholson, denies her the privilege of seeing her dying mother.

Ten years pass. Francine, on the death of her father, returns to America and her sister Juliette. Whereupon Juliette makes some radical changes in her mode of living. She sends Morgan from her home, determined that the little girl should have a fair start. But Amy Baker introduces Francine to the younger smart set, and also tells her of her sister's past.

Morgan becomes infatuated with Francine and tries to lure her to his home. Juliette learns his motive. Locking the girl in her room, she goes in her sister's stead to Morgan's home. When he refuses to do as she asks, she shoots him. He then realizes the depth of his love for her, and not wanting her to suffer for his death, he writes a confession saying that he was ending his life. After Francine's marriage to Philip, Juliette becomes a Red Cross nurse. At the sacrifice of her own life she saves Martha Grant from the fire of the enemy. She is forgiven by Martha before her death.

"Betty Be Good"

Jackie Saunders in Horkheimer-Mutual Release of July 16. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is another Jackie Saunders comedy drama, similar in style to the preceding ones, with a food riot in the opening reel to give it timeliness. Miss Saunders plays a madcap heiress in her usual vivacious style. There are many comedy scenes, much action, good photography, a rather exaggerated but interesting story, and good acting. An exhibitor may advertise as strongly as the popularity of Miss Saunders will permit for it will satisfy her admirers.

The supporting cast of players includes Arthur Shirley, Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, Mollie McConnell, Albert B. Ellis and others.

The Story: Betty Brownlee is the willful daughter of a capitalist. Her pranks cause her father constantly to beg her, "Betty, be good." Her father is especially angry when Betty dabbles in philanthropy, and after trying in vain to bake bread for the poor, leads a "bread riot" against her own father's company.

Peter Madison, mayor of the city, is at enmity with Millionaire Brownlee over political matters. He has a son, Jimmy Madison, who is masquerading as a uniformed policeman in order to detect grafters on the force.

Brownlee secures what he believes to be evidence of political crookedness on the part of the mayor. It is in documentary form. The documents are lost when Betty, in one of her escapades, drives off with the car in which her father has left them.

Jimmy Madison arrests Betty for stealing the car and papers, being unaware of her identity. Betty and young Madison fall in love, and the denounement does not come until Millionaire Brownlee's suspicions against Mayor Madison are proved unfounded and the two men shake hands. Jimmy Madison reveals himself to Betty in his true character and the drama ends happily.

"The Message of the Mouse"

Five-Part Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon Feature Released July 9. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

A TIMELY picture of interest is "The Message of the Mouse," a Greater Vitagraph production, which features the popular star, Anita Stewart. In this story of unusual diplomatic intrigue, Miss Stewart is seen in an advantageous role, that of Wynn Winthrop, who does unusual things in proving her stanch loyalty to her native land. It also illustrates how Fate sometimes intervenes in the affairs of men, as shown by the activities of a tiny mouse. The offering has a clap-trap twang in its trick scenery, but pictures of this type have gotten over before, and this one probably will.

The picture is splendidly cast. The direction by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton is good, although the story doesn't offer much in opportunity. With Anita Stewart's name, the offering will be a fair attraction for the exhibitor. The story is by George Randolph and Lillian Chester. Included in the supporting cast are, Julia Swayne Gordon, L. Rogers Lytton, Franklyn Hanna, Robert Gaillard, and Bernard Seigel. Rudolph Cameron has the lead opposite Miss Stewart.

Five foreign ambassadors formulate a plan to gain possession of an immense sum of American money for use in rehabilitating their own bankrupt countries. Through Hallam Varrie they seek to learn the plans of the American syndicate. While a guest at the Winthrop house party, Varrie secures the plans. That same night a nest-building mouse carries to Wynn's room part of a message Varrie has written to his accomplice.

The ambassadors then proceed to win over Winthrop and his associates. Feeling sure that this venture will benefit the nation, the Americans quietly withdraw their capital from the banks. Labor riots and bank runs then take place. Wynn pleads with her father to stop the disaster, but he refuses, believing that in creating a great merchant marine he is performing a patriotic duty.

Wynn takes the mysterious message carried by the mouse to the chief of the Secret Service and confides her suspicions to him. He suggests her having another house party at which the guests shall be watched. She does so, and learns that Varrie is the chief conspirator. In order to obtain further proof, she secretes herself in his home and discovers the spring to his hidden desk. With the evidence she secures, she is just in time to prevent Winthrop and his associates from signing over the money to the foreign syndicate. They then learn of the great service one patriotic girl has rendered to her country.

"The Public Be Damned"

Five-Part Drama Released State Rights by Public Rights Film Corp. Reviewed by George W. Graves.

COMING at a time when everybody is thinking and talking about the critical food situation throughout this country as well as in other countries, this picture's appeal is as sensational as its title.

If the spectator is convinced that the public is being duped by such combines of men as those depicted in this story he is apt to feel pretty hot under the collar at his own helpless condition as Mr. Consumer. Whether "The Public Be Damned" does anything else or not it stirs its audience to the gravity and importance of the question now under government scrutiny. The fact that the picture was endorsed by Mr. Hoover ought to lend more weight to that which it already has in luring the curious into theaters. Everyone is interested in the subject treated by the picture, and in so far as the film is a clear expose of the fundamental errors in food distribution in this country it is to be lauded. But as a real artistic drama it only pushes the mercury up to lukewarm.

One fault of the story is that its characters are not made consistent; another is, the construction is poor; and still another, the melodramatic ending does not convince seriously and the story does not bring the issue in hand to a satisfying and pointed conclusion. The picture, however, brings in a very interesting and true-to-life exposition of the subtle workings of hypocrisy—how every one is deceived by the "charity that covereth a multitude of sins." Charles Richman and Mary Fuller, the leads, do well, but make no remarkable impressions, since the story rather overlooked real character building. In the cast are Chester Barnett and other well known screen personalities.

There is no denying that "The Public Be Damned" will be a money-getter at this time. Although the picture might have been made more convincing by less "movie melodrama" and a more impressive story and characters, the results of its showing may be counted upon with confidence by the exhibitor who makes good use of effective advance advertising.

Hoover Endorses "Public Be Damned"

The first person to see "The Public Be Damned" after its completion was Herbert Hoover, former head of the Belgian Relief Commission and newly appointed Food Administrator of the United States, for whom a special presentation of the picture was arranged. Mr. Hoover heartily endorsed the production and declared that it was especially timely and that it would arouse the public to a realization that something must, and can, be done to stop the depredations of the food barons who are robbing the public of millions of dollars worth every month.

The next person to see "The Public Be Damned" was Harold Edel, manager of the Strand Theater in New York, who booked it last week for his theater.

The production is now being booked with great rapidity all over the country on the state rights basis.

Briefly, the outline of the story is as follows:

Two men are rivals for the hand of Marion Fernley in a small country town. One of them is John Black, a produce merchant, and the other is Robert Merritt, a student in an agricultural college. Marion realizes that Black is destined to be the more successful financially of her two suitors, but big-hearted Bob Merritt wins her love.

After a lapse of a few years we find Marion and Bob on a little farm and Black, the head of a powerful food trust which holds in its two greedy fists the destinies of the consumer and the producer. Through its absolute control of all food channels, the trust is able to strangle the little farmer whose products are in his barn without a market and to obtain from the public ruinously high prices.

Hearing that a charitable mission in the city is unable to obtain food because of the high prices, Marion writes to the head of the mission offering the unsold produce of their farm providing the expense of transportation be paid. The hypocritical Black is the man behind this charity, and when he hears of the scheme stops it at once on the plea that it will unsettle market conditions.

Matters finally become so bad that Marion and Bob succeed in interesting the neighboring farmers in banding together to fight the trust. Hearing of this Black sends one of his emissaries to Bob who gives him a ten thousand dollar check to cover the entire output of his farm for the next three years. Bob is immediately denounced by the other farmers as a traitor, and Marion, whose whole heart and soul is in the work of fighting the trust, is so deeply shocked by her husband's conduct that she refuses to have anything further to do with him.

Bill Garvin, a politician of the most objectionable sort, sees an opportunity for personal aggrandizement in the battle between the farmers and the food trust and suggests to Marion that a bill be passed giving the control of all produce to the state. Fired with the belief that this is the one solution of her problem, Marion starts a tremendous campaign throughout the state in behalf of the bill, and Garvin to his utter chagrin finds that the bill is really in danger of being passed because of the tremendous pressure of public sentiment. He therefore inserts a joker into the bill which will nullify its effect.

Black, meanwhile, has been thoroughly chastened in spirit by the realization that he is the direct cause of the death of many underfed children by his unscrupulous methods and is sincerely working for the bill in conjunction with the penitent Bob. They discover Garvin's trick, and when the fake food bill is actually in the process of becoming a law and is about to be signed, they succeed in getting the bona fide bill despite an attack upon them by gangsters under control of Garvin.

As a result, the true bill is passed and becomes a law and Bob is reinstated in the good graces of Marion while Black regards their new found happiness with paternal delight.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

CHARLES PARROTT, director of Foxfilm comedies, has added a new comedienne to his list. Her first name will be June and her last name is Parrott. She was born June 8, and is doing nicely, thank you.

Douglas Fairbanks received a letter from a woman in Indiana that reads: "My boy was seriously injured, trying to imitate your screen stunts in a recent Artcraft play. Won't you help me pay the doctor bills?"

At the tender age of three weeks "Fatty" Arbuckle was attracting the serious attention of the public and press. He gurgled his way to the first prize at a rural baby show out in Smith's Center, Kansas, due entirely to the fact that the judges found him a perfect infant Adonis.

A special train recently brought Mary Pickford and her company from Los Angeles to the northern part of the state to film exterior scenes for her new Artcraft picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Miss Pickford was accompanied by her mother and nearly 100 children to appear in the film. At the station where the youngsters were gathered the report was given out that they were a delegation of French orphans going to a northern California town. In less than five minutes Mrs. Pickford was besieged by reporters who addressed her in French with many inquiries as to her trip with the collection of children. The reporters worked fast and while a half dozen were trying to interview Mrs. Pickford another batch were arranging and snapping cute poses of the kiddies who had less idea of what it was all about than Ma Pickford. It was only after many pictures were taken and excitement evidenced that the sad truth was fully appreciated by the energetic journalists.

Valeska Suratt has "come across"—and that nobly—in aid of the Red Cross War Fund. She has given an entire week's salary to the cause and only the famous star, William Fox, and the Red Cross authorities know what that sum is.

"Fatty" Arbuckle astonished the military census authorities this week by announcing that he could run anything that boasted a motor, not discriminating against moving trucks, Ford cars, or washing machines. He added the information that he would be equally gifted as an air-pilot or the commander of a submarine. The talented Mr. Arbuckle is soon to be featured in a new comedy, "The Rough House," on the Paramount Program.

Hank Mann, minus his mustache, will appear in the Gladys Brockwell photoplay now being made at the William Fox studio in Hollywood, Cal. A "jazz" band attracted Hank and he begged Director Turner to allow him to work in the set while the band was playing. He was probably the highest paid "extra" in the world.

Nell Shipman has returned to Los Angeles for the summer. During her recent several months in New York and the West Indies, she completed a multiple-reel feature for the Williamson Brothers Submarine Corporation and put the picture into book form for her New York publishers. She will return east in the fall. Meanwhile, she is engaged in the unfeminine occupation of stripping her car and has the engine all to pieces in the back yard of her mother's home in South Pasadena.

Intermissions at the Roscoe Arbuckle studio are not unlike rehearsals of the Metropolitan Opera Company in midseason. The similarity is based on the faultless manner in which "Fatty" himself warbles the sextette from "Lucia" and other operatic favorites. The obliging Mr. Arbuckle conveys the information that Verdi, Gounod, Puccini and their confederates are the best antidotes he knows of for too much custard pie.

Plans are now on foot to start a Douglas Fairbanks chapter of the Red Cross, with an appeal direct from the Artcraft star to his myriad of screen admirers, to help support the splendid work of this society.

Bessie Barriscale's suite of dressing rooms at her studio in Hollywood, Cal., covers a floor space of 120 square feet and consists of three apartments and a bath. The reception room is furnished in white and ivory. The costume room contains mainly closets and sets of drawers. The walls of her dressing room are entirely covered with mirrors so arranged as to enable her to study gestures, postures and gowns from every conceivable angle. Quite a difference from the dressing rooms in the average theater. "Movie" stars enjoy many advantages the dramatic stars never experience.

The report that J. Warren Kerrigan is to be leading man for Bessie Barriscale is not true. Both Mr. Kerrigan and Miss Barriscale head entirely separate and distinct organizations as independent stars. They have no connection whatever except that their releases will be made under the Paralta plan of co-operative distribution through Paralta Plays, Inc., of New York, a corporation organized by Herman Fichtenberg, the New Orleans exhibitor, to remedy some of the inequitable conditions of which exhibitors complain.

If dear old Greenwich thought that it was in for a thrill at the mere prospect of Marguerite Clark driving a taxi cab down its main thoroughfare, that distinguished community was sadly mistaken, for the taxi cab was merely a preliminary to the main event in which the Paramount star calmly collided with a milk wagon, spilling many gallons of the precious fluid over the scenery. The episode occurs in the first of the adaptations of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Sub-Deb" stories—"Bab's Burglar."

While presumably resting at her country place at Mountain Lakes, New Jersey, Pauline Frederick is vigorously hoeing up large portions of landscape and is causing her gardener intense dismay by insisting upon digging up the potatoes to see how they are getting on. The Paramount star was particularly wroth with the careless gardener when she discovered that he failed to plant cocoanuts, as they are her favorite fruit.

George Periolat, the well known character actor with the American company, is essaying a "heavy" role. A lady visitor at the studio recently told George that he had mistaken his vocation and that he could have made a fortune by frightening bad children into being good "with that face!" The lady ought to see what a good looking fellow George is after a liberal use of soap and water.

Essanay's series "Do Children Count?" has been adopted in many cities and towns as an official aid in obtaining recruits for the army. Presenting strong appeals for the welfare of children, these photoplays are being offered as one of the many big reasons why men should answer their country's call, and they are proving most effective as recruiting propaganda. Little Mary McAlister, the six-year-old star in the series, was recently created a sergeant in the regular army in recognition by the government of her aid in getting fighting men.

Essanay's employes are "bloated bondholders." All together, they purchased more than $100,000 worth of Liberty bonds.

Lois Wilson, who has done excellent work in special feature productions, plays "Dolores Ruey," the opposite to Warren Kerrigan's character of "John Stuart Webster," a mining engineer in the Peter B. Kyne story, "A Man's Man." Other leading principals are Eugene Pallette, Harry Von Meter, Edward Coxen, Ida Lewis, John Stepping, Ernest Pasque and Kenneth Howland

Mutual Pictures

The Mystery of the Counterfeit Tickets—(Two Reels) — July 16. — Featuring Helen Holmes. "The Railroad Raiders," who have terrorized the "K. & W." System for years, are run to earth and the gang is captured red-handed through clever detective work on the part of Helen Holmes, star sleuth of the secret service department, in chapter 15, final installment of the great Mutual-Signal chapter photonovel, "The Railroad Raiders." Helen's father, who has been serving a sentence in the penitentiary through false conviction due to the machinations of Wallace Burke, the discredited K. & W. official who heads the gang of raiders, is released after the confession of "Buck Masters," wounded in the big fight between railway detectives and the gang, in which the print shop in which counterfeit tickets of the system have been printed is blown up by dynamite and the fleeing bandits, after one of the most desperate combats ever seen on the screen, are brought to book.

The Kissing Butterfly—La Salle—(One Reel) —July 17.—Otto, as the professor of bugology in a co-educational institution of the middle west, finds himself confronted with the necessity for catching a Upa Diadi Coedius, or "Kissing Butterfly"—a very rare specimen, in order to complete the collection of the college. While chasing the Upa Diadi over the hills, Prof. Otto is stalked by a bevy of Coeds, who make a bet that all he knows of kissing is the "Kissing Butterfly," one particularly bold young person offering to bet that she will make the professor kiss her before 10 p. m. While at first indifferent to the lure spread for him, the bug chaser eventually becomes interested, is smuggled by the coeds into their dormitory, discovered there by the president and involved in all sorts of trouble before matters are satisfactorily explained and the "Kissing Butterfly" captured.

The Great Stanley Secret—Chapter 1—(Four Reels)—July 23.—Starring William Russell and Charlotte Burton. Arthur Stanley and his wife, Esther, are killed in a railroad wreck and their little son, Arthur, around whose neck is tied the Stanley jewel, survives, injured. De Vaux, friend and accomplice of Stanley's renegade cousin, Blair Stanley, who covets the jewel and the Stanley earldom, is on the wrecked train and discovers the boy. Nearby with his camp of gypsies is Quabba, fast friend of Arthur Stanley. He discovers that De Vaux has substituted a dead boy beside the Stanleys and has carried Arthur Stanley to the hospital as an unidentified survivor. De Vaux cables Blair Stanley about the wreck and he starts from London for America to gain possession of the jewel which De Vaux has stolen from the injured boy. De Vaux, fearing identification of the boy, steals him from the hospital. He is shadowed by Quabba. When De Vaux lays down the lad, wrapped in blankets, to dodge the watchman, Quabba substitutes a log and takes the child to his camp. De Vaux hurls the log into the ocean. Quabba takes the boy to Stanley Hall, Virginia, the Stanley home. De Vaux sees the child. Blair Stanley arrives and the jewel passes into his possession as Quabba watches the transfer. The gypsy steals into the room and there ensues a fight in which Quabba, in temporary possession of the prized gem, hurls it out the window. Quabba, ignorant that De Vaux knows that the boy is alive, turns him over to Louise Grafton, old friend of the Arthur Blairs.

Red, White and Blew—(One Reel)—Horsley —July 26.—Featuring George Ovey. The old professor returns home with his daughter, the young professor and a full-blooded Indian upon whom he intends to make educational experiments. Jerry meets them at the station and gets a chilly reception from the old man. Jerry and the girl work various schemes to meet. Jerry gets an old Indian suit and makes himself a duplicate of the real red man. They put the Indian in the wine cellar, but after he gets into the fire water things go crosswise with calculations and things begin to happen. The girl takes Jerry for the real Indian and the Indian for Jerry and there is such a mixup ensuing that Jerry doesn't know himself whether he's Jerry or the Indian. The law is summoned to straighten things out, but gets mixed up itself.

Universal Program

The Flight—Episode Four of the Gray Ghost —July 16.—With Harry Carter and Priscilla Dean. At the cafe, Jacques tells Hildreth about the Gray Ghost. Meanwhile the Ghost learns that Morn Light called up Bishop's cafe and that Hildreth is there. Jacques hears several men approach and ask for Hildreth. He warns the Englishman and shows him a secret door. Hildreth escapes and the men are unable to follow him. Then Hildreth rushes to Morn Light's apartment. He demands that she tell him the name and purpose of the Gray Ghost. She is about to answer when the Ghost appears. Three men cover Hildreth with drawn revolvers. Marco, Hildreth's secretary, tells Jerry, a detective, that Hildreth has not been home all night. They are both worried. Arabin returns from his trip and goes to the store. The Gray Ghost appears at the store and walks about inspecting the jewels displayed.

Six-Shooter Justice — (Three Reels) — Gold Seal—July 17.—With Harry Carter and Claire du Brey. This is a Western drama with numerous complications. Mary judges solely by appearances and takes a liking to Miguel Hernandez, a good-looking bad man, and a dislike to "Cheyenne" Harry, a bad-looking good man. After many exciting incidents, Mary realizes that appearances are deceptive.

A Dark Deed—Nestor—July 17.—With Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Edith Roberts and Fred Gamble. Ashur loves Vera, but she is busy studying the works of an East Indian Swami. He plans to put one over on her and tells her that he will bring a real Swami to her house. His roommate dresses up like a Swami and goes to Vera's house. Vera has invited a number of girl chums and they are awed by his crystal gazing. Ashur does not like it when Freddie makes love to Vera, but he has to put up with it. Finally the police, who have been on the trail of fake fortune-tellers, raid the house. The two young men escape. They feel sure that Vera has been cured of her desire to probe into Eastern mysticism.

Surf Scandal—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—July 18. —With Dan Russell and Eunice Murdock. Mr. and Mrs. Sand Dow keep a gymnasium. But Dan would flirt with the women and Mrs. with the men, and they both grew peeved at each other. They all go to the beach, and soon there is a regular mix-up. After many thrilling incidents, the picture ends in a pie fight.

Some Nurse — Joker—July 19. — With Gale Henry and Milton Sims. After a year of married life, Lizzie Cake finds that her husband does not love her any more. Hubby gets a letter saying that his rich uncle, expecting to die any minute, is coming to live with him. As uncle supposes that he is single, he tries to get Wifey to go away. On the day that uncle arrives, Lizzie goes shopping and is attracted by a beauty shop advertisement. She looks like a regular peach when the beauty doctor gets through with her. She returns and Hubby tells Uncle that she is the nurse whom he hired to take care of him. Uncle immediately falls in love with her, much to the dislike of Hubby. Returning home, Hubby sees a shadow on the curtain that looks like Wife kissing Uncle. He is ready to shoot, but explanations follow.

The Web—Star Featurette—July 19.—With Cleo Madison, George Pearce, Jack Nelson and Gretchen Lederer. Cleo is in league with "Gentleman Joe." Mrs. Van Wert has in possession some jewels that Cleo so much wants to have. She is invited by Jack Norman to go with him and spend the week-end at the home of Mrs. Van Wert. In the dead of the night Joe robs the safe. He is struck down and the loot is removed from his pocket. Norman proves to be the guilty one. He goes to Cleo, tells her he has an admiration for her cleverness, and that they had better join forces. But Cleo asks Norman to go straight, saying that she loves Joe.

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 28.— July 20.—On the trail of the duck is the first subject and shows how hunters go after the bird. A new invention shown this week is the payroll machine, which pays out millions every year in salaries, with unerring accuracy and speed. The manufacture of cocoanut macaroons is a fascinating study. The concern turns out 10,000 a day. The reel ends with a clay cartoon by Willie Hopkins.

One Bride Too Many—(Two Reels)—Victor —July 20.—With Matt Moore. Tom sublets his apartment to Jean Dupree and his daughter, Jeannette. That night Tom goes to a farewell bachelor dinner given in his honor. At the apartment, Jeannette admits her lover, Alfonse, a poor artist, whose suit is not approved by the old Frenchman. On discovering the presence of the artist, Dupree promptly ejects him. Tom feasts too well at the dinner. Instead of going to the hotel he automatically goes to his apartment, enters his bedroom and begins to undress. It is the room occupied by Jeannette. Papa on hearing voices comes in and demands that Tom marry his daughter the next day. In spite of his apologies and explanations Tom is dragged to the church. There he finds Grace, her father and the entire bridal party, who have been anxiously waiting for him. Dupree finally permits Jeannette to marry the man of her choice.

Box Car Bill Falls in Luck—(Split Reel).— Bill arrives by the side-door Pullman route, and is thrown off the train. He finds some money and goes into the bar to spend it. He asks for another bottle of prune juice, but a purple goofus comes out of the neck of it, and this puts him off. He rambles out of the bar and sees all sorts of curious creatures, until, exclaiming "I'm through!" he climbs onto the wagon for good. On the reel with "In the Heart of India."

In the Heart of India—(Split Reel)—Powers —July 21.—The national drink of India is "toddy," a wine made from the palm tree. The palm flower is cut and the sap collected by the "toddy drawers," who form a caste of their own. On the farms every farmer grinds his own castor beans, the oil of which is used for all sorts of things. Fuel is scarce in India, and everything that will burn is saved. We see some of the old people of a native village. One old woman is 105 and has great-great-great-great-grandchildren. Then we see a high caste woman dressing her daughter in the "sari," or national dress of India. Road-making is well understood, and the roads last for centuries, as they are so well constructed. Then we see the broadest banyan tree in all India, the main system being 70 feet in circumference. Its shade diameter in every direction is 180 feet. On the same reel with "Box Car Bill Falls in Luck."

He Had 'Em Buffaloed — Joker — July 31. — With William Franey and Zasu Pitts. Richard Manslot, a stranded actor, drifts into Satan's Gulch. He is the object of ridicule as well as wonderment. Election is at hand, and as a farce the cowboys elect Richard as sheriff. Hepsibah, slavey in the kitchen of the dance hall, becomes interested in the stranger. Richard hides in the stage that is going to carry money to pay off the miners. Dan and Pete start out to rob the stage. Richard is successful in capturing the thieves, returns to the Gulch and throws Dan and Pete into jail. Then he drives away with the stage.

far away the Pinetree patrol of the Boy Scouts went into camp and the W. M. K. E. S. T.—Wharfrats, Motherless Knights Erring of the Square Table—began to tease and harrass the scouts. Later in the evening Pug sees Billy, his chum, forced to enter a jewelry store through the window by thugs who are looting the place. He offers to take his pal's place if they will let him go. In the jewelry store he touches a silver cup, which to his imagination becomes the holy grail. The captain of the boy scouts and Scud, senior scout, lend first aid to Pug, who is wounded in the jewelry store robbery. They show Pug the contrast between his organization and theirs and his better self, remembering his mother's love, comes to the fore. His gang becomes a division of the boy scouts.

Farmer Alfalfa and His Wayward Pup—(SPLIT REEL)—JULY 21.—Farmer Alfalfa has a wayward pup that causes life on the farm to be far from dull. Enjoying a quiet smoke one day, the farmer lays down his pipe. The pup steals it, and taking it under the stoop, smokes to his heart's content, then retreats to the barn. The farmer takes a mallet and runs to the barn in search of his pipe. There he finds the pup chasing the ducks. In turn he chases the pup. He cannot catch him and returns to the barn. There he buys a wonderful game rooster from a neighbor. The rooster gets into a terrific fight with the pup, who, taking refuge in a pail, escapes the rooster's attacks for the moment. The rooster springs into the pail the moment the pup springs out. Thinking that the pup is in the pail, the farmer makes a mighty drive and kills the rooster.

Your Flag and My Flag—ON THE SAME REEL WITH FARMER ALFALFA AND HIS WAYWARD PUP—JULY 21.—A patriotic poem embellished with animated illustrations. As the stirring verses of this poem are shown on the screen they are followed by the pictures of the waving flag—now the stars, now the stripes, each illustrating the intent of the text; the ending verses heading views of marching troops with the flag in the foreground. In closing, the scene depicts the soldiers raising the flag to the top of its staff, where it is shown unfurling its folds to the breeze in the final close-up.

The Making of Hundred-Ton Guns—ON THE SAME REEL WITH ABOVE—JULY 21.—This educational and patriotic 513-foot picture was token by special permission at the United States Arsenal, Watervliet, New York. It pictures the work of the men in overalls—the men who forge the guns that can smash an enemy's fleet at 20 miles—the grimy, unknown men, who work with gigantic hammers that can knead steel like dough, and with delicate calipers that can measure fractions of a hair's breadth, hold in their hands the defense of the nation and the lives of its defenders. From the first rough-turning of the plain tube of steel to the final completion of the finished 14-inch gun, the various processes which are included in its manufacture are shown step by step in an interesting and comprehensive manner. As a finale this modern 130-ton Hammer of Thor is shown in action.

Art Dramas

The Road Between—(FIVE REELS)—ART DRAMAS.—Featuring Marian Swayne. Polly is the daughter of a scientist who becomes rich through an important discovery. Abbott and his daughter are perfectly happy and contented on the farm, but the wife is anxious to go to the city and enter society. Once in the city they are beset by a party of social gangsters, who pass as members of nobility. They almost succeed in ruining the father, but through the cleverness of Davey, who loves Polly, and incidentally by the wit of the girl, their plans are defeated. Polly and her parents then return to the farm. The girl is again happy in the company of her lover, Davey. Reviewed in this issue.

State Rights Features

The Public Be Damned—(FIVE PARTS)—PUBLIC RIGHTS FILM CORPORATION—RELEASED STATE RIGHTS.—Marion Fernley's young farmer husband, unable to get a reasonable price for his produce from the big organization that controls farm products, makes an attempt to organize the farmers and ship foodstuffs direct to the consumer in the city. However, for the consideration of money the youth plays traitor to his cause and his wife demands an instant separation. Later on Marion comes to the city, works her way up to an influential position and finally convinces one of the chief food price manipulators of his low-down, criminal tactics. This individual, an old lover of the girl, steps aside and allows her reformatory bill to pass in the state legislature without interference, although it means ruin to him. The girl's husband redeems himself by preventing a corrupt political manipulator from putting a crimp in things at the last moment. Reviewed in this issue.

Butterfly

High Speed—(FIVE REELS)—BUTTERFLY—JULY 16.—With Fritzi Ridgeway. Father had about abandoned Susan to her slow-moving fate, when he came into contact with "Speed" Cannon. He tries an experiment in the hope that Susan might be speeded up by it. At first it is a great failure, but Speed will not give in. Susan finally wakes up, saves Speed from killing himself and agrees to marry him right away.

Fox

Honor and Obey—FOX—(FIVE REELS)—JULY 14.—Starring Gladys Brockwell. Richard Hallam and Marc Patton both love Lorrie Hollis, a little cabaret girl. Richard wins her and for a time they are happy, but when Hallam loses his money in the stock market the home also goes to smash. Part of the money lost Hallam has embezzled, and he sends his wife to induce Patton to manipulate the market so that he will be reimbursed. Patton does this, but the hate of Hallam grows, believing that Lorrie paid a price for Patton's kindness. With riches Hallam loses his love for his bride and falls in love with Rose Delvane. Hallam becomes so calloused that he drives Lorrie from the house. At last, affairs in Great Western, the chief stock in which both men are interested, narrow down to a man-to-man fight between Hallam and Patton, and Patton wins. Rose says good-night to Hallam when his money is gone, and the miserable wretch commits suicide. Patton now finds Lorrie and their happiness is assured.

Christie Comedies

Down by the Sea—(ONE REEL)—CHRISTIE—JULY 16.—Flirtatious Harry and his sweetheart Betty are in a soda parlor when he sees Ethel's sparkling eyes at an adjoining table and returns her smiles. Betty leads him from the place, but her temper is soothed and they become engaged. Next day they take a trip to the beach, and from the window of the bath house Betty spies Harry arm in arm with a bevy of mermaids. Harry explains that the girls forcibly took possession of him and Betty agrees that he could not beat them off. She leaves him with the information that she has an engagement. When she returns she soon is joined by three lovers she has hired at an employment agency. While she thrums the ukelele the lovers sit entranced. Harry can stand it no longer and soon tackles all three of them. He is getting the worst of it when Betty sends a blow from her ukelele to the head of the strongest of his antagonists and Harry resolves never to skid again.

Paramount

The Little Boy Scout—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS-PARAMOUNT—JUNE 28.—With Ann Pennington and Tom Moore. The heroine of this play, an unsophisticated little girl with a slender knowledge of the world, is relentlessly pursued by an uncle who wishes to force her into a repulsive marriage that he may profit thereby. When the uncle is about to play, in triumphant exultation, his last card, his plans fall utterly to the ground, for in the short interim of his absence the girl has married and the ordering of her life is quite in another's hands. Reviewed in this issue.

Pathe

The Last of the Carnabys — ASTRA — (FIVE REELS)—JULY 23.—Starring Gladys Hulette. At the death of her mother, Lucy Carnaby becomes the guardian of her spendthrift brother and the entire household. Financial difficulties force her to sell some of the antique furniture, but unknown to her it is purchased by Rand, a millionaire who secretly loves her. Her brother becomes entangled with a woman of questionable character and in order to free him Gladys borrows money from Etheridge. He forces his attentions upon Gladys but is discovered by the brother and shot. Lucy takes the blame and is tried. While she is in court the brother is conscience-stricken and hurries to confess, but the machine is wrecked and he dies. Lucy is freed. She intends to commit suicide, but is prevented by Rand.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

The Message of the Mouse—(FIVE REELS)—VITAGRAPH—JULY 9.—Featuring Anita Stewart. The story tells of foreign conspirators in their endeavor to divert billions of capital from America for use in the rebuilding of their own bankrupt countries. It shows the working of a wonderful spy system and how it is fathomed out by a clever American girl. The plot is discovered in time to prevent the signing over of the money to the agent of the foreign syndicate. Then Winthrop and his associates learn of the great service the patriotic girl has rendered to her country. Reviewed in this issue.

World

The Beloved Adventuress — (FIVE REELS) — WORLD.—Featuring Kitty Gordon. Juliette La Monde, a musical comedy star, is admired by all men. Her step-father, Robert Nicholson, considers her a disgrace to the family and refuses her the privilege of seeing her dying mother. Morgan Grant, because of his love for Juliette, desires a divorce, but his wife refuses to give him his freedom. She promises to go away and never see him again. Years later, her father having died, Francine returns to her sister, Juliette. Then Juliette makes some radical changes in her mode of living. She sends Morgan away from her home. Francine is introduced to "real life" by Amy Barker, who also tells her of Juliette's past. Morgan becomes infatuated with Francine and tries to induce her to come to his apartment. Juliette, however, learns the truth and locks Francine in her room, while she goes to Morgan. When he refuses to do as she asks, she shoots him. He then realizes the strength of her love, and not wanting her to suffer for his death, he writes a confession that he is ending his life. Francine accepts Philip's renewed proposal and they are married. Juliette goes to France

When True Love Dawns — (FIVE REELS) — BRADY-INTERNATIONAL SERVICE-WORLD—JULY 16.—Featuring Susan Grandaise. A delightfully interpreted story of a girl who sacrifices her youthful lover to marry a wealthy man many years her senior for the purpose of keeping her grandmother's estates from dissolution. The girl is finally convinced of her husband's love, and through a sacrifice of his there is a dawn of true love within her own consciousness and the marriage turns out to be a most happy one. ## Chicago Notes

J. A. BERST, general manager and vice-president of Pathe, came on from New York for a few days following the fire to personally look things over.

Joe Brandt, of Universal, was in the city on business last week.

Jack O'Toole, the genial manager of Fox Film in Chicago, came back to work last Monday. He has been attending the convention of Fox managers who have been holding forth at that cheap place, the Biltmore, New York, during the last week.

The exposition will be the place for exhibitors sponsoring pretty motion picture aspirants to place them in pictures. Bryant Washburn will choose at the exposition at least three young ladies to work with him in a forthcoming feature.

Carl Laemmle, gubernator of the good ship Universal, spent Monday in Chicago. Mr. Laemmle and I. von Ronkel consumed the greater part of the day taking the snarls out of some fishing tackle. Aaron Jones and Nathan Ascher went with them on a Wisconsin angling trip.

The Universal booth may be very popular with the male attendance at the Coliseum. It is understood that a studio scene will be the attraction. Of course that's just the setting. The real cynosure of masculine optics will be ten pretty girls in lingerie who are going to pretend to be "making up."

Colburn Huey, booker for Pathe, worked forty-eight hours without a wink of sleep after the conflagration which recently sent the Pathe offices up in smoke. Even at that he outdistanced the other employes of the exchange only a little. They all tumbled out of bed before six o'clock, piled into taxis, and most of them spent all day and night working in the wreckage in an effort to get things back in shape.

Major Bunkhouser, who has condemned Mary Pickford's latest triumph because it takes a slap at the Germans, is beginning to wonder if folks were right when they said Chicago was the sixth largest German city in the world. He knows he is getting an awful panning, anyhow. For a German city, he begins to feel that Chicago is deucedly pro-American.

As a result of the fire on the Pathe exchange in the Consumers' Building last week, an ordinance has been proposed by John C. McDonnell, chief of the Chicago bureau of fire prevention, providing for the exclusion of film exchanges and firms handling motion picture films from the downtown district. This proposed ordinance has been referred to the committee on buildings.

Lillian Walker, the dimpled star of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, stopped off at Chicago, July 6, on her way through to New York. She made a flying trip up to the fourteenth floor of the Masonic Temple, where she held a brief toote-a-toote with Ludwig Schindler and the forces that are piloting the National Convention into harbor. July 16 is to be her day at the convention, and there were a few matters to be arranged. Lillian, however, was in such a hurry that if she had had a whole week at the convention she couldn't have stayed more than an hour.

The Chicago Pathe Exchange, which suffered so seriously in the fire of last week, is supplying exhibitors with films almost as effectively as if no blaze had occurred. Very few "stick-ups" are reported, and those that occur are due to calls for single reelers and old serial stories.

As soon as the seriousness of the damage was known, Manager C. W. Bunn sent out an S. O. S. to all the nearby branch exchanges which netted him a veritable avalanche of the celluloid streamers. Manager Schrader of the Indianapolis branch got two truckloads of films to the Chicago exchange the same day that the distress call was sent out. Cleveland, Milwaukee and Minneapolis all responded promptly.

Greiver & Herz are allowing Pathe to use their shipping roms, and the Anti-Trust Company has turned over its inspection department. All the exchanges in the building are co-operating with their unfortunate competitor in every possible way. Each one feels that it was just luck that caused the bomb to be placed on the fourth floor instead of the fifth, the sixth, or the n'th. The mystery concerning the identity of the person who started the fire remains as impenetrable as ever.

Edward Trinz, of Lubliner & Trinz, states that Oak Park will now be "on the map," since this company have taken over the management of the Oak Park Theater. "The Little American" was the first picture shown under the new management and drew a record business

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT WILL INTEREST YOU

AFTER years of exhaustive research and experimental work by some of the biggest men in the industry, we announce the perfection of some inventions that will revolutionize the method of projecting motion pictures.

¶ With his many years in the industry, and closely co-operating with the engineers in the MAZDA Lamp research and development laboratories, he has perfected the Oscar Sheck Universal Projector Lamp Appliances, with which MAZDA Lamps are used to project motion pictures on the screen in place of the carbon arc-lamps now used. Present arc-lamp equipment may be changed quickly and economically to use the MAZDA lamp. We are the manufacturers and general distributers.

¶ These inventions have many advantages—the elimination of "flicker" on the screen, better illumination, the elimination of eye strain, make the operator's work easier, and the cost to operate with MAZDA Lamps is very much less than with arc-lamps.

¶ These inventions will revolutionize the method of motion picture projection, and save exhibitors many thousands of dollars annually in operating cost.

¶ Mr. H. H. Cudmore, for many years identified with the MAZDA Lamp Industries, is General Manager of the company. We are well organized, with thoroughly experienced and capable men, and we will soon be ready to make deliveries of the new equipment.

¶ We suggest that you write now for descriptive literature, prices, etc., so you may be one of the first exhibitors to install this modern improvement.

National Show in Full Swing

CHICAGO IS INDUSTRY'S FOCUS WITH EXPOSITION AND CONVENTION

THIRTEEN thousand people attended the opening day and evening of the Chicago exposition, according to early estimates. That means that the seventh National Show of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America is bound to be bigger than any other the industry has seen.

The rapid and constant growth and development of the picture industry is naturally reflected in the 1917 convention and exposition. Under Director Ludwig Schindler the vast show is better arranged than ever before. The capacious Coliseum of Chicago is one big field of attractive exhibits and daily in the afternoon and evening stars of country-wide note are appearing in the flesh before the exhibitors who advertise them and before the public who idolizes them.

Thirty-five States at Convention

The convention has drawn together more exhibitors than have ever met before. The standards of thirty-five states were raised on the convention floor, each represented by its official delegation of bona fide theater men. There are probably more candidates for the office of president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League than ever before. If that is any criterion of the success of a convention, this one is a winner, even if it is an open secret that one or more of the candidates are decoys for the purpose of corralling votes to be turned over to other politicians.

It cannot be said that the convention was better ordered than ever before, for the opening sessions were extremely stormy. Within five minutes after President Lee A. Ochs of New York had completed his opening remarks the convention voted him out of the chair in an appeal from his ruling that no state delegation should be recognized which had not paid its dues on or before thirty days before the opening of the convention. A recess was called to allow time to settle the matter of credentials, and to put the lid on the boisterous delegates who fought for the floor and a chance to speak.

There are many extremely vital questions to come up at the convention — questions which really and directly affect the business of every theater man in the country. Among these topics are the deposit system, which will probably be given its final anesthetic, the eternal question of censorship, the various booking problems, and many others, to say nothing of the official problems of running the national exhibitors' organization, the M. P. E. L. of America.

The exhibitors' convention is held at the Coliseum Annex, which adjoins the Coliseum, where the exposition is held. The various legislative sessions are taken up below as they took place day by day. The happenings of the exposition are treated in the same manner.

The Exposition by Days

Again the Motion Picture Exposition has pushed into the background all rival entertainments so far as Chicago's populace is concerned. Again the Coliseum, this year gaily patriotic in its flag bedecked splendor, welcomes eager crowds who come to do homage to their screen idols, to hear them speak and to carry away armsful of souvenirs and the proud privilege of remarking casually, "I've met her and she's much prettier off the screen than on," or "My dear, personally he's the nicest sort of a chap, not a villain at all."

SATURDAY, JULY 14

Some 13,000 people attended the exposition the first day. This, as announced, was Goldwyn Day, and Mae Marsh was there, true to promise. Accompanied by her mother and a delegate of Goldwyn officials, she arrived at the Coliseum during the afternoon and was introduced to her many friends. In the evening, she appeared again, and gave out photographs from the Goldwyn booth.

The opening night saw many players present to help entertain. Essanay studios were represented by that "big" little star, Mary McAlister, by Bryant Washburn, Hazel "Honey" Daly, and a host of other players. Taylor Holmes, Essanay's newest acquisition, appeared with the other film players, and directors and officials were among the throng. "The little Irish girl,—her name is Dennis," as Manager Schindler announces Amy Dennis of the Selig Hoyt comedies, greeted her friends.

SUNDAY, JULY 15

This was Pathe Day, with Pearl White, Doris Kenyon and Sheldon Lewis there to prove it. Graciously they held court in afternoon and evening. All the stars of the preceding day, except Mae Marsh, who had gone back to New York, were present at the Sunday session. Also Nell Craig, always a favorite with Chicagoans, appeared to wave greetings to her admirers. Lillian "Dimples" Walker, of the Ogden Film Corporation, was another welcome surprise. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran added merriment to the sessions and interest to the Universal booth, and the Chicago Sunshine comedians were among those present.

MONDAY

The brightest gleamer on the first day of the week was "Dimples" Lillian Walker, former Vitagraph star who is now the leading light with the Ogden Pictures Corporation. She was led down the balcony runway in the afternoon by Committeeman George Laing, who also introduced to the crowd Anita King, the Paramount girl who motored alone across the continent a year ago, Nell Craig, the buxom Essanay beauty, and Rose Tapley, of Vitagraph, who acts as official hostess for the whole show. The same stars appeared to the throngs on Monday evening, and the movies in the making and the cabaret and dancing continued popular.

MONDAY EVENING

Mae Murray and Rosemary Theby made their first appearance at the Exposition on Monday evening. Robert Leonard, Miss Murray's director, was also present. The other visiting players all held receptions from various booths during the evening, and no star won more enthusiastic applause than Carl Laemmle, who bowed his thanks from the platform. Violet Mersereau is still looking for the best "screen" type among the men and promises to pick a new picture hero from the crowds who greet her in Chicago. Lillian Walker stopped in MOTOGRAPHY's booth a few minutes and greeted her friends from there. Her worshippers broke down the fence in their effort to shake hands with her.

Many M. P. E. L. Candidates

PRESIDENTIAL ASPIRANTS ALL SET FOR STORMY BALLOT FEST

WITH all factions going into and coming out of secret sessions, with henchmen buttonholing delegates and drawing them aside for a few hasty moments, with a flutter of ribbons, badges and emblems and a general air of bee-hive activity, the different political groups at the official exposition headquarters, the Hotel Morrison, are entering the last phase of the struggle preceding the annual election of president for the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

The stage is all set, the connections all made, the guns all cocked, and still the element of doubt persists. Each man claims that he not only is the only logical candidate for the office, but that he is sure of a majority of the votes of the delegates attending the convention.

At the time of going to press there is not a candidate who does not think his chances of being the next league president are excellent, and yet there seems to be a general doubt among candidates as to just where their support lies.

Fred J. Herrington, an ex-president and now candidate for the presidency from Pennsylvania, declared that the delegates from his state were uninstructed. He made the following statement to a representative of MOTOGRAPHY:

I am running on my past record. I feel that actions are louder than words. I have served in the capacity of president once, and my record speaks for itself.

The exhibitors know what I will do if elected and how actively I will work in their interests. My prospects, I think, are particularly rosy right at this minute.

Varner Out for Best Interests of League

H. B. Varner, the "fighting tar heel" from North Carolina, could not suppress his optimism when speaking on the subject of the next league president. He said:

I am positive I shall win. The delegates are bound to recognize the services I have rendered during the past year when I effectively combated the proposed ten per cent theater tax in Washington. I had to step in and save the League from itself. When I got to Washington I found officials of the organization on the opposite side advocating that the theater men be subjected to a ten per cent tax. Can anything be more ridiculous?

I set to work and pounded away with hammer and tongs and was instrumental in finally sending the bill to the discard. I feel, however, that on that one piece of work alone I earned the good will and support of every thinking exhibitor in the country. The only platform on which I am running is one that has nailed down to every plank the best interests of the exhibitors. I think there is little doubt but that I shall be elected.

Rembusch on Last Ballot

At the Hoosier camp the cry was, "Rembusch on the last ballot." There, too, optimism was rampant and any suggestion that some one else might "cop the bacon" was hooted.

Charles Pettijohn, attorney for the Indiana League, said:

While we are for Frank J. Rembusch first, last and all the time, still let me say that Indiana is too big and broad a state not to have the interests of the entire league closer to heart than her local interests. We want to see Rembusch win and we are sure that he will. No man has done more for the exhibitor. And yet if the nineteen delegates from Indiana find that it is the will of the convention to choose somebody else to lead the League through the coming year there will be no sour grape action on our part. We will get behind and boost to the limit of our ability. Local ambitions will be downed in the interests of the entire organization.

Indiana feels that the biggest thing before the exhibitor at the present time is active co-operation with the government to help win the war. I have just recently returned from Washington and I know the government feels that it needs the assistance of every theater owner in the country. Never before was the screen such a recognized power.

Volunteer or Be Conscripted

We think that any platform the League may select for the coming year should take this matter up for serious consideration. The government is going to do one or two things. It will either conscript theater owners and make them run propaganda slides and films, or theater owners will have to volunteer. We think they ought to volunteer.

And let me say right here, just to show how closely the government is watching this convention, that I personally know of men being present representing cabinet officials who may say something during the convention if any lack of co-operation with the government becomes apparent. The United States needs us and we've got to volunteer or be conscripted. Indiana wants to volunteer.

Claims of unexpected strength kept emanating from the camp of Lee A. Ochs of New York, despite the active opposition of Samuel H. Trigger, president of the Manhattan local, who is out strongly against him. Rumors were persistent among certain circles that there was a sub-rosa combination between Ochs and David Rogers of Minneapolis, whereby the latter would switch the Northwest vote after the first ballot or two.

Rumors of Other Combinations

In the same breeze other rumors were blown about that after there had been a testing of strength in the initial ballot, there might be a Varner-Rembusch-Herrington armistice and an agreement reached to support one man.

However, the chances for combinations are multiple and more or less speculative. The Rogers-Ochs union was given color when the former was asked what he thought his chances of election were. He shrugged his shoulders and laughed and immediately launched into a eulogy of the record of the present incumbent of the presidential chair.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "if we desired to rely on technicalities, we could rule three of the presidential candidates out because their states failed to pay the per capita tax required by the league thirty days prior to the convention. But we are not going to do that. We want to win so fairly that there can be no cry of legerdemain. We want the exhibitors to feel that the man who is elected is the choice of the assembly and not the political puppet of clever wire pulling."

The states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, North and South Dakota, Illinois, Oklahoma, Washington, Mississippi, Vermont, Maine and Ohio were the ones cited by Mr. Rogers, which, by virtue of having met the requirements in regard to the per capita tax, were entitled to vote. North and South Carolina, Indiana and Pennsylvania, he said, were among those that had not lived up to the rules and regulations of the thirty-day law.

The political activity at the Hotel Morrison will culminate on the floor of the convention when it is announced that "the election of new officers is next in order." Who will land on top still remains to be seen. There is little doubt, however, that the favorite son who finally does win out will realize that even some of the skin came off his teeth.

Standard Film Opens Omaha Office

C. W. Taylor, who has been the manager of the General Film Company's office at Omaha, resigned that position about ten days ago to take the managership of the branch office which is being opened at Omaha by the Standard Film Corporation. The Standard announces that the Des Moines office is being closed as it was found by experience that its location prevented efficient service. Mr. Taylor, of the newly opened Omaha office, expects to do a great business with the Art Dramas Program. In announcing his change, Mr. Taylor said in part: "The addition of the David Horsley-Crane Wilbur productions to the Art Dramas Program makes me all the more confident of the success Art Dramas are going to have in distributing through the Omaha office. Wilbur is very popular in this part of the country and his productions to be released on the Art Dramas Program are well calculated to increase that popularity."

Mary Miles Minter, the American star, is at work with her new director, Lloyd Ingraham, on "Charity Castle."

PICTURE theaters are doing great things for patriotism. Witness the following news story from Oklahoma where a doughty sheriff made another enthusiastic convert to the colors. We'd like to see this incident illustrated, as it would be very touching:

"Last week Sheriff John Woofter heard that George Kanuwitz, manager of the theater at Sapulpa, Oklahoma, would not allow American flags in his theater, nor would he allow members of visiting companies to sing patriotic songs. On a recent Saturday night, while a picture was being shown, the stage was suddenly lighted by a spotlight which revealed Sheriff Woofter, an American flag in his hand. A crowd of one thousand persons saw the sheriff beckon Kanuwitz to the stage, where he compelled the theater owner to kiss the flag, amidst great applause from the audience."

PRESENTING STATES TO UNCLE SAM

The national convention started out in a blaze of oratory from President Lee A. Ochs of New York, the climax of which were these immortal phrases:

"I will support the next president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America as I wouldn't support myself!"

"And next year may there be fifty-two states enrolled in the National League of America!"

Guess he'd just got up from a poker hand.

Complications developed during the opening session of the convention which resulted in the declaration that the New York league was not in good standing, not having paid its dues before the specified time.

National President Ochs is from New York.

Therefore the convention found its president disqualified from attending the convention.

Do you realize the joys of artistic creation? Do you know the ecstasies of photoplay directing? Let us give you a sample.

A Vitagraph director had everything worked up to the vital serious scene, and it was almost finished, when the studio cat walked into the set, sat down in the center, and began to chew its hind leg. The whole nervous scene was done over. The next time, when the dad stamped his foot in rage, the grandfather's clock which was nicely propped up in the corner slipped its moorings and fell over on its face and hands.

Then one of the children around the studio stuck a hair pin into something in the engine room and short-circuited the whole plant. The trouble was repaired by the next morning and the director started the scene again. Everything went in great shape and the director began to get deliriously happy. But he was saved.

After the serious scene had at last been finished, the cameraman came up in fear and trembling and confessed that the shutter on the camera had been closed during the entire take.

Moral: Don't run away from home, Mr. Exhibitor, to become a motion picture director. There are bugs that gnaw at everybody's bean.

NEED A CHANGE? SEE CHICAGO

When you think of the changes that were made in the exposition program and the changes that were made in the changes, it makes you think of the old classic phrase, "Off again, on again, gone again, Finnegan."

Some of the exhibitors who came to Chicago to the convention took rooms at the official hotel, the Morrison, and expected to sleep there. That was found to be an error on their part as rooms are so much more valuable for crap games than for sleeping.

SOME OF THE BIG EXECUTIVES AT THE NATIONAL CONVENTION AND EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO

Feeling the Convention's Pulse

RED BLOODED NEWSICLES FROM THE HEART OF THE NATIONAL SHOW

THE only exhibitor to have a display at the exposition is the Alfred Hamburger Theaters of Chicago. And it's a blaze of glory, too—right opposite the main entrance in a classy stage setting. And Mr. Hamburger booked a snappy sepia-colored band from an "Uncle Tom" show to dispense music.

They are introducing Bryant Washburn to Chicago fans as "the man who doesn't need an introduction."

Thirty rooms at the Hotel Morrison was the amount of hostelry space taken by the Metro party during its stay in the Windy City.

Butterfly beauty-patches are right in style at the exposition. Irving Mack presents a bevy of them to the ladies, both for adornment and to remind them to see "Butterfly" plays.

Little Mary McAlister had the time of her very young life in the K. E. S. E. booth. Staying up until ten o'clock at night is as much a novelty for "Billie" as bowing to crowds is.

Among the important publicity purveyors present at the big show were Nat Stronge of Vitagraph, F. B. Warren of Goldwyn, and Arthur James of Metro. They secluded themselves at the Hotel La Salle.

The earliest bird at the convention this year was Anita King, the Paramount bird of Paradise. She arrived by motor from California five days before the exposition opened.

Missouri was represented at the exposition by Henry Sanders, of Cape Girardeau, a town of 10,000, where he is building his new Orpheum Theater. This house will cost about $18,000, and while in Chicago Mr. Sanders is looking up the best kind of equipment for it. This possibility of combining business with pleasure is another reason for attending the convention.

Not only do the stars announced for this exposition materialize, but they come a day ahead of time. And there are new announcements every day as a continual surprise. Fanny Ward and her husband, Jack Dean, were Tuesday night surprises.

Among the film men from Cleveland at the convention were the following: Max Schachtel, manager of the Universal office; Mr. Diener, manager of Bluebird pictures for Ohio; David Adler, of the Strand Theater, and Emery Downs, manager of the Knickerbocker Theater and president of the screen club.

"The cinema industry is a polished cog in the wheel of modern civilization. Its convolutions afford thousands of people an elegant method of earning money for clothes and calories, and furnish a million others with amusement and ambition," says Magda West in the Chicago Journal, commenting on the exposition.

W. S. McClaren, vice-president of the Michigan National State League, and manager of the Majestic and Colonial Theaters of Jackson, and his competitor, Steven Springett, of the Family Theater of Jackson, locked arms and came to the convention together, as two of the delegates from the Wolverine state.

Pearl White demonstrated a bit of honest-to-goodness heroine-ism right in the Pathe booth Sunday, when she accomplished the difficult "stunt" of greeting her admirers and being sweet and smiling while suffering from a stiff neck due to an injury she received on her trip to Chicago.

Detroit sent a special car of thirty-five exhibitors to Chicago, arriving on Monday, the opening day of the convention, and this select crowd included S. A. Moran, of Ann Arbor, president of the state league; Claude Cady, secretary, from Lansing; Paul Slossman, of Muskegon, state treasurer; Peter Jeup, treasurer of the National M. P. E. L. of America; and Louis Schneider, president of the Detroit Local League.

Did you ever see a star descend from the heavens and then ascend again? Well, that's what they are doing at the exposition. The management has constructed a classy exhibition platform in the center of the big building and connected it with the balcony by means of a run-way, down which the stars move on their path to glory and to the stand, where they blush and greet the more or less admiring multitude. For this convenient and efficient arrangement the management deserves a vote of thanks from both the public and from the stars, who last year were all but squeezed to death in the mobs. And some of the stars object to being squeezed.

Among the early arrivals at the exposition was the Pathe party, consisting of Pearl White, Doris Kenyon, Sheldon Lewis, and officials J. A. Berst and C. R. Seelye. They arrived in Chicago at 9:40 Sunday morning, the second day of the big show.

The University of Chicago has on exhibition its ambulance, which will soon be shipped to France. It has a full medical equipment and will be manned by some of the young men who are ready to show it to anyone interested. It looks very comfortable, but no one has expressed a wish to ride in it except up in front with the driver.

Motography's booth at the exposition proved to have been landed right in the center of things, and many times was swarmed full of people who took that vantage point to get a peep at some of the notables roaming at large around the Coliseum or greeting the gaping multitudes from some nearby booth. Many exhibitors made the booth their headquarters and a large number secured their weekly copy of the real motion picture trade journal there.

Dora Roderiguez, who is traveling from New York to San Francisco in an attempt to get 7,000 men for the army and navy, was in Chicago in time for the opening of the exposition. "Universal Dora," as she is known, has succeeded in getting 1,150 men to list in the army and navy, and expects to get no less than 500 men from Chicago during the Exposition week.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, the two well known Universal comedians, brought to the convention a director, a photographer, and a bunch of assistants. They came on with the intention of proceeding right along with the comedy game, expecting to pull one stunt at the exposition itself. They are said also to have taken time off for a swim with some of the bathing beauties of Chicago's north shore beaches.

The evening before the opening day of the exposition, which was Mae Marsh day, there was distributed at the leading Chicago picture houses pink cards stating to the patrons that Miss Marsh was to be present at the Coliseum the next day and explaining how to secure a little framed portrait of the star from her own hand. It was effective advertising in the right field.

Souvenirs which attracted as much attention from the public as any given out at the exposition were those passed out by Little Mary McAlister, Essanay's winsome child star. An attractive folder has been issued by this company on the "Do Children Count?" series, which shows views of this tiny star in several poses, including one in which she wears her uniform of sergeant of the United States recruiting army. Additional pages were added to this folder and the names of all the theaters where this series can be seen in Chicago were listed.

One of the real features of the exposition was the work of the Sunshine Film Corporation of Chicago in making pictures before the eyes of the public. Lloyd Williams, the 300-pound comedian, Virginia Lee and Otto Davidson were among the Sunshine players who appeared, directed by William N. Buckley. Needless to say, the Sunshine exhibitions were the most popular single feature of the big show.

According to the newspapers, the German reichstag has been indulging in some stormy sessions, but it is safe to say that it has nothing on the national league for excitement and glorious confusion. Fifteen men had the floor, more or less officially, at the opening session, which lasted but a short time, and few of them could edge in what they wanted to say. "Points of order" and "objections" were thick as bayonets on the Belgian front.

New Mutt and Jeff Films

The new Mutt and Jeff series which Bud Fisher is turning out is meeting with big success.

Starting with the first of the series, "The Submarine Chaser," these pictures will be shown at the Strand Theater in New York, every day during the coming year, and it is very probable that before the end of another week the Rialto Theater will also be showing them. If so, it will be the first time that a picture has been shown in both of the leading theaters in the country at the same time.

These are the first pictures to be released under the direct supervision of Bud Fisher, and territories are selling fast.

The advertising and publicity for the new series is being handled by Shepard and Van Loan, who have planned a very unique campaign for these comics.

Mary Miles in Child Role

Mary Miles Minter's role in her latest photoplay, "Melissa of the Hills," released by Mutual July 23, fits her like a French kid glove. It's a typical Minter part—the role of a lovable child.

Mary has proved in several of her recent productions that she simply cannot hide her beauty and charm. They tried to do it by making her a dirty faced little salesgirl in "Annie for Spite." They dressed her in oilskins and boots and drenched her in a rainstorm in "Periwinkle" and in "Melissa of the Hills" they dress her in the shabbiest and plainest of cheap clothes, and the charm of her personality shines right through.

"Melissa of the Hills" is laid in the feud belt of Tennessee. Mary's dad is the circuit rider and circuit riders are as famous for their poverty as the printer was before the days of the union scale.

The story was written by Mabelle Heikes Justice and scenarioized by Julian LaMothe. LaMothe is the author of "The Red Virgin," "As the Twig Is Bent," "By the Flip of the Coin," and other well known screen successes. It was directed by James Kirkwood.

Spottiswood Aitken plays the part of the circuit rider. His career before the camera covers a dozen well known productions. Alan Forrest, who plays opposite Miss Minter for the first time in "Melissa of the Hills," has a long career both on the stage and on the screen.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. The theaters mentioned here are in Chicago, unless otherwise noted. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

THE COMBAT, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Picture, good; star and direction, excellent; business, fine."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Sixteenth Wife, with Peggy Hyland (Vitagraph)—"I did not see this picture, but as a drawing card I consider star and title good, from the box office report."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago. —In middle class neighborhood.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"We played this picture on July 4 and 5, which was very timely, and the patrons liked it as a whole; but we were disappointed because it had no originality."—Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Clover's Rebellion, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Excellent production. Capacity business as usual with this star."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Magnificent Meddler, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"This picture was well liked by the audience. Good direction. Fair drawing power."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Clover's Rebellion, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Up to the usual Vitagraph standard. A good comedy drama."—Harry Festus, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

The Girl Philippa, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"An excellent picture that brought capacity business at advanced prices."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

The Daring of Diana, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture. Star good; drawing power fair, owing to picture's age."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop, with Antonio Moreno (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture played to very good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Message of the Mouse, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"An excellent production, well directed; an all-star cast. We played to a capacity business and it satisfied our audiences."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Girl Philippa, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"Played four days to big business during Red Cross week. Donated 40 per cent of gross receipts to the Red Cross."—J. Boyce Dellinger, Grand Theater, Shelby, N. C.

Paula Blackton's Country Life Stories (Vitagraph)—"Clear pictures that will help any house. All were well liked."—J. Boyce Dellinger, Grand Theater, Shelby, N. C.

The Hawk, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"This was very interesting and the women seemed to like this sort of play, and its trend toward politics pleased the men. Business was good."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Clodhopper, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"None better than this star. The production is splendid. We did 50 per cent more business than on any other picture this year. Ray is the house favorite by all odds."—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Question, with Alice Joyce and Harry Morey (Vitagraph)—"A very good picture that should register very satisfactorily anywhere."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"Played four days to S. R. O. Fifty per cent of the population saw it at increased admission. The number of admissions exceeded 'The Birth of a Nation' in the author's home town."—J. Boyce Dellinger, Grand Theater, Shelby, N. C.

The Paws of the Bear, with Clara Williams (Triangle)—"The star is fair; production fair. Rather a tangled affair that doesn't get anywhere. Business dull."—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Love or Justice, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"The star is superb. She is our strongest drawing card among women stars. She is a siren who can really act."—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Girl, Glory, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"The star is fair; the production good. Miss Bennett as yet has not gained a large following. Business fair."—A. K. Pay, Colonial Theater, Sioux Falls, S. D.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"A timely offering which drew good business, but the picture has a rather misleading title. While it is a patriotic picture for preparedness, some people believed it to be the 'birth control' kind."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

The Apostle of Vengeance, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"My patrons liked this picture so well that they said it was the best picture Hart has ever appeared in. Business was good."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Her Excellency, the Governor, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"Mr. Lucas takes a strong, heavy role in this picture, which is one of the good Triangle pictures of late release. Business was fair, but the weather was hot."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Happiness, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"A very good picture that should please everywhere. Photography excellent. The star is a comer and ranks among the best."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

Peggy, with Billie Burke (Triangle re-issue)—"A very good picture. Played to good business with very little advertising."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeyville, La.

"Whose Wife?" with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"A very good picture."—Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"This is a picture that patrons go out and talk about. It's a 'knockout' from every angle."—Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Time Locks and Diamonds, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"Just a fair production with not much drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Strange Transgressor, with Louise Glaum (Triangle)—"A fairly good picture with not much drawing power, owing to the name."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Immigrant, with Charlie Chaplin (Mutual)—"Slow action in this comedy, but it was liked. When the two reels are over, you think it was only one, for the funny situations take many feet to develop the comedy

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in Motography's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

The Devil's Assistant, with Margarita Fischer (Pollard)—"A very good picture, liked by all. Played to fair business."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeyville, La.

The Painted Lie, with Crane Wilbur (Horsley-Mutual)—"Picture poor; star good; business fair, but not on account of the picture."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Price of Pride, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"A pretty good picture and played to very good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Crimson Dove, with Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge (World)—"A fair picture."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

Mothers of France, with Sarah Bernhardt (World)—"A wonderful picture. Pleased all patrons. Banner day for the summer."—H. L. Gambate, Rex Theater, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mothers of France, with Sarah Bernhardt (World)—"A poor production and the star has no box office value here."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Mothers of France, with Sarah Bernhardt (World)—"An excellent production. Played to very good business and could stand a repeat."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Beloved Adventuress, with Kitty Gordon (World)—"This did not draw as well as we expected it to. The picture is good and our patrons were pleased with it. The story of an actress who was loved by many men."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Marcellini Millions, with George Beban (Paramount)—"The story is rich in pathos. The acting of Mr. Beban is very cleverly done and was well liked by everyone."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Girl at Home, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff (Paramount)—"This story has been put out before by other companies but the stars and detail were not as good as they are in this one. The picture is very good and was well liked."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Woman's Way, with Ethel Clayton (World)—"Very amusing situations. Good business."—H. L. Gambate, Rex Theater, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A Roadside Impresario, with George Beban (Paramount)—"A good picture. The star is one of the most entertaining artists on the screen."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

The Cost of Hatred, with Kathlyn Williams (Paramount)—"Drew poorly and did not please those that did come."—T. L. Little, Majestic Theater, Camden, S. C.

The Silent Partner, with Blanche Sweet (Paramount)—"The star is not the drawing card she used to be on account of her absence from the screen during the last few months. The story is O. K. and we had no complaints on the picture from our patrons. Business, average."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Snow White, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Excellent production. Patrons well pleased. Big house."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

Redeeming Love, with Kathlyn Williams (Paramount)—"A good attraction. Star very popular. Good business."—H. B. Tull, Monon, Indiana.

The Undying Flame, with Mme. Petrova (Paramount)—"This star does not draw. Picture good."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Inner Shrine, with Margaret Illington (Paramount)—"A good production, good story. Star very poor. Business poor."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Lost and Won, with Marie Doro (Paramount)—"A fair picture but it did not draw in spite of good weather."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

Blind Man's Luck, with Mollie King (Pathe)—"Excellent picture. Poor title. Poor business, but those present enjoyed it."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater.

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"A popular star in a comedy that registered very satisfactorily. Photography excellent."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

The Millionaire's Double, with Lionel Barrymore (Metro)—"Fair, with no drawing power. Metro is losing out with my audience and fails to draw any more."—T. L. Little, Majestic Theater, Camden, S. C.

The Greatest Power, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"A very good picture, well liked by our patrons and business was satisfactory."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Saint's Adventure, with Henry B. Walthall (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"A dandy picture and the star does some good acting. Patrons well pleased."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wis.

Filling His Own Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Story very poor and impossible but patrons liked this picture."—Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Poppy, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"A very clever star in a poor production. Photography poor."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Company, Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Poppy, with Norma Talmadge (Selznick)—"Story not pleasing, but patrons seem to like it. Personally I think Miss Talmadge is poorly cast in such stories as this."—Elmwood Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Foolish Virgin, with Clara Kimball Young (Selznick)—"Production only fair. Poor attendance."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

A Poor Little Rich Girl, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Excellent. Good business. The star is very popular."—H. B. Tull, Strand Theater, Monon, Indiana.

A Kentucky Cinderella, with Ruth Clifford (Bluebird)—"An unusually good picture. Capacity business. Everybody pleased."—Harry Miller, Idle Hour Theater, Festus, Mo.

The Adventures of Shorty Hamilton (Monogram)—"We were agreeably surprised at Mr. Hamilton's excellent work, far above anything previous."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

In the African Jungle (Selig)—"Pleased our patrons. Business good."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Filling His Own Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"The star is popular here and the story is fair. Not so good as the two 'Skinner' stories. Has touches of comedy. Business, average."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Serials

The Great Secret, with Francis X. Bushman (Metro)—"Just a fair serial. Business excellent on account of the star."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Mystery of the Double Cross, with Mollie King (Pathe)—"We think this serial is very good and we draw big crowds with it."—Peter Grills, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

The American Girl, with Marin Sais (Kalem series)—"Good pictures but with too much similarity. The star is not big enough to draw."—J. W. Allendu, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Gray Ghost (Universal serial)—"A wonderful production. Eddie is a proficient actor."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Gray Ghost (Universal serial)—"Very elaborate settings. Good story. Eddie Polo has drawing power."—H. L. Gambate, Rex Theater, St. Petersburg, Fla.

The War Bride's Secret, with Virginia Pearson (Fox)—"Virginia Pearson's work in this picture is great. Picture was liked by the audience."—William E. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

The Price of Silence, with William Farnum (Fox)—"A good, strong picture all around."—William E. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

She, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Splendid offering. Played to good business and pleased."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Darling of Paris, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"Fair. A poor attraction for two days in a small town."—J. Boyce Dellinger, Grand Theater, Shelby, N. C.

Continues Independent Buying

Sol L. Lesser has a twofold purpose in making his next trip East, which will bring him there about the first of August: Firstly, to attend the convention of the National Organization of State Right Buyers, now being promoted by him, which will take place on August 7; secondly, to purchase feature productions independently for his All-Star Features Distributors, Inc., of San Francisco, California.

This develops the fact that Mr. Lesser's connection with the new enterprise in no way interferes with his intention to continue purchasing independently, as well as under the National Organization.

Lynn Reynolds With Triangle

Lynn Reynolds, a director with a string of successes to his credit, is now with Triangle, at the Culver City plant. Reynolds brings with him to Triangle his entire technical staff and several character men with whom he has worked in the past. For his first production he has been assigned Olive Thomas as star.

Volume XVIII CHICAGO, JULY 28, 1917 Number 4

The Ability to Get Together and Stay Together

A TRADE paper issue that goes to press in the midst of a convention is handicapped in the way of revealing new situations to the impatient reader. This number is on the press and off again and the political complexion of the convention is unchanged. Yet before another number is out, and while this is still being read, the entire executive personnel of the League may be made over. A venturesome prediction that looks plausible today may be ridiculous in the light of Saturday morning.

There are a lot of real candidates for the presidency of the League this year. Whether they all have confidence in their ability to gain the chair—or whether some of them have entered the lists for the familiar old political purpose of splitting the opposition and then concentrating on the favorite—we are not in a position to announce. We doubt if we will go very far wrong, however, in predicting little (if any) change in the organization of the League. Its conduct from now until July, 1918, will probably resemble closely its history since 1916.

Past performances have not made us very optimistic regarding the prospective progress of the League under present conditions. It takes a lot more than officers and directors to make a successful association—and that seems to be the extent of the League's current organization. Not only are the bulk of the country's motion picture men not to be found on the membership rolls, but it is reported than a surprising number of those who are on are delinquent in their dues to such an extent that they could be disqualified by a strict interpretation of the constitution and by-laws.

We regard the present officers of the League [July 16, 1917] as very able men, and association organizers of the first class. We have no reason to think our next issue (which will report the election of new officers) will find occasion for different comment. But we do maintain that something still is needed that the League apparently lacks.

If a certain trade paper publisher—or any trade paper publisher, for that matter—was no more successful in getting subscribers for his paper than the League has been in getting members, the aforesaid trade paper would have a mighty poor circulation, and its advertisers would get nothing for their money.

Knowing other trades and their associations pretty thoroughly, we cannot avoid the conclusion that the same organization effort would bring larger returns in most industries. Evidently the picture theater men need more dynamite to start them than other men, and so far the League has not supplied it.

It must not be inferred that the membership list has made no progress in the year, for undoubtedly it has. Possibly it has made more than in any previous year. But it is not enough.

What the League needs is a few Billy Sunday evangelists who can emotionalize the country exhibitors and take their dues away from them before they cool off. It would be justifiable confiscation; for the victim would get infinitely more than he gave up, and the industry of which he was a part would be so strengthened and solidified that no enemy would dare attack it.

We have talked a lot about the power of the screen—its ability to mould public opinion, sway politics, and decide momentous problems. And so it can—but not until its own problem is solved, and it becomes a co-operative unit. The power of the screen—the question whether it shall be a mover of nations or merely a casual amusement—depends upon the ability of the exhibitors to get together, and stay together.

Working Day and Night

FEW industries have ever commanded the services of so many enthusiastic, long-hour workers as have graced the motion picture business. Not a little of the credit for this industry's wonderful growth must go to the men who think a twenty-four hour day too short for all that there is to do.

Generally, as men grow older and their business prospers, they begin to balance off the long hours of their youth by taking time for golf and motoring and the club. What is true of individuals is largely true of industries. The executives in the older lines of business spend less time at their desks than those of the newer lines.

Sixteen hours a day of steady grind accomplishes wonders during the constructive period. But in an industry that directly serves the public, and that depends upon public approval for success, such close application has its disadvantages. It results in saturating the worker with a trade atmosphere and trade ideas, to the exclusion of the broader and more worldly viewpoint of the people. The man who has no time for anything but his work, associates with nobody but his fellow workers. He does not, of his own knowledge, know how the public regards him or his work. He produces from his inner consciousness alone. His associates may praise or condemn his product; but their criticism is of little value to him because they, too, are buried in their business and express only their own theories—not the opinions of the people.

The motion picture business has reached the point in its career where it can afford to give its executives more time for association with the public. Not only the industry, but the private fortunes of the individuals who compose it, will be gainers by such association. For the motion picture business is peculiarly a public service institution. It lives by the favor of all the people; and often it succeeds by forcing the people to like its product when the line of less resistance would be to make a product that they were already prepared to like.

When we say that motion picture executives should spend more time with the people (and therefore less time with their office duties) we mean not only producers but exchange managers and exhibitors—particularly exhibitors. There is no longer any need for guessing at public taste.

In all circles of society, masculine and feminine, the motion picture has become a common topic of conversation. Hardly ever does a gathering of any kind pass an hour without mentioning the pictures. Criticism, favorable and adverse, is as common as talk about the weather.

The only class of human being to whom all this conversation is unfamiliar is the motion picture man himself. He misses it all because he stays apart from it. He has no time for society dallying; he is too busy to hang around club lounging rooms; and when he does take a few hours off for recreation, he mixes with his own kind. They may talk shop, and probably do; but they can contribute nothing new to the situation as far as the viewpoint of the common people is concerned.

We do not like to see the motion picture men make the same mistake that the speaking stage people have made. The executive of "the legitimate" have committed some surprisingly bad misjudgments of popular taste because they habitually live apart from the rest of the world, in a special circle of their own. It would be easy for the film folk to fall into the same error; but they need not if they recognize its dangers.

Motion picture men in all branches will lose nothing by getting away from the old idea of working day and night. Recreation and leisure that brings a more intimate contact with the ultimate consumer (who is also the absolute arbiter of our fortunes) is worth more than the extra hours of desk work that deprive the film man of all outside social intercourse and of those exchanges of comment that lead to a rational understanding of public temperament.

Close-ups of the Exposition

BOOTHS OF BEAUTY FOR SHOW WINDOWS OF THE TRADE

EVERYTHING for the picture theater, from pictures to programs, from films to fans, yes, and "fans," too, they're all there, displayed invitingly before the exhibitor, who, after toiling over convention problems, attends the "big show," the national exposition.

He can meet personally some of the stars who earn him money, and he can talk shop with the man who makes his advertising slides or arranges his programs. And he can enjoy the holiday spirit of the crowd and the beauty of the gaily decorated booths.

As he enters the Coliseum, the flashing Paramount-Artcraft sign first greets him, directly opposite the main entrance, high up before the gallery seats on the east side of the hall. It is a huge and elaborate electric sign. Enframed in colored lights, the pictured faces of the popular Paramounters and Artcrafters smile at him, while the lights play games about the Paramount trademark. Al Lichtman and Benjamin Schulberg will be there to tell him more about Paramount popularity.

Over the entrance and extending well into the center of the hall is a garlanded stand from which Manager Schindler, announced by a blare of trumpets, introduces those stars who are personally present to their enraptured admirers. The players are escorted to the stand down a runway from the balcony. This plan is a great improvement over previous arrangements and gives everyone a chance to see and hear the guests of honor. Later the stars hold receptions in the booths of their respective companies.

At the left of the entrance is the Bluebird booth, which is also a naval recruiting station, in charge of J. Svee of the Navy League. With its back to Bluebird is the Butterfly booth. A practical demonstration of the art of screen "make-up" is given by several pretty girls in this booth, and a group of eager would-be screen stars surround the place, seven deep. E. H. Hibbens and G. L. Levine arranged and have charge of this booth. Carl Laemmle, Joe Brandt, E. and I. Van Ronkle and Irving Mack all may be found somewhere in this vicinity.

This block of booths contains also the Bartola exhibit, a Selig booth devoted to "The Garden of Allah," state rights picture, and the Chicago Daily News.

Next is Celebrated Players (Frohman) with framed pictures from the photoplay, "God's Man." A. W. Frohman and J. L. Friedman have charge of this. Then comes Central Film which handles Selznick features. Harry Weiss holds forth here.

Beautiful Goldwyn Booth

The Goldwyn booth, which enshrined Mae Marsh on the opening night, is presided over by F. M. Brockell, manager of the Chicago Goldwyn exchange, assisted by M. S. Kusell, Alfred Weiss, F. Bradford of the Minneapolis exchange, and Lloyd Lewis of the St. Louis exchange. Samuel Goldfish, F. W. Warren and Lee Arms were members of the Goldwyn party from New York. The Goldwyn, with its lattice enclosure and cool-looking wicker furniture, is an especially attractive booth. Framed photographs of the Goldwyn stars and the Goldwyn "Art for Art's Sake" motto decorate the booth.

Metro, one of the most beautiful booths on the floor, gathered admirers, both for its artistic daintiness and its "Jazz" band. When the band rested, the canaries were the musical entertainers. Patriotic buttons were presented to the passersby, with a card urging them to see "The Slacker," Emmy Wehlen's patriotic Metro feature. Cresson E. Smith is in charge of the booth, assisted by J. H. Skirboll, T. W. George, H. R. Skirboll and M. Levy. Metro stars are promised, among them Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Edith Storey, Viola Dana and Emmy Wehlen.

Exhibitor Has Classy Display

Directly opposite the entrance, under the Paramount-Artcraft wing, is the classy niche of the Alfred Hamburger Theatrical Enterprises, the single exhibitor exhibit at the show.

Three double rows of booths stretch the length of the south half of the Coliseum, while the rows of single booths are arranged along the walls. Among the displays attracting much attention is Pathe's large, well furnished booth, managed by Tom North. Pathe stars, Pearl White, Doris Kenyon and Sheldon Lewis, "drew" so well with the crowd that their admirers threatened to overwhelm MOTOGRAPHY's booth, adjoining. Complimentary tickets were distributed to a performance of "Les Miserables," the Pathe picture being shown at Orchestra Hall.

K. E. S. E.'s booth was continually surrounded by the admirers of Bryant Washburn, Baby Mary McAlister, Hazel Daly, Marguerite Clayton, Virginia Valli, other Essanay players, and Amy Dennis of the Hoyt-Selig companies. Ben Beadell arranged this booth. W. H. Jenner is in charge, assisted by Chris Whalen.

Mutual's booth is surmounted by a large star sign, and the Mutual "Big Stars Only" slogan. Postcard pictures of the stars and of the American studios at Santa Barbara, given as souvenirs, as well as autographed photographs of Mutual favorites made this booth a popular one. R. R. Nehls, Benjamin Judell, Terry Ramseye, Eugene Duffy and C. W. Stoddard are in charge.

The Fox booth was managed by J. E. O'Toole of the Chicago exchange, assisted by J. W. Lyons, G. Mitchell, E. C. Grohe, and O. L. Winslow, and G. L. Turner of Milwaukee.

World has an attractive booth and expects to present a bevy of stars. L. A. Roselle and C. W. Phillips of the Chicago office and A. C. Thompson of Milwaukee are in charge of arrangements.

The Standard Film Company, which distributes Art Dramas, is represented by a booth, R. O. Proctor in charge. William Buckley is managing the Sunshine Film Company's booth, and members of the Sunshine Comedies cast are present.

But the picture companies have no monopoly on attractive and carefully arranged booths. The business and technical experts of the picture world are well represented.

Supply Companies Represented

The Simplex booth is especially fine. A gleaming, nickel-plated projection machine, mounted on a revolving pedestal, dominates the display, with the Simplex sign over it, and back of the booth the electric lighted slogan, "Pleases from booth to screen, and the audience between," were two of the attention attracting devices. Other Simplex machines are arranged in the booth. E. M. Porter and L. W. Atwater have charge of the display.

Then there is the Motiograph booth, and the Motiograph machines, with O. F. Spahr, S. P. Blakely, C. A. Hahn, E. J. Ferney, and J. E. McCauley greeting exhibitor friends and explaining the value of their projection devices.

The Midwest Supply Company has a booth, with J. A. Williams in charge. The Nicholas Power Company's large booth is managed by Will C. Smith, assistant general manager of the company, and W. W. Lewis and Joseph Abrams. H. M. Wible and H. H. Rhorbaugh have charge of the Westinghouse Electric Company's elaborate display. W. C. Kunzmann, of Cleveland, is in charge of the National Carbon Company's booth, assisted by L. W. Fisher, the Chicago representative.

The Cahill-Igoe Company has an attractive display of their latest theater program arrangements and novelty souvenirs. Medallion portraits, rings containing screen stars' portraits, etc., find ready purchasers among the visitors. Patrick J. Garvey, manager, did a lively business among the youthful "fans." Paul J. Smith and Florence J. Higley of the publicity department aided him.

Eugene "Billy" Hamburg has a large display of his advertising slides and theater decorations. B. B. Bonheim and C. W. Wiedbusch also were in charge of the exhibit. H. E. Riege and Robert Perry represent the Flexlume Sign Company. Tom Phillips, assisted by W. M. Klipinger, has an exhibit. The Midwest Supply Company, J. A. Williams in charge, displayed their wares. The United Theaters Corporation are represented by G. Hollins, J. H. Hallberg and R. Fulton. The Al Randall Company has a booth. The National Automatic Door Company occupies a space, Fernando J. Le Beau in charge. The Typhoon fan display is set forth in a cool-looking booth.

The music of the theater was not neglected.

The Marquette Piano Company has a Cremona display, J. C. Cox in charge. The Seeburg-Smith Combination piano is represented, and also the Bartola and Kimball instruments.

Picture Studio in Action

The Reel Fellows' Club booth is conducting a popularity contest. The trade and daily papers are represented by booths, and there are Red Cross and recruiting stations in every nook. The Red Cross is to have an auction of gifts donated by film stars.

Part of the floor space at the north end of the building has become a very popular dance hall, and in the annex to the south is a temporary motion picture studio, where "fans" crowd around to see how pictures are made.

Just a few advance glimpses of a forthcoming Harry Morey-Alice Joyce play, "Richard the Brazen." It will be available to first run exhibitors on July 23.

"RICHARD THE BRAZEN"

Blue Ribbon Picture Featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey Ready for Release July 23— Good Cast in Support.

In "Richard the Brazen," a Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature for release July 23, there is staged one of the most spectacular automobile wrecks ever transmitted to the screen.

This new Blue Ribbon feature stars Alice Joyce and Harry Morey.

Besides giving a sterling performance in the role of Richard Williams, a whimsical western ranchman, whom cupid transforms to a pseudo English nobleman, Morey also performs some remarkable feats of horsemanship. It is through this latter accomplishment that his deception is penetrated, which leads to a series of humorous and near-tragic incidents, culminating in the apprehension of a blackmailer, the reconciliation of two staunch friends, and another Morey-Joyce screen betrothal.

Surrounding the stars is a cast of well known players, including Franklyn Hanna, Patsy De Forrest, Charles Wellesley and Robert Kelly.

The story opens in London, where Richard Williams, Harry Morey, an American, is the guest of Lord Croyland, Charles Wellesley, an important agent of the British War Department. While they are dining in a London chop house, Richard's eyes fall on Harriet Renwyk, Alice Joyce, and her cousin, Imogene, Patsy De Forrest, American girls. He is instantly infatuated with Harriet.

Soon after this incident, Croyland receives orders to go to New York to buy munitions and about the same time Richard receives a summons from his father, Bill Williams, William Frederic, a Texas cattleman and financier. The elder Williams, although the son is unaware of it, has been involved in business with Jacob Renwyk, Franklyn Hanna, father of Harriet. The two partners fall out over the very contract that Croyland is to place in America, and they each determine to get it for themselves.

Arrived in New York, Croyland and Richard are in an automobile accident, his lordship being badly injured, while Richard escapes. Croyland is put in a hospital. He gives Richard's name as his own. He asks Richard to go to Renwyk, to whom he has sent letters of introduction, and explain his inability to call on him. Renwyk mistakes Richard for the real lord, and he, meeting Harriet, brazenly accepts the role of the titled agent. He immediately starts in to woo Harriet and her father starts to woo that contract. Richard learns that Renwyk's plan is to beat the elder Williams and he contrives to evade the issue.

Two others, by keen observation, penetrate Richard's disguise. One is Harriet, the other Corrigan, Robert Kelly, a canny relative of her father. Neither, however, reveals the secret to Richard or anyone else.

After a series of humorous incidents, tragedy enters the Renwyk house in the shape of a former admirer of Imogene, who threatens her if she does not buy back letters she had written him. he confides in Harriet and at an appointed time, the blackmailer comes to collect his toll. While he is holding up Imogene, his confederate robs the Renwyk safe, taking a collection of diamonds. The burglar gets out of the house, but as he starts away, Corrigan, who had seen him climbing out of the window, attacks and overpowers him.

Meantime, Richard hears a heated argument between the two women and the blackmailer. A struggle ensues and Imogene, in terror, hides in a corner. Richard does not see her as he enters the room and grapples with FitzGeorge. He imagines that Harriet is guilty of a clandestine affair, which impression is increased when Harriet begs him to let FitzGeorge escape. This he does and leaves the room.

Aroused by the noise downstairs, Renwyk comes onto the scene, meets Richard and sees that his safe has been robbed. He immediately suspects him of the crime and has the police summoned.

At this juncture the elder Williams arrives from Texas and resents Renwyk's branding Richard a thief. Corrigan, fresh from his encounter with the burglar, arrives. Richard explains to his father how he happened to be in the Renwyk house and Imogene confesses that it was she who had written the letters to FitzGeorge. Corrigan hands Renwyk the jewels he nas recovered from the burglar and when the police arrive they find the prisoner tied to a bush, and also capture FitzGeorge.

Corrigan then informs Renwyk and Williams that he has been to the hospital and obtained the munitions contract from Croyland, and that he intends to give it to Richard and Harriet as a wedding present.

New Signal Mutual Serial

The entire first episode of the new Signal Film Corporation serial, "The Lost Express," to be released through Mutual Exchanges, has been completed. The cast surrounding Helen Holmes in this new and bigger serial undertaking is superior to any that has appeared with her in the past. J. P. McGowan numbers among his players Leo Maloney, Thomas Lingham, William Brunton, Will Chapman, W. A. Behrens, and Andrew Waldron, all of whom appeared with Miss Holmes in the past, and in addition has Al. Smith, who is famous for his character delineations, and Edward Hearn, who has played leads in Universal productions for the past two years.

The first episode of the story gets under way with a rush and lays before the public the baffling mystery of the disappearance of the entire express train while passing from one station to the next on a single track line, with no switches or cut-offs en route. The express train, loaded with a collection of astounding inventions, pulls out of one station and fails to arrive at the next but eight miles distant. The most careful kind of search fails to disclose any trace of the lost express. Exhibitors may be sure that any patron who beholds this first chapter of the new serial will fairly burn with curiosity while awaiting the next following installment of the story.

The exact date for release of Chapter One of "The Lost Express" has not yet been set, but it will be sometime in September.

Universal Heads at Convention

Universal will be represented at the Chicago convention by practically its entire quota of executives.

Carl Laemmle is expected to deliver a personal message of much interest to the exhibitors. Chicago, it will be remembered, is the city in which Mr. Laemmle opened his first motion picture theater about ten years ago, and he naturally has a host of friends in the windy town.

R. N. Cochrane and P. A. Powers will also be present at the beginning of festivities. Joe Brandt will give the glad hand to his friends in the industry; while exchange managers will be entertained by E. N. Goldstein, and friends of the Universal Animated Weekly will find Jack Cohn on the job to explain just how the Pershing "scoop" was put over.

Lesser Handles King Bees

Sol. Lesser, of San Francisco, has acquired the local state rights of the King Bee Billy West Comedies. He expresses himself as delighted with the humorous qualities of the productions which he says are among the funniest he has ever seen. Their money making possibilities, in Mr. Lesser's opinion, are enormous, as the ability and popularity of the star, the excellence of the supporting company, and the cleverness of the acting and production have been well established by the releases so far available.

"Betty and the Buccaneers," the American play introducing Juliette Day, of Broadway praise, to picture-goers, has been completed and Miss Day has begun on "The Rainbow Girl."

Billboard Campaign For Goldwyn

NATION-WIDE ADVERTISING TO PROMOTE PICTURES

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has signed a contract with the American Poster Association for a nation-wide billboard campaign to be made during the summer and fall months throughout the United States and Canada.

The extent of this campaign to back up the local exhibitors of Goldwyn Pictures and to focus the attention of the continent upon the Goldwyn stars will be understood better by stating that extensive postings will be made in every town and city in the United States of 5,000 population or more and that every Goldwyn distribution zone is liberally covered.

A remarkable twenty-four sheet, pronounced to be one of the most distinctive pieces of paper ever designed and executed by a lithographer, will be the first piece of Goldwyn paper to herald the names of Goldwyn's famous stars. There will be a monthly change of copy with other equally distinctive papers to follow.

The posting contract calls for an expenditure in excess of $100,000.

Not to be outdone by its American parent, Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., of Canada, will post all the cities and towns in the Dominion of 5,000 population and over.

The closing of this contract for a nation-wide billboard representation is in keeping with the big promotional campaign which Goldwyn Pictures has planned to bring its completed productions before the American and Canadian publics.

Texas Congress of Mothers Asks Help

Mrs. B. A. Sadler, Dallas, Texas, state chairman of moving pictures for the Texas Congress of Mothers, has written Mae Marsh, the famous little heroine of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," in part as follows:

As organized mothers we are striving to secure better films for our children; films which are educational, entertaining, innocent and free from suggestive vulgarity and the low things of life. I understand that we are working under difficulties that will be hard to overcome but at the same time good must eventually prevail.

We desire to establish a circuit throughout Texas for these better films and want to know if you can be prevailed upon to give us any suggestions. There are numerous books which could be put upon the screen that are of interest to both children and grownups. If it is within your power to help us the appreciation of American mothers will be forever yours.

In response to Mrs. Sadler's letter, Miss Marsh has written the following:

Your letter was of particular interest to me because as I write I am engaged in and have nearly completed the kind of a picture which I think you and the Texas Congress of Mothers have in mind when you ask for film that is innocent yet entertaining, with a wholesomeness that carries the right kind of an appeal to those who will be the future citizens of the United States and as such shape her destinies.

I am referring to "Polly of the Circus," the drama by Miss Margaret Mayo. This is a picture of small town American life with American children and typical rustics. It shows the dominance of religion among the God-fearing folk of agricultural pursuits—those who have been the very backbone of our national life. It shows a circus complete from a block-big tent to the side-show skeletons, and what the coming of a circus means to our rural communities. There is a county fair and a horse race, both of which are somehow typically American institutions. It is clean all through.

I may assure you, that so far as the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is concerned we have not yet nor will we produce any picture that is not elementally wholesome. No signs conveying the information that children are not admitted ever will be necessary when our pictures are shown. The day of commercialization of filth on the screen has passed with the great producer. For that reason Goldwyn Pictures do not presume to ask credit for the pledge that none of their stories will be salacious. The public to which we appeal does not want such stories. Goldwyn Pictures do not want such a public.

Canadian Theaters Book Goldwyns

From its head offices in Toronto, Goldwyn Pictures, Ltd., of Canada, announces the signing of the Patricia Theater, London, Ontario, for the entire first year's output of Goldwyn Pictures.

Manager W. L. Stewart made the contract with N. L. Nathanson and his representative, Sydney Taube, and the London, Ontario, Advertiser, one of the most important newspapers of the Dominion, extends an advance greeting to the Goldwyn producers and stars in the following enthusiastic manner:

"The exhibitors of the continent have been watching for the release of the Goldwyn Pictures and there has been eager competition to obtain them. They promise to freshen up the entire motion picture industry. London will get these productions immediately after their release in New York. The Goldwyn people mean to perpetuate the motion picture art and carry it to greater heights. Moving pictures must either transcend the present run of stories or go backward. Goldwyn has studied the outlook and expert judges who have seen their productions return to Canada proclaiming their pictures to be the most meritorious screen dramas ever launched."

Submarine Eye on Velvet

The Williamson Brothers and members of their Submarine Film Corporation are celebrating the fact that their first independent picture, "The Submarine Eye," has successfully passed the expense point and is now sailing along in the smooth waters of net profits.

With less than twenty per cent of Domestic and Foreign territory disposed of, eighty per cent remains from which to declare dividends which are now estimated to surpass the sum of $200,000.

Ernest Shipman, manager for the Williamson Brothers, say that the best tonic for success is to "Keep plugging and never worry." Shipman is summering at Oak Island Beach on the South Shore of Long Island. He rises at six A. M., runs his motor boat ten miles across Great South Bay to Babylon, then changes into his roadster and hits up the Merrick Highway to Forty-second and Broadway, where States Rights Buyers who desire to acquire some of the unsold territory for "The Submarine Eye" may find him from 9:30 A. M. to 4:30 P. M. daily.

Dowling With Paralta

Joseph J. Dowling, who won a very conspicuous place with Triangle, by his remarkable character impersonations, has been engaged jointly by the Bessie Barriscale and the J. Warren Kerrigan Companies to appear with these stars in Paralta Plays. He will be seen with either star when his services may be required in striking character delineation.

In 1912, he abandoned the footlights and accepted an engagement with the New York Motion Picture Corporation. He commanded instant recognition through the artistic fineness of his portrayals. Mr. Dowling will probably be seen in the next Barriscale production, work on which has just begun.

Favorite Films Appear

V. L. S. E., the distributing organization for Greater Vitagraph, has completed arrangements for the release of the new unit of its program—Favorite Film Features—starting Monday, July 23. As previously announced, these pictures, which will be released on a weekly program basis, consisting of a one-reel comedy and a two-reel drama, or vice versa, are carefully selected features which have scored heavily in the not very distant past.

Favorite Film Features offers to exhibitors and the public productions in which numerous famous screen stars appear. These include Clara Kimball Young, Norma Talmadge, Edith Storey, Earle Williams, Harry Morey, Sidney Drew and a host of others whose names are part of screen history. In these features they are shown in some of their finest characterizations and in plays on which they made everlasting reputations.

The Favorite Film Feature release program already provides for eight weeks' showing and additional subjects are being chosen almost daily for future release. The pictures are all being re-edited, retitled and, in many cases, re-tinted, with the result that they are quite as attractive as the present day product.

Endorse Pickford Film

By unanimous vote some two hundred leading citizens of Chicago, including men and women representing official, civic and social life, last week endorsed Mary Pickford's patriotic picture, "The Little American," and rebuked Major Funkhouser for refusing it a permit in that city. Much applause was accorded the Artcraft production during its presentation at the Studebaker Theater by the specially invited spectators and upon the conclusion of the showing every person present heartily endorsed the film.

Paul Shorey, professor of Greek at the University of Chicago and former exchange professor at Heidelberg, criticised Funkhouser severely. "The suppression of this film," said Mr. Shorey after the private showing, "is an indication of the beginning of Prussian censorship in this country. I shall publicly denounce the major for this action."

Alderman George F. Iliff with Mrs. Iliff watched the picture attentively and upon being asked what he thought of Funkhouser's act remarked: "I think he's crazy."

The Chicago dailies are continuing their attack upon Funkhouser as a result of his decision effecting the Pickford-Artcraft film. The Chicago American in an editorial states that this decision again demonstrates Funkhouser's inability to judge what pictures are fit. In a special article by Joe D. Salkeld, the Daily Journal severely criticised Funkhouser and stated that the picture very carefully follows President Wilson's idea that it is not the German people against whom we have gone to war but the Prussianized government. Mandamus proceedings have been brought against Funkhouser and it is expected that the film will be shown publicly in the near future despite his refusal to withdraw his objection in face of public opinion.

Hamlin Leaves Amusements

Thomas J. Hamlin, editor of Amusements magazine, published in Minneapolis, has resigned from that publication to promote a new booking plan for mid-northwestern exhibitors. Mr. Hamlin founded Amusements three years ago. It will continue to be published under charge of T. E. Mortensen, managing editor and secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

Harry Morey, the Greater Vitagraph star, and Corinne Griffith, who will be featured with him in "Who Goes There?" the Blue Ribbon production now being made from the Chambers novel of the same name, were badly scratched and bruised while making one scene for the picture. They were riding in an automobile, on the hood of which the camera was mounted, and the driver, being unable to see clearly in front of him, drove under a low-hanging tree. The cameraman and his machine were swept off the car completely and the two stars were struck full in their faces by a branch of the tree.

NATIONAL PICTURE EXPOSITION AT CHICAGO (PARTIAL VIEW) NOW DRAWING THOUSANDS EVERY DAY

The big Coliseum at Chicago, where the Republican National Convention, nominating presidential candidates, is always held and where the seventh annual national picture exposition is now drawing thousands of fans every afternoon and evening. In the center, left, is seen the star stand to which players descend from the balcony and are presented to the more or less admiring public.

UNIQUE POLICY ADOPTED

Superpictures Gives New Twist to State Rights Plan—Will Buy Pictures and Sell Them Direct to Exhibitors

Frederick L. Collins, president of Superpictures, Inc., announces this week that the $9,000,000 corporation which he heads has adopted a policy absolutely unique in motion pictures and that Superpictures immediately will proceed to buy the biggest pictures produced and sell them, whenever feasible, direct to the important exhibitors in different territories.

It is an entirely new twist to the state rights plan. It eliminates the exchange and cuts the cost of distribution. Overhead expense in maintaining exchanges often equals twenty-five per cent of the cost of production. By doing away with much of this expense. Superpictures is determined to place itself in a position whereby it can sell at a reasonable price the best photoplays made.

"Productions released by Superpictures will not be merely splendid features, satisfying the spectators," Mr. Collins assures the exhibitors. "They will be more than that: Superpictures in quality as well as in name, sold at a fair price and backed by powerful publicity so that an exhibitor will be positively assured that every Superpicture will be a super-box-office success.

"We do not expect to become fabulously rich in the motion picture business. We are prepared to lose money on our first production. But eventually we will make a fair profit. The man who makes a Superpicture and the exhibitors who show it come first. They will take their profit and we will come last.

"We are ready to buy, manufacture or finance any really big pictures. We'll sell them to big exhibitors, launch huge publicity campaigns and let the exhibitors take the profits.

"We have spent six months trying to find the best way to produce and sell motion pictures of undoubted quality. We tried the program idea. We had nearly a million dollars invested in the securities of program companies. We've owned stock in the 'star' companies. And we've made money.

"However, we are ready to act as a clearing house for any man who owns a production we believe to be of Superpictures quality. We will sell it to the big exhibitors, who are going to be the state rights buyers of the future. We'll put the proper publicity behind it and take a small profit. The exhibitor will make the big money.

"We shall not release more than twelve productions in the first year. After the first year, however, we expect to be in a position to supply the big demand for Superpictures that by that time will have been built up.

"We don't ask the exhibitor to do more than investigate our plan and look at our productions. We know that once he knows what we are doing he will be an eager customer."

Ethel Clayton, World Picture star, is working just now upon a western drama which has not been named. There is no division of opinion among those who have seen Miss Clayton in the frontier apparel of this photoplay that she is quite the most charming feminine creature the ever busted a fractious broncho or roped a runaway steer.

Mary Pickford Starts Ambulance

Having presented an ambulance to the local Red Cross, Mary Pickford is now industriously at work arranging to have a number of the popular photodramatic stars each contribute an ambulance to the Red Cross and maintain it during the time it is in France.

Miss Pickford has already engaged her second ambulance and has written notes to Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, George M. Cohan, Elsie Ferguson, Marguerite Clark, William S. Hart and other prominent stars to induce them each to contribute an ambulance. The entire contribution will be sent to France as one complete unit from the motion picture stars.

The expense not only entails the purchase of the ambulance, but maintenance of it in the service and the Artcraft star feels that if she can purchase and maintain two ambulances, the other prominent stars should do likewise.

Miss Pickford's second ambulance is now in New York and will be sent to France as soon as the donations from other stars are heard from.

Photodramatic stars are as popular in the trenches as they are in America and it will be a unique distinction for the American Red Cross to convey the wounded in the ambulances provided by their screen favorites.

Petrova to Head Company?

Much interest is being manifested in the future plans of Mme. Olga Petrova. Various rumors are current in film circles that Herbert Lubin, who is associated with A. H. Sawyer at 1600 Broadway, New York, has big plans well under way for the formation of a producing organization headed by Petrova herself, to make eight super productions during the year starring the famous Russian emotionalist.

When asked concerning the definite plans of the new company, Mr. Lubin said: "Just now Mme. Petrova is enjoying a well earned rest, after two years of almost ceaseless labor, during which time she has risen to the pinnacle of stardom's heights. Many propositions are being made to her. But she feels that in order to give the best that is in her she would have to be at the head of her own organization, which would allow her to see that every vehicle in which she appears would be the most suitable to exploit her peculiar talents."

ENGINEERS CONVENE

Society of Motion Picture Engineers of America Open Annual Convention—To Determine Permissible Wiggle of Film, Among Other Things

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers of America started their annual convention July 17 at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, with a well attended meeting presided over by President C. F. Jenkins of Washington, D. C.

The work of this body is responsible for practically all the improvements that have brought the art of projection down to the science that has aided so materially in popularizing the screen. To show the number of problems the engineers are struggling with and the scope of their efforts one need but look at the list of knots they will try to untie during their present session. They will attempt to fix the standards for the following:

1. Film movement—in feet per minute.
2. Location of base line on film with respect to marginal perforations.
3. Camera aperture, size and shape.
4. Marking, leading and last end of reels of positive film.
5. Lantern slide mat, size, when used on motion picture screen.
6. Red strip on top of lantern slide.
7. Thumb-mark spot in lower left corner when lantern slide is held so as to be read against a light.
8. Projection lens barrel, outside diameter or diameters.
9. Projector aperture, size and shape, and height above floor.
10. Sprocket dimensions: and size, location and shape of sprocket teeth.
11. Film perforations, form, size and location.
12. Standard 1,000-foot reel, diameter, width, hole, keyway and permissible wabble.
13. Standard rewinder-spindle and film pull on end of a 5-inch lever.
14. Light intensity per unit screen surface.
15. Standard unit screen surface.
16. Standard film carriers.
17. Current controlling and rectifying devices.
18. Gasoline motor-electric generator outfits.

Pictures to Rival Stage Successes

In beginning the making of Charles Frohman successes in motion pictures the Empire All Star Corporation has set about the task with the expectation of making the pictured version of Charles Frohman's greatest successes in every way worthy of the triumphs attained by the same vehicles on the speaking stage.

The stars in the Frohman firmament will lend their histrionic ability to recreating the parts made famous by them and all the vast collection of Frohman stage settings, properties, dramatic works and costumes will be utilized in the forthcoming motion pictures. Likewise the utmost care will be taken in selecting the supporting casts surrounding each star.

As an example of the sincerity of purpose of the Empire corporation in carrying out this last mentioned detail is cited the engagement of the famous and popular player, David Powell, who will play the leading role opposite Miss Ann Murdock in "Outcast," one of the forthcoming Empire pictures. Mr. Powell will be remembered by exhibitors everywhere as a featured player in the company supporting Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance," as leading man for Mary Pickford in "Less Than the Dust," and as the player who perhaps scored heaviest opposite Clara Kimball Young in "The Price She Paid."

"Who's Your Neighbor?"

General Manager Herman Becker of the Master Drama Features, Inc., 1493 Broadway, New York, announces that the state rights to twelve states for "Who's Your Neighbor?" the sociological message to humanity written by Willard Mack and directed by S. Rankin Drew, have been disposed of to a syndicate headed by Franklin E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, and H. O. Martin, formerly general manager for William Clune, who exploited successfully Clune's productions, "Ramona" and "Eyes of the World." The territory acquired by the syndicate consists of California, Washington, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Oregon, Idaho and northern New Jersey.

Negotiations are now being carried on with several big state rights buyers for the sale of the rest of the United States, Canada and the world. Announcement of completed sales will be made shortly.

L-Ko Program for August

With the aid of his assistant directors, J. G. Blystone, director general of L-Ko comedies, has turned out an excellent line of merrymakers for August release through Universal exchanges.

"Blackboard and Blackmail" will be the L-Ko for August 1, featuring Phil Dunham, Lucille Hutton and Myrtle Sterling with Chas. Inslee and Al Forbes playing important supporting roles. The same players, again operating under the direction of Vin Moore, will provide the August 15 release under the title of "Country Lanes and City Lairs."

Noel Smith, directing Gladys Varden, Walter Stevens and Dan Russell, as principals, will use a large force of pretty girls to express "A Hotel Mix-Up," August 8. Several production novelties will be introduced, putting the hotel where the "mix up" takes place, quite beyond the chance of possible duplication.

Two comedies by Dick Smith will find place in the frame-up for next month—"Vamping Reuben's Millions" and "Battered Hearts and Shattered Faces." In these subjects, to be released August 22 and 29, respectively, Eva Novak, Bob McKenzie, Chester Ryckman and Eddie Barry will be principals. They will follow unusual lines in finding the way to laughter, several novel schemes having been devised to surprise the spectator into forgetting the heat.

GOLDWYN GETS FARRAR

Celebrated Grand Opera Star Has Signed to Appear in Goldwyn Pictures Beginning Next Spring —Productions Secured.

News of one of the biggest star scoops that has occurred this year comes to MOTOGRAPHY from authoritative sources in Los Angeles.

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, through its president, Samuel Goldfish, has secured Geraldine Farrar, the celebrated grand opera singer, to appear in Goldwyn pictures beginning next spring. She is at present engaged by the Lasky-Famous Players Company and will work at the latter's studios this summer. News of her engagement by Goldwyn was first published by the Hearst newspapers.

Geraldine Farrar, nightingale of the movies, now with Goldwyn.

The rights for several special productions for the popular prima donna have already been secured. With the standing Goldwyn has already acquired in picture circles it is safe to expect some very unusual productions from the work of this company with the Metropolitan Opera Company star, who has time after time proved that she possesses striking ability as an artist for the screen. Her debut in the silent drama was in "Carmen," which remarkable production stamped her as a photoplay interpreter of the highest rank. She later appeared in "Temptation," "Maria Rosa," and "Joan the Woman."

Geraldine Farrar is added to a wonderful constellation of Goldwyn stars, which already includes Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, the girl on the cover, Jane Cowl, Maxine Elliott, Mary Garden, Robert Harron and Vernon Steele.

Twenty-five Men From Mill City

By J. L. Johnston

A special car over the Milwaukee line brought about twenty-five exhibitors and exchangemen from St. Paul and Minneapolis, Monday morning. Among those in the party were the following:

J. G. Gilosky, Alhambra, St. Paul, president Northwest Exhibitors' Corporation; Clyde Hitchcock, Princess Theater, Minneapolis; Max A. Hoppenrath, New Home, Minneapolis; D. G. Rodgers, Nicollet, Minneapolis; R. E. Bradford, Goldwyn, Minneapolis; C. L. Peavey, Paramount, Minneapolis; A. Engler, Crystal, Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Campbell, Blue Mouse, St. Paul; J. B. Reisman, Dale, St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Greene, Lake Theaters, Minneapolis; Mannie Gottlieb, Consolidated, Minneapolis; J. Schloss, Favorite, Minneapolis; J. George Feinberg and Lew Francis, Theater Equipment Co., Minneapolis; Bert Goldman, Princess, St. Paul; Harry A. Sherman, Sherman Film Corporation, Minneapolis; W. A. Lochren, J. L. Johnston and R. H. Holmgren, Lochren Service, Minneapolis; W. A. Deeth, American, Minneapolis; D. W. Chamberlain, American, Minneapolis; W. True, Princess, Minneapolis; C. E. Vanduzee, Minneapolis; Stanley Smith, Princess, Sioux Falls, S. D.; Newton Davis, Universal, Minneapolis.

The Tragedy of Comedying

Illustrating the hazards taken by Greater Vitagraph comedians before the cameras, John L. Flatow, who worked with Larry Semon in the Big V comedies, has just returned to the Brooklyn studios after eight months in a hospital. Flatow's enthusiasm for his work cost him a broken nose, two broken arms, a few crushed ribs, and other injuries not worth mentioning. His principal worry was to get out of the hospital and he showed his nerve by insisting on resuming work as soon as he reached the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn.

HART WITH ARTCRAFT

First Production by C. Gardner Sullivan, Supervised by Thomas H. Ince—to Produce on West Coast

William S. Hart is now with Artcraft. He will start work on his initial production under the new arrangement within a week. The news also involves the formation of the William S. Hart Producing Company to release its product through Artcraft, adding another big film celebrity to its roster, which includes Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar, Elsie Ferguson, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Cecil B. De Mille.

It was also learned that prepartions are now well under way for the production of the initial Hart-Artcraft photoplay on the West Coast and that studio arrangements have been completed so that actual screening can be commenced promptly. The Hart-Ince-Sullivan combination in the presentation of a film play offers one of the most potent producing units ever conceived. In their respective branches of the industry this star, producer and author rank among the very foremost in the picture world.

"In Slumberland"

A spectacular kiddie feature, "In Slumberland," has been completed for release the last week of this month by Triangle.

Thelma Salter, the seven-year-old actress, is presented as the star of this production. She is supported by Georgie Stone, who will be remembered as the leader of the Triangle Kiddies in several Fine Arts plays. Several hundred children and a large company of professional dancers appear as elves, fairies and gnomes in the fairyland scenes, for which fantastic sets, representing crystal grottoes, huge toadstools, and glittering fairy palaces were devised by Director Irvin Willat, who has also originated some new lighting arrangements to provide the ethereal atmosphere desired for those scenes in which Thelma enters the land of dreams.

Virtually every animal species of Noah's ark is represented in this picture. A snail has one of the most important parts, that of steed for the fairy queen, Gloria Hope. A miniature stage setting was constructed for the episode in which the queen mounts the back of the shell-backed animal. This incident is only one of the photographic feats employed to translate fairyland to pictures.

While the story has a particular appeal for children, it is said to have an equal interest for adults because of its human interest, its beauty of scenic investiture and the acting of child players. The plot centers about the adventures of the young heroine and her infant brother in a dream trip through fairyland.

New Business Manager

Ronald A. Reader, for more than twenty years a friend and business associate of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, has been appointed business manager of the Vitagraph Company, with headquarters at the company's administration building in Brooklyn.

Long before Albert E. Smith thought of motion pictures, he and Mr. Reader were partners in various theatrical ventures, in which both served as actors and promoters, and they also shared equally in the disasters which befell their efforts. It was after one of these failures that Mr. Smith and Mr. Reader became separated for a brief interval, the former continuing his theatrical experiments until they led him into motion pictures, while Mr. Reader went into commercial lines.

However, when the motion picture industry began to get its first "sea legs," as it were, Mr. Smith searched out his former stage-mate and induced him to go into the business. This was eleven years ago and they have been associated in the industry ever since. Mr. Reader left New York to become general European representative of the Vitagraph company and managed the company's plants both in England and in France. In the latter country he was the head of the Vitagraph Compeigne de France, and successively handled the company's development from a small plant in Paris to a second and then a third larger one. He remained in charge of this plant until October, 1916, when he returned to the United States. Since that time he has been closely associated with Mr. Smith at the Brooklyn plant and has been acting in a supervisory capacity.

Boston After Next Convention

The noisiest, jolliest and livest single bunch of delegates at the opening day of the Chicago convention was from Boston. About twenty men were present and ever and anon they raised their voices in an especially written campaign song. They also distributed unique little badges with a bean jar as a pendant, and a classy little booklet in the shape of a bean jar and bound with a brown ribbon, upon which was strung a real bean. The interior of the booklet contained forty to fifty miniature views of Boston and vicinity.

Needless to say, these "Boosters Booming Boston" were out to capture the next National Convention for the tea party town. The climate, location and transportation, the hotels, and convention halls were all given as good reasons for their claim, not to mention the historical New England scenery.

The committee from Boston included delegates Ernest Horstman, president of the Boston league; M. J. Lydon, vice-president; P. F. Lydon, and Delegates Cornell, Deadmun, Goodside, Sprogg, Brundt, Levine, Lourie, Sumerby, Washburn, Wasserman, Mayer, Greggory, Howard and Moscow.

Included in the Boston special were also Black of Maine, Bean of New Hampshire, and Burns of Vermont. It is excusable, of course, for Bean to be boosting for Boston.

ESSAYS FLOOD VITAGRAPH

21,142 Scripts Turned in on Preparedness—Said to Be More Than Any Newspaper Ever Got in Similar Contest.

Twenty-one thousand one hundred and forty-two persons have written essays on "How America Should Prepare" in an effort to obtain the prize of one thousand dollars offered by the Greater Vitagraph Company for the best essay on the subject.

The essay preparedness contest was inaugurated by the Greater Vitagraph Company when "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation" was first released. The contest started on April 9 and ended on July 4. The award will be announced on August 19 if the committee in charge of making the award has time to make a final decision by that time.

Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, U. S. N., retired, is chairman of the committee which will make the award. The other members are General Horatio C. King, the widely known writer; Hudson Maxim, the ammunition expert; Alan R. Hawley, president of the Aero Club of America, and Commodore J. Stuart Blackton of the Greater Vitagraph Company.

One of the rules in making the award is that no person even remotely connected with the Greater Vitagraph Company will be considered as a contestant. Any essays submitted by any person even remotely connected with the corporation will be thrown out.

The 21,142 essays were turned over to the members of the contest committee on July 6. They run in length from two hundred to two thousand words.

These essays have reached the Greater Vitagraph Company from all parts of the world and from many places to which it is impossible to trace the original information that there was such a contest.

Many of them are in foreign languages. Several hundred were received from Great Britain, there are several from Spain, more than two score from France, two from Japan, five from Norway, the same number from Sweden, several hundred from the South American countries and one from far off China which arrived directed to the "Honorable Vitagraph Company."

On account of their excellence two thousand essays which appeal to members of the committee as being most practical are to be forwarded to the authorities at Washington with the suggestion that those in charge of the war preparations for the government should give the suggestions serious consideration.

It also is the intention of the members of the committee to give an honorable mention in making the award to every person whose essay is sent to Washington.

A copy of the essay, the writer of whom receives the thousand dollars in cash, will be sent to every representative newspaper in the country with a request that it be printed in full.

In making the cash award the members of the committee will consider ideas and practical suggestions only. Rhetoric and diction will not be considered. The whole idea of the Greater Vitagraph Company in inaugurating the contest was for the purpose of obtaining the most practical constructive and intelligent article on the vital subject—"How America Should Prepare." In advertising the thousand dollar essay preparedness contest the Greater Vitagraph Company depended almost exclusively upon heralds, which were given away at the theaters where "Womanhood" was presented.

In order to compare this contest with essay contests conducted by representative newspapers, statistics were obtained which show that the greatest number of answers ever received by a daily newspaper to a contest conducted along similar lines were received by an influential daily newspaper published in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, which obtained eight thousand two hundred and three replies.

In less than three months, without newspaper advertising, without any especial promotion the screen produced 21,142 replies or 13,039 more replies than were obtained by the daily newspaper. All of which proves that the screen is the greatest influence of the present day.

Italian Official War Films

A special representative has arrived in New York with two important war films, showing the magnificent fighting of our Ally. The first entitled "The Battle of the Alps," 3,700 feet in length, was shown by Royal Command at Buckingham Palace before His Majesty, King George. At a later date a special matinee was given which was attended by Her Majesty, Queen Alexandra, the Italian Ambassador and other officials.

This film is said to be the most interesting war film yet issued and will no doubt be well booked by leading exhibitors. The second production is entitled "The Battle of the Isonzo" and will bring home to us the tremendous fighting activity of the Italian army. This film is taken entirely on the firing line. Full particulars as to territory may be obtained at the office of John Wild, American representative of Anglo Film Agencies, Limited, London, 347 Fifth avenue, New Work, who is arranging a private showing, the date of which we expect to announce in our next issue.

Commended for School Stand

When Andre Roosevelt, production manager of the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn, put up the bars against motion picture "school" graduates a few weeks ago, his action was based on resentment against the deception that many of these institutions practice on their pupils. That his decision was well founded has been evidenced during the last two weeks by a mass of congratulatory letters.

He has received no less than 300 letters, the greater percentage of which commend him for his action, but there are also a few, apparently from promoters of "schools," who criticize him. He announces, however, that he is more determined than ever to discourage, so far as he can, the exploiting of trusting girls and youths who are lured into giving up their money for an object they never can attain—screen stardom. The following letter, which was written by a woman in Lincoln, Nebraska, is typical of hundreds of others Mr. Roosevelt has received justifying his position:

"Mr. Roosevelt: It was with intense interest that I read your article of June 24 in regard to motion picture 'schools.' Years before the days of motion pictures, when the youth's ambition was for the legitimate or spoken drama, these parasites infested New York and Chicago. But it was left for a producing manager of motion pictures who had fearlessness and moral courage to first voice a protest against them. The producers of motion pictures have advanced, broadened and grown with far greater strides than the legitimate managers ever have, for they have learned the greatest of all powers—'truth.'"

James Aubrey, of Vitagraph Big V Comedies, has resigned from that organization to appear in a series of super-comedies under the management of Arthur N. Smallwood, of the Smallwood Film Company.

Triangle Marches On

NO IMPORTANT CHANGES IN PRODUCTION STAFF—AUGUST RELEASES READY

DURING the past few months Triangle has been quietly "putting its house in order," to quote one of the officials of the organization. The sole purpose of the reorganization, it is stated, has been to so eliminate waste that a greater amount of money may be invested in productions. Contrary to supposition, the producing organization will remain intact except for such minor changes as is deemed advisable in order to raise the standard and increase the power of box office attraction.

"Like all big concerns, Triangle must change constantly to keep pace with the public demands and the advancement of the industry," states an official. "During the past month we have carefully felt the pulse of the box office through reports from each of our exchanges. The purpose of this examination was to determine wherein we were weak and to obtain advice as to gaining new strength. By the reports on each product we are able to ascertain precisely the value of each director, star and scenario writer. These accounts have been in the main gratifying, reflecting credit upon the past achievements of Triangle, which, we believe, have not been eclipsed by any other concern. Whatever changes are made in the producing organization will be, we repeat, for improvement and for that only.

Red Letter Productions of July

"The month of July has been one of the most notable in the history of Triangle. We point to 'The Flame of the Yukon,' produced under the sole direction of Charles Miller from an original story by Monte M. Katterjohn. All concerned in creating this masterpiece are now engaged on others which will prove quite as meritorious.

"'Sudden Jim,' not only one of the most widely read stories of the day but also one of the most convincing pictures of American life, will be released on July 22. It illustrates, as words cannot, our policy to maintain a perfect balance of star, story and production, each of the highest quality obtainable, regardless of expense involved. We guarantee the box office value of this picture.

"'The Sawdust Ring,' a delightful story of circus life by L. V. Jefferson, has just been passed on by our executive board, and we are urging exhibitors to view it in advance that they may advertise it to the full extent justified. Bessie Love in this picture proves a revelation, and the work of the supporting players is scarcely less noteworthy. We do not ask exhibitors to take our guarantee of the merits of this play, for we realize that boasts are the most common counterfeit in the world. We do ask that every manager booking it attend a showing and give it judicious appraisal. In that way he will be prepared to feature it with conviction that patrons will be pleased and the reputation of his theater materially enhanced.

"'In Slumberland,' a kiddie feature starring little Thelma Salter, will be released on the program of July 29. Every assistance has been given Director Irvin Willatt in staging the play with elaborate scenic effects.

"'Borrowed Plumage,' starring Bessie Barriscale, has already been reviewed by the critics in our projecting room. Thus we do not need to waste any recommendation upon it. We are willing to refer exhibitors and fans to these reviews.

Triangle Releases for August

"The stars on the Triangle program for August include Olive Thomas, Louise Glaum, Bessie Barriscale, Bessie Love, William Desmond, Enid Bennett, Wilfred Lucas, Elda Millar, Jack Devereaux and Veta Searl.

Sylvia Breiner, Triangle star, in the circle. Bessie Love in "The Sawdust Ring," and below Enid Bennett in "The Mother Instinct."

"The features for the week of August 5 include 'The Food Gamblers,' a drama that drives home some pertinent truths of present-day conditions. It was produced under the supervision of Allen Dwan, with Wilfred Lucas and Elda Millar in the leading roles. Olive Thomas, star of 'Madcap Madge,' is featured in 'An Even Break,' written and directed by Lambert Hillyer. It is a comedy-drama filled to the brim with the joy-of-living quality that suits the bubbling vivacity of its star. Magnificent settings, depicting Broadway roof gardens and cafes, and a company of more than four hundred people were employed in the production.

"Louise Glaum in a distinctly new type of part will appear on August 12 in 'Golden Rule Kate,' produced under the direction of Reginald Barker, who has created innumerable master productions for Triangle. William Desmond, in 'Master of His Home,' directed by Walter Edwards, shares honors with Miss Glaum

YOU MUST BE SERVED!

AS PRESIDENT of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, I have a million dollar message for the exhibitors of America. It is a million dollar message because my associates and I are spending more than that sum in advance of releasing a picture to win the confidence of the owners and managers of the motion picture theatres in the United States and Canada.

Before forming Goldwyn Pictures Corporation in association with Edgar Selwyn, Archibald Selwyn, Margaret Mayo, Arthur Hopkins, and before surrounding ourselves with a brilliant and talented group of screen and stage factors, all of us now a part of this organization *put ourselves in the places of the nation's exhibitors.

Were we exhibitors, we would not care to be bound by a contract system under which we might get one strong, money-making picture to be followed by three or more poor pictures that would not attract audiences. Therefore, we adopted a flexible, sane policy to meet the wishes of exhibitors everywhere.

WERE we exhibitors, we would want pictures in which the most faithful attention was paid to the value of all stories selected for filming and to the quality of their production. We would want more than a mere star in five or six reels of photography. So we decided to buy only the greatest and most successful plays and books, to engage only the ablest and most capable artists to build and direct our productions, and with these two elements at hand to put into each picture a star of world-wide reputation and fame. Goldwyn therefore engaged Mae Marsh, Mary Garden, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl and Maxine Elliott and soon will announce other stars of equal magnitude.

We knew still another important factor. Were we exhibitors, we would want to see in advance the pictures we were booking for our theaters—not a week or two weeks in advance, but months in advance. We decided, therefore, to complete a minimum of 12 splendid productions and have all of them ready for your inspection before our first release on September 9, 1917.

As an organization Goldwyn has never been in a hurry. Our work began last December. We have worked deliberately and slowly. We did not want factory-made, time-clock pictures—and the result of this decision is that we have completed what we consider the most remarkable pictures ever made in the history of the industry. The million dollars that we have spent we were willing to spend to accomplish the results already attained.

We will release 26 productions during our first year and half of this number will be completed September 1. You will understand from this that we will always be working 6 months ahead of schedule and that we will have all the time we need to make magnificent pictures—productions free of flaws.

And of another thing you may be certain: The Goldwyn policy under which these remarkable productions are to be sold to you calls for an honorable, clean-cut and square relation with the exhibitors of the nation. There is no such thing as a Goldwyn "scrap of paper" or a Goldwyn secret instruction. We have given no orders in print to be countermanded by word of mouth. You may, with safety and confidence, take this organization's word for it that our promises to you will be kept: that we will avoid the exaggerations that have cast so much suspicion on this industry, and that *our business ethics and behavior will be as sound and stable as the currency of our country.

Goldwyn has established its own exchanges in nineteen important film centers in the United States and has, under the direction of Goldwyn Pictures Ltd. of Canada, opened six exchanges in as many cities of the Dominion of Canada. Therefore, you will not have to discuss Goldwyn Pictures with middlemen—you will meet our own representatives in our own offices or in your own theatre.

I wish to warn you with all possible emphasis and sincerity not to sign contracts for any other pictures or forfeit your opportunity to obtain the profit-making Goldwyn Pictures until you have actually seen them or talked with the Goldwyn representatives who are ready to serve you, no matter where you are located.

on the week's program. Alma Rueben, featured in leading roles of 'The Americano' and 'Truthful Tulliver' appears in his support.

"Bessie Love, whom we are tempted to call the 'wonder-girl' after seeing 'The Sawdust Ring,' will reappear on August 19 in 'Wee Lady Betty,' a modern story of Old Erin, produced under the direction of Charles Miller. Enid Bennett in 'They're Off,' directed by Roy Neill, will also appear the week of August 19.

"Bessie Barriscale in an elaborate production, 'Wooden Shoes,' a story of Dutch life, will be a feature of August 26. 'The Jinx Jumper,' an Allan Dwan production with Jack Devereaux and Veta Searl, will be on the same bill.

"Among the stars of September productions are William S. Hart, Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton, Margery Wilson, Bell Bennett and Winifred Allen."

EMPIRE SCHEDULE OUT

Ann Murdock, Julia Sanderson and Olive Tell in New Productions Soon to Be Released Through Mutual Organization

First of special announcements of fall releases through the Mutual Film Corporation comes an outline of the early schedule of "Charles Frohman successes in motion pictures"—the productions of the Empire All Star Corporation's studios in New York.

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual and of the Empire, gives out the titles of a number of the Charles Frohman pictures and the stars to be featured, summarized in the following schedule:

Ann Murdock: "The Beautiful Adventure," "The Imposter," "Outcast."
Julia Sanderson: "The Runaway."
Olive Tell: "Her Sister."

"These stars and plays, chosen from the array of dramatic treasures of Charles Frohman, represent the pick of the Frohman plays in a big list of box office winners which are to be put into Empire-Mutual pictures," said Mr. Freuler.

"These are all plays which have proven themselves in the stage test. They contain the stories that go across. We know because they have gone across. The stars are the stars of the original productions and the casts are largely the original casts throughout.

"The organization of the Empire All Star Corporation has made available for the first time the full value and the full strength of the dramatic institution which Charles Frohman created. The picture plays are being made with the same exacting care and the same artistic supervision which characterized the building of every Charles Frohman success. The studio forces are being given ample time and unlimited facilities for the making of perfect pictures.

"According to present plans the first of the Charles Frohman pictures will be presented early in September. While the Mutual is accepting reservation for that period exact release dates are yet to be decided upon.

"This announcement may be considered merely preliminary to important steps now all under way and soon to be ready for open discussion and publication."

The productions at the Empire studios are now in the hands of Albert Capellani, director of many famous stars, including Clara Kimball Young, and Del Henderson, director of "Outcast," "The Impostor" and others.

Miss Murdock will appear in "The Beautiful Adventure" and "The Imposter," plays that are regarded as certain to receive wide approval from screen patrons.

Among the famous artists to appear with Miss Murdock in "Outcast," is Miss Kathryn Calvert, wife of the late Paul Armstrong, actor and playwright, who is to appear as "Valentine." Miss Calvert is a brilliant actress and one of the most beautiful women of the stage.

Kate Sargentson is another well-known Frohman favorite who will be in Miss Murdock's support, and others named in the cast are Jules Raucourt, Herbert Auling, Richard Hatteras, Reginald Carrington, Zola Tolma, Gertrude Andrews and Frank Goldsmith.

David Powell, the talented player who played last with Clara Kimball Young in "The Price She Paid," will be Miss Murdock's leading man. There will be thirty-six people altogether in "Outcast," certainly the greatest aggregation of high-priced performers so far employed in a single screen production.

Miss Julia Sanderson, who is being stared in "The Runaway," is another famous player of the Frohman coterie.

Miss Sanderson is a Broadway favorite, having appeared in some of the greatest successes of the famous thoroughfare in recent years. "The Runaway" had a long run at the Lyceum Theater and it is considered one of the most adaptable of modern plays for the screen.

Miss Olive Tell, another Frohman find, whose screen appearance in "The Silent Master" was a sensational success, will be starred in that remarkable play, "Her Sister," written by Clyde Fitch and Cosmo Gordon Lennox, playing the part of Eleanor Anderson.

The screen version of "Her Sister" follows the pretty story of one woman's heroism and another woman's perfidy with great fidelity to the original handling. A large and distinguished cast has been engaged for Miss Tell's support and certain success is predicted for the production.

Artcraft to Issue House Organ

At a meeting of the executives of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation last week, it was decided to celebrate the first anniversary of this organization with the initial publication of a house organ to be devoted entirely to the aid of Artcraft exhibitors. The new magazine will be issued twice a month and will contain ideas and suggestions aimed to assist the exhibitor in the exploitation of Artcraft pictures. Various novel departments that will prove particularly welcome to managers have already been decided upon and the first issue will make its appearance next week.

Artcraft Advance is the name of the new publication, and Norman S. Rose, well known in motion picture advertising and publicity circles, has been engaged as its editor. Mr. Rose comes to Artcraft with many years of experience in both newspaper and film exploitation work. As advertising and publicity manager of Triangle he attracted considerable attention for his progressive methods. Prior to that he was eastern manager of a large newspaper syndicate for several years. Several months ago Mr. Rose left Triangle to handle publicity for Historic Features, Inc., presenting the "Christus" production, after which he became director of publicity for Benjamin Chapin's "Lincoln Cycle." He left this company to join Artcraft, and has already commenced work on the first issue of Artcraft Advance.

COMING MUTUALS

Mary Miles Minter in "Melissa of the Hills" Mutual's Lead for July 23—Other Box Office Stimulants

Mary Miles Minter, box office attraction of first magnitude, leads Mutual's schedule for the week of July 23 in "Melissa of the Hills," a five-reel drama laid in the feud belt of Tennessee. Mary plays the role of the "angel daughter" of the circuit rider.

On the same date Mutual will release the first chapter of "The Great Stanley Secret," a two chapter drama. William Russell plays the leading role with Charlotte Burton as his leading woman. The chapter is entitled "The Gypsy's Trust" and is in four reels.

Mary Miles Minter's box office value has risen rapidly as the result of a series of highly successful productions and under the influence of Mutual's aggressive advertising and publicity policy. She has, in "Melissa of the Hills," a typical Minter part which is quite sufficient to convince the increasingly critical picture audience that the show's a good one. Minter has become, in many neighborhoods and communities, a "standing room only" attraction. Exhibitors who are backing their booking with advertising and publicity supplied as part of Mutual service, are reaping a golden harvest with the golden haired little star.

"Melissa of the Hills" contains, besides a thrilling story well told, some moments of high excitement. The feud clans, whose leaders Melissa's father has failed to pacify, stage a most realistic battle among the mountains, a hair-raising scene.

"Melissa of the Hills" follows "Periwinkle," which was laid in a life saving station on the Pacific coast, a decided contrast from her new release. The production was made by the American Film Company, Inc., under the direction of James Kirkwood.

"The Great Stanley Secret" is in eight reels—two four-reel chapters. It is a thrilling drama of intrigue and love, with the popular "Big Bill" Russell in the leading role. The first episode opens with a railroad wreck scene of great realism and pretentious proportions and action is fast and snappy. The famous Stanley jewel, a family heirloom, is stolen from the neck of the tiny heir to the earldom, whose father and mother are both killed in the wreck and the action of the production is based upon the efforts of a selfish cousin and his accomplices to get the gem from the youngster, who has come under the protection of a gypsy chieftain.

Two comedies will be released on the schedule of July 23, "A Match in Quarantine," a one-reel LaSalle on July 24, and "Red, White and Blew," a one-reel Cub featuring George Ovey which is scheduled for the screen on July 26.

Mutual Tours Around the World, Gaumont's one-reel travel picture, is released July 24. It takes the audience to Kairawan, sacred city of Tunisia, Prague, the ancient capitol of Bohemia and to the "Dauphines," a beauty spot of southeastern France. Reel Life, the weekly film magazine, released July 25, carries the following subjects: "Juveniles Craftsmen," "A Dangerous Eagle Hunt," "Pedigreed Eggs," "The National Sylvian Theater," the first government owned theater in America, and animated cartoons from Life. Mutual Weekly, the news reel, is released July 25. It contains current events up to within a few hours of release date.

Webb and Koch Support Miss Glaum

Some weired and fantastic settings are being used this week at Triangle's Culver City studio by Director Walter Edwards for the next offering of Miss Louise Glaum. Several important photoplay personages have been cast to support Miss Glaum. George Webb has been assigned the leading male role, and Hugo B. Koch will appear as the villain. Others in the cast include Thomas Guise, Lee Hill and Dorcas Matthews. The story, which is by Monte M. Katterjohn, is said to be the best afforded Miss Glaum since "The Wolf Woman," and the Triangle siren has announced that she will introduce some gowns which for bizarre effect will out vampire any of her previous sartorial creations. Miss Glaum's gowns, which have attracted attention in the most exclusive fashion centers, are originated and designed by Mon. Randall, the artist.

Gail Kane is at work on "Unafraid," under the direction of Henry King. The American has engaged Lewis J. Cody, of well-known talent, to play across from Gail.

Convention Sessions

Annex at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, July 16. President Lee A. Ochs called the meeting to order. There were about 150 delegates present representing more than 30 different states. Many more arrived for the later sessions.

A committee on credentials was arranged for and President Ochs made some opening remarks, pleading for harmony among all the exhibitors and declaring the important business of the convention to be the vital questions to come up and not the election of officials for the coming year.

The first matter to come before the convention was the matter of recognition of the various state delegations as members in good standing of the convention. In a storm of remarks the by-laws of the League were referred to and interpreted by Vice-President A. P. Tugwell of California to give a state local 30 days' grace after the convention in which to pay their dues in order to be in good standing in the convention. The chair ruled that in order to be entitled to a vote each state local must have paid its dues to the National League on or before 30 days preceding the convention.

This brought forth an appeal from the decision of the chair. Vice-President Tugwell took charge of the meeting and a roll call of the states was begun to determine whether or not the ruling of President Ochs should stand. Those supporting him, and the number of votes represented by each were the following:

Illinois, 25; Iowa, 6; Minnesota, 18; Mississippi, 8; Massachusetts, 9; Maine, 7; North Dakota, 8. Total, 79.

The states voting against Mr. Ochs—not to accept his ruling in the matter of credentials—were the following:

California, 6; Indiana, 17; Maryland, 7; Kansas, 6; Michigan, 10; North Carolina, 8; Missouri, 9; New York, 30. Total, 93.

The roll call was interesting as it revealed at the outset how the delegates lined up in supporting the various presidential candidates. The fact that Candidate David Rodgers' state voted with Ochs was said to be another evidence that Minnesota's candidate would in the end withdraw in favor of Mr. Ochs and thus endeavor to swing enough votes to re-elect the latter.

The roll call was, however, never completed as in the storm Mr. Rodgers introduced an amendment to the effect that all states "with proper credentials" be admitted to the convention. This amendment was carried and then President Ochs declared a recess till 8:30 in the evening, the interim to be used to allow the atmosphere to clear and to determine what "proper credentials" were.

The Second Session

In the session Monday evening a good deal of time was lost wrangling over a resolution introduced by Eugene Clark of Mississippi to suspend Section 1, Article 4 of the by-laws, and grant the chair the power to appoint a committee of seven to pass upon credentials of delegates to the convention. When the misunderstanding was finally cleared up the roll call showed 192 for the motion and 15 against it.

While the vote was being taken Charles Pettijohn of Indiana, gained the floor and issued an eloquent warning in which he said that certain influential delegates present were going to withdraw from the convention unless it was carried on in a fair, upright and honest manner. Quite a number, he said, were considering bolting.

After some discussion Mr. Ochs proceeded to name the following on the credentials committee: Thomas Furniss, Minnesota, chairman; E. H. Horstmann, Massachusetts; John Frundt, Illinois; E. J. Fisher, Washington; H. Charles Hespe, New Jersey; D. W. Chamberlain, North Dakota; and L. H. O'Donnell, Indiana.

A recess was taken while the committee left to make its report. After staying out an hour or so it returned and urged that Washington and Maryland each be given eight votes instead of seven. The cases of Illinois and California were referred to the committee on grievances where their status was to be settled.

A motion to accept the committee's report was accepted without a dissenting voice, and from then on the rest of the evening was consumed by the President in appointing the following committees:

National Committees

Pledge Support to President

Before adjournment a resolution presented by William Isenberg of Mississippi was unanimously adopted by the convention. It read:

Whereas, the motion picture industry has been signally honored by the President of the United States, and other officials of the government in their publicly expressed recognition of the inestimable patriotic service which the exhibitors have rendered by dedicating their theaters to every purpose calculated to aid the government;

Resolved, that this Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, in convention assembled, pledge itself and every member to the full, unselfish and untiring support of the government of the United States in the promulgation of the spirit of patriotism and the undying principles of true Americanism.

Beadell with Allen

Ben W. Beadell, a veteran in the picture game, has been appointed special representative for the Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation, of Chicago, according to announcement by Fred C. Aitken, general manager of the Allen company. Everyone in the film game knows Mr. Beadell, for years Chicago representative for the Edison Company and later a representative of the Essanay.

His long experience in the motion picture industry, coupled with the host of friends he has made, will prove him to be a valuable man for the new concern. Mr. Beadell expected to become active immediately in behalf of William N. Selig's "The Garden of Allah." The Edmund M. Allen company own territorial rights for eight states for the Selig pictureplay and opens at the Colonial Theater, Chicago, on July 22.

Paralta Does Much in Fourteen Weeks

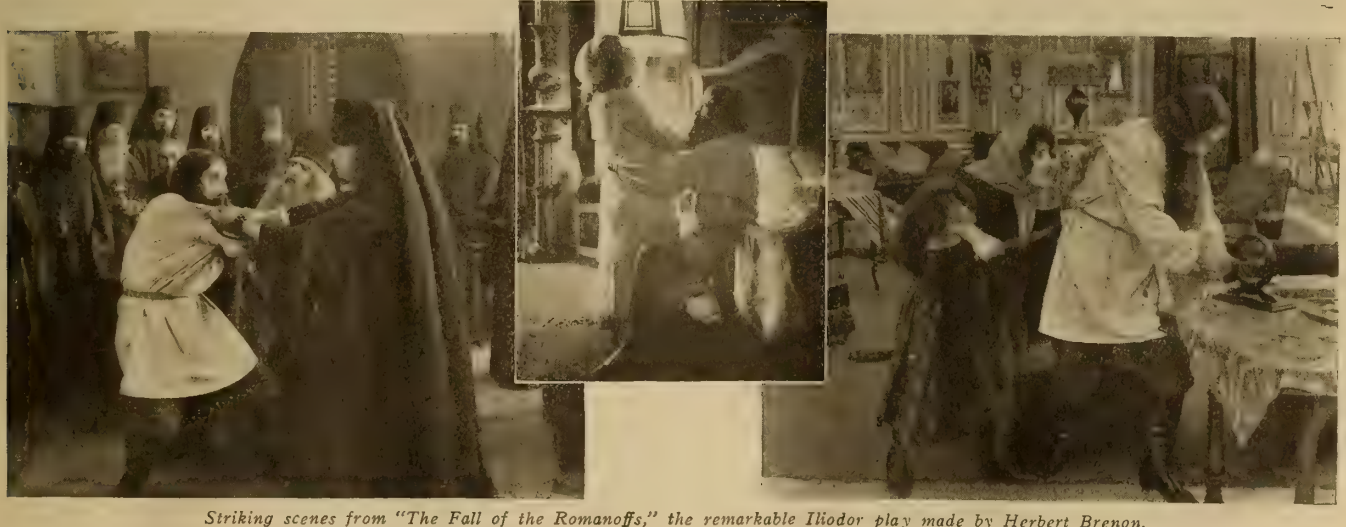
In but fourteen weeks, Paralta has been organized as a corporation; has itself organized two producing corporations; has established a large studio and producing staff at Hollywood; has already turned out two big star feature pictures; and has affiliated itself with one of the largest distributing interests in the country.

The two big Paralta pictures finished are J. Warren Kerrigan in Peter B. Kyne's sensational war and love story, "A Man's Man," and Bessie Barriscale in Grace Miller White's emotional love romance, "Rose O' Paradise." Both these productions are now in the hands of an editing board and cutters and will be released through Triangle in a short time. In the meantime Mr. Kerrigan and Miss Barriscale are at work on new productions.

No announcements made to the trade in late years have attracted more attention that the special series of advertisements recently published by Paralta, in which they set forth the principles of their new system of booking.

This plan has not yet been made known to the trade in detail but in a very short time a complete explanation of its principles and workings will be published in the form of a little book called "The Paralta Plan."



The announcement that Paralta has arranged with Triangle to distribute the Kerrigan and Barriscale productions was a marked surprise to the trade, as it was believed that it was the intention of the Paralta Company to establish an entirely independent system of distribution.

While this proposition had been considered, such a plan had never been definitely decided upon.

The Paralta Plan will be followed by Triangle in the distribution or sale of Paralta Plays. This plan gives to an exhibitor exclusive control of a specific exhibiting district and other advantages which will have a very material influence in the increase of its profits.

Buys "Who's Your Neighbor?"

From operating in two states to buying a picture for one half of the U. S. A. is some stride, yet that is precisely what F. E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, did when he purchased twelve states, namely California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Montana, Arizona, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, the City of El Paso, Texas, and New Jersey, from the Overland Film Company, Samuel Krelberg, president, selling agents for the Master Drama Features, Inc., for "Who's Your Neighbor?" This sudden expansion of Mr. Backer's activities was occasioned by the unusual possibilities which he saw in this feature from the moment it was screened.

Striking scenes from "The Fall of the Romanoffs," the remarkable Iliodor play made by Herbert Brenon.

King Bee Film Executive

Among the new generation of executive factors, a place of importance must be assigned to L. L. Hiller, treasurer of the King Bee Films Corporation. The stability and the progress of this young company, due in no small measure to Mr. Hiller's wise and tactful administration, clearly mark him out for the greatest possibilities of success in the film world. In these times there is scarcely a definable limit to the achievements of a shrewd, clever, reliable film man so well ensconsed in the game as "L. L. H."

Mr. Hiller's rise to the film fame has been rapid but meritorious, as well as laborious. Prior to 1914 he had been identified with commercial and banking pursuits in Pittsburgh; but in that year he succumbed to the "picture lure" and engineered a simultaneous three theater picture show at the Grand Central Palace. His success in this venture whetted his appetite. With Jacob Wilk he next founded The Authors' Associated Agency, for handling picture scenarios. The growth of this enterprise led to an expansion of his film activities, and the formation of Hiller & Wilk, Inc., a great firm of state right brokers. Next, on the foundation of the King Bee Films Corporation, Mr. Hiller was unanimously chosen by his associates in that enterprise to fill the office of treasurer—never a sinecure in a film company, but in this instance, a job demanding sound business principles in its occupant—for the shrewd men behind "King Bee" have the determination and the opportunity to make it one of the greatest film concerns in the world. So., its treasurer must be a man of keen commercial acumen and experience.

Mr. Hiller, being in the early thirties, has the better part of his career in front of him. He is very much liked by all those in daily association with him and popular in the industry, two important factors in motion picture success.

Holmes Serial Money Getter

Helen Holmes in "The Railroad Raiders" has been one of the big money getters of the motion picture business. The last episode of the fifteen-chapter Signal-Mutual photonovel was released July 16 and with its release a new record has been set for box office receipts, although at this time it is impossible to estimate exactly what the total has been. It was conservatively estimated at the completion of the last Holmes serial that $5,000,000 had been spent by the American public, in nickels and dimes, to see Helen in photonovels. There is no doubt but that "The Raiders" will break the record of either of her preceding productions.

Exhibitors everywhere are working out unique stunts to help make "The Raiders" a big drawing card. R. C. Stueve, manager of the Orpheum Theater at Canton, Ohio, ran a banner announcing "The Railroad Raiders" clear across the entrance to his theater and erected "Stop-Look-Listen" cross boards at both sides of the lobby. Below the signs he placed his three sheets picturing scenes from the episode which he is exploiting. Every week, on the day that "The Raiders" was shown, the "Stop-Look-Listen" signs went up. He found it most effective advertising.

A. R. Kremer of Alexandria, Nebraska, one of the oldest showmen in the state, recently wrote the Mutual Film Corporation a flattering appreciation of Helen Holmes, in the course of which he said: "I must say, gentlemen, that we have had a nice business on all the Helen Holmes productions and we are sorry that you haven't another series of this nature to offer us."

Universal Announces Schedule

In addition to "The Double Standard," a Butterfly Picture which will be ready July 23, Universal will issue eighteen reels of combined drama, comedy and current events, including the latest episode of "The Gray Ghost," for the week of July 23.

Tuesday, July 24, "A Soldier of the Legion," a Gold Seal thriller with an interesting comedy setting, will be released. On the same date, "Seeing Things," a Nestor comedy, written by Fred Palmer and directed by Roy Clements, will be released, featuring Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. Taking a presumably haunted house as a setting, a diverting tale has been worked out to the accompaniment of many laughs.

"The Sign of the Cucumber," an L-Ko in two reels, is the offering for Wednesday, July 25. A jumble of mistaken identities features the misadventures of a desperate safe-cracker who descends upon a peaceful hamlet to acquire the local bank funds. Tom Delmar, Bob McKenzie and Eva Novak succeed in extracting every bit of humor out of their respective roles. The 82nd issue of the Animated Weekly will also be released on the same date, showing the latest current events in pictorial form.

Mary Fuller will be starred in "The Beautiful Impostor," released Thursday, July 26, in which she is capably supported by Clara Beyers, Nellie Slattery and John Walker.

A Joker comedy entitled, "Canning the Cannibal King," and featuring William Franey, will be shown on the same date with the Mary Fuller feature.

Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber are the featured players in "Caught in the Act," a Victor comedy-drama, scheduled for release Friday, July 27.

A unique issue of the Universal Screen Magazine will be released on the same. This deals with a variety of subjects, including pictures of the only tea farm in the United States and a recent effort to reduce the cost of footwear by utilizing snake skins in the manufacture of shoes.

On Saturday, July 28, the eleventh number of Universal Current Events will be released, together with a Powers Educational and a Powers Comedy Cartoon. "The Soubrette," a Joker comedy, featuring Gale Henry and Milton Sims, completes the week's offerings.

Outside of Greater New York, the fifth episode of "The Gray Ghost," will be shown during the week. This episode is entitled "Plunder," and features Eddie Polo, Harry Carter, Priscilla Dean and Emory Johnson.

NEW FAIRBANKS FILM

"Down to Earth," Written by Star Himself for August 12 Release. Story Replete with Fairbanks Fun

The next production to be released by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation will be a new Douglas Fairbanks comedy entitled, "Down to Earth." The story for this play was written by the versatile Douglas himself and is replete with typical Fairbanks humor, optimism and philosophy. Under the direction of John Emerson the new film is now rapidly nearing completion at the Lasky studio in California and August 12 is the date announced for its release by Artcraft.

Scenarioized by clever little Anita Loos, who has become an important contributing factor to the remarkable success of the new Fairbanks organization, the photoplay tells of a typical American youth whose "wanderlust" and ideas of living close to nature are not in accord with the views of life assumed by his sweetheart, an ambitious society bud. Bridge parties, matinee dances, tea parties and sumptuous dinners are the important items in the pretty girl's social career and these occupy too much of her time for wandering amidst God's country in the great outdoors. How the persistent youth takes her away from her surroundings and wins her over to his way of thinking despite herself, is said to offer one of the most amusing tonics the screen has yet displayed. Various different climes are visited and many surprises of typical Fairbanks style are promised, ranging in variety from doing to a handstand on a mountain precipice 8,000 feet above sea level to teaching a hippopotamus the famous Fairbanks smile. In addition to its other merits, "Down to Earth" is announced as the most lavishly staged photoplay in which the popular star has ever appeared.

Eugene O'Brien New Leading Man

Mary Pickford's leading man in her newest Artcraft picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," is Eugene O'Brien, the popular young actor whose wide stage and screen experiences and handsome appearance makes him an ideal selection for this honor. On the speaking stage Mr. O'Brien appeared with such well known favorites as Elsie Janis, Ethel Barrymore, Margaret Illington, Fritzi Scheff and others of equal standing in the theatrical profession. In motion pictures his most notable portrayals were those evidenced in Famous Players productions in which he created countrywide attention for his exceptional work. The new Pickford-Artcraft picture disclosses him in the well known character of Adam Ladd, Rebecca's benefactor.

"Parentage" Breaks Records

New Yorkers and Chicagoans have unqualifiedly endorsed "Parentage," the thought film produced by Hobart Henley and presented to the world by Frank J. Seng, via the state rights market.

On Sunday, July 8, this unusual production had its premiere at the Rialto Theater, New York, and played to more people than any feature attraction has ever drawn into that temple of the picture art.

Exhibitors and film buyers are familiar with Mr. Seng's startling declaration that "Parentage" is not a $2.00 picture; also with his reasons for selecting the Rialto Theater of New York in preference to exploiting Hobart Henley's entertaining message of home life environment in a "dark" legitimate house.

Fairbanks Decides on Schedule

Douglas Fairbanks gives considerable thought to what is commonly termed "the pulse of the public." He believes by combining a good story with a striking characterization, it will be more to the advantage of the Douglas Fairbanks Picture Corporation than simply exploiting his personality and sacrificing the story and production.

As the result of months of patient investigation he, with Director General John Emerson, have decided on a production schedule, which includes four distinct types of screen plays. It is his intention to start with a farce of the "In Again—Out Again" variety, followed by a light comedy, an essay and a romantic comedy-drama. In this manner, according to Douglas, the public will not have a chance to tire of any one of his selected kinds of stories, because each release will be different and spaced at such intervals that they are bound to prove tremendous successes.

FILMS FOR YOUNGSTERS

National Board of Review Selects Pictures from Recent Releases Which Will Interest and Please Your Youthful Patrons

The following is a list of films selected for children by the National Board during the past month. Those interested in providing programs for children may select from these lists the pictures especially suited for the particular group of children who are to see them. As the National Board reviews for the children of the entire country, the needs of any particular group cannot be considered. That must be left to those who know the needs of the particular group for whom programs are to be provided.

Barker Remains with Triangle

Reginald Barker, who has directed some of the finest plays put out by Triangle since its organization, announced this week that he will remain at the Culver City studios under the new organization.

He has been enjoying a short vacation since completing a new production in which Louise Glaum is starred. It has not yet been determined which star he will direct in the future.

in addition to hundreds of extra men. The soldiers came from Fort Totten and Fort Hamilton, and included a battery from the Ninth Coast Artillery.

The battle opened on the morning of July 4 and to reach there the members of the First U. S. Cavalry rode all day Tuesday through a driving rain. They covered 48 miles in the day, but when they arrived the men were soaked. They did not mind it, however, because they, like their commanders, had entered into the adventure as part of their training for foreign service. The army officers seized this opportunity to give their men, many of whom were recruits, actual experience in trench warfare and battle conditions under fire.

Edward Earle, who is playing the feature role, with Betty Howe in the picture, was called upon to operate a Lewis machine gun during the taking of scenes and out of 100 shots scored 44 perfect hits. His first shot scored a bull's eye. It was the first time Mr. Earle had operated a machine and he was concerned with a shoulder bruise when several of the regulars, coming up to congratulate him on his marksmanship, told him for the first time of his remarkable score.

Wesley Ruggles, who is directing the picture, spared no expense in making the battle scenes of "For France," although they will be incidental to the main theme of the story.

An instance of actual perils that attended the making of the battle scenes occurred when Andre Roosevelt was escorting a bank representative, who carried a satchel with the company's payroll of $15,000 around the battlefield. They were caught between the fires of the opposing armies and, as real bullets were being used, Roosevelt and his companion were forced to throw themselves to the ground to escape being hit.

Although thousands of rounds of ammunition were fired during the ten days the battle scenes were in the making, Mr. Roosevelt announced upon his return to the studio late last week that not a single casualty had occurred.

"Corporal Vic" Gives Gold Away

Victor Smith, former studio manager of Greater Vitagraph, and brother of Albert E. Smith, president of the Blue Ribbon Company, has recently had a corporal's commission conferred upon him in recognition of service rendered at the Plattsburg training camp.

When Mr. Smith's former associates at the Vitagraph studio became aware of his new appointment, a committee headed by Earle Williams delegated Mrs. Victor Smith to bear a testimonial to Plattsburg.

After a consultation the committee selected as an appropriate offering a pair of field glasses and a handwrought cabinet in the bottom drawer of which was placed $400 in $20 gold pieces.

"Corporal Vic" intends to contribute the $400 to a French charitable organization which cares for the people in the stricken districts of France.

Real Bullets Used in "For France"

For ten days, a large section of Long Island, in the vicinity of Huntington and Center Port, was under actual war conditions, the battle of the Marne being reproduced by the Vitagraph company for use in a forthcoming Blue Ribbon feature, "For France."

Nearly 400 U. S. Regulars, including cavalry, infantry and artillerymen, were used in the battle scenes

METRO ANNOUNCES PLANS

Will Inaugurate Its Star Series August 27—President Rowland Positive Change Will Bring Exhibitors More Money

"Metro begins its new picture activities with the week of August 27, and has selected as its picture slogan these words: 'At a price the exhibitor can afford to pay.' Richard A. Rowland, president of the corporation, recently made the following announcement in connection with the change of policy:

"Metro's new plans are made in response to the demands of the exhibitors themselves. We have received in the last three months many thousands of communications, many voluntary, and many in reply to requests for information regarding the drawing power of stars, relative to the type of attractions desired, and the prime necessities for box office attractions.

"Acting on our own judgment as the result of our successful experience in the picture business, plus the expressed business judgment of the exhibitors, Metro has raised its standard of pictures to a point where its regular productions now equal its best productions of a year ago.

"Our belief is that the box office star in big, satisfying productions, made at a minimum of cost and marketed with efficiency, makes the best box office attractions. We, therefore, are confining ourselves to those stars of proved box office value in the highest type of pictures. It is true that productions of this kind cost more than the ordinary kind of pictures, but Metro is not going to use the star series plan as an excuse for charging exorbitant prices. Prices will be fixed in accord with the drawing power of the star in any territory. All we ask of the exhibitor is to compare the schedule of the last six months with the sechdule of the coming six months, and see whether the stars who are to play at his theater will not make him infinitely more money than he has been making. Out of our series the exhibitor can pick fifty-two pictures, and can have a better business proposition than he has ever had before. By using only stars of known drawing power, and picking them by star series, we are enabled to present better pictures. We have beaten the ordinary program system where there is always a limit as to the cost of productions. With the new plan the exhibitor pays nothing that will not make him money, and he pays only enough more to cover the extra cost of production."

Finds Film Business Good

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., accompanied by Mrs. Hutchinson, arrived in Chicago today, completing a 5,000-mile motor drive to and from the East without mishap or unpleasant adventure. They were absent from Chicago three weeks.

Personal investigation from Maryland to Maine and through the states this side lead Mr. Hutchinson to believe that the film business is in splendid health—the nation's fiscal condition considered from all angles. He found feature pictures booking readily, extensively and steadily and box-offices piling up admissions.

"I found 'Billy' Russell giving William Hart stiff competition in some quarters, while in others, Douglas Fairbanks was looking to his laurels," said Mr. Hutchinson, on arrival at his office. "I believe the greatest gains in popularity may be credited to our features starring Mr. Russell.

"Mary Miles Minter, of course, is keeping her pace, and even gaining a bit, but of the women stars Gail Kane at the moment should have the honors of winning most business. Miss Kane is very popular in the East, where she is well known from her past stage and screen performances. All along the line, however, our interests are booming and gratifying in results obtained."

Mr. Hutchinson will depart in a few days for an inspection of his large picture holdings in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles.

Brenon His Own Worst Critic

Now that "The Lone Wolf" has developed into such a success at the Broadway Theater, New York, and the Studebaker in Chicago, the attaches of the Broadway are remarking on the fact that since the production opened its run on July 1 Herbert Brenon, the producer, has not missed a single evening performance. He is present from start to finish and may be found in any part of house from top gallery to stage box. For the first few nights this might be explained by the enthusiasm of any producer over a success for which he had been responsible, but now that the picture is in its third week a deeper purpose in the director's faithful attendance is revealed.

He attends every performance to study the picture and to hear criticisms of all kinds. His ramblings over all portions of the theater enable him to hear different opinions, from those of the gallery god to that of the rival producer. Even remarks passed by ushers are not passed by lightly. As a result quite a number of valuable changes have been made since "The Lone Wolf" has been running at the Broadway and the picture as it stands today is superior in many ways to the print which was praised so lavishly by the first night contingent.

Capellani Directing Ann Murdock

An error was made by the publicity department of the Empire All Star Corporation in announcing that Director Albert Capellani was engaged in directing the productions in which Julia Sanderson is being starred. Mr. Capellani is directing Ann Murdock and not Julia Sanderson. Dell Anderson is supervising the Julia Sanderson Pictures. Both directors are staging their respective pictures in the Glendale studios of the Empire All Star Corporation and both the Murdock and Sanderson features, based on Charles Frohman Successes, will be released through Mutual Exchanges.

The big studios of the Empire Corporation are a perfect hive of industry these days as plays featuring Ann Murdock, Julia Sanderson and Olive Tell are in course of production on the stages of the Glendale plant, and hundreds of players are constantly passing to and fro.

The new World-Picture Brady-Made in which the juvenile actress Madge Evans is to make her first appearance as a star, has had its title changed. It was produced as "Jerry-for-Short," but will be known to the general public as "The Little Duchess," and will be published August 20. The diminutive heroine is the lost heiress to a Dukedom, discovered by her grandfather's agents in a little American circus and carried over seas to the family castle.

A Year of Revolutions

By Lewis J. Selznick.

This has been a year of revolutions.

When the Exhibitors' League Convention met last year, Nicholas was Czar of Russia, Constantine king of Greece, and China a republic. The United States was preparing to elect a president with the slogan "He kept us out of war."

Today Russia is a republic, Constantine an exile, and China has drifted back to absolute monarchy, while this country is straining every nerve to support the war program of the President it elected for his peace record.

One year ago practically every important moving picture produced was distributed as part of a program. Today a one-armed man can count the programs on his fingers, even if some are amputated.

So much for open booking. It has become so generally accepted as the only fair and logical method of distribution that I mention it only as an example of the revolutionary trend of the times.

Producer Must Be Free

Following this emancipation of the exhibitor, the next logical step was the emancipation of the producer. A year ago any one who wanted to make a picture, no matter how big his ideas or how much capital he had back of him, was virtually compelled first to make terms with one of the very few organizations which possessed distributing facilities. This was a natural outcome of the program domination. The man behind the programs did not want to face this kind of competition. And moreover, the states' rights field was very uncertain and chaotic. It was impossible to pay a fair price for rights to a certain territory when the most of the exhibitors in that territory were tied down to the program. When the grip of the program was loosened it enabled the enterprising buyer of states' rights to offer tempting inducements to independent producers to turn out high class pictures, and spend upon them more money than the program manufacturers could afford to spend on single productions.

This was the origin of the open door policy which I have put into effect in my system of exchanges. With distributing centers in every section of the country I was able to accept for any or all states such productions as came up to my requirements. In my New York exchange, alone, I have taken on many features in the last few weeks. No man with ideas and capital need now fear to embark in the business of producing, for ample means have been provided to reach the market.

One of the most significant and progressive events resulting from these radical changes in the general system of releasing pictures is the formation of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit. I believe the most important word in the name of this organization is "First." My hat is off to S. L. Rothapfel, T. L. Tally, and the other exhibitors who have had the energy and foresight to embark upon this enterprise, the vast possibilities of which are shown by the ease with which it closed the million dollar contract with Charlie Chaplin. I regard the fact that the Circuit turned over the rights for its first picture, "On Trial," to my New York and Chicago exchanges for distribution in their territory, as one of the highest compliments that could possibly be paid to my organization.

A quieter revolution, because it has taken place in the executive office of the leading producers, is the change of attitude toward the star system. The system is all right, and the reason why, a year ago, producers were bewailing the big salaries demanded by and obtained by stars, was that the producers did not know how to get the value out of their headliners. The wail died out when the employers of these stars abandoned their program distribution, and began selling pictures for what they were worth, and not at a fixed price per dozen.

Value of Stars to Exhibitors

The value of a star can be estimated exactly by the result upon the box office when the exhibitor places a banner in front of his house bearing the name of the star. The exhibitor knows what he can afford to pay for pictures in which that star appears, and the producer shares profits with him accordingly. The star's salary increases or decreases in exact proportion to the box office results. The producer who does not know how to maintain the necessary adjustment is the only one who complains about the star system. That does not make the system wrong.

As for the future, I believe the changes and readjustments which must constantly take place in any business which is not infected with dry rot, will be influenced largely by the exhibitors, who are just beginning to learn that they can get just the kind of attractions they want, at mutually fair prices. The exhibitor of today is a different man from the exhibitor of a year or two ago, simply because his emancipation not only has made it possible for him to do his own thinking, but has made it absolutely necessary.

I am confident that the days of violent revolution are pretty well ended, and we now are about to embark upon a period of protracted peace and increased prosperity for the three branches of the industry—production, distribution, exhibition.

New Bushman-Bayne Play

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne have begun work on a new seven-reel Metro wonderplay de luxe under the direction of Edwin Carewe. Francis X. Bushman has the part of James VanDyke Moore, with a page in the blue book of New York, but of a type totally unlike the popular conception of a New York society man, for Moore can fight, he can shoot, and he is every inch a type of man that has made the west what it is today. The scene of the story is laid in Red Gulch, Arizona, where the silver mines are located.

Beverly Bayne, who co-stars with Mr. Bushman, finds in the role of Beverly Anderson an opportunity that she has never had in any of her previous screen appearances. The majority of the scenes are taken in the open, for "The Compact" is a big open-air story in which the popular co-stars will be seen in roles that will not only hold their old admirers but will win for them many new ones.

Billy West as an Inventor

Part of the plot of King Bee's seventh comedy, "The Genius," in which Billy West, the famous young comedian, is starred, concerns itself with an invention for combatting the submarine menace now afflicting Europe. The mechanical parts of the comedy, dealing with this invention are said to contain a surprise or two.

Star Re-Signs With World

Kitty Gordon has signed a new contract with World-Pictures Brady-Made covering a full year from the current month. The present arrangement was made under an option held by the World Corporation when Miss Gordon was "signed up" six months ago for three pictures to be completed within that space.

Kitty Gordon.

In that document was a clause giving the company the privilege of calling upon the actress for her services for twelve months longer at a specified salary, and it is this proviso that has been taken up. The three picture plays already completed with Miss Gordon as star are "Forget-Me-Not," "The Beloved Adventuress," and "The Divine Sacrifice," the one last mentioned not having been published as yet.

Director General William A. Brady, in referring to the renewal of business association with Miss Gordon, said to a reporter:

The improvement of this actress in her work upon the screen is one of the most astonishing examples of artistic development I have seen in all my experience as a producing manager in the speaking theater and the silent drama. To tell the plain truth, I was not prepared beforehand to look for any specially vivid acting gifts on the part of Miss Gordon.

In the first place, the greater part of her stage reputation had been gained in musical comedy, which rarely uncovers brilliant acting talent among its women players. In the second, the critics had raved far more about Kitty Gordon's beauty and grace than her histrionic powers, and so I was inclined to rely almost exclusively upon her physical qualities to win popularity in the film drama.

But the actress had not proceeded very far upon "Forget-Me-Not" when it became apparent to the practiced eye that she possessed the vital spark in far greater intensity than anyone had given her credit for, and when it came to the "big" scene, I applied the bellows, with the effect that the spark blazed up.

By applying the bellows I mean that I raved and roared at Miss Gordon until she was on the verge of genuine hysterics, and the manner in which she pitched into the scene was in the nature of a revelation even to the three or four "old timers" who happened to be in the studio at the moment.

Of course, there is nothing new about this plan of waking up latent talent. It is as old as stage direction, so I am not metaphorically patting myself on the back in narrating the occurrence, which goes to indicate that we might possibly discover considerably more acting ability than comes to the surface if we were to dig deeper for it than we do.

Exhibitor Tells Why He Signs

On a recent trip to New York City John H. Kunsky, Michigan's foremost motion picture exhibitor, visited by invitation the Goldwyn Studios at Fort Lee, N. J., and after watching four of the Goldwyn productions, which at that time were unassembled and untitled, he signed a contract for the entire year's output of the new company for his Detroit chain of theaters.

In relating his reasons for aligning himself with the new productions Mr. Kunsky is quoted as follows in a Detroit newspaper:

I saw some of the Goldwyn Pictures in New York City and I want to tell you they are fine, good stories, excellent photography and people who know how to act. If the future pictures are as good as those I have already seen, and I am sure they will be, I certainly will be more than pleased with my franchise.

A. I. Shapiro, Detroit manager for Goldwyn, representing the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, helped consummate the deal whereby Mr. Kunsky becomes the first-run Goldwyn exhibitor in Detroit.

King Bee Sells Middle States

King Bee is selling more and more territory for its Billy West comedies. The Standard Film Corporation of 1305 Walnut street, Kansas City, has contracted for the output of these pictures for the Middle Western states. R. C. Cropper, of the Standard Company, is projecting a tremendous advertising campaign for the comedies in the territory.

Two-Part Mutual Photodrama

William Russell appears in a most sensational role in "The Great Stanley Secret," a two chapter drama, the first episode of which, "The Gypsy's Trust," will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation July 23. The episodes will be in four reels each.

"The Great Stanley Secret" is a highly dramatic production, eight reels of snappy action punctuated with thrills. The first chapter opens with a sensational railroad wreck scene and there is punch and snap every minute afterward. The picture was produced by the American Film Company, Inc.

Playing opposite Mr. Russell in "The Great Stanley Secret" is Charlotte Burton, now Mrs. Russell.

Sloman has built a corking good photoplay out of a strong story. The tale itself deals with the battle for possession of the Stanley family jewel, a gem of great intrinsic value as well as being a symbol of right to the earldom.

The wreck scene has been pronounced one of the most artistic and realistic bits of photography in the history of motography. It took hours to prepare for the smash and the filming of the burning wreckage was a remarkable bit of photography.

Many Houses Book Series

With the first release date of Essanay's "Do Children Count?" only a month past, seventy-one houses have already started to show the pictures. This is considered a record which will not be equaled by any series or serial for some time to come.

Representative theaters in Chicago and vicinity now showing this series are:

Pine Grove Theater, 717 Sheridan road; Willard Theater, 340 East Fifty-first street; Twentieth Century Theater, 4708 Prairie; Grand Oak Theater, Grand boulevard and Oakwood; Apollo Theater, Forty-seventh and Forrestville; Albany Park Theater, 4812 North Kedzie avenue; Cosmopolitan Theater, Seventy-ninth and Halsted; Armitage Theater, 3533 Armitage; Crown Theater, 8402 Burley avenue; Bryn Mawr Theater, 1123 Bryn Mawr; Regent Theater, 6746 Sheridan road; Banner Theater, 1611 North Robey; Lynn Theater, Sixty-third and Carpenter; Republic Theater, 3918 Lincoln avenue; Bell Theater, 2407 West Madison street.

Bertha Theater, 4717 Lincoln avenue; Playhouse Theater, Oak Park, Ill.; Dreamland Theater, Michigan City, Ind.; Pastime Theater, Hammond, Ind.; Princess Theater, Joliet, Ill.; West Theater, Galesburg, Ill.; Mirror Theater, Moline, Ill.; Wigwam Theater, Sheffield, Ill.; Lincoln Square Theater, Decatur, Ill.; Columbia Theater, Peoria, Ill.; Majestic Theater, La Salle, Ill.; Garden Theater, Canton, Ill.; Varsity Theater, Champaign, Ill.; Colonial Theater, Milwaukee, Wis.; Fern Theater, Milwaukee, Wis.; Auditorium Theater, South Bend, Ind.

RAY ON TRIANGLE PROGRAM

"Sudden Jim" Scheduled for Release Week of July 22—Jack Devereaux and Winifred Allen in "Sussessful Failure"

The long-heralded Triangle production of "Sudden Jim," starring Charles Ray, will be released on the program for July 22. "A Successful Failure," produced under the supervision of Allan Dwan and featuring Winifred Allen and Jack Devereaux, is the other feature for the week.

The story of "Sudden Jim" has been read by millions since it appeared as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post and as one of the best-sellers on the book market. The hero is the son of Clothespin Jimmy, a pioneer manufacturer of the article which has given him his nickname. The old gentleman tests the character of young Jim by giving him $50,000 and telling him to play or work, just as he chooses. The boy takes over his father's clothespin factory in northern Michigan and puts up a fight against the ring of competitors who are endeavoring to control the market. He meets Marie Ducharme, a girl of "queer, disturbed, turbulent personality," and determines to marry her, but peculiar circumstantial evidence leads him to believe she has conspired with his opponents to crush him. With the quick decision that earns him the title of "Sudden Jim," he gathers his men around him, charges on the gang that has spiked his logs and hindered shipments, and wages a victorious battle.

The scenes were filmed in the big woods of California. One of the most spectacular is that showing a burning trestle, one hundred feet high, over which Charles Ray drives a trainload of logs just before it collapses to the ground.

In the cast supporting Ray are Sylvia Bremer, Joseph J. Dowling, Lydia Knott, William Bellingford, Frank Whitson, and Georgie Stone.

"A Successful Failure," featuring Jack Devereaux and Winifred Allen, is a humorous view of the struggle which a young man makes to gain enough currency of success to marry the girl he adores. When a package of counterfeit bonds is tossed at him by a young woman in a taxicab he believes that fortune has blessed him, not detecting their bogus species. He keeps the bonds as capital, and the confidence they give him is of inestimable value in giving him the courage to win.

The supporting company includes William Riley Hatch, George Renavent, Frank Currier, Russell Simpson and Robert Crimmins.

Cohan Film New Type of Story

Artcraft promises something entirely new in the way of photoplay stories in its George M. Cohan production, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," just completed under the direction of Hugh Ford. On the stage this play, heralded by George M. as a "mystery farce," offered a distinct novelty to the theater and that it should have this same effect on the screen, only to a far greater extent due to the wide scope of the motion picture and the great demand for novel film stories, is readily apparent.

"Those who have read the book by Earl Deer Biggers or who have seen the play by George M. Cohan will immediately appreciate the unique qualities of this tale which defied all critics and in face of this fact won their instinted praise," said Walter E. Greene in discussing the new picture at the Artcraft headquarters last week. "The originality of George M. Cohan and his ability to play upon the human side of nature was never more definitely displayed than in this offering. In speaking of the production one of our studio executives perhaps most effectively expressed the idea of the subject when he said: It is a photoplay within a photoplay, within a photoplay, with characters in each separate photoplay laughing at those in all the other photoplays.' More than ever before does 'Seven Keys to Baldpate' accent the real importance of Mr. Cohan's affiliation with the motion picture. Not only does he bring to the screen a new type in acting but at the same time he gives to the silent drama stories that are just as novel to this field, which is ever demanding something different.

Although the new Cohan picture was originally scheduled for later release, as a result of the many requests for another production presenting this popular actor-author-producer, it will be shown publicly commencing early in August.

AN OPEN FORUM FOR EXHIBITORS

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Turns Lobby Into Switch Yard

PATRONS of the Mecca Theater, Saginaw, Michigan, entered the playhouse the other night through a miniature railroad yard. Charles Q. Carlisle, the live wire manager, had transformed his lobby into an imitation switching terminal to make the presentation of the first episode of "The Railroad Raiders," Mutual-Signal photo novel, starring Helen Holmes.

A hand car, one of the familiar pump-handle kind, stood in the very center of the lobby. Railroad lanterns were strung across the front of the entrance. A big six-sheet poster was stretched above them. Almost every available inch of wall space was covered with three and one sheet posters and lobby cards.

"The Railroad Raiders" provides an opportunity for highly effective advertising and Mr. Carlisle's stunt is but one of a number of ideas that have been used by live exhibitors to increase box office receipts during the showing of the serial. Mr. Carlisle pronounces "The Railroad Raiders" the best serial he has ever booked.

Dinner to New York Exhibitor

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, both Artcraft stars, were among the most prominent features of the evening's program at the Screen Club Dinner and Entertainment given in New York to S. L. Rothapfel, manager of the Rialto Theater. In order to demonstrate the difference between the films of old days and the modern masterpieces two of Mary Pickford's pictures were shown. The first, "The Italian Barber," an old Biograph picture in which Mack Sennett and other present film celebrities appeared in support of "Little Mary," afforded those present many laughs at the ancient film technique as compared to that evidenced in Mary's new Artcraft masterpiece, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," which was exhibited immediately following.

Tom Wise, one of the guests of honor, in his speech, used Douglas Fairbanks as the basis of his talk in which the well known Broadway actor paid the popular Artcraft star a wonderful tribute.

The other acts following an elaborate dinner included Sheldon Lewis, toastmaster of the affair, in "Somewhere in the Godfrey Building," a very humorous skit, Eddie O'Connor, Edward Davis, Jack Gleason, Eddie Dowling, The Rialto Red Cross Singers accompanied by Hugo Riesenfeld, leader of the Rialto orchestra, and Florette, a female impersonator.

A speech by S. L. Rothapfel was given a great reception. Among those present were Sheldon Lewis, Billy Quirk, Howard Hall, Will C. Smith, J. F. Weiss, Harry Morey, Pete Schmid, John J. Gleason, Rennold Wolf, Lawrence McGill, Herbert Prior, Sam Spedon, Johnnie Walker, Wally Van and other well known film folk.

William Russell is at work on "Sands of Sacrifice," with Francelia Billington.

The beautiful exterior of the Columbia Theater of Portland, Oregon, and a view in the splendidly furnished and tastefully decorated ladies' rest room.

The Columbia of Portland knows the value of attractive and unique lobbys, and costumed ushers. At the left is the arrangement for "The Pride of the Clan," and the other picture shows "The Captive God" costumes. Notice the marquis decorations. No artificial flowers are used.

A Miner's Theater

The Virginian Theater, Raleigh, West Virginia. This house is located in a West Virginia town of less than 800 people. It seats 1,000 and is equipped with two Powers 6-A machines. The stage is equipped with twenty-four dressing rooms finished in hard wood and as dapper looking as those one would see in a metropolis. The center of the screen is set in a picture of the exterior of the theater.

H. V. Stephenson is manager of this theater. Raleigh is in the center of the coal fields. This fact, however, does not keep Mr. Stephenson from giving the people of his mining community the best that money can provide and the best pictures that are produced. He shows to an average audience of 600 people per night, and Saturdays he is unable to accommodate those who come during the evening.

The miners come in from the various camps surrounding Raleigh on Saturday evening expressly to see the pictures. He is a firm believer that a mining community can profitably exhibit Paramount pictures if they are shown in the right kind of environment. He holds to the belief, and has proven his theory correct, that even those humble folks who find it necessary to work in the mines demand not only good pictures but a good house.

Many other places in West Virgina, even the $2.00 per night service, can scarcely hold their own.

New $200,000 House in Illinois

One of the most beautiful theaters in the country, the Lincoln Square Theater, threw its doors open to the public July 4, showing pictures exclusively. The theater seats 1,400 people. It is absolutely fireproof, with one of the finest and most complete washed air ventilating systems ever installed. The picture screen is set amidst beautiful scenic surroundings painted by Eugene Cox of Chicago.

Among the present and future popular programs to be shown are K-E-S-E, Metro, and the big special productions.

The Lincoln Square Theater is located on the circle which is the heart of Decatur, offering better facilities to the residents than any other theater in Decatur.

Among the special features most noticeable will be the splendid orchestra and the "service" offered the patrons by the employes. The manager, Nate Erber, one of the former owners and former manager of the Fischer, located at Danville, will locate here temporarily. He would like to hear from other photoplay houses of the same prestige and standing.

Canada's "Champion Lobby Man"

Probably all the exhibitors of the Dominion would not agree to it, but there is one show man who has been called the best lobby man in Canada.

He is Manager M. T. Kashin of the Midway Theater of Montreal. Pretty good name, isn't it? And he makes that name come true, nine times out of ten or more.

Mr. Kashin uses simple methods in his lobby displays but methods that count. He knows that a thing doesn't have to be complicated or gorgeous or have the appearance of an aurora borealis to attract attention. He simply seizes on the strongest factors in his plays and then brings them out in his lobby displays and his other advertising. Every display he makes catches the eye with a strong yet simple appeal and makes the sort of impression of good taste and interest that makes the spectator want to come in and see what the theater has to offer along the line suggested in the "show window."

This exhibitor is a good example of the success any theater man can win—other things being equal—if he takes the trouble to study human nature carefully and employ the principles of good taste and simplicity in arranging his lobby.

Horray for the champion Canadian lobby man. Long may he kashin.

In Alice Brady's impending World-Picture "A Self-Made Widow," John Bowers, as "the pink of fashion and the mould of form," takes a stroll in evening clothes, and the spectacle so intensely piques a stalwart sailor on shore leave that the seafaring man throws a fistful of mud upon the dandy. The latter thereupon hands the able seaman a scientific modern licking, which astounds and delights him, and they become great pals and go off to sea. This provides an artless little country girl with a chance to pose as the dandy's relict and distribute his fortune where it will do the most good—for her.

"Split Reel" Notes for Theater Men

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

ON ACCOUNT of the success achieved by Harry Gibble, who recited a musical monologue, "Barbara Fritchie," at the Strand Theater, New York, last week as a prelude to "The Little American," Manager Edel engaged the speaker to deliver another musical monologue this week.

Charles Grogg, popular theatrical man of Bakersfield, California, has taken over the management of the Hippodrome Theater, thus bringing the list of houses under his management up to three.

* * *

The Empress Theater, Omaha, Nebraska, one of the big first run downtown houses, has announced an increase in admission prices from 10-20 to 15-25. The increasing cost of pictures, of theater help, and the general high prices of maintenance was given as the reason for the increase.

* * *

Following the Pathe fire in the offices of the Consumers building, Chicago, a temporary injunction was obtained by the film companies to restrain locals 110, 134 and 157 of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' union from interfering in any way with the employers.

Exhibitors will not get their money back for films censored prior to the enactment of the new law passed by the Kansas, 1917, legislature. This was the ruling, July 7, of the supreme court at Topeka, in a suit by the attorney general to compel the payment of the fees collected into the state treasury by the superintendent of public instructions.

The theater of H. M. Orvis of Elyria, Ohio, is a moving picture theater in a double sense—for the theater itself moves. Orvis takes his films around in an auto truck and shows in country villages too small to have regular houses. He carries a tent in which he sets up his show, and draws large patronage from the farmers.

Oklahoma City picture theaters have forestalled Major General Wood in his recent request that the "Star Spangled Banner" be played only on special occasions in places of public amusement. The national anthem is played in these houses only when government slides to stimulate recruiting or for some other patriotic purpose are exhibited.

Plans for utilizing the picture houses of the country to keep the national emergency before the public through the efforts of the "Four Minute Men" have been sent out by the Council of National Defense. Topics will be sent out from time to time and a propaganda campaign carried on such as has never been attempted before.

A notice in the Weekly Topics published by the Stillman Theater, Cleveland, speaks for itself as far as progressive innovations are concerned. It follows: "We are about to institute a daily luncheon matinee—Sundays excepted—from 11 a. m. until 1 p. m., with a general admission charge of fifteen cents. To those who have only this period of the day at their disposal, our Luncheon Matinees should afford a welcome entertainment, particularly for the business men who can enjoy their after-luncheon cigars in the convenient and comfortable smoking boxes."

Battle Creek, Michigan, is to have two new picture houses according to an announcement made recently by Colonel W. S. Butterfield. Work on these theaters, which will seat about 2,000 each, is about ready to begin. The fact that Battle Creek has been selected as one of the military cantonments for housing 20,000 men may have been one of the considerations that induced the building of the new showhouses.

The presence of three well known stars at the motion picture convention to be held in St. John, New Brunswick, September 8 and 9, gives added promise of the meeting's success. The twinklers who will shed light over dance floors on this occasion and dim the candles at the feasting board are Viola Dana, Rose Tapley and W. Stephen Bush.

Manager Benowitz of the Harmony Theater, Chicago, is advertising the first showing of the "Gray Ghost" recently placed a searchlight across the street from his theater and threw a green light upon a twenty-four poster advertising the picture which he had placed on the second story of his building. The uncannines of the picture caught the attention of many passers-by, and brought many into the theater.

On June 27 W. H. Swanson, president of the Swanson Theater Circuit, turned over the receipts of two of his finest theaters in Salt Lake City, Utah, to the Red Cross fund. The tickets for the day were a dollar each, and patrons of the big American, seating 3,000 people, and Strand theaters turned out heavily for the special program. The receipts for both theaters for the day ran close to $15,000.

July 13 was "Navy Day" at the Strand Theater, New York. Manager Edel extended an invitation to the Navy Department for the sailors in port to attend the afternoon performance on that date. Fifteen hundred men, it is estimated, enjoyed the patriotic bill. A detachment from the naval militia, officers and sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard and two hundred sailors from the French battleships now in port, attended.

Lee Lazelle, who has been manager of the Amuse Theater in Cheyenne, Wyoming, has been appointed manager of the New Strand Theater, which has just been completed at San Bernardino, California. M. P. Gerhart will take Mr. La Zelle's place as general doctor of difficulties at the Amuse Theater. The New Strand, which cost $60,000, has a splendid organ and is right up to snuff in every sort of a way.

The tremendous jump of America to the place of leading film exporting country in the world is doing much to make the rest of the globe familiar with this country and its people. In a single month in Paris, for instance, out of 13,800 meters of film shown, 11,000 were American. According to the official statistics the exports of exposed films from manufacturers in the United States increased from 32,192,018 feet in the fiscal year of 1913 to 158,751,786 feet in the fiscal year of 1916. The figures speak for themselves.

Several new members to the organization of the Texas Amusement Managers' Association have been obtained by secretary R. H. Campbell. The new ones are Gwynn & Byar, of Terrell; Breckman Bros. and Charles Kimball, of McKinney; John Sayeg, of Ennis; J. T. Hatch and J. A. Boggs & Son, of Kaufman; M. L. Lavine, of Corsicana; W. O. Williams, of San Marces; Mr. Shirley, of Heney Grove; Mr. Bryant, of Rexton, and J. F. Green, of Cleburne.

A torpedo, several gatling guns, and stacks of arms gave "Our Fighting Forces," when it was displayed at the Whitehouse Theater in Milwaukee, a send-off that you could almost hear. The theater looked like an arsenal. And the Spanish War veterans in uniform, headed by their own fife and drum corps, who marched through the house before the picture began, might have been taken for the arsenal guards.

A free motion picture show was furnished the soldiers of Fort Benjamin Harrison recently by S. B. McCormick, proprietor of the Circle Theater of Indianapolis, Indiana. The show staged in the open was the first of a series Mr. McCormick expects to give during the summer months. A large percentage of the 5,000 officer students of the reserve officers' corps and of the 8,000 enlisted men attended.

A case of the big theater swallowing the little one was exemplified recently in Reading, Pennsylvania, when the Empire, one of the Carr and Schads' theaters, was forced to close down soon after the New Colonial, belonging to the same interests, opened its doors. The Empire had a seating capacity of 600 and the New Colonial a capacity of 2,000. The public just naturally forsook the smaller house for the larger and more luxurious one.

A branch recruiting office was established in the lobby of the Strand Theater, East Liverpool, Ohio, when "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation" was shown there. An army captain and a pretty young woman made speeches in front of the theater urging enlistments and a number of young men of good physique and military build "saw the light," and joined the colors.

Clara Kimball Young appeared recently at the Strand Theater, Minneapolis, Minnesota, and passed a Red Cross contribution box through the audience with very gratifying results. Many a bald headed patriot reached down in his jeans when those luminous eyes turned in his direction. When the star arrived in Minneapolis she was met at the station by the First Minnesota Field Artillery band, a reception committee of picture men and Red Cross workers.

Frank J. Seng, owner of the village theater of Wilmette, Illinois, one of the aristocratic north shore suburbs of Chicago, has shown that he can do infinitely more than manage a theater successfully, hard as that task may sometimes be. He is now exploiting Hobart Henley's picture, "Parentage," and is said to be getting away with it in splendid fashion. This is Mr. Seng's first attempt as a distributor.

The activities of the public schools of Schenectady, New York, have been snapped in about 4,500 feet of film and are being shown at a local theater. The picture history of the work in the schools, in addition to being something new and constituting a valuable historical record, will give the people of the city an opportunity to see what is being done in the schools, and will take the place of visiting, something which the school authorities say the parents are somewhat backward in doing.

A novel plan to advertise the theater among the khaki boys at nearby Fort Douglas has been hit upon by the Paramount-Empress Theater in Salt Lake City, Utah. Manager George Carpenter is furnishing the men with their pay envelopes. However, he is letting the government furnish them with the pay. The soldiers find their government money enclosed in Mr. Carpenter's envelopes, on which is stamped an invitation to visit the Parahount-Empress Theater. Mr. Carpenter merely has the envelopes printed. The soldiers get his ad every time they are paid.

John J. Campbell and R. Rorabeck, proprietors respectively of the Wonderland Theater, 27 Washington avenue and the New National, 44 South Third street, Minneapolis, were recently refused an injunction in which they attempted to restrain picketing in front of their theaters. While business was poor both elected to run their own machines. Protests by the Motion Picture Machine Operators' union were followed by picketing, boycotting and the distribution of unfriendly literature in front of their places. Rorabeck and Campbell took the matter to court but their application for an injunction was turned down.

Manager Charles Gates of the Symphony Theater, Los Angeles, has learned that to give sometimes means that you receive in return with an unearned increment added for good measure. He has been boosting the campaigns for the marines in Los Angeles, and as a consequence, his house came in for a considerable publicity. When the officers later decided to get some picture stars to aid them in getting men the Symphony was selected as headquarters. Manager Gates, besides having his house packed every night, has been getting a great deal of free advertising, and has had stars buzzing in and out of his theater like bees around a hive.

One of the dangers to young girls under sixteen, not allowed to attend picture shows unless accompanied by adults, was pointed out at the last meeting of the Pennsylvania Motion Picture Exhibitors' League convention in Philadelphia. It was stated that in New York, for instance, where such a bill was in effect, the morals of the young girls were endangered by their proclivities to pick up men on the streets if they were unable to secure a member of the family to accompany them. A measure to forbid admission of children under sixteen to picture theaters unless accompanied by an adult was pending at Harrisburg at the time and was responsible for the discussion.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent feature of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He has been elected vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you some valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Shutters for Any Lens

I have been a reader of this department ever since it started and have gotten some very useful information from it.

A few weeks ago I read an article on setting the shutter so that it would cut the light rays at the narrowest place and I started out to experiment on the subject. I am on the road with a traveling attraction and carry several different size focal length lenses and I found out that where a shutter would do for one lens it would not do for another one. I do not mean to say that it could not be used on the different lens but that it would cut too much light on one lens and not enough on another one.

I took the shortest focal length lens and placed it in the machine and then cut a shutter out of heavy cardboard and fit it at the proper place on the shaft and cut down the blades so that they were just wide enough to cut the light. Then I took this paper shutter off and cut one just like it out of a piece of sheet aluminum, using the paper shutter as a pattern. Then I took the longest focal length lens and put it in the machine and cut a cardboard shutter to fit it and then took the shutter off and by placing the aluminum shutter over the paper one I could tell the difference in the width of the two shutters.

I then took the aluminum shutter and cut two slots in each blade of the shutter and cut two pieces of aluminum a little wider than the difference in width between the aluminum shutter and the paper shutter and cut two slots in each one of these two pieces. Then I took four short bolts with thumb screws on them and bolted the extra strips to the aluminum shutter.

Then by testing with each lens I marked on the shutter the distance that the extra strip should set and marked on the shutter shaft where the shutter should be set. I marked the shutter with a punch mark and filed a small mark on the shaft. I now have a shutter that I can use on any lens that I have and I can set it in a minute's time so that it will cut the light at the proper place and I am getting the best of results from it.

I am sending you a diagram of the shutter and you can pass this on to the operators if you think it worth while. The diagram is made to give you an idea of a Power's two blade shutter. I have been away from Tucson for several weeks but at the time I left all the operators were working and projection in that town is just about as good as you will find anywhere.—Fraternally yours, N. H. Wilson, Local No. 298, Tucson, Arizona.

What Do You Think of It?

I have never tried out the shutter that you mention so I cannot say just what it will do, so I am turning it over to the readers of the department for their opinion. I do not believe that it would be necessary to change the width of the shutter blades for the different size lens but as I say, I have never tried it so would not be positive about it. Most of the operators have occasion to use only one size focal length lens but men with traveling attractions of course have a variety of lens and they, if anyone, would be interested in your shutter.

I thank you anyhow for the information and am very glad that you as well as several other readers are getting some benefit from the department, and just while I am on the subject I want to make a statement in defense of myself and MOTOGRAPHY.

I have never posed as the one wise being in the projection field and I have never written any books on projection. I am frank to admit that I use any and all authorities when the occasion demands it. MOTOGRAPHY is conducting this department for the benefit of the managers and operators that would like to have information and I am trying to help them if I can. I do not hesitate to refer to any authority to get this information.

On several occasions an editor of a projection department in New York City has made reference in the columns of his paper criticising a certain Chicago trade paper and its projection department because the editor (myself) of that department had seen fit to use articles from the different instruction books that the several manufacturing companies have issued. I have seen in print this statement—"Some men could learn if they didn't already know it all," and thank goodness I know that I am not one of those "some" men.

We all have something to learn and when any one person tries to set himself up on a throne and pose as the one wise dictator then he is only fooling himself. I am editing the projection department of this paper and as long as I am on the job I will try to help both managers and operators, and when they ask me a question they will not have to spend four dollars for a book to get the answer.

Connecting Cells to Form Battery

Another operator and myself had a friendly argument on the proper way to connect up a set of dry cells on a bell line running from my booth to the piano which is about one hundred and five feet away.

Will you please answer the following questions for us? How many methods are there for connecting cells to form a battery? What are the results and which would you advise me to use on a bell circuit of one hundred and five feet? Hoping to see an answer in MOTOGRAPHY and thanking you in advance, I am, yours truly, Raymond Miller, St. Paul, Minn.

There are three ways to connect up cells to form a battery, in series, parallel and series multiple. In connecting cells in series you add the voltage of each cell. In connecting in parellel the voltage of the battery is the same as that of a single cell, but the current is equal to the amperage of a single cell multiplied by the number of cells. In connecting cells in series multiple two sets of cells are connected in series and the two batteries thus formed are connected in parallel. The pressure equals the voltage of one cell, multiplied by the number of cells in one battery and the amperage that of one cell multiplied by the number of batteries. In using cells for a bell line one hundred and five feet long use four cells connected up in series.

Help Revise the Laws

The Indiana State Federation of Labor, through its officers, presented a resolution to Governor Goodrich on July 14, in which it referred to the decision of the supreme court, annulling the constitutional convention law, and respectfully urged Governor Jas. P. Goodrich to call a special session of the legislature for the purpose, among other things, of submitting the question to a vote of the people as to wether we shall hold a constitutional convention, and that this be done as speedily as possible. The resolution was signed by all the officers of the State Federation of Labor and copies of this resolution will be sent to every labor organization in the state. Locals of the I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. are urged to act on this at once as it is of vital importance to the members of this craft that we have some of the laws now on the statute books revised.

More Land for Triangle

By purchasing sixteen acres adjoining its plant at Culver City, California, for the purpose of making improvements that will more than double the producing capacity of the studio, adding to the playing force new directors, performers and cameramen, the Triangle Film Corporation expects within a year to center all of its Western activities at the suburb of Los Angeles.

The present Culver City plant comprises eleven acres and is said to be rivaled in magnificence by only one studio in the world, which is situated in Southern Italy. It contains seven great concrete and glass stages, a property building filled with $200,000 worth of furniture and other properties, film factory, planing mill and carpenter shop, wardrobe building, administration building and miscellaneous structures valued at more that $3,000,000, not to mention the 1,800 acre ranch at Hartville, which is used for exterior location work and "western" productions.

With similar improvements erected upon the recently purchased sixteen acres ample accommodations will be provided for more than one hundred companies. No concern in the business at the present time is said to have more than forty companies at work. The capacity of the present Triangle plant is fifty companies and the factory can produce 50,000 feet of film daily.

SUIT ON FALL DOCKETS

Million Dollar Libel Suit of Vitagraph Against Henry Ford to Be Called for Trial in Fall

Following the answer of Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, to the suit by the Vitagraph Company of America for one million dollars in which he is charged with libeling the company, the case went on the fall calendar of the Federal District Court for the southern district of New York and there will be no further action until it is called for trial.

In the original complaint, the Vitagraph Company of America through its attorney, William Alban Ulmann, charged that Ford had libelled it by publication of an advertisement in newspapers throughout the country in which "The Battle Cry of Peace" was branded in May, 1916, as an advertisement for Hudson Maxim and other munition manufacturers. Ford entered a demurrer which was dismissed by Judge Mayer, who ordered Ford to file an answer to the suit within twenty days. After two extensions, the Ford answer was filed in court Monday, July 9.

In this answer Ford admits publishing the article complained of by the Vitagraph company, but denies any malicious intent against the Vitagraph company, as such, and rests his defense chiefly on the ground that in publishing the article complained of he thought he was doing a patriotic duty.

Upon the filing of Ford's answer, a statement was issued from the office of counsel for the Vitagraph company giving a brief summary of the case, which said in part:

"The denial of the motion made by the defendant to dismiss the complaint on the ground that it did not set forth facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, meant that the court had determined that as a matter of law the article in and of itself was libelous.

"Judge Mayer found that the article not merely attacked Mr. Maxim, but also in effect attacked the Vitagraph company as the hypocritical and deceiving assistant in Mr. Maxim's alleged dishonorable scheme of advertising. Neither the Vitagraph company nor any of its officers or executives has had any financial connection with Mr. Maxim or any other manufacturer of arms or munitions and "The Battle Cry of Peace" was produced as a piece of patriotic propaganda and for the purpose of communicating a great and important message to the American people with the patriotic end in view of promoting the best interests of the nation."

Piedmont Moves

The Piedmont Pictures Corporation, which absorbed the Hawk Film Company, has moved from 1600 Broadway, New York, to better quarters at 729 Seventh avenue (Godfrey building).

The activities of this company have been greatly extended in the last year, and the organization now covers the entire globe. They have closed the "Jimmie Dale" serial, released in this country on the Mutual program and manufactured by the Monmouth Pictures Corporation, for the following territories: Spain, Portugal, India, Burma, Ceylon, Dutch East India and Porto Rico. Several other contracts for same are pending, to be closed shortly. The Piedmont Pictures controls all foreign countries.

They also closed the Foxfilms for Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

Unusual Actor-Producer

E. K. LINCOLN, who is busily engaged playing the leading role in a patriotic picture called "For Liberty," being produced for the S. & M. Film Manufacturing Company, achieved the wide popularity he enjoys as a screen actor through his good looks, his interesting personality and his ability as an actor.

E. K. Lincoln.

Long before the picture days Mr. Lincoln had a successful career on the stage. His first screen experience was with the Vitagraph Company, where he was featured in innumerable productions, and where he became a favorite with the release of his very first picture.

It would require too much space to enumerate all the screen plays in which he has been featured, but, perhaps, the one which gained him the widest recognition was "The Littlest Rebel." In the producing field Mr. Lincoln organized the E. K. Lincoln Players, Inc., and built two studios, one at Grantwood, N. J., which is now being used by the Fox Film Corporation, being one of the best equipped studios in the East. His other studio is a sort of summer working place in the Berkshires, situated at Blandford, Mass. There he produced a number of feature productions, including "The Fighting Chance," and "The Girl from Alaska," in which he played the leading roles. He played a special engagement with the Lubin Company, following which William A. Brady engaged him for two World Film productions, "The Almighty Dollar," and "The World Against Him."

Mr. Lincoln is one of the most active men in the film industry. Besides his two studios, he finds time to superintend a stock farm on the Lincoln Highway, in Pennsylvania; owns and manages an estate of 4,000 acres at Fairfield, Connecticut, where he breeds for exhibition purposes some of the most successful dogs in the country. There are over 250 chows, English toy spaniels and Japanese spaniels in his Greenacre kennels.

Of late Mr. Lincoln has been starring in the Mutual-Jimmy Dale serial, "The Gray Seal," and his selection for leading man in his latest picture, "For Liberty," comes to him as a reward for his faithful work while at the Lubin plant, having been engaged for the play by Ira M. Lowrey, who is general manager of the S. & M. Company, who was also general manager of the Lubin Company while Mr. Lincoln was making features at the Philadelphia plant. Mr. Lincoln is now completing this picture in Philadelphia, after which he will rest at his summer estate in the Berkshires.

The King Bee Billy West comedies have been sold for the states of Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee by the Southern Metro Pictures Corporation of New Orleans.

ARTCRAFT YEAR OLD

One of Ablest Coalitions Ever Assembled in Cause of Screen Celebrating First Anniversary—Means Much to Photoplay World

By Walter E. Greene.

Seldom in any industry has an organization become such a potent factor in a year as has the Artcraft Pictures Corporation. Thirteen months ago Artcraft meant nothing to the screen; it was a force of the future. Today its meaning is readily appreciated as representing a coalition of notables who have proved themselves extremely important factors in the advancement of the motion picture as an art. It is a powerful force not only in the film producing field but also in the business end of the industry. Through its affiliation with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation it has allied itself with a group of acknowledged film giants.

When Artcraft entered the field its scope was clearly defined. The advent of any new force in the motion picture industry is usually looked upon with fear by exhibitors, particularly when it calls for a longer run of the attraction, a higher charge of admission and an increase in the cost of rentals. Thus, when the policies, ideals and plans of Artcraft were first announced, many managers did not realize how important a step was being taken in the film world.

Artcraft has made it possible for the exhibitors to show the very best in motion pictures. This chance was not afforded exhibitors prior to Artcraft's existence, when the regular "legitimate" theaters usually received the first opportunity to show the super-attractions and the most famous stars. This achievement in itself is sufficient to warrant the wonderful success of Artcraft at the hands of the exhibitor.

Since its inception, Artcraft has faithfully carried out its promise for the "biggest and best" in motion pictures, commencing with its presentation of Mary Pickford subjects. The affiliation with the screen's ablest talents and brains was the only way in which Artcraft could make good its promise, and this is exactly what has been done. D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Thomas Ince, Elsie Ferguson, Geraldine Farrar, Cecil B. De Mille and George M. Cohan are acknowledged representatives of their particular arts and that this is perhaps the greatest coalition ever assembled in the cause of the screen is apparent.

The many palatial motion picture houses throughout the country are operating under as large an expense as the finest legitimate theaters. These theaters must have extraordinary productions and it is the policy of Artcraft to supply them with the biggest subjects in points of stars, art and general merit. In place of running the mediocre film three days and a week, Artcraft not only places the unusual attraction within the reach of the regular exhibitor whose palatial theater is the logical place to show the production, but gives him the opportunity of placing his house on a still higher plane by increasing the run of the subject and justifiably asking more for admission.

As to the smaller exhibitor, Artcraft offers to him the very thing for which every live-wire showman is ever on the lookout, namely a "special attraction" or stimulus for his business. Just as every good retail merchant will occasionally hold a special sale to attract new customers and retain old ones, so does the showman offer a special inducement in the way of an extraordinary entertainment. To the small exhibitor who is showing the usual film Artcraft is as important as it is to the owner of the immense motion picture palace. Through Artcraft he not only increases the prestige of his house but actually injects new blood into the box-office veins of his business.

To the producer and star Artcraft offers a distribution such as has never been evidenced before. It not only saves him the laborious and expensive proceedings in connection with the simultaneous presentation of a big production throughout the country but places at his disposal the very best theaters in the land.

As to the future of Artcraft, it will continue along the lines it has traveled from the very start. The star series selective booking policy inaugurated at its inception, and which has met with popular approval all over the country, will be continued as in the past. In accord with the new Paramount-Artcraft co-ordinate booking policy recently announced, it will continue to present the very best in motion pictures. By its new arrangement with Paramount it will in no way interfere with the releases of that organization, as was experienced in the past.

"Sudden Jim"

Triangle Drama Featuring Charles Ray. Released July 22. Reviewed By George W. Graves.

HERE is a film that will have them right on the edge of their seats. Not only is the story replete with thrills and exciting scenes of whirlwind action, but it also has a strong dramatic love theme, deals with real picturesque country characters and has one or two comedy touches that are sure winners. Clarence Buddington Kelland's story commences quietly and entertains throughout its first scenes with some quaint characters picked right from life, among whom are an honest old country-town judge and a loquacious boarding house mistress; then it begins to warm into exciting action as the clothes pin trust begins to harass more and more the successful business of which the young hero is the head, and finally a veritable torrent of excitement is precipitated when the men of the clothes pin mill, refused their necessary timber by the lumber camp controlled by the trust, descend upon the camp and take the lumber by force. Because the hero believes "the girl" has warned the enemy in time for them to prepare, a big wall of love misunderstanding is erected.

Charles Ray in "Sudden Jim"

The raid upon the camp consists of a wild mob fight with stones and clubs. After a terriffic struggle "Sudden Jim's" men are able to get a locomotive out of the round house and the train load is made full. The men of the camp, however, set fire to a big wooden viaduct over which the train must pass. "Sudden Jim," seeing there is no time to lose, jumps into the engine's cab and runs the train over the burning trestle. Just after reaching the other side the trestle is dynamited—the enemy's timing being a minute too late. The director has made all of these scenes register with such lightning speed and realism that if the audience is not bereaved of its breath during this stretch it is "some" stolid audience. Trying to protect her lover in spite of his cutting accusation "the girl" is shot. Later on Jim learns the identity of his real betrayer and he humbly asks forgiveness of the girl.

One piece of humor which will surely be appreciated occurs when Jim arrives at the small town where his father's factory is located. Strolling over to the other side of the platform he encounters a farmer sitting languidly in his buggy with his heavily shod feet crossed in true country-character style. Jim asks him if he could drive him to the Ashe factory, whereupon the elderly individual drawls, "I cud," and straightway "giddaps" his horse and clears out, leaving Jim standing on the platform in surprised bewilderment. This is a sample of the kind of comedy that is found here and there in the film.

Charles Ray's work is certainly fine all the way through, and although he does not appear to such individual advantage as he did in the memorable "The Clodhopper," the story in its entirely different way is just as entertaining. It will be considered more so by those who like thrills and excitement. In the support are Joseph J. Dowling, Sylvia Bremer, Lydia Knott, William Bellingford and Frank Whitson, all of whom have caught the vivid spirit of the play. Victor J. Schertzinger proves once more that he is one of Triangle's top-notch directors. "Sudden Jim" promises to be among the year's most popular releases.

"The Little American"

Six-Part Cecil B. DeMille Production Released by Art Craft. Reviewed by George W. Graves

ANOTHER picture that promises to be a Mary Pickford sensation in spite of the fact that the little star is not seen in a typical role is producer DeMille's "The Little American," a patriotic offering constructed on a big scale with thrills and war horrors galore. Mr. De Mille seems to have elected especially to bring the more intimate, heart-rending sides of war before the eyes of the spectator and he truly has done it with vivid reality. However, since much of the repulsive detail introduced has actually occurred in life and the audience knows this only too well, the morbid effect of this gruesomeness is going to mar the entertainment seriously for sensitive people. But there is another side to all this, namely: these scenes tend to arouse a feeling of hatred or retaliation, or, perhaps, in the majority of cases, a sympathetic desire amounting to patriotism that this country, upholding its traditions of liberty and justice, shall deal a telling blow to the end that the things that sustain peace shall thrive and stand and those that are inimical to it shall be exterminated. Because of the strong arguments in two directions it is hard to determine whether or not the picture will stimulate recruiting.

Jeanie Macpherson's story is suspenseful and dramatic; there is nothing lacking in the way of plot interest. Many big scenes have been heightened by Miss Pickford's splendid emotional work, the vivid portrayals of a competent support and the strikingly elaborate production. Among the masterpieces of direction we have the torpedoing of a big liner at sea at night, with the passengers plunging into dark and cold waters already teeming with men, women and children frantically thrashing about. The thrill of this is intensified by the clever use of a search-light, casting its spot of illumination grotesquely over the squirming mass of humans. Scenes the equal of this in bigness are found in a number of places throughout the film, testifying to the remarkable conception of the director.

"The Little American" is bound to do a capacity business if for no other reason than its title and the name of the star. Although many will feel the depression of the uncanny detail, all will hail the picture as a dramatic sensation and talk loud and long about its spectacular effects. In the cast Jack Holt, Raymond Hatton and Hobart Bosworth distinguish themselves.

"Miss Deception"

Jean Sothern Featured in Van Dyke-Art Dramas Production. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THIS is a summer-weight story which relies mainly on the tom-boyish character portrayed by Jean Sothern for its appeal. As a light piece of entertainment it registers fairly well, but whatever plot there is is subordinate in interst to the main character played by Miss Sothern, who, as the Kentucky girl who has really been brought up with a knowledge of etiquette, comes to live with her long-lost father in the city, and pretends she is the "little savage" he imagines her. Much of this backwoods-girl-in-a-city-house detail, with the inevitable stoical butler, etc., is old, but then, much of it is not, and since Jean Sothern makes quite a pleasing madcap, your patrons, who have enjoyed this actress in her previous pictures, will feel that they have had their money's worth. None of the members of the cast make any particular impression, due to the fact that their parts are of no essential consequence. The picture will be appreciated best in theaters that have not shown too many subjects of a similar theme. "Miss Deception" will be hailed by many as a pleasing diversion, but the subject is not really impressive in either story, acting or direction. The film has the advantage of being wholesome, and cheerful rather than depressing. The director, Eugene Nowland, worked from a story by Jos. Franklin Poland.

Joyce Kingston, living with her uncle in the Kentucky hills, having just passed the hoydenish age, pleads with her uncle for the story of her mother and learns that years before, the latter had been imprudent and her father, returning to his society life in the North, had refused to marry her. Soon after this revelation of the past a letter comes from the father, now a millionaire in New York, requesting that Joyce be sent to him for proper education and culture. Since the letter hints that Mr. Kingston thinks his daughter is a hopeless "savage," Joyce, in the spirit of fun, pretends to be just that, although she has really had a fine bringing up. In the city Joyce has much fun with all the members of the household, and she finds a big place in her father's heart. Mr. Kingston is being fooled by a woman who intends to marry him for his money, but when he receives a telegram saying in substance that he is ruined, the woman repudiates him and shows her true self. At this time the Kentucky uncle appears on the scene and the girl gets him to explain to her disconsolate father that he has enough money for all.

"The Peddler"

Art Dramas Release in Six Parts. Featuring Joe Welch. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz

JOE WELCH, the well known and popular Jewish character actor, is seen in this latest Art Dramas release, produced by U. S. Amusement Corporation, as Abraham Jacobs, an East Side peddler. This adaptation from Hal Reid's famous play shows the real Jew of New York's East Side in a true light, it is simple, pathetic and abounds with human touches. The heart interest and sentiment is preserved throughout the play. It will be an acceptable offering to any audience.

In his appealing characterization Mr. Welch is sympathetic and sincere. Kittens Reichert as Mary, the little blind girl, sweet and unaffected in her role. The others in support of Mr. Welch and who add much to the success of the picture are, Sidney Mason, Catherine Calvert, and Sally Crute. Under the direction of Howard Blache the production has been made pleasing and realistic.

Abraham Jacobs, a peddler, saves enough money to open a little clothing store. He is very proud of his son, Sammy, and gives him a fine education in the hope that he will be a help to him. The education part is a failure, as it makes a snob and a loafer out of the boy. But Jacob finds a great deal of comfort in caring for his adopted daughter, Mary.

Sammy becomes mixed up in an affair with Mrs. Morgan. The husband discovers them together and orders the wife to leave his house. Sammy is forced to provide for her. Unable to secure funds to meet this new burden, he robs his father's safe. Shortly after this Abraham inherits a fortune, which enables him to live in comfort. His one wish is the return of Sammy, who has been missing since the night of the robbery.

His happiness is complete when the repentant son returns and asks forgiveness. With the promise of Sarah's hand in marriage, Sammy starts life anew.

"The Sawdust Ring"

Five-Reel Triangle Comedy-Drama Released July 29. Reviewed by George W. Graves

BESSIE LOVE in pigtails and short dresses playing the part of a girl about twelve years old, an odd mixture of the merry and the forlorn, a true-to-life type, is the heroine of this story, which tells about the escapades of two youngsters who run away from home to realize their hopes of becoming brilliant performers in the sawdust ring. The story lacks plot of novelty and substance to a big degree, and without the comedy and human work of Miss Love supported by an excellent cast and Charles Miller's direction to lift the piece out of the commonplace, it would not "get by" as well as it does. "The Sawdust Ring" is just one of those simple, quiet little stories, relying mostly on character work with bits of comedy scattered throughout. It never really stirs one, but on account of its wholesomeness and the appeal of the petite star, who has a large number of cute plays to perform, it may be accounted a good picture. The film is a case of acting and direction carrying a story that is not substantial enough to fill out five reels. Harold Goodwin, the boy who plays opposite the star, registers some exceptional work as—"just a boy," while others in a cast whose work is satisfactory are Jack Richardson, Josephine Headley and Daisy Dean.

Janet Magie is the unfortunate yet happy daughter of a woman who, long since having left her husband, is slowly wasting away under the torment of conscience which tells her that perhaps she was to blame for the separation. When the circus comes to town the mother will not allow Janet to attend since the husband was a circus man, and the girl seems to show such signs of circus blood being in her veins that the mother is afraid she will answer the call of the sawdust ring. Disappointed, Janet and Peter, a playmate, have a circus of their own in the back yard. A number of days later Janet's mother, taken ill, is removed to the hospital. Janet and Peter decide to take Jupiter, the horse, and leave home to go out and win the world with a little circus of their own, Peter taking this means to escape from a brutal father and the girl clutching a possible chance of finding her father. After a number of comical adventures the two do find the father they are in search of, and later a happy reconciliation between the husband and the repentant wife is effected.

"The Gray Ghost"

First Three Episodes of the New Universal Serial. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

JUDGED by its first three installments, "The Gray Ghost," Universal's latest serial, which is founded on Arthur Somers Roche's story, "Loot," published in The Saturday Evening Post, is the sort of an offering which will entertain the average audience very well and leave with the viewers, at the end of each chapter, a real desire to learn what will happen next.

It is a mystery and adventure story, set forth in expert style, well acted and well photographed. It has the fascination of detective stories and is clean and enjoyable. Any picture patrons who like serials will certainly welcome this one and follow it throughout, if succeeding chapters keep to the standard of the first three.

There are well-known Universal players in the cast. Harry Carter plays the title role; Emory Johnson plays Wade Hildreth, a sympathetic role. Eddie Polo appears as his secretary. Priscilla Dean plays Morn Light, an important role, and Gypsy Harte acts as her maid, who is really a spy. Among others in the cast are Gertrude Astor, Richard La Reno and John Cook. Stuart Paton prepared the scenario and directed the play.

The Story: Events of the first three chapters are as follows: From London, Wade Hildreth sets out for New York as an agent of a wealthy Englishman who had purchased a costly necklace from New York jewelers.

In New York the Gray Ghost, a master criminal, directs a series of robberies, but is never captured. In fact, only one detective believes that there is a Gray Ghost, head of the band of thieves. After a bank has been robbed, a man murdered and suspicion for the crimes fastened on an innocent man, all under the direction of the Gray Ghost, the criminal turns his attention to getting possession of the necklace Hildreth is to obtain.

The Gray Ghost has a mysterious control over Morn Light, a musical comedy star. When, after the bank affair, the criminal lures Hildreth into his power, Morn Light secretly tries to help the young man. The Gray Ghost suspects her, and it is evident also that her maid is spying upon her actions. At the end of the third chapter the Gray Ghost's men have been foiled in their attempt to capture Hildreth, and Morn Light is the one who has foiled them.

"Les Miserables"

Pathe Eight-Reel Version of Victor Hugo Novel. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

PATHE has revived and is offering to exhibitors this screen version of the great French masterpiece, which was made in France several years ago under the direction of Albert Capellani. A capable cast of French players interpret the roles, the work of Henri Krauss as Jean Valjean being especially fine. Cosette as a child and Fantine are also vividly protrayed.

The difficulty of filming a novel so lengthy and complicated as this is obvious, and the task has been accomplished excellently. The main points of the story have all been kept and the spirit of the book is retained admirably. Those who have never read "Les Miserables" will get a very fair resume of the book from seeing the picture and those who are familiar with the story will enjoy this visualization.

The picture is well adapted for a high class audience. In Chicago, it is being presented at Orchestra Hall, a Michigan Avenue house of very high class clientele. Exhibitors in smaller cities will find this offering one that will interest the schools and women's clubs, but especially the high schools. Since no harrowing or sordid incidents are included in the picture, and since it is a very clear presentation of the book, its value as an educational subject is high. Any exhibitor who runs it should interest parents and teachers in it, and it is a good choice for an exhibitor who is asked to show pictures in co-operation with the schools.

The Story: Jean Valjean, a peasant, is unable, in spite of his great strength, to find employment and he and his invalid mother are in need of food. He yields to temptation and steals a loaf of bread. The shopkeeper has him arrested and he is sentenced to five years imprisonment at hard labor.

Several years later Jean Valjean escapes from prison. He wanders through the country, everywhere meeting harshness until his spirit is embittered. Then he is directed to the home of a priest, Pere Myriel, who befriends him. Jean, however, steals the silver and runs away. He is captured and brought before the priest, who, instead of sending him back to prison, saves him by stating that he had given the silver to the man. This incident changes Jean's life. From that point on he has faith in humanity.

Under the name of Madeleine, he wins success and becomes mayor of a village. He is loved by all for his kindness. Then he learns that another man is arrested as Jean Valjean and after a struggle, he gives himself to save the innocent man. Javert, a heartless police officer, who had always suspected Jean, becomes his guardian but Jean escapes to keep his promise to a dying woman, Fantine, to find and care for her child, little Cosette.

Jean's rescue of little Cosette, their life together and the dangers that beset Jean, all form a vivid story. At the end of his life, Jean leaves Cosette happily married to a young man of wealth. He had devoted his life to making Cosette happy and aiding those about him, all in memory of the priest who had befriended him.

"The Stolen Treaty"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature in Five Parts Released July 16. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THOMAS EDGELOW'S story produced by Paul Scardon of the Vitagraph corps of directors proves to be an entertaining romantic mystery story whose telling is unique and quite the parallel of the two or three other stories of this fashion recently coming from Vitagraph. The elimination of all unnecessary explanation and the maintaining of a certain note of surprise which allows the spectator to figure things out for himself without running into the dangers of undramatic foreshadowing, are two commendable things about the film.

Corinne Griffith and Earle Williams in "The Stolen Treaty."

True it is that there are minor inconsistencies throughout, but nothing sinister enough to put any inertia into the free swing of entertainment value. The picture might have been made more logical, however, as well as more satisfying by bringing up the ending a little shorter. The secret service agent already has the long-fought-for treaty in his hands but he waits until a future meeting at a reception, without taking any precautions against the villains who are all at large, to hand it over to the head of the secret service. It seems to us the avoidance of any further risks would have been the course in actual life. But they use this reception finish for the creation of a little extra suspense and the scene where the hero is saved from being murdered will probably be appreciated by audiences. The fact that the foreign plotters are unable to "put anything over on Uncle Sam" gives the offering its patriotic appeal.

Earle Williams, aided by subtitles which will make the audience glory in the hero's prowess, puts over very well his cool and complacent secret service lover part, and Corinne Griffith is certainly a constant vision of charm as the girl who is looking for adventure but gets too much the first day out. The fact that her fiance cannot explain things causes a little misunderstanding. Denton Vane as the foreign villain plotter deserves praise for his work, and Bernard Seigel fits very well as the hero's valet and confidential man. Settings and photography are up to standard, and the make-ups used are good enough to make things more mysterious. The picture as a whole makes a very attractive offering. It is the kind of film that the average movie fan delights in because of its well-handled element of mystery.

Mary Miles Minter in American-Mutual Release of July 23. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AN excellent production, whose only fault is an abrupt and unsatisfactory ending, is this latest picture in the Mary Miles Minter series. It is a feud story, and Miss Minter plays a mountain girl part, but Mabel Heikes Justice, the author, has not written a conventional "Feud" story, nor is the star's role the conventional and overdone "child of nature" character. Instead, there is a delightfully human story, naturally worked out, with real people, excellently portrayed by a capable cast of players.

The points which make this picture excellent are the really fine acting of the star, good directing, which brings out pleasing bits of humor and pathos, situations which occur naturally, and exteriors of great beauty, photographed in the best American fashion. The clever acting of the supporting cast and the well written subtitles are other commendable points in the production. But the ending is too abrupt and is unnecessarily sad.

The picture is a fine one for any theater. The large and growing ranks of Miss Minter's admirers will make it a good box-office attraction, and everyone who sees it will enjoy it. James Kirkwood is the director. In the cast supporting Miss Minter are Spottiswood Aitken, Allan Forrest, George Periolat, Perry Banks, Harvey Clark, John Gough, Frank Thompson, Gertrude Le Brandt, Emma Kluge and Ann Schaefer.

The Story: Melissa is the motherless daughter of Jethro Stark, a preacher in the Tennessee mountains. Stark's goodness and self-denial is unappreciated by the mountaineers, and two families give him great trouble, the Watts and the Allisons, between whom a feud exists.

Melissa straightens out quarrels between the children of the families, takes care of her father, and supplements his meager salary with money-making schemes of her own. She and Tom Williams, a young attorney, are very good friends.

One day Melissa reads in a newspaper the offer of a society woman to give away clothing to a deserving girl. Melissa writes a letter, telling about herself and asking for a party dress and a new coat for her father. The clothes are sent and Melissa and her father proudly wear them to the revival meeting they are conducting. The city woman and her husband visit the village to call upon Melissa, and the man recognizes in the preacher a fugitive from justice. He informs the local sheriff, and too late learns that Stark is innocent. The sheriff is Sam Allison, and when he goes to arrest Stark, Melissa begs the protection of the Watts faction. As a result there is a feud battle in which many are injured. Stark himself is killed and his death brings realization of his service to the community and leads the rival factions to see their errors. Melissa's consolation is that her father gave his life for his ideals and did not know that he was suspected of a crime.

"The Golden Idiot"

Bryant Washburn's Latest Essanay-K. E. S. E. Play. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE are many human touches in this five-reel picture, good acting, bits of humor, clever subtitles and lovely outdoor views, but there isn't any real story, and for this reason the picture does not rank as high as its clever production would merit.

A magazine story written by Robert Rudd Whiting served as the basis of the picture, and one has the impression that the original story is probably very delightful, something in William J. Locke's whimsical style, and perhaps those who have read it will enjoy the picture very much. To one who has not, there are a number of situations not quite clear, and the plot much of the time seems to be getting nowhere.

Everyone will enjoy the various episodes in the story for they are filled with the humor which has characterized previous features with this star. The Picture was filmed at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, and its beautiful scenery is photographed in the fine fashion.

Arthur Berthelet directed the production. Supporting Mr. Washburn are Virginia Valli, Arthur Metcalfe and Julian Barton. And the three-legged dog, "Tripod," must not be forgotten. The star's role does not give him as great an opportunity for clever acting as previous characterizations.

The Story: Barry Owen (Bryant Washburn) and his three-legged dog, set out as vagabonds in search of adventure. He aids Faith Fanshawe (Virginia Villi), whose automobile has broken down and she gives him fifty cents. Later he gets a position as secretary to a writer, Jeffery Jarvis, and to him tells his story.

His uncle had made a will, dividing his fortune between Barry and Barry's cousin in proportion to the amount each shall have saved at the time of the uncle's death. The cousin is a financier and Barry has been "fired" from a newspaper position. Therefore Barry has no hopes of inheriting any large proportion.

Barry again meets Faith Fanshawe, who falls in love with him and one day pretends drowning so that he may save her and overcome her parents' objections to her knowing him. Barry, though he loves the girl, gives up hope of marrying her on account of his poverty. Then the uncle dies. Barry inherits the fortune because he still has the fifty cents Faith gave him while his cousin has been unfortunate in the market and is in debt.

"The Cook of Canyon Camp"

Five-Part Morosco-Paramount Released July 19. Reviewed by George W. Graves

GESTICULATING, expostulating George Beban—the Beban who has won many followers because of his inimitable, laughable Continental explosiveness—was never more a-tingle with action than in this release as a lovable French-Canadian cook who proves to be as expert in binding up estranged and broken hearts as he is in frying flapjacks for the hungry lumbermen. The attraction of the picture at all times is George Beban, who gets more laughs than he has in any previous picture. His quaint pranks are aided substantially by subtitles written in broken English. There is a human, pathetic, side to the story which the star's acting makes possible, registering the Franch-Canadian culinary artist as a generous, lovable character, but it is to be regretted that the story's superstructure is built on a circumstance so trite as a husband's taking his wife's brother for her lover. A situation of this kind at best falls under the head of the possible rather than the probable and inasmuch as it has been incorporated in so many plots its use does not dignify a story. But the method of getting the husband out of his dilemma is as unusual as the separating circumstance proves to be usual in photoplay plots.

Donald Crisp's direction includes much convincing lumber camp detail, and some interesting night photography. In the other departments his work is entirely satisfactory and the picture may be considered a well directed one. Helen Jerome Eddy appears to her usual good advantage in support of Mr. Beban, rendering a very delightful characterization, and others filling out a good cast are Monroe Salisbury, Florence Vidor and John Burton. The picture can easily be regarded as good entertainment; it is bright, amusing, and there is no doubt as to the star's characterization making a big hit. There is nobody just like Mr. Beban on the screen.

The story tells of a Franch-Canadian cook at a northern lumber camp who, to bring a separated couple together, risks losing his own sweetheart. Although misunderstood for a while, the happy-go-lucky cook's real intent is at last brought into view, and he gets not only the girl who had misunderstood him, but a check from the husband whose family quarrel he had patched up, besides.

It is very appropriate that the name of the new Fairbanks play, in which he does this little stunt a few thousand feet above the floor of the valley, is called "Down to Earth." We hope Doug doesn't suddenly get superstitious.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

READY TO CLIP AND USE IN YOUR PROGRAM OR ADVERTISING

Mutual Pictures

Jerry's Big Stunt—(One Reel)—Horsley—August 2.—Starring George Ovey. Jerry finds himself out of luck seeking a "hand-out" at the back door of a hotel. The daughter of the proprietor spies Jerry, "falls" for his pitiful plea and is handing him a "snack" when father refuses him one bite until he has chopped a pile of wood. Father has been advertising the arrival of the illustrious Count de Cuckoo with the result that his hotel has been deluged with reservations. A letter arrives from the Count protesting his great sadness that he cannot be a guest at the hotel. Father wilts into dejection at the upset plans that revives with the idea that he might secure Jerry's services in filling the role of a count. Jerry enters into the spirit of the situation by donning the Count's clothes and upon presentation to the tittering guests "starts something" when he selects the hotel man's daughter for a dancing partner. In the midst of the festivities the real Count de Cuckoo arrives with his valet. He learns of the hoax, sends for swords and the duel is on. Jerry forsakes technique for practical results. He punctures the Count with a carefully aimed throw, wins the susceptible daughter with a mere glance of appeal and together they leap into an automobile.

Fate and the Child—(Four Reels)—American—July 30.—Starring William Russell. Blair Stanley has come to America intent upon removing "little Arthur" Stanley who stands in his way to succession of the Stanley earldom. Little Arthur is under the protection of Quabba, the gypsy chief, and Louise Grafton, a close friend of Arthur and Esther Stanley who were killed in a railroad wreck. The prized jewel has been stolen from the child by an accomplice of Blair Stanley and turned over to him, but is stolen back by Quabba. Vivian Stanley, deserted wife of Blair, follows him to America and helps thwart his efforts to kill the child. Louise Grafton and Quabba save the child from his murderous uncle and help him come into possession of his estate and his title. Blair Stanley and his wife Vivian are both killed by a stroke of lightning.

Man Proposes—(One Reel)—La Salle—July 31.—Otto, a young newspaper man, receives a letter offering him $10,000 a year as editor of an Alaskan newspaper and advising him to bring his wife. Otto lives in a Bohemian boarding house where there are several pretty girls, but after he has phoned for the minister and begun proposing, they all turn him down because he has left the precious letter at the office and can offer no proof of his good fortune. Meantime Eddie, a fellow boarder and in the same office, finds the letter and takes opportunity to offer himself to Matie, the handsome young artist who occupies the roof studio in Bohemia. Matie snaps at the bait offered and Eddie to celebrate the event starts drinking and loses the letter. One of the girls finds it, shows it to the other girls, and all, including Matie, start in pursuit of Otto, while Eddie also starts after him with a gun. The chamber maid, always a secret admirer of Otto, saves his life and the minister marries them, to the sorrow of all the girls who have turned him down.

Universal Program

The Sign of the Cucumber—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—July 25.—With Tom Delmar, Bob McKenzie, Eva Novak and Chester Ryckman. Eva, the daughter of the Justice of the Peace, is in love with Bob Harboil, the sheriff. He has a cucumber birthmark on his arm. Red Nose robs the bank, and the sheriff calls out a posse to go in search of the thief. Red Nose and his pal capture the sheriff and tie him to a tree. Noticing that the pal is the exact image of the sheriff, Red Nose has him impersonate the sheriff. They fasten a piece of cucumber on the pal's arm. Then the pal leads Red Nose to the town and puts him in the jail; of course, he intends to free him as soon as he has captured the ten thousand dollars reward. The false sheriff is being married to Eva when the real one comes in. There is a fight, wherein the imposter loses his cucumber. At last the house blows up and the false sheriff with it. The real lovers are united at last.

The Soubrette—Joker—July 28.—With Gale Henry and Milton Sims. A city vamp arrives and Lizzie fears that her sweetheart will be taken from her. In her thoughts she sees him elope with the vamp, sees them enter a cafe and the vamp set a trap for her innocent youth. In her thoughts she follows them and gets a job in the cafe as entertainer. She succeeds in getting Zeke away from the woman, but is stabbed by the woman. Lizzie comes to, and finds that she has been having a day dream, as she sees the vamp driving away in a wagon with a large family of kids.

In the Land of Lights and Gloom—(Split Reel)—Powers—With Dr. Dorsey—July 28.—India is the land of light and gloom. On the one side we see the luxury of the Rajahs, and on the other the grinding poverty of the people. All classes are very religious, and adhere strictly to caste and never intermarry. We see the Maharajah leaving his palace, he is the descendant of a line which has ruled the same land for twenty-two centuries. The Nizam of Hyderbad owns more elephants than all of the circuses in America, and they are always hungry. They are used for processions, parades, tiger hunting, clearing the jungle and building purposes. We see the original "Gunga Dhin" watering the elephants The elephants love their bath. In the background we see a tomb. Whenever we see one in India we know that it denotes the grave of a Mohamedan as the Hindus always cremate their dead. On the same real with "Hammon Eggs Reminiscences."

Hammon Eggs Reminiscences—(Split Reel)—Hammon Eggs is a retired actor and he cannot do anything but act. He has a lovely time on the farm acting for the cows and the hens. He wanders out and meets a lot of animals, who laugh at his recitations and his dance to Mendelsohn's Spring Song. The cow says she can do better herself and proceeds to prove it. He sings an ode to the birds of spring, "Oh beautiful fish, oh birds of the sea, why do you always bite bites out of me?" One of the cows asks a hen for an egg and then throws it at Hammond, whose recitations come to an abrupt end. On the same reel with "The Land of Light and Gloom.'

Canning the Cannibal King—Joker—July 26.—With William Franey, Lillian Peacock, Za Su Pitts, and Milburn Moranti. Inbad is shipwrecked on a cannibal island, and meets Priscilla Potts, the missionary. She falls in love with him, but he is scared of her and runs away directly into the presence of LooptheLoop, the cannibal queen. LooptheLoop takes him to her hut. Snagtooth then enters and forces the sailor to accompany him to Priscilla, for she has promised him a plug hat if he could corral Inbad for her. Inbad escapes and is pursued by everybody. At last he jumps into the ocean and swims out of sight.

A Soldier of the Legion—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—July 24.—With George Pearce, Leo Pierson and Irene Hunt. Squash and Spike write an Algerian love story making Celeste the heroine. They call the tale "A Soldier of the Legion." The commandant orders his native orderly to bring the beautiful girl, Celeste, to him. Lieutenant Delnay kills his officer and with his sweetheart, Celeste, flies into the mountains. After days of traveling and great privations they meet some tourists, who assist them. Delnay then secures a position as waiter in a restaurant. Celeste dies just as he returns home. With the story complete, the two go out to celebrate. Celeste, the maid of all work, is sent to clean their room. Finding the scattered pages of the masterpiece, she orams them into the stove, setting a match to her chance for fame as the picture fades.

Caught In the Act—(Two Reels)—Victor—July 27.—With Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber. Tom has a painful awakening one morning, but is unable to remember what happened the night before. When Jack phones him that what he did is worse than burglary or murder, he is a nervous wreck. Tom goes to meet his sweetheart, Effie Jane. Mistaken for "Curley" he is caught and handcuffed by a detective. They take him to the police station and he is locked in a cell. Later the real "Curley, the Fox," is cantured and Tom is released. His friends then tell him that his "crime" was signing the pledge.

The Beautiful Impostor—(Two Reels)—July 26.—With Mary Fuller. Isabel Whitlock secures a position as manikin in a dressmaking establishment in order to obtain enough money to fight for her ancestral home. As the Countess de Mobre is unable to attend Mrs. Grayson-Dodge's house party, Isabel is persuaded to pose as the distinguished guest. There she meets Bob Hathaway, a young broker. Later he learns that she is only a manikin. Isabel explains the part she played, and her motive for doing it. Bob declares his love, and she tells him that she returns it.

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 29—July 27.—The first subject shows the only tea farm in the United States. This infant industry near Charleston, S. C., has made encouraging progress. "Things that happen only in the Movies" is the title of the next subject, which shows a hayseed arriving in New York. Some remarkable views of the city done by a trick camera effect are shown. Next is the washing of paper currency at Washington which allows them to be used again. Then some of the new submarine chasers are shown. The latest in shoes is the next subject and shows snake skins being used for these necessary articles, the price of which mounts steadily. A study in clay by Willie Hopkins, the Screen Magazine's sculptor, completes the reel.

The Gray Ghost—Episode Five—(Two Reels)—July 23.—With Harry Carter and Priscilla Dean. Jerry Tyron, a detective, goes to the hospital to interview Jacques, the waiter, but finds that he is still unconscious. Arabin, the jeweler, is knocked down by Williams, his secretary, as he is opening his safe. Inside the store are several of the Ghost's men, who pose as detectives from an agency. Then Williams tells the boy to bring all the store detectives to Mr. Arabin's office. There they are held up by Williams. While his men are stealing the necklace, the Gray Ghost is embarking for his yacht. On board are Hildreth and Morn Light. The Ghost is triumphant and says, "Well, my boy, I think the two million dollar necklace will very soon belong to me."

Seeing Things—Nestor—July 24.—With Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. Eddie and Edith quarrel and he goes home, gets his valet and leaves for Lonesome Lodge. Eddie is greatly disturbed by strange happenings that convince him the place is haunted. Two counterfeiters take possession of the lodge for their illegal operations. Edith and her girl friend arrive, Edith having decided to make up the quarrel. The counterfeiters lock her in a room, but she is rescued by Eddie. He sends for a minister and a policeman, the former to perform the ceremony that he and Edith have agreed upon, and the latter for the two crooks who are now captured and bound.

Feature Programs

Art Dramas

The Peddler—(Six Reels)—Art Dramas.—Featuring Joe Welch. Although only a peddler, Abraham Jacobs manages to save enough money to send his son, Sammy, to college. Sammy falls in with bad companions, and becomes mixed up in an affair with Mrs. Morgan. Her husband finds them together and orders the wife from his house. Sammy is forced to support her. Driven to desparation in failing to secure the necessary funds to support the woman, Sammy robs his father's safe. Later, Abraham's property in Oklahoma proves to be valuable, which enables him to live in comfort and give his adopted daughter, Mary, all the things she desires. But he wishes for the return of his son, who has been missing since the night of the robbery. The play is brought to a happy ending with the return of the repentant son. Reviewed in this isssue.

Butterfly

The Double Standard—Butterfly—July 23.—With Roy Stewart, Clarissa Selwyn, Frank Brownlee and Frank Elliot. John Fairbrother was elected city judge and declared that he would do everything in his power to close up the cabarets and cafes which lay in the path of thousands of young girls in that city. His first case was two girls who had been caught with male companions in a police round-up. As usual, the men's names were taken, but the women were brought to the court. One of the men was Charlie Ferguson, his nephew. It was only for an instant that he thought of the consequences before he pronounced the word "guilty." Then he took the girls home and did all he could to induce them to walk the straight path. To his amazement he found that the apartment-house was owned by the estate in which his wife and brother-in-law were the heirs.

K. E. S. E.

The Season of Childhood—(Screen time 25 minutes)—Essanay—August 1.—John Holden believes that if you "spare the rod you spoil the child." His wife, Florence, believes just the opposite. The couple quarrel over their differences, and separate. John takes his young son, Charlie, and Florence takes little Tessie. Happiness prevails for the latter two, but trouble reigns in John's new home. His almost brutal treatment of Charlie causes neighbors to complain. They form a mob and threaten to lynch John. He flees with Charlie from a rear door. The infuriated populace give chase. John is almost overtaken when he comes to Florence's new home. He is forced to seek shelter there in the home of happiness. As a thanksgiving offering for his narrow escape he avows "never again." A reconciliation follows.

A Dog in the Manger—Selig—(Two Reels)—Hoyt Comedy.—A. Jackson Bright, an inventor, and Colin Early, his partner, come to grief when their bogus sausage machine goes to pieces and they only escape from pursuing policemen by a very close margin. The two arrive at a hotel where all the employes have gone on a strike and they are put to work by Boniface Somers, the landlord. Both of the workers fall in love with Gay Somers, the landlord's daughter. Because of the scarcity of help, Bright and Early act as elevator boys, chefs, waiters, clerks, etc. One even undertakes to shave a guest at the hotel with dire results when the barber's attention is attracted elsewhere. Mr. Grump, the star boarder, has the gout and his ailment is not at all relieved when the hotel workers wait upon him. He demands to be taken again to his room, but he becomes involved in a row, and seated in his invalid chair he rides out of the hotel and down the walk. Boniface Somers seeing his star boarder leave, instructs Bright and Early to give chase, and they do so accompanied by the hotel proprietor's daughter. Grump's chair never stops until it plunges into the lake. Bright and Early dive in after the star boarder and none of the three ever appear again on the surface.

Paramount

The Cook of Canyon Camp—(Five Reels)—Morosco-Paramount—July 19.—Featuring George Beban with Helen Jerome. Eddy—Jack Smith—misunderstands the endearing terms with which a strange man accosts his wife, and, not stopping to learn that the man is his wife's brother, he leaves his home, heart-broken, finally turning up in a lumber camp in Canada where the story opens. The jovial and kind camp cook, taking pity on "silent Jack," as he is called, finally learns from him the cause of his brooding and sorrow. Jean, the cook, seeing a chance to do some good, pretends that he has had a quarrel with a suppositious wife and asks Jack to write a letter for him asking forgiveness. This Jack does, since the cook claims not to know how to write, signing only "your lonely husband." By means of this letter Jean is able to bring about a reconciliation between the two, although his sweetheart, learning about the fictitious wife, has to be "brought around." Reviewed in this issue.

Triangle

The Sawdust Ring—(Five Reels)—Triangle—July 29.—Featuring Bessie Love. The story of two young "kids" who run away from home to become circus performers. The girl, Janet, at last finds her father who has long been estranged from his wife and a happy reconciliation is brought about, while her playmate, Peter, afraid to return to his cruel drunkard father, is taken care of by the happy reunited family. Reviewed in this issue.

Sudden Jim—(Five Reels)—Triangle—July 22.—Featuring Charles Ray. A tense, virile drama of corrupt politics and business methods written by Clarence Buddington Kelland and directed by Victor Schertzinger. The story tells about a young lad who takes a hand for the first time in his father's big clothes pin mill, and, though at first green at the job, defeats single handed the forces of a big trust that is endeavoring to ruin his business. After taking the enemy's log camp by force and running the necessary timber to his mill he successfully defeats the political tool of the trust and brings all of his troubles to a clean-cut end. Reviewed in this issue.

Vitagraph-V. L. S. E.

The Stolen Treaty—(Five Reels)—Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—July 16.—Featuring Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith. The story tells of the frustrated attempt of a foreign emissary who tries both to doublecross his own country and blackmail the United States for his personal gain. An enterprising American secret service agent with the help of his fiancee succeeds in trapping the villain and forces him to send a note for the safe delivery of the stolen papers. Reviewed in this issue.

General Program

The Coming Out of Maggie—(Two Reels)—O. Henry Series.—Maggie Toole of the East Side is no belle. Though unsought and unsung she secretly hero-worships Dempsey Donovan, the valiant leader of the Give and Take Association, which each Saturday night holds a hop for the girls of the box factory. One night Maggie strolls in with a dandified person, whom she calls "Terry O'Sullivan." Trouble is in sight when the stranger dances twice with Dempsey's paper box girl. Dempsey invites the stranger into a side room and Maggie, panic-stricken follows, to find the stranger's arm upraised with a stilletto. "I knew it, Dempsey," cries Maggie, "his name is Tony Spinelli." When he has been kicked out with his cheese cutter, Maggie cries, effectively it would seem, for Dempsey sees her home and invites her to the next Saturday night hop.

Selig World Library No. 10.—July 18.—Historic New Orleans—an American city teeming with historic lore and romantic associations. Mother and Baby in summer—on invitation of park commissioners, three months old youngster, with her mother, will spend months under summer sky. A Masterpiece in East Indian Architecture—Itaj Mahal, famous mausoleum erected in the 16th century. Eat More Sea Food—the high price of meat has increased the demand for sea food. Boston is one of the largest, best equipped and most extensive fishing ports in the world.

A Daughter of the Southland—(Two Reels)—Selig—July 16.—Cal Buchanan, of the frigate Virginia and Betty Vance have plighted their troth and are soon to wed when the war breaks out between the North and the South. Cal is comissioned to secure the plans of a Yankee fortification. Concealed in a load of hay he reaches his destination, but is discovered and arrested. The clever lad makes his escape, however, and boards the Congress. Betty Vance's brother is seriously wounded and Betty dons his clothing and joins the crew of the Merrimac. During the engagement between the Monitor and the Merrimac Cal again meets his sweetheart, a supposed sailor boy. After the battle Cal and Betty again plan for the wedding, inviting Cal's brother officers to be guests.

The L. X. Clew—(One Reel)—Selig—July 21.—Smith, a butler in the home of the Nelson's, has his shoes mended and to identify them the cobbler marks them with chalk, L. X. Mrs. Nelson's diamond necklace is stolen and it appears that someone on the outside did the job. The detective finds a chalk mark L. X. on the window sill and later finds the mark on the bottom of the butler's shoes. Detective King remarks that the butler's watch has stopped and when it is opened the necklace is found where the works out to be.

The Venturers—(Two Reels)—O. Henry Series.—The one was a Venturer—the other an Adventurer—the one a man who wanted to see adventure, but had never been beyond the city limits—the other a man who had seen adventure in all parts of the world, and who assured the Venturer that things were just as monotonous every place in the world as in the city. So they met, each seeking the unconventional, on a New York street, and dined together as men out of luck with two cents between them—and still nothing happened. They both had credit at the hotel. Then into their lives came the feminine influence—a sweet girl who lived in a house which was irrevocably a household. The adventurer hesitated—he had yet to satisfy his longing for the incalculable. Suddenly Love changed the Venturer into an Adventurer, and settled the Adventurer into a Venturer.

New Concerns

SEVENTEEN newly formed theatrical and picture enterprises having a total capitalization of $446,500 have been incorporated in New York state.

The Charles Richman Pictures, the Windmill Motion Pictures and the Civilization-Pioneer Film Corporation, each having a capital of $100,000, have been incorporated within the state.

Four film companies have merged with the New York Motion Picture Corporation. They are the Fulton, Domino, Kay Bee and the Broncho Motion Picture Companies.

The secretary of state's incorporation fees, according to the new law, have been more than doubled in some instances. For filing a certificate of incorporation for a stock corporation other than a railroad the fees have been increased from $10 to $25. A railroad corporation will be required to pay the state $50. Foreign concerns desiring to do business in New York will now have to pay a fee of $50, which was formerly $11. For filing a certificate of reorganization, extension or revival of corporate existence, $25.

The new amusement corporations for the week are as follows:

Joe Weber's Company, New York City. To provide for the production of theatrical, musical and motion picture attractions. Capital, $30,000. Directors—Joseph M. Weber, Max Weber and Philip Friedman, 1416 Broadway, New York City.

MOTOY'S IN NEW YORK

Motoy Comedies have been taken over by the Peter Pan Film Corporation, which company will move the studio from Chicago to New York, where the comedies will be made in the future.

Ever since these amusing doll pictures made their appearance on the market they have been produced by Chicago manufacturers who have released them through the Peter Pan Film Corporation. The demand for them has been such that President Allen finally decided it would be most advantageous to take over the entire producing plant from the Motoy Company and move the entire organization to New York City.

In addition to releasing the Motoys, the new consolidation is going to introduce a single reel novelty, which will contain surprises for the public and they will be in the market for pictures of 200 feet in length and upwards.

LEAGUE HOLDS LOVE FEAST

The meeting of the Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League held the week previous to the opening of the National Exposition was declared by President Joseph Hopp to have been a veritable "love feast."

"We had perfect harmony and the seventy-five or so exhibitors present never displayed a particle of friction. I think from now on we shall be able to do more because of our ability to present a united front."

Lillian Walker was passing through Chicago at the time and made a little visit to the League meeting. She addressed a few words of greeting to the exhibitors and then left for New York.

A telegram from Lewis J. Selznick was read, stating that he would be in Chicago, July 21, with enough stars to outshine a constellation.

LEW FIELDS, the popular stage star, has started to work in the Chicago studios of the Selig Company under direction of J. A. Richmond. The name of the drama in which Mr. Fields will star has not yet been given out.

Amy Leah Dennis, aged 16, has been chosen leading lady to appear with him in a play, production of which will soon be started at the Selig studios here, under direction of J. A. Richmond. Amy Leah Dennis made a hit in the Selig-Hoyt comedies now being released in K. E. S. E. Mr. Fields saw her work on the screen and he wanted to know all about her just as soon as he arrived in Chicago. He saw her, admired her wonderful enthusiasm, and requested that she be chosen to support him in the Selig play. It is predicted that the youngest leading lady in the world will win added laurels for herself in the forthcoming production.

The big "Movie" ball which is to be the grand finale of the seventh national exposition, at the Hotel Morrison Saturday night, July 21, is in charge of the Reel Fellows club, and that means that it will be a real ball. Get your girl and follow the jazz.

NEW STUDIO FOR INCE

Director will Build Studio for his Paramount Pictures —Charles Ray and Enid Bennett New Paramount Stars

Thomas H. Ince has announced that he expects shortly to build a new studio of his own design, in which will be produced the pictures under his new affiliation with Paramount. The announcement came in the form of a statement from Ince through Jesse L. Lasky to the New York Paramount offices, and followed on the heels of the news that Charles Ray and Enid Bennett, two young photoplayers who have made their way to stardom under Ince, will henceforth appear in pictures to be released regularly through Paramount.

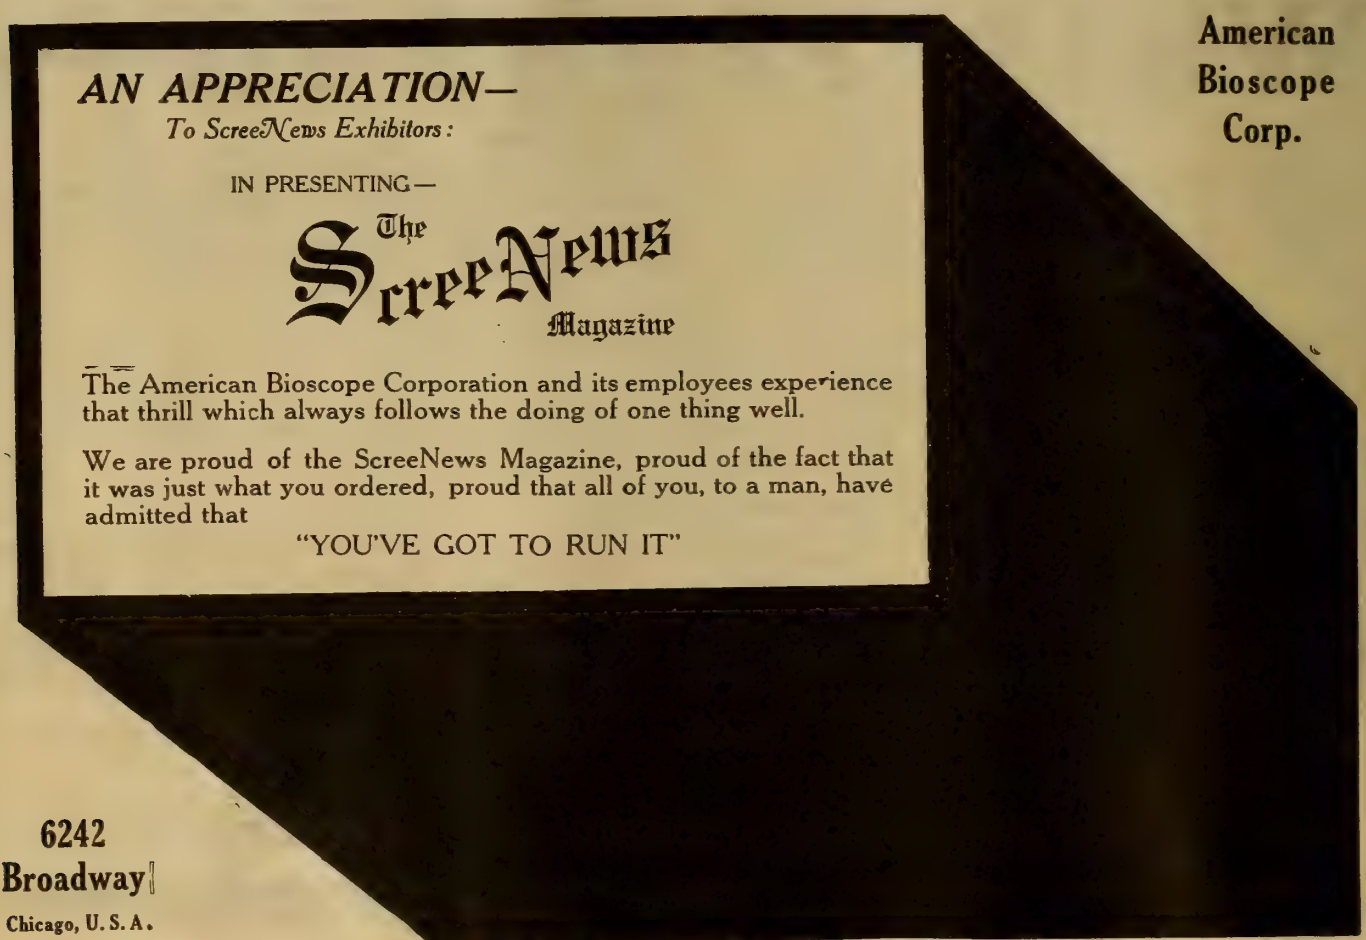
Mr. Ince, following the signing of his contract with Paramount, left immediately for the West. He is now occupying the former Biograph studio in Los Angeles. In his statement Mr. Ince says:

"I will present in five-reel photodramas Charles Ray, Enid Bennett, and one other star whose name will be announced later.

"Having only four producing companies, I can give to each my personal supervision and attention and instead of attempting to turn out a quantity of photodramas for a program, we will be able to devote our attention entirely to quality.

"The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been kind enough to place at my disposal the facilities of their big western organization and I can foresee nothing but a most brilliant future."

The announcement that Charles Ray and Enid Bennett are to appear under Paramount, places the two young Ince stars in the list along with the other Paramount stars, Mme. Petrova, Lina Cavalieri, Billie Burke, Julian Eltinge, Wallace Reid, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Pauline Frederick, Marguerite Clark, Jack Pickford, Louise Huff, Sessue Hayakawa, Vivian Martin and others.



When Mr. Ince completed the arrangements that united him with Paramount he left for California with no announcement as to the future activities of the players whose names have long been associated with him. His recent message was the first news about the stars who have heretofore been under his direction.

Enid Bennett signed a contract with Ince to appear in pictures scarcely a year ago, yet she is already credited with being one of the most popular stars of the cinema.

Her beauty marked her at once for more than passing notice in the days when she played small parts. Added to that she managed to register a charm in her film portrayals that was not at all dependent on her beauty. One of her biggest successes was made in "Happiness," recently shown at the Rialto, New York. Inherent dramatic ability was backed up by the personal direction of Mr. Ince until he found he had another magnet of drawing power to be linked up with Charles Ray.

Chicago Notes

PATHE has moved its shipping department to 172 West Washington street, where it will remain until their offices are once more put back in shape.

C. S. Johnston, assistant cashier of the local Pathe Exchange, has been appointed cashier of the Portland office. Friends of "long John," as he is known, will miss him when he leaves for the West.

Recently the Selig Polyscope Company gave a private showing of the drama, "Who Shall Take My Life?" for the Chicago members of the Anti-Capital Punishment Society of America.

George H. Montgomery, formerly of George Kleine's general offices here, has been placed in charge of Mr. Kleine's K. E. S. E. branch office at Buffalo. Louis Green will continue in the capacity of salesman.

Ten prints of "The Deemster" are working overtime now in the windy city. Lublinger & Trinz and Alfred Hamberger, big Cook County exhibitors, are flashing the picture story of Hall Caine's great novel on the screens of a number of their showhouses.

A number of Chicago playhouses have had to close down because of poor business. The Magnet, 20th Century and Gold on West Twelfth street have shut their doors for a month. The Austin at 5619 West Madison is also refusing people entertainment as is the Lowy at California and Milwaukee.

W. K. Hill, director of the exhibitors' service department of Paramount, is urging the theater men who seek his medical advice to indulge in direct by mail advertising. Mr. Hill has great confidence in that sort of advertising and believes it much superior in opening up new business and getting new patrons to ordinary newspaper displays.

He is also advising exhibitors to get people interested in the prizes being offered by the Black Diamond Company for ideas for good comedies. The company is offering $250 for each suggestion of fifty words which they decide can be used. People, Mr. Hill says, like to work at something like that and often it is the way of getting them interested in pictures.

J. S. Woody, formerly Mutual's district manager at Seattle, is now in charge of Triangle's Chicago office in place of C. R. Seery, the well known former manager who has resigned.

A large invited audience attended the special showing of Pathe's "Les Miserables," under the supervision of Tom North at Orchestra Hall on July 12. The picturized Hugo classic is now holding the screen at that summer theater, having supplanted the British government pictures, "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre."

Why They Have Faith In Goldwyn

EXHIBITORS themselves are largely responsible for the nation-wide feeling of faith and confidence in Goldwyn and in our productions. They tell us, and they have told other exhibitors, that they believe in Goldwyn:

Because Samuel Goldfish always has been identified with and produced clean, fine, superior pictures and under this big new alliance he has the facilities to make better and finer pictures than ever before.

Because Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Margaret Mayo have in quick succession produced some of the greatest and most successful plays in the history of the American theater, and bring to Goldwyn a knowledge of box office values that will benefit every exhibitor in the industry.

Because Goldwyn's authors represent the best names identified with big, money-making plays and novels on two continents and because the very pick of all their works are owned and controlled by Goldwyn.

And also because every artistic facility that a producer can obtain has been enlisted into Goldwyn service for the making of Goldwyn Pictures.

When important exhibitors have said all of these things about us, what more could we wish to say about ourselves?

Big Chicago Convention Closes

TO BE HELD IN BOSTON IN 1918—EXPOSITION DRAWS 300,000

THE stormy sessions of the Seventh National Motion Picture Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the immense crowds of the exposition are now a part of the past.

Chicago this year saw the biggest and most successful exposition the industry has ever known. The first four days this year exceeded in attendance the entire week in 1916, and the price of admission remained the same, fifty cents. The total attendance at the big show reached the 300,000 mark. The fourth day alone netted $1,474. And Chicago also saw the stormiest political meetings the National League has ever held.

Minority Bolts Convention

The big fight was over the election of the next national president. Lee A. Ochs, of New York, the former president, nominated by Louis Levine, of New York, was re-elected by a vote of 178 to 35, with Indiana and Oklahoma, representing 29 votes, not voting. And the delegates representing the 35 votes against Ochs and other exhibitors, about 100 in all, bolted the convention, later starting a separate organization. This is known as the American Exhibitors' Association. Full details of the new exhibitors' body will be found on a later page in this issue.

The other officials of the M. P. E. L. of America elected were: Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago local league, made first vice-president; William Isenberg of Mississippi, re-elected second vice-president; H. M. Thomas, of Omaha, third vice-president; Edward J. Fischer, fourth vice-president; William J. Sweeney of Chicago, relected financial and recording secretary; William Brandt of Brooklyn, corresponding secretary; Ernest H. Horstmann of Massachusetts, treasurer, succeeding Peter J. Jeup of Michigan. Each of these officials were elected without opposing candidates and without opposition. The elections were completed at a long session which came to a close at the Coliseum Annex at 2 o'lock in the morning, Thursday, July 19. The by-laws require the election of officers on the third day of the convention. To make this possible the official time of the convention was set back three hours, making the election begin at 8:30 p. m. instead of 11:30, which was the time according to other clocks in Chicago.

While it is impossible at this time to foresee the effect the newly organized exhibitors' minority will have, it is to be regretted that the division of forces occurred just at this time, owing to the fact that President Wilson has called upon the picture industry to co-operate directly with the government in the prosecution of the war, and President Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, who was appointed by the President to represent the industry for the government, had worked hard at the convention to keep all phases of the industry united in order to be able to take advantage of the unusual opportunity to be of service to the government and to secure added prestige for the picture business.

Newly Elected Officials M. P. E. L. of America

President: Lee A. Ochs, New York, re-elected.

First Vice-President: Joseph Hopp, Illinois, president Chicago Exhibitors' League.

Second Vice-President: William Isenberg, Mississippi.

Third Vice-President: H. M. Thomas, Omaha, Nebraska.

Secretary: William J. Sweeney, Chicago, re-elected.

Corresponding Secretary: William Brandt, Brooklyn.

Treasurer: Ernest H. Horstmann, Massachusetts.

Next Convention in Boston

Boston won the convention for 1918. The big and energetic delegation from the Hub and the eastern states, scattered all kinds of literature broadcast, sang Boston songs and boosted Boston generally through the week. St. Louis was its only competitor so Boston was granted the next show by an almost unanimous vote. Although Chicago is conceded on account of its location and facilities to be the ideal convention town, the Windy City men made no attempt to claim the show for next season because it was held in Chicago in 1916 as well as this year.

The Convention By Days

Nothing of great importance was transacted during the first day of the convention. The details of these first sessions were printed in Motography last week. The actions of the following days, to the close of the convention follow.

The Tuesday afternoon session was given over to the reports of various committees and discussions.

The Daylight Savings Committee reported first and stated that it was unanimously opposed to any legislation which would change the hours of the working day and alter the time of showing pictures in theaters. The damage done to the theaters in Detroit under a daylight saving plan was cited by Treasurer Jeup, who spoke for the resolution. The motion that the exhibitors go on record as opposed to daylight saving legislation and that a copy of the resolution be sent to Congress was unanimously carried.

Report on Deposit System

The report of the resolution committee, of which Louis F. Blumenthal was secretary, was read. The first resolution, regarding the advance deposit system, was most eagerly listened to and discussed. The resolution follows:

First: That the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in National Convention assembled, declare themselves unalterably opposed to the advance deposit system and that we do pledge ourselves to do everything in our power to cause this system to be entirely eliminated from the film trade.

Second: That the national secretary be instructed to immediately communicate with every known manufacturer and exchange and request each and all to demand no further advance deposit with their film contract, and to return all present advance deposit money to the exhibitors of the United States not later than September 1, 1917.

Third: Be it further resolved that these communications be sent to the producers and exchanges prior to August 1, 1917, by the National Secretary with a request for an answer within ten days, that complete report giving the names of those who refuse to eliminate the advance deposit or ignore the communication published in all the trade papers immediately after September 1, 1917.

Fourth: Be it further resolved that if there are any producers or exchanges who refuse to eliminate the Advance Deposit System, or return the advance deposit money to the exhibitors of the United States before September 1, 1917, then the National President shall communicate either through all the trade papers or by letter with every exhibitor in the United States and request that they use every lawful means to destroy the Advance Deposit System and favor those who do not require a deposit on their film contracts.

Fifth: Be it further resolved that we see a great need of a more standard form of contract and method of trade between exhibitor and exchange, and we therefore advocate the need of such a contract and believe that it will be the best means of eliminating the Advance Deposit System and we therefore advocate the adoption of a uniform film contract which will be equitable and fair to exchange, producers and exhibitors and that this resolution herewith be further referred to a committee on contracts who will submit a form of contract to this convention for adoption.

Sixth: We advise that this contract be based on the following plan:

(1) No advance deposits whatsoever.

(2) All contracts subject to two weeks' cancellation at any time by either party.

(3) All film rentals to be paid before leaving the exchange, unless a special arrangement is made between the exhibitors and exchange, whereby the exhibitor is allowed to receive his film on open account.

(4) That a committee be appointed consisting of the national officers to meet a committee of the principal producers and exchange men for the purpose of carrying out the above resolutions.

In the discussion that followed the reading of this resolution, the statement was made that a similar resolution had been passed at the convention last year, and the exhibitors were warned of the fact that the struggle was not won with the passing of a resolution. Mr. Fisher of Washington was called on to tell how Washington had abolished the system. He stated that it was done by the exhibitors sticking together and organizing. Other exhibitors from states who had successfully fought the system reported to the same effect.

Committee to Fight Legislation

The next resolution created a welfare committee and was stated as follows:

Whereas, the motion picture industry has recently become subject of a large and widespread legislative attack throughout the legislatures of the United States,

Whereas, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America is the accredited controller of the powers of the screen and fighting force in behalf of the motion picture exhibitors of the United States,

Whereas, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America have no systematic means or legislative committee to combat these legislative attacks throughout the United States,

Be it resolved, that the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America hereby create a committee to be known as the National Legislative and Judiciary Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America,

Be it further resolved, that this committee shall be composed of a chairman and vice-chairman elected by the delegates of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and the president of each state motion picture league shall appoint a member to sit on this committee as a legislative representative of their respective state.

Be it further resolved, that an office be opened in the city of New York, where notices of all bills introduced affecting the motion picture industry shall be sent and files kept and fights conducted on any and all legislatures attacking the motion picture industry.

There arose a discussion regarding the location of the office of the committee which resulted in an amendment providing that the location of headquarters be wherever the chairman of each committee thought best at the time.

The Seventh National Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in session at the Coliseum Annex, Chicago, July 16 to 20. In the center, foreground, in the light suit, is William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, who addressed the convention.

A resolution regarding the granting of the publicity of the screen to the government was introduced, and the fact that the manufacturers rather than the exhibitors had been named on the war publicity committee was commented on. However, the resolution as presented was judged too harsh and recommitted to the committee.

Condemn High Star Salaries

A resolution was then adopted by which the exhibitors went on record as opposed to the high salaries paid the picture stars, because this practice increases the prices of film rentals and saps exhibitors' profits.

A report was made by A. E. Morelock of St. Louis of the conditions facing St. Louis exhibitors who were forced by the American Federated Musicians' Union to accept an unfair contract and were forbidden to discharge unsatisfactory musicians. The civic authorities were to be appealed to by the league.

A resolution by W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ohio, directing that league members adopt a stereopticon slide for exhibition in their houses with the line "This theater is a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America" and that a similar sign be displayed above members' box offices, was adopted.

The report of the law and legislative committee was read, going into the matter of several bills against the league. A motion was carried granting the request of William A. Brady that he be allowed to address the delegates. The matter of the increase in the exhibitor branch of the National Association from ten to fourteen was granted, provided that fourteen shall represent not more than one-third of the total number of the directorate.

The committee on the Exhibitors Trade Review question then announced that it was ready to report. This report was given in executive session, the members of the press being barred. This is explained by the fact that the Review is President Och's own organ.

Aid Clean Pictures Fight

The Wednesday morning session began with President Ochs' introduction of Dr. Mary F. Waring, who represented the National Council of Women. Dr. Waring made a short speech in which, on behalf of the council, she begged the Exhibitors' League to pledge its co-operation in keeping indecency and suggestiveness out of pictues. She paid a tribute to the immense influence of the picture theater. A resolution was passed by which the exhibitors promised to co-operate with the National Council in its fight for clean pictures.

William McCormick Blair of the Four-Minute-Men, then explained the purpose of that organization and its place in the scheme of governmental publicity. Mr. Brown of Idaho moved that the request of the organization for eight minutes a week in each theater be granted, stating that this greatly simplified the problem of the exhibitor who was met by many requests to address his audiences. The motion was carried.

Stormy Session Begins

After these preliminary speeches, one of the stormiest sessions of the convention began. One after another the names of the candidates for presidency of the league were withdrawn, in accordance with the plan of the dissenting faction. Percy G. Wells of North Carolina withdrew the name of H. B. Varner; Mr. Pettijohn of Indiana withdrew Frank Rembusch; and W. J. Slimm of Ohio withdrew Frank Herrington.

Then followed a lively argument as to whether the dissenters should be ignored or brought back into the convention. Jake Wells of Virginia was spokesman for the bolting faction. He stated in concise form his objections to the "let the majority rule and damn the minority" system, that the exhibitors were not the only part of the industry and that they should all work together to better their share. He stated that he had come to do business, not to witness a fight. He begged the convention not to rejoice that they would send the minority home, licked.

Mr. Wells was checked in his speech and President Ochs took occasion to answer him, stating that in his position he must let the majority rule and go with them. Mr. Wells was allowed to speak further and stated that the majority rule did not necessitate overruling the minority report. The argument grew in heat until Dr. H. Charles Hespe of New Jersey ended a speech by calling the dissenters "cattle." Mr. Wells and others of the exhibitors resented the remark and stated that such a spirit had lead to the break.

The result of the argument was that an arbitration committee of five was appointed to meet the dissenters and if possible win harmony for the convention. The meeting then adjourned until the afternoon. Fisher of Washington, Eager of Nebraska, Brown of Idaho, Clark of Mississippi and Levy of Illinois were appointed to the arbitration committee.

Brady Pleads "Get Together"

The speeches made by W. A. Brady and other officials of the National Association, begging for harmony in the league, the report of the music committee, and the report of the arbitration committee were the events of the afternoon session.

Mr. Brady stated that he was sorry not to meet both factions, sorry that there was a split in the league. He pointed out to the exhibitors their wonderful opportunity at the present time to become an important factor in the nation, no longer a group of outcasts, chased from pillar to post, a target for every long-haired reformer. He urged them to unite for the common good and forget politics. He explained the fact of his appointment as head of the motion picture war committee. He said that he was not trying to control the screen, as had been charged, but that he was a personal friend of President Wilson, and because of this had been given the appointment, that he was merely an instrument in the campaign to mobolize the picture industry and that many picture men would be appointed to various committees, and that all must work for the common good. His final appeal was "Get together and make good!"

Walter Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V. L. S. E., explained in his speech the reason why Vitagraph was not represented in the exposition. His speech, in part, follows:

Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention: At the outset I want to say that it is a matter of keen personal disappointment to me, as well as to the Vitagraph Company, that the company is not represented this year in your exposition.

Vitagraph has failed to participate in the exposition not because it is out of sympathy with your organization, or for the purpose of saving money, but solely by reason of being unable to spare any of its company of players from the production work, owing to the recent illness of several of them, and because it felt that a booth without stars in attendance would not be a credit either to you or to the company.

As an evidence, however, of the keen appreciation of Vitagraph in the value of the organized exhibitor, and of the benefit to the entire industry of the work of the organized exhibitor, in fact, of the necessity of the strongest possible exhibitors' organization, Vitagraph has sent its check for $1,000, payable to

New National Exhibitors' Organization

BOLTERS FROM M. P. E. L. FORM "AMERICAN EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION

THAT history repeats itself is an old saying. When the Progressives bolted the Republican party at the Chicago Coliseum in 1912 everybody knew that action would again be repeated some day, but nobody knew by whom, nor where, until Wednesday, July 17, 1917. Then it was left for the convention of exhibitors, at that same historic old Coliseum to repeat the trick, disagree, and start the American Exhibitors Association.

Charles C. Pettijohn, of Indianapolis, general manager of the new American Exhibitors' Association, with $10,000 salary.

And the same charge of gavel rule and steam roller politics that was heard in 1912 was again heard during the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America which has just gone down in history.

When it was learned that Lee A. Ochs would again accept the presidency of that organization, after agreeing to stand by the recommendations of the arbitration committee, formed of five members from each faction, nearly a hundred delegates arose and filed out of the convention hall. Earlier in the day they had held meetings at the New Morrison Hotel, where they had discussed the advisability of forming a new organization if their plea for scrapheaping the steam roller which they said was in operation at the Coliseum, was disregarded.

Frank Rembusch of Indiana, Fred Herrington of Pennsylvania, and H. B. Varner of North Carolina, withdrew as candidates for the presidency when they saw the conduct of affairs at the Coliseum, and asked that Mr. Ochs decline the nomination also in order that a new man might be elected. Mr. Ochs refused to withdraw his name, and the insurgents refused to attend the convention as a consequence. They took up headquarters at the New Morrison and discussed plans for a new organization. Finally they were prevailed upon to appoint a committee of five to meet a similar committee from the convention to discuss grounds upon which the two factions could get together and bury the hatchet.

The joint committee after a heated session reached an agreement and decided to recommend the suggestion offered by the insurgents—namely, that the original aspirants for office all withdraw in favor of a new man. And it was on the strength of this agreement that the bolters, as they were called, attended the convention in the evening.

They looked at each other out of the corners of their eyes when Lee Ochs was nominated. Jake Wells of Virginia immediately got to his feet and asked Mr. Ochs if he intended to accept the nomination.

Mr. Ochs said he did and the split suddenly yawned and became a gaping canyon. The insurgents arose to a man and without a word of debate or protest left the room. The incident was closed and the American Exhibitors' Association was born by their action the same evening.

The next day the bolters convened and in a business-like manner set to work to establish a new organization. A temporary organization was formed and committees appointed. Everybody was given a chance to talk and yet the business transacted was astonishing. The members were in absolute harmony and before the day was over the American Exhibitors' Association had kicked off its swaddling clothes and donned long pants.

Officers of New Organization

The following officers were elected without a dissenting voice: Jake Wells of Virginia, president; Guy Wonders of Maryland, vice-president; William Fait of New York, treasurer; and Charles Pettijohn of Indiana, general manager and secretary.

$10,000 Salary for General Manager

Just to show that they meant business and were intent upon having a strong and active organization it was decided to pay the general manager a salary of $10,000 a year. He is to establish offices in New York, appoint the national organizer and will really be the one whose duty it is to pilot the new association safely through the troublous waters of the coming year.

The national or governing body of the association it was determined should be a board of directors consisting of one director from each state. Cities with over a million inhabitants are to take out charters independent of the state in which they are located and will be represented in the executive council by a director the same as a state. The following men representing twenty-two states and cities were chosen for the ensuing year as the directors of the new organization: L. T. O'Donnell, California; Harry Crandall, Washington, D. C.; H. A. Krug, Chicago; Frank Rembusch, Indiana; W. H. Willie, Kansas; Dee Robinson, Illinois; Louis Dittman, Kentucky; M. W. Thatcher, Louisiana; Guy Wonders, Maryland; Harry L. Kincaid, Massachusetts; Peter Jeup, Detroit; Al Steffes, Minnesota; Sam Trigger, New York City; I. M. Mosier, New York State; Percy Wells, North Carolina; Sam Bullock, Ohio; A. B. Momand, Oklahoma; Fred Herrington, Pennsylvania; George C. Varner, South Carolina; Charles C. McElravy, Tennessee; Harry Bernstein, Virginia; and J. E. Sherwood, Wisconsin.

Membership in the association was limited to picture theater owners or their accredited representatives, and the dues were fixed at $12 per year, $6 to go to the support of the national body, and $6 to be accredited to the support of the state.

A committee of Percy Wells, I. M. Mosier, Frank Rembusch, Sam Bullock, A. P. Tugwell, Jake Wells and Charles Pettijhon drew up the constitution and by-laws for the American Exhibitors' Association and their report was unanimously accepted.

Will Work with Government

In order to show that while disagreeing with the National League as to its policy of doing business, that as a body of loyal exhibitors they were willing to co-operate with the government in every way possible, on the motion of Mr. Rembusch it was decided to turn the names of the directors and officers of the organization over to President Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry as the ones who would actively work with him in co-operation with the government.

The body after considerable debate agreed that they should take advantage of the invitation extended them and make application for membership in the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Detroit was named as the city for the new association's next convention and after lengthy consideration the idea of having an exposition in conjunction with it was given up. The date for the next convention was left to the board of directors to be determined later, along with the great mass of details incidental to getting the new body fully launched.

The entire proceedings were marked by the greatest harmony and a desire to let every member have his say. There seemed to be present a driving power behind the organization that spelled success. Every man present seemed to take it upon himself to see that no false step was made so that when he returned home to the exhibitors he represented he could speak with conviction of the new national exhibitors' association.

Ad Men Adopt Films

At the recent convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in St. Louis, Missouri, the motion picture was one of the outstanding features. The Advertising Film Producers' Association, which is the film department, had a motion picture exhibit in the council chamber of the City Hall.

The attendance of the ad men at this exhibit conclusively shows that the large business interests are awake to the possibilities of the motion picture films in connection with their advertising campaign.

This is the first year that the ad men have officially recognized the film producers as a separate and distinct department, and to show their appreciation of this recognition the Advertisers' Film Producers made a 3,000-foot film showing all of the activities of the convention, including the arrival of the delegations, the opera "Aida," in the new municipal theater in Forest Park, and the night parade.

The president of the Advertising Film Producers' Association is W. A. Harris, of Cincinnati, Ohio; vice-president, W. R. Rothaker, of the Rothaker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Illinois; secretary, R. V. Stambaugh, Art Film Studios, Cleveland, Ohio; treasurer, Fred Laflin, Camel Film Company, Chicago, Illinois.

CONVENTION ORATORY

All of the speakers were very generous of the other delegates' time.

"Please sit down and take your seats!" shouted President Ochs during one of the periods of storm and stress on the convention floor.

Two delegates who came to the big League political rally and did not forget their heads or check them at the hotel were Eager of Nebraska and Pettijohn of Indiana. They separated lots of verbal wheat and chaff.

And during one of the most strenuous political storms the Boston delegation sang "Har-r-mon-e-e!" But this time music did not have the charm that soothes the savage orators.

A New Jersey orator declared the progress of the League had been wonderful during the past year. "The League," he shouted in his enthusiasm, "has grown to terrible and terrifying proportions"!

Joe Hopp in his nomination speech of Bill Sweeney for re-election to the office of national secretary: "Why, he is so well known throughout the industry that his name is almost a household thing!"

WE'RE NOT A FAN PAPER

We asked Sidney Drew, who, with his wife and Frank Bushman and Beverly Bayne appeared at the exposition on Metro day, Sunday, to tell us the New York news.

"Well," said the homely, humorous and good natured Sidney, "There isn't any scandal that I can think of."

And the climax of the convention oratory was reached in the speech of acceptance made by Lee Ochs at about 1 o'clock in the morning after he had been re-elected president and following the bolting of the bolters from the convention.

"Say, if I don't trim that bunch I'm through! I'm going to pull some'n this year that it'll be good and when I do, them babies will get theirs!"

Here's a periscope view of the daily program of the average delegate to the national convention:

Arise (or leave poker game): 9 a. m.

Breakfast—if any—9:30.

Attempting to understand convention speeches: 10 to 1 p. m.

Wishing he could change his vote and change it back again: 10 to 1 p. m.

Trying to get the floor of the convention: 10:06; 10:16; 10:34; 10:56; 11:18; 11:25; 11:40; 11:57; 12:13; 12:24; 12:29; 12:34; 12:50; 12:51; 12:52; 12:53; 12:55; 12:57; 12:57½; 12:58; 12:59. Adjourned till 2:30 p. m.

Sometime before rising, or end of game: Sleep.

WHY THE STARS THOUGHT THEY WERE SLIPPING

The exposition managers failed to provide for one very important thing: Room for the fans to clap their hands when the stars appeared. They were always squeezed in so tight that only those around the edges could have clapped even one hand, let alone both of them.

PROFESSIONAL ETIQUETTE

Fred Schaefer introduced Rose Tapley at the press dinner at the Blackstone and she made a speech about Norma Talmadge, the guest of honor, and right in the middle of it Bill Hollander of the Daily News asked Norma would she pass the matches. Bill, you never will no no manners. Now Norma thinks Chicago is all ruff neks.

America's Biggest Exposition

FINAL DAYS OF INDUSTRY'S MOST SUCCESSFUL SHOW—ONE DAY NETS $1,474

THE picture industry is now undoubtedly the possessor of the biggest business exposition held in America. No other industry can compare with the art-occupation of films in public interest, and but four in the nation can claim more extensive commercial development.

Something of the size and standing of the industry is reflected in the tremendous success of the 1917 exposition just past. Probably 300,000 people passed through the doors of the vast Chicago Coliseum. There were nearly fifty stars present. The manufacturers and supply men who made exhibits actually sold thousands of dollars worth of their products in the form of transferences of property or rental of pictures. Exhibitors were brought in closer touch with manufacturers than ever before. The first day of the exposition netted $1,149; the second, $1,142; third day, $1,216, and the fourth, Tuesday, $1,474. No other picture exposition has equaled this one.

All of which is a good thing for the business.

Director Makes Statement

Ludwig Schindler, exposition director, had the following to say concerning the big show:

I certainly am mighty well pleased the way the big exposition turned out. It was a success from every standpoint. We had more people at the Coliseum the first four days of this year's exposition than attended the entire week last year. When the exposition opened this year we were somewhat below last year's mark in amount of returns from exhibition space sold, but has been more than made up by the big attendance of the public and by the actual sales made at the exposition, due to the fact that the convention was held in the same building and the exhibitors were in constant touch with the displays made by the various exhibitors on the exposition floor. Thousands of dollars worth of sales were actually made by the manufacturers and equipment dealers at their booths.

We had nearly fifty stars present at the big show and the public was continually pleased with their appearances. It is probable that the total attendance at the 1917 exposition will nearly reach the 300,000 mark. Great credit is due to the success of the big show to George Laing, Fred Hartman, George Krebs, and the other members of the active exposition committee. We all worked hard and are mighty glad the thing went over with such a big success.

George Laing, who acted as assistant exposition director, had the following to say to MOTOGRAPHY:

The thing went over with a size and success that surpassed our fondest hopes. I estimate that 30,000 people a day attended the exposition, that is including both the afternoon and evening. This means that the entire nine days of the show, from July 14 to 22, inclusive, there were nearly 300,000 people at the Coliseum.

William J. Sweeney, re-elected national secretary of the M. P. E. L. of America, was also highly pleased with the exposition. "It was the biggest and best exposition the industry has ever seen," he said.

Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago branch of the exhibitors league, was highly enthusiastic over the big show just passed, as were also all the big film executives and the exhibitors who attended the exposition between sessions of the convention. The complete exposition program has already appeared in MOTOGRAPHY, together with the story of the attractions up to

Tuesday—Fourth Day

Tuesday was officially Universal Day, although Universal players did not confine their receptions to that day alone. The appearance of Mae Murray was especially interesting, since the announcement that she is the latest addition to Bluebird plays was made at this time. The many "fans" who have become familiar with the Bluebird type of play remarked on her particular fitness for this brand of picture. Violet Mersereau won all hearts and was unfailingly smiling and merry whenever she came before her audience. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran were in evidence pretty much all the time. Rosemary Theby was also there to announce her return to Universal pictures.

Wednesday—Alice Brady Day

Wednesday, the biggest day of all so far as the number of admissions counted, was World-Brady Day. It was rather a family affair with the Brady's, for while William A. made his memorable speech to the exhibitors in the Convention Hall, Daughter Alice, at the exposition, was greeting an audience so large that it taxed the capacity of the Coliseum. Five thousand people were turned away before the evening was over, it is stated, and 25,000 admitted. Incidentally, William A. Brady was one of those held outside the doors for some time by the crowd who wished to greet his daughter.

The appearance of Carlyle Blackwell in the World booth was an added suprise which the day held, for he was not among those first announced. Another Brady-World favorite present was June Elvidge.

Thursday—K. E. S. E. Featured

Like the Universal stars, K. E. S. E. players, especially the Essanay delegation, were very generous in appearing before the exposition visitors. Most of these players have large personal followings among Chicago fans. Among the "Keys" players were Bryant Washburn, Hazel Daly, Marguerite Clayton, Mary McAlister, Taylor Holmes, Helen Ferguson, and Amy Dennis from Chicago studios, and Shirley Mason, who came from New York for the event.

Art Dramas Stars on Friday

Alma Hanlon and Jean Sothern, under the protection of Art Dramas, appeared on Friday and added further brightness to the starlight. Fannie Ward and Jack Dean also arrived on this day.

Saturday—Norma Talmadge

Norma Talmadge, representing Selznick, and Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne captured the town Saturday. The Bushman-Bayne Club, composed of a group of Chicago enthusiasts for these players, was in its glory.

The Red Cross auction was held Saturday night and was a huge success. Gowns worn by Marguerite Clark, Mary Miles Minter and other favorites in favorite roles were autioned, as well as other donations from screen notables, autographed photographs, etcetera, were eagerly sought. Fanny Ward presented with a ball of yarn every young woman who promised to knit a pair of socks for a soldier.

Bushman and Bayne on Sunday

Metro's day was Sunday and in addition to Bushman and Bayne, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Edith Storey and Viola Dana arrived upon the scene. There was no let-down in the enthusiasm of the crowds on the closing day, in fact it seemed to be greater. All seemed to realize that the exposition will not be held in Chicago next year and made the best use of the opportunity to take a look at celebrities in reality.

MUSIC IN THEATERS

Committee at National Convention of M. P. E. L. of America Reports on Important Question of Playing Copyright Music

That the question of playing copyright music in picture theaters holds danger for the exhibitor was brought out by the report of the music tax committee at the national convention of the M. P. E. L. of America. The report itself follows:

Whereas, by decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, it has been decreed that copyrighted music cannot be played for profit without a license from the owner of the copyright, who already receives a royalty from the publisher, and

Whereas the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, representing the composers and publishers, threatens to take legal and criminal proceedings to restrain the public performance of music in the motion picture theaters unless licenses are obtained and fees paid at the rate of ten cents per chair, and

Whereas the payment of any fees for such privilege is wrong in principle, and

Whereas in so far as this committee has been able to ascertain, the action contemplated by the said society strikes at the very vitals of our business and if successful would mean ultimately the absolute ruin of the amusement business inasmuch as the said society may see fit without legal restraint to increase and make burdensome the license fee and other regulations, and

Whereas the acceptance of any proposition from the said society would invite dangerous operations of similar nature,

Now, therefore, be it resolved that this organization go on record as being utterly opposed to such arbitrary exactions and recommends to the National Congress that steps be taken to amend the copyright laws so as to eliminate this evil, and, be it further

Resolved that until such relief is obtained from the Congress the members of this organization refrain from playing music composed or published by the members of the said society.

John Mannheimer of New York, chairman of the committee, explained the situation which confronted theater managers.

The United States supreme court has decided that copyright music may not be played for profit unless the composer grants the right. This decision was handed down against a certain restaurant in New York, but applies as strongly against any picture theater. A group of musicians and music publishers, seeing a chance to get money from picture theaters, have taken advantage of the law.

The Society of American Composers, Authors and Publishers was formed to control these copyrights and make the theaters pay a tax for using their music. The society is at present demanding a fee of ten cents per chair per annum from each theater which wishes the right to the music the copyright of which is controlled by the Society.

S. M. Berg of the music department of the Trade Review spoke on the question. He stated that this American Society has collected $60,000 already and has this fund with which to fight their case. He pointed out the fact that a French society had also been formed, controlling copyrights, and stated that there was no limit to the number of societies which could be formed to tax the exhibitor for music rights and no limit to the tax they could demand. He suggested that the exhibitors try to have the national copyright law amended to protect them. He declared that as the law now stood the society was within its rights, but said that the case might be fought from the "restraint of trade" angle.

Exhibitors to Fight

Mr. Goldsmith, a New York attorney, spoke on the measure, discussing legal aspects of the matter. He said that a number of Brooklyn exhibitors had been brought to trial under this copyright law. One of four actions could be taken by the exhibitors. They must (1) pay the tax demanded; (2) not play copyright music; (3) compromise with the society; (4) fight. He stated that the matter might be fought from the "restraint of trade" angle, testing the right of the society to throw the copyrights to one body.

The suggestion was made that the publishers be appealed to, since playing their music in pictures houses was a form of advertising for them. The answer to this was that the publishers had been interviewed and that little could be accomplished in this way.

A motion was made and carried to leave the matter with the new executive committee and that each member of the league be taxed $3, the fund to finance the fight against the society.

---

The Combat, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"This is a remarkable picture, full of varied out-of-door scenes. One of those real good pictures that will please any audience. Business was good, as this star is a drawing power here."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—In a college town.

---

The Island of Surprise, with Wm. Courtenay (Vitagraph)—"I did not see this picture, but from the box office receipts and from the comments I hear, it must be a wonderful picture."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—In a college town.

---

The Sins of the Mother, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"This is a splendid picture. Brought a full house for two days."—Peter Grills, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

---

Clover's Rebellion, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"I can recommend this as a very good picture. It pleased our audience."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

Her Mortal Sin, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"An excellent picture. Miss Dana gives a wonderful interpretation of the part she takes. A very deep picture with a happy ending, business was good as this star is very popular here."—C. C. Hubert, Newark Opera House, Newark, N. J.—Catering to a college town.

---

The Fall of a Nation (Vitagraph special)—"The best war picture we ever ran. Biggest business we ever had. People went crazy over it. We have had numerous requests to re-book it."—H. E. Manor, Hebron Opera House, Hebron, Ill.

---

Her Secret, with Alice Joyce (Vitagraph)—"An excellent picture. The star is good. Good business."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

---

The Island of Regeneration, with Edith Storey (Vitagraph)—"A great drawing card. Fine picture. Scenery great. Can be featured."—H. E. Manor, Opera House, Hebron, Ill.

---

Lest We Forget, with Sidney Drew (Metro comedy)—"Very funny. Even the organist laughed out loud."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

---

The Call of Her People, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"Very good picture. Patrons were well pleased. Business very good."—James Poro, Casino Theater, Astoria, L. I., N. Y.

---

The Haunted Pajamas, with Harold Lockwood (Metro)—"An odd picture that was liked. The star is a popular favorite here. The plot of the picture is a farce that is next to impossible but it provides good amusement."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

---

Aladdin's Other Lamp, with Viola Dana (Metro)—"Good light comedy, that drew good business."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wis.

Hidden Children, with Lockwood and Allison (Metro)—"This picture went over big owing to the popularity of the stars. There are some beautiful out-of-door scenes in this picture; it is not the kind of a story to show these stars to their best advantage."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—Catering to a college town.

---

---

The Broadway Sport, with Stuart Holmes (Fox)—"This star's best. Was liked better than 'The Derelict.' The star draws here. A good feature."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

---

Some Boy, with George Walsh (Fox)—"This is SOME picture, with capital letters. The star draws here. Everybody was well pleased."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

---

Melting Millions, with George Walsh (Fox)—"A knock-out. People say he is better than Fairbanks. Business fair on a Monday."—Frank Dietlein, Jr., Princess Theater, Opelousas, La.—High class patronage.

---

Six Cylinder Love, with Tom Mix (Fox comedy)

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in Motography's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

—"A very good comedy. Tom Mix is always good."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Mich.

The Price of Silence, with William Farnum (Fox)—"A good picture, to good business. We had more favorable comments on this picture than any we have shown in a long time."—A. C. King, Busby Theater, McAlester, Okla.

The Tale of Two Cities, with William Farnum (Fox)—"A good picture to good business. Well liked by my patrons."—A. C. King, Busby Theater, McAlester, Okla.

The Darling of Paris, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"Played to good business. Picture only fair. Not up to Fox standard."—A. C. King, Busby Theater, McAlester, Okla.

The House of Terrible Scandals, with Billie Ritchie (Fox comedy)—"One of the best comedies Fox has yet produced."—A. C. King, Busby Theater, McAlester, Okla.

Patsy, with June Caprice (Fox)—"June Caprice is a favorite here, and draws well. This was a very pleasing picture and gave general satisfaction."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Man Who Took a Chance, with Franklyn Farnum (Bluebird)—"A good picture, the kind we all enjoy. The star's work is perfect. Well directed. Audience delighted. Bluebirds are gaining fast."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Girl in the Checkered Coat, featuring Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"This picture pleased all who saw it; but did not draw well."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Fighting Gringo, with Harry Carey (Red Feather)—"A very good and clean comedy and we had good business with it."—Peter Grill, Majestic Theater, Haverhill, Mass.

The Immigrant, with Charles Chaplin (Mutual)—"Better than many of the star's previous pictures. Kept the audience in an uproar from start to finish. Pleased all. 'Some comedy' is the tip."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Hedda Gabler, with Nance O'Neil (Mutual)—"The story is weak and has no interest. The star was not well liked."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Mich.

Strand Comedies, with Billie Rhodes (Mutual)—"Good, clean comedies. Don't be afraid to book them."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

Jerry Comedies, with George Ovey (Mutual)—"All good money-getters."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

Abandonment, with Shirley Rosson (American-Mutual)—"Just fair. Poor business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Beloved Rogues, with Kolb and Dill (American-Mutual)—"Picture fine. Poor business on account of hot weather."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Mrs. Balfame, with Nance O'Neil (Powell-Mutual)—"Star excellent, but this is not Powell's best work. Business fair in hot weather."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Frame-Up, with William Russell (Mutual)—"The kind of a picture that pleases everyone and helps to make your business and house better for playing it."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Innocence of Lizette, with Mary Miles Minter (Mutual)—"These pictures always bring out the better class of picture fans and this one was well liked."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Where Love Is, with Ann Murdock (Mutual)—"Good picture, good house, and pleased."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

The Wild Cat, with Jackie Saunders (Mutual)—"Went like wildfire and the people are still talking about it."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Pardners, with Charlotte Walker (Mutual)—"This is an excellent picture. Miss Walker does some wonderful acting. This style of picture seems to please everyone, business was good."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—Catering to a college town.

The Man Who Was Afraid, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Very timely. Many effects worked up in the battle scenes."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Saint's Adventure, with H. B. Walthall (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"Very good. Holds the interest throughout."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Mich.

The Law of the North, with Shirley Mason (Edison-K. E. S. E.)—"A fine picture for hot days. Good plot and a strong cast."—George E. Murphy, Lyon Theater, Muskegon, Mich.

The Lad and the Lion, with Vivian Reed (K. E. S. E.)—"This picture made my audience marvel. Play it by all means."—Eugene Saunders, Palace Theater, Harvard, Ill.

Filling His Own Shoes, with Bryant Washburn (K. E. S. E.)—"Business fair. Good picture with a very pleasing star."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Hands Up, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"A good story. Everyone thought it was a wild west stunt, but it was well liked. The star and cast good. An all 'round good feature."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"Decidedly good. An all 'round comedy-drama. The star's work is marvelous. I would like more pictures with this star."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The Snarl, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"A wonderful story, simply told. Picture was well liked and praised by all. The star is great in her dual role. Good business."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Her Excellency, the Governor, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"A fair picture, but rather too light to please all."—Harry Tague, Ashland Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

Her Excellency, the Governor, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"This did not appeal very strongly. It is rather weak."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Desert Man, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"Fine picture and large crowd. The star is at his best."—C. A. Natter, Eagle Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Pinch Hitter, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"A fine picture. The star is well liked. Business excellent."—C. A. Natter, Eagle Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.—In middle class neighborhood.

Hands Up, with Wilfred Lucas (Triangle)—"The picture is good but not up to the Triangle standard. Ordinary crowd."—C. A. Natter, Eagle Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.—In middle class neighborhood.

Wolf Lowry, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A good picture that drew good business."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wis.

Wolf Lowry, with W. S. Hart (Triangle)—"A very good picture. Brought big business and was liked by the patrons. The star's acting is fine. Hart is a money-getter for us."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Paws of the Bear, with William Desmond (Triangle)—"A good picture with no drawing power. The title is against it. The star does not draw above average business."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Matrimaniac, with Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle)—"A very good offering; ran in connection with "The Waiters' Ball," which is a scream. Both pictures in good condition. Business fair."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Little Brother, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"A very good production which drew capacity crowds."—Frank J. Dietlein, Jr., Princess Theater, Opelousas, La.—High class patronage.

Trilby, with Clara Kimball Young (World re-issue)—"These World re-issues are all good pictures, but as they are so old and the costumes are out of date, they don't draw. Poor business."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Golden Lotus, with Regina Badet (World)—"A very good picture, which drew well on Sunday, with good weather."—Frank Dietlein, Jr., Princess Theater, Opelousas, La.—High class patronage.

The False Friend, with Robert Warwick (World)—"A very good picture. Went over big. Advertise it strong."—James Poro, Casino Theater, Astoria, L. I., N. Y.

The Dawn of True Love, with Susan Grandaise (World)—"The trade paper critics all praised this offering but I would suggest to fellow-exhibitors that they leave it alone. It is poor as a box-office attraction. The story lacks punch and the star's work is not up to the American standard."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Moral Courage, with Muriel Ostriche (World)—"A splendid production; drew good business."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

A Reckless Romeo, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—" 'Fatty's' usual run of comedy. A few new stunts. Pleased all. They like the star here. A good two-reeler."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

The World Apart, with Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman (Paramount)—"This went over big. It is a good picture with a good story."—Harry Tague, Ashland Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Her Sacrifice, with Margaret Illington (Paramount)—"The picture is very good but the star did not appeal."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Silent Partner, with Blanche Sweet (Paramount)—"This is only fair. Blanche Sweet did not please as well as usual in this role."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Girl at Home, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"This went over nicely with our patrons."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Marcellini Millions, with George Beban (Paramount)—"As usual, this Beban feature is good."—M. Berling, Madlin Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Twin Kiddies, with Marie Osborne (Pathe)—"A pleasing picture especially for children."—Sam Parish, Dixie Theater, Huntsville, Texas.

The Valentine Girl, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"A pleasing picture that drew well considering the hot day we had. Star's work is excellent and everyone admires her juvenile roles."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Two Associations Again

THE split which occurred at mid-convention in the exhibitors' association, however regrettable, seems to have been inevitable. It is easy enough to deplore the condition that led to the division, and to say that it might have been avoided by different tactics. Possibly it could; but the chance of harmony disappeared early in the meeting and left the door as the only way out.

Other than recording the obvious fact that the new American Exhibitors' Association is well organized and promises success, it is too early to make comparisons. Enthusiasm of the spectator is hampered by recollection of previous similar splits which ultimately came to nothing. Some of those old "new" parties promised well, too. The movement has to prove itself; but we hope it can do so.

It is only four weeks ago that we said on this page, "If it requires the mental stimulus of a new organization to wake the exhibitors up, someone had better start working on one." The words were neither an accidental prophecy nor a lucky prediction. With what preceded them in the same editorial, they expressed our growing conviction that a new association had become necessary, partly as a curb upon the old one and partly as a spur to exhibitors who had, under the League's mismanagement, grown indifferent to organization.

For the statement that the League has been mismanaged we make no apology. We said the same thing in different words before there was any thought of a new association. We say it now not in the hope that the League will succumb to the superior vigor of the new society, but that the League may be stirred to a healthier activity; that it may be reorganized with competent officers and made wholesome enough to encourage a reconsolidation of the dissenting factions.

The League looks, from here, a little like Russia. It seems to be badly governed by a few plutocrats, and to have more internal enemies than external. That is why we would like to have seen the revolution of last week result not in a new "nation," but in a new form of government for the old one.

Whatever the comparative virtues or faults of the two groups that now ask the exhibitors' attention, they are both made up of motion picture theater men—men who are in the game to stay, and who, collectively, form the real backbone of the industry. Their differences are not about pictures, nor about theaters, nor about business. If the moral influence and support of the manufacturers is to be given to either faction, doubtless it will go to the one whose members confine their attention most strictly to their own business of showmanship.

Divided trade associations generally come together again ultimately—as they should. Naturally, the strongest gains the most points in the merger. The fight, then, is for organization strength. It is a race to see which shall have the most members and the best report next summer, the League or the Association.

It looks now as though the new Association had the better chance, because the League has tried and failed. But more power to them both! If competitive effort can put life and hope into the discouraging task of organizing exhibitors, then two associations are a good thing. And when competition has done its part, and the membership lists have lengthened out, the two can get together again—and the most successful can dictate the terms of amalgamation.

If the American Exhibitors' Association attends efficiently to the business of its title, if it and its officers ask nothing of the manufacturers but reasonable service, and if it makes a sincere effort to give reasonable service to its members, it will have the advantage of its competitor.

Abolish the Manufacturers' House Organs

WHEN wartime economy is the watchword of the nation, the men of other industries have characterized the motion picture industry as wasteful. They have gathered that impression from their casual inspection of studio processes. Like most flash judgments, their decision was wrong. We have explained before why studio practice cannot be judged by an operations-per-minute schedule. The motion picture business is one of the few whose manufacturing processes are not, and cannot be, checked with a stop-watch.

The biggest element of waste in the industry is insignificant as a percentage of the total activity. But as an item standing alone, it is big enough to demand serious consideration. The amount of paper and postage that is thrown away in this business is enormous; and the chief offender in this respect is the manufacturer's house organ.

It is surprising, until you stop to analyze it, what a beautiful publication an enterprising publicity manager can put out as a house organ for his employer. We know of some industries whose house organs are better magazines, from the casual observer's standpoint, than the trade papers in the same field. Of course the reason is plain, once you figure it out. The house organ editor has available to his command a staff of associates comprising the whole payroll of the corporation. He has first call on all the news, all the photographs, and all the brains of the whole force, from the president down. And he isn't hampered by the necessity of keeping expenses below the deadline so that dividends will be above it.

We have the greatest personal admiration for the publicity manager who can not only convince his chief that he is a good magazine publisher, but can put it over and deliver the publication. To a lover of the printer's art, there are few finer products than the house organ with an unlimited expense account.

But a house organ is a luxury pure and simple, like an oil painting; and it never has and never will pay its way. If an industry had only one house organ, or maybe two competing with each other, the better of the two might have some influence with its trade. But when there is nothing to prevent every manufacturer from publishing his own house organ, and when every manufacturer (under the persuasion of his publicity manager) does just that, their individual value falls rapidly to zero.

In making this statement we are not considering the obvious fact that anything a house organ says about the thing it advertises is promptly discounted by its readers. Even the man who likes to read a house organ takes its claims with a large dose of salt and a smile. But the point is that when several house organs come every week none of them are read at all. Generally they are not even taken out of their wrappers.

Last fall we mentioned one prominent exhibitor who sold thirty-two dollars worth of waste paper, composed entirely of unopened house organs and manufacturers' literature. Since then we have heard of several similar cases. That represents thousands of dollars of waste effort and money.

Now that paper and labor are so scarce other industries are temporarily discontinuing their house organs. Since motion picture house organs represent not only that industry's greatest waste, but also because of their multiplicity represent the least value of any group of industrial house organs, it would be an act of patriotic economy to cease their publication. In most cases, as we have tried to indicate, withdrawing the house organs will work no hardships upon anyone. On the contrary, it will conserve the effort and money put into their production, and will relieve the exhibitor of a burden of useless paper and give him time to read the legitimate publications.

In spite of the high value of waste paper we know the majority of exhibitors would welcome a mail delivery that was devoid of manufacturers' house organs.

Feeling the Convention's Pulse

RED BLOODED NEWSICLES FROM THE HEART OF THE NATIONAL SHOW

ON the second Saturday of the exposition—July 21—Metro held a big sales convention of its own at the La Salle Hotel. Among those at the conference were Richard Rowland, president; Joseph Engel, treasurer; Arthur James, publicity director; Louis Mayer, vice-president; Cresson C. Smith, manager of the Chicago branch, and other executives and salesmen.

Joseph M. Schenk accompanied his wife, Norma Talmadge, to the Chicago show.

Taylor Holmes certainly is an efficiency expert as well as a player. He acts in the speaking stage in "Seven Chances" every night, works in the Essanay studio by day, and still found time to attend the exhibitors' banquet and be present at the exposition most of the time.

Baby Marie Osborne couldn't be there for the exposition but Pathe did not forget her. One of the electric fountains in this pretty booth was named for Baby Marie. The other was dedicated to Pearl White. The Sosman Decorating Company furnished this booth.

One of the rumors which was circulated around the Coliseum was to the effect that Anna Little has signed with J. Stuart Blackton, who is now with Paramount, and will appear in some film version of Sir Guilbert Parker's novels.

Probably the most important official guest of honor at the exposition from among circles outside the picture industry, was States Attorney Maclay Hoyne of Chicago. He was also one of the speakers at the Exposition banquet at the Morrison Hotel at midnight on Thursday.

Exhibitors at the exposition were very much interested in the showing of two Goldwyn pictures, "Baby Mine," in which Madge Kennedy stars, and the "Bluebird Doctors" with Mae Marsh and Robert Herron. The Goldwyn publicity director swears that 60 out of 80 exhibitors signed up Goldwyn contracts.

The Reel Fellows Club of Chicago attracted a great deal of attention from the fans at its booth at the exposition by means of its star popularity contest, to determine who should lead the grand march at the exposition ball, to be given at the Hotel Morrison on Saturday evening, the closing night of the exposition.

Boston won the 1918 convention in a walk away. The Bean city's only competitor was St. Louis, whose representatives brought invitations from a large number of civic organizations, but who at the time of the voting on the question withdrew in favor of the big Eeastern delegation.

Ben Weisenbach of the Chicago office of the American Photoplayer Company was at the convention all the week, having recently assumed charge of the Detroit office of this concern, which is located at 101 John R street. Mr. Weisenbach has been appointed Michigan district manager of the American Photoplayer Company and extends a cordial invitation to Michigan visitors to visit his office when in Detroit. Mr. Weisenbach contemplates an extensive automobile tour of the state of Michigan in the very near future in order to look over the territory and become better acquainted with the trade in that district.

One of the most enjoyable thrills that percolated up and down the spines of members of the Exhibitors' League and particularly of the managers of the exposition, was the presentation by W. W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph Company, of a check for $1,000, to the league. This was turned over to the organization in lieu of a booth at the exposition which Vitagraph found it impossible to arrange.

Exposition officials, exhibitors, and the public in general, expressed their appreciation of the generosity of Fannie Ward and Jack Dean, her husband, former Paramount stars, in remaining in Chicago several days over time, in order to appear at the exposition. They had a stateroom reserved on the Century train for New York each day for four days and each day it was cancelled.

Perhaps the most popular booth at the exposition—with the public—was the Chicago Daily News space, where Bryant Washburn of Essanay held forth to choose a star for one of his coming pictures. The girls who desired to submit their charms for comparison in the race were registered and their photographs kept on file. Scores of girls and women were packed around the booth most of the time.

When Alice Brady came into the convention hall and took a seat at the side of her father, Wm. A. Brady, president of the World Pictures Corporation, a large number of exhibitors present lost interest in the legislative session and strolled around to see the star. She soon, however, disappeared into the Coliseum and the exposition hall.

One of the most enjoyable of the several side issues of the national convention was the press dinner given by Vitagraph at the College Inn of the Sherman House one evening. Sidney Abel, manager of the Chicago Vitagraph office, was host. Among those who enjoyed the repast were Nat S. Stronge, of New York; Vitagraph publicity director; Rose Tapley, of the Vitagraph Company, official hostess at the exposition; Miss Mildred Considine, scenario writer, and representatives of the various trade journals and Chicago newspapers.

The Red Cross booth at the exposition drew a large number of contributions of all sorts from a large number of stars. George Beban donated 1,000 autographs of himself, which were sold for ten cents each. Marguerite Clark contributed a rose-velvet, gold lace evening gown and a duplicate of her own breakfast set; Lillian Walker, a lavender evening gown; Mary Miles Minter, one of her little girl white dresses and an orange sewing bag; Peggy Hyland, some dresser trays and a crazy working basket. Mrs. Sidney Drew, a fan of ivory and gold; Nell Craig, a lavender "somethingorother"; Hazel Daly, a beautiful fan. Many other contributions from other stars were also sold at the booth.

Two Chicago papers, the Examiner and the Herald, issued special editions for the exposition. The former contained "fan" stuff about the stars and all the editorials which have appeared in the Examiner concerning the notorious Major Funkhouser, Chicago's censor chief.

There was a good deal of interest shown in the bathing carnival given by Essanay at the Edgewater Beach Hotel on the afternoon of Thursday of the exposition. Many stars and dozens of extra girls did submarine stunts and a good deal of posing. Prizes were given for the best aquatic feats and the most attractive bathing suits. The affair was held in conjunction with K. E. S. E. day at the exposition.

Due to the selling of the whatcha-may-call-it—a pastel-shaded pin cushion of silks and lace—made and donated by Mary Miles Minter, the American Film star, the Red Cross is $25 better able to do their humane duty at the front. A crush of several hundred at the show did the bidding, up from a few cents to the high selling point. The winner of the auction was a smartly gowned matron who refused to divulge her identity.

Twenty-five thousand post-card views of different angles of the American Film studios at Santa Barbara were distributed among the fans during the first five days of the show. These cards are done in color and in the corner of each is inset the head of one of the American stellar shadows, Mary Miles Minter, William Russell, Gail Kane and Juliette Day. The distributors expect to dispose of as many more by the close of the exposition.

In place of a Vitagraph booth Rose Tapley created a new exposition idea by directing and making pictures right in the exposition hall. Early in the week she wrote a scenario and directed the picture, in which she used members of the audience for actors, and arranged to have it shown the following morning. Miss Tapley was also the official hostess of the exposition and deserves a great deal of credit for her work.

One of the most useful acts performed at the exposition was carried out at the Bluebird booth, where the new Universay star, Mae Murray, started a "Mae Murray Million Signature" letter, of greeting to our soldiers in France under Major General Pershing. The public signed the letter at the booth and also Miss Murray took a bundle when she left Chicago for the West and distributed them at various cities along the way, asking exhibitors and postmasters to tack them up and collect more signatures.

One of the interesting stories which sprang into existence at the exposition, is to the effect that Marcus Loew, the well-known owner of the chain of theaters in New York, and Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Lasky Company, are to be associated together as owners of a string of picture theaters throughout the United States. It is said that the beautiful Stillman Theater of Cleveland and the Valentine Theater of Toledo are among the first two houses to be taken into the chain.

Probably the classiest souvenir given away at this year's exposition was the real gun-metal watch distributed gratis to exhibitors and a few other fortunates by Pathe, under the direction of C. R. Seelye, business manager, and Tom North, manager of the super-feature department. The watch has seven faces. A little circle on the dial encloses the face of Baby Marie Osborne, above the words, "Pathe Films," and on the back are the pictures of five other Pathe stars. And the timepiece really keeps time.

One of the big features of the exposition was the picture studio operated in the Annex by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago. In this connection the special picture entitled "From Studio to Screen," which shows in motion every detail of every department of the Rothacker company, was an added feature. Mr. Rothacker wishes to extend his thanks to Otis Thayer of the Wholesale Films Corporation and Rex Weber of the Titan Film Company for their services as directors of the studio stage during the progress of the exposition.

One of the finest of the many-sided affairs given the week of the exposition was the Selznick dinner at the Blackstone Hotel in honor of Norma Talmadge. About fifteen trade and press people were present and Rose Tapley, official exposition hostess, and former associate of Norma's, made a speechlet concerning the bright little star. Peter Schaefer and Ralph Kettering of Jones, Linick and Schaefer of Chicago, and Harry Weiss, and Floyd Brockell of the Chicago Selznick were hosts. Miss Talmadge appeared at the exposition Saturday afternoon and evening.

Many exhibitors took advantage of the invitation of George K. Spoor of the Essanay Company to inspect the studio during the national convention. In spite of the hot fight which was being waged by the delegates in preparation for the election all week, it was noticed that a great many of them had forgotten their candidates for the time being to make this visit. In order to make their trip worth while arrangements had been made for five companies to be at work. With all preparations made so that work could progress without a stop, it was a very interesting trip to the many who had never before seen pictures in the making.

The big "Movie Ball" given as the last big function of the exposition by the Reel Fellows Club at the official hotel, the Morrison, didn't get into swing until midnight owing to the warmth of the early evening. The Washburns of Chicago captured most of the honors, as Bryant Washburn, the well known Essanay star, was chosen by popular vote at the exposition to lead the grand march. Nell Craig and Mrs. Washburn and a graceful partner won the big useless silver loving cup given by the hotel to the winner of the popular dancing contest and the cup was christened right at the ball.

Wednesday, July 18, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, in session in Chicago, in a body visited the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company's laboratory-studio. They went over every detail of manufacturing in their inspection and witnessed a special showing of the film entitled "From Studio to Screen" produced by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company and showing how moving pictures are manufactured. Before their departure, a film was made of the members, which will be sent to C. Francis Jenkins, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Washington, D. C., who will keep it as a matter of record.

U. S. Representatives at Convention

GOVERNMENT SENDS MEN TO PLAN CO-OPERATION WITH PICTURE INDUSTRY

THE power of the motion picture screen has been recognized in a complete and emphatic manner by the government of the United States. The picture theater has been officially pronounced America's greatest aid at home in winning the war. An honor and a standing which might have come to the fifth industry in normal times only after years of struggle and misunderstanding has been granted it without question when in this crisis the government has sought its most powerful resources to prove that democracy can defend itself, that the people's rule can be as efficient as any autocracy. The government has recognized that the great democratic instrument for reaching the people is the motion picture, which because it speaks a universal language takes precedent even over the printed word. The government realizes that the most efficient way to reach the people is to go to the picture theaters.

Government Sends Representatives

Following the action of President Wilson in mobolizing motion pictures, when he called the leaders of the industry to Washington for conference, an appeal was made to the managers of the theaters themselves, the exhibitors. The government sent four representatives from Washington to address the exhibitors at the national convention in Chicago.

At the Wednesday afternoon session in the Convention Hall of the Coliseum, the exhibitors and many of the manufacturers present listened to the addresses, which impressed upon them their value to their country in the present crisis.

William A. Brady, as president of the National Association, presided. He presented first Dr. Christian F. Reizner of Grace Church, New York City. In Dr. Reizner's speech he paid the motion picture high tribute and showed why it was the power the government believed it to be.

"The motion picture speaks a universal language," he said, "one that no person is too illiterate or too tired to listen to. Therefore it can reach the large mass of people the press cannot. One person out of every four patronizes the motion picture theaters, and nine-tenths of all impressions are received through the eye."

Dr. Reizner asked the exhibitors to realize for a minute just what tremendous power they influenced over the people and how they were forming the minds of the next generation in this greatest of schools.

Mr. Brady, in introducing the next speaker, emphasized that the government in calling upon the industry, had given it a great opportunity. He made a strong plea to the exhibitors to organize so as to seize this great chance for service and "make good."

"Show yourselves worth while," he begged, "and you will no longer be the target of reformers seeking notoriety. No adverse legislation will be brought against you, if you become the great aid the government knows you can become."

Four Minute Man Speaks

William McCormick Blair spoke for the four-minute-men, and his concise, emphatic summing up of the aims of this new and really wonderful organization appealed to the exhibitors mightily. Mr. Blair said that when first the national crisis presented itself and there was need for quick action that all the people might understand and spring to the aid of their country, there was a project to have the most influential men of the country make speaking tours throughout the land. Then a better scheme was conceived. Why not reach the people in the picture theaters? And so this army of three thousand speakers, the four-minute-men, was organized. The four-minute men, Mr. Blair explained, are a group of speakers who are going to all the picture theaters in the United States to bring before the audiences, in well planned, four-minute speeches, the messages which the various departments of the central government wishes to convey to them.

The government asks of each theater owner only eight minutes of time a week, time twice a week for a four-minute speech by a trained speaker whose message has been planned in Washington and who is under orders not to exceed his allotted time. The wonderful manner in which the whole country can be brought together in this way was emphasized. The number of speakers is to be increased to ten thousand so that all audiences may be able to listen to them.

Food Man Talks

After Mr. Blair had concluded his four-minute speech, the representative of Mr. Hoover, who has control of the food conservation problem, Fred C. Woodward, was announced. He stated Mr. Hoover's regret at not being able to meet with the exhibitors. He told the exhibitors that the most important thing to be considered at the present time was the securing of the people's co-operation in the food conversation campaign. Briefly and clearly he explained the situation, in which we must feed the allied nations and still see that our people are supplied with food. The effort at present is to urge the people to use perishable foods and to conserve the staple products to be shipped abroad. The elimination of waste and the campaign against food speculators can only be carried on successfully through the education of the people and the people can be most easily educated through the picture theaters.

"One slice of bread saved in each family daily," he said, "means millions of loaves, enough to feed an army, at the end of a year. Therefore all waste must be eliminated. We are in the war to win, but we cannot win without the co-operation of the people, and these people must be reached and educated."

Evan Evans then addressed the exhibitors in behalf of the Red Cross. Mr. Evans is himself connected with the picture industry, having managed the Burton Holmes Travelogs. In behalf of the officials of the Red Cross, he thanked the picture managers for the generous manner in which they had already responded. He stated that the Red Cross was a real part of the government, the humanitarian division, and he read telegrams from officials recommending the support of this branch of service. J. J. O'Connell of the central division also spoke, explaining that the American Red Cross association was really the American people, that each one, rich and poor, had a share.

Industry Will Make Good

In closing President William A. Brady made another strong plea for organization and for close and intelligent co-operation with the government in every possible manner. The exhibitors present responded with resolutions pledging aid to the government, and all over the United States other managers are ready to come forth promptly with every service they can render. The motion picture industry is ready to prove that the responsibility imposed upon it is well placed.

INCE TO PRODUCE SPECIALS

In Addition to Hart Subjects Will Stage from Two to Four of His Own Special Productions During Year

Thomas H. Ince, through the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, last week announced that he would personally produce from two to four special productions during the coming year for Artcraft. These films will be released through Artcraft in addition to the Hart-Artcraft pictures and the photoplays he will release through Paramount. A telegram from Mr. Ince received by Walter E. Greene of Artcraft, states that these specials will be similar to Billie Burke in "Peggy" and "Civilization" and will offer pretentious films with unusual themes.

Activities in connection with the production of the initial Ince-Hart offering to be released through Artcraft, have already been started at the West Coast studio. The supporting cast is practically complete and the script by C. Gardner Sullivan is ready for screening. Work on the sets is progressing rapidly and it is expected that the actual filming of the picture will be well under way by the middle of next week.

In speaking of Mr. Ince's own special pictures, Walter E. Greene, President of Artcraft, said: "Once again Artcraft proves itself faithful to its promise to exhibitors. In announcing the release of Mr. Ince's own special productions, Artcraft further carries out its promise of making it possible for exhibitors to show such cinema offerings as were heretofore presented to the public in the regular 'legitimate' theaters throughout the country. In the past many exhibitors who showed pictures fifty-two weeks a year were denied the opportunity of running the big screen subjects while the regular dramatic theater across the street received it and secured high admission prices and big business. One of the most important ideals of Artcraft is to do away with this condition and to what extent it has already succeeded is readily apparent. The efforts of Griffith, Ince and De Mille undoubtedly the three greatest masters of the motion picture producing art are now at the disposal of the regular exhibitor. 'The biggest and best for the exhibitor' has been our policy from the start and that we have been faithful to this policy is now a matter of screen history."

Hits at Birth Control

"Master of His Home," the immediately forthcoming Triangle play starring William Desmond, hits a decisive blow against the birth control propagandists who have been the subject of much newspaper discussion recently. Alma Rueben, who plays opposite Desmond, appears in the role of a society butterfly of aristocratic parents who marries for money, turning down her husband's proffer of domestic happiness and refusing to be a real wife and a mother. Later on, how the presence of the gardener's children next door exert their influence over her and bring about a change for the better, makes one of the best and most human stories that has been filmed in a year.

The suspense is held through the entire story, leading up to one smashing climax after another, the final outcome not being apparent until the last scene is flashed on the screen. The production is a master stroke for William Desmond and is destined to make him one of the biggest favorites in pictures.

A very capable supporting cast includes Robert McKim, J. J. Dowling and Eleanor Hancock. The piece was directed by Walter Edwards from the story by R. Cecil Smith.

Defends Screen Acting

Madge Kennedy, who makes her first screen appearance as the star of "Baby Mine," the Margaret Mayo comedy which is listed as the second of the Goldwyn Pictures, released September 23, has been finding out things about films.

"Work before the camera," said Miss Kennedy, to one who sought opinions, at the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee, a short time ago, "is certainly the most exacting of all forms of acting. And it is the truest. No form of faking 'gets over.' I feel when I stand in a scene, in the focus of the camera and under the all-revealing lighting of the studio lamps, that now I am face to face with the necessity of performance; nothing else will avail. If what I do is good the camera will so record it; and if what I do is bad, or even just poor, weak, futile, the camera will record me in that weakness, that futility. A mistake made is a mistake recorded; there is no such thing as covering up your errors when acting in motion pictures. And in this respect the work is far more exacting than is acting on the legitimate stage. In films we have nothing but the absolute truth! The actor is bared to his soul, stripped to his naked abilities, and placed in a glaring light; a camera is turned on him, and he is told to act. Every move that he makes—or fails to make, every motion that he registers—or fails to register, becomes part of the record, permanent and unchangeable. Let those who are fond of saying 'You don't get real acting in the movies' think about this."

Master Drama Men at Convention

Chicago exhibitors and other western exhibitors who attended the Chicago convention received with open arms Herman Becker, Maurice H. Bob and Samuel Krellberg of the Master Drama Features, Inc., sponsors of "Who's Your Neighbor?" the sociological photodrama written by Willard Mack and directed by S. Rankin Drew.

Interest among state-rights buyers and exhibitors for "Who's Your Neighbor?" is keen, according to Mr. Becker's telegram. Exhibitors and state-right buyers of note at the convention expressed a desire to see "Who's Your Neighbor?" and accordingly immediate arrangements were made for a special screening.

The St. Louis Foursquare exchange, the first of the many branches to be established by M. H. Hoffman, Inc., formally opened its offices last week in the Empress Building, in charge of Sidney J. Baker. Mr. Baker is one of the best known salesmen in the Middle West territory and was for a number of years identified with Bluebird photoplays, and made a record in selling these products.

Expanding Vitagraph Production

PRESIDENT SMITH ANNOUNCES PLANS—14 COMPANIES AT WORK SOON

Albert E. Smith, president Greater Vitagraph Company.

WITH the avowed purpose of making Greater Vitagraph greater than ever, Albert E. Smith, president of the company and active director of its destinies, has instituted the production of features on a scale never before equalled in the history of the company.

He has added to his staff several of the most famous directors in the film industry and has given to them actors and actresses whose popularity and talent already have been proved. Twelve companies are actively at work on production now and two others are scheduled to start in the very near future.

The passing of J. Stuart Blackton from the affairs of Vitagraph, it is declared, will have absolutely no effect upon the business or product of the company, because President Smith, who always has been in personal charge of a large part of the production at the company's several plants, is now giving the business the same degree of attention that he always has.

In commenting on Mr. Blackton's resignation, Mr. Smith states that "the best wishes of the whole Vitagraph organization follow Mr. Blackton in his new experiment."

While, during the last twenty years, the artistic end of the business has been jointly in the hands of Messrs. Smith and Blackton, during the last two years Mr. Blackton has devoted himself almost entirely to his productions.

President Smith's Statement

In outlining Vitagraph's policies and plans for the future, Mr. Smith said:

Great improvements have been made in both the Eastern and Western Vitagraph studios and new inventions have been introduced in the mechanical end of our business which will give our photographic work greater technical superiority.

Recognizing that "the play's the thing," arrangements have been consummated with the best authors in the country for their excusive services, and Vitagraph's program for the coming year, from a literary standpoint, is unexcelled. Four super features will be developed, to be released one every three months. Two of these now are in course of production from stories especially written by Robert W. Chambers, whose "The Girl Philippa" is fresh in every exhibitor's mind.

I shall continue to give the five-reel program features my special attention and supervision. Many of these stories have been specially written by well known authors for Anita Stewart, Alice Joyce, Earle Williams, Harry Morey and other Vitagraph stars.

New Serial in September

A new serial has been completed, to be released in September, that excels in photography artistry and exciting situations, our other great success, "The Secret Kingdom."

We are putting more grey matter than ever before into making laughs for the Big V comedies, while a new series of Bobby Connelly comedies will fill a vacancy in every theater program and will please every child in the audience, and grown-ups, too.

We will bear watching. As the inventor of the setting device (which is used on practically every projecting machine in the country), the deviser of stop motion photography (which is now very much in vogue), the conceiver of "The Juggernaut," "The Wreck," and other big Vitagraph spectacles, and as the first producer of magic pictures in this part of the globe, I felt, while laid up in California recently, that I must show the world in general that I still had a trick or two up my sleeve. So watch out, as Vitagraph is going to spring a new one in the near future.

Commodore Blackton, during the last two years of his connection with Vitagraph, confined his activities as a director almost exclusively to the production of two features, "The Battle Cry of Peace," and "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation." Both these productions are big war spectacles and were many months in the making, and Commodore Blackton practically devoted all of his time to them. While he was making these pictures, the other directors, of whom there are fourteen, have been turning out the major portion of the Vitagraph product. This includes a weekly Blue Ribbon feature, Big V comedies, serials, Bobbie Connelly pictures and special features.

Present Directoral Staff

This directorial staff includes W. P. S. Earle, who directed "Within the Law" and assisted Commodore Blackton in the production of "Womanhood"; Perry N. Vekroff, director of Alice Joyce and Harry Morey in most of their pictures; Thomas Mills and Martin Justice, makers of O. Henry pictures; Wesley Ruggles, director of Bobby Connelly and Blue Ribbon features; Paul Scardon, director of Earle Williams; William Wolbert, director of Antonio Moreno and Mary Anderson; David Smith director of the "Dangers of Doris" series; Director William Duncan, who has just finished the fifteen-episode serial, "The Fighting Trail"; Lawrence Semon, director of Big V. comedies, and Charles M. Seay, director of little Bobbie Connelly.

These men, working for the most part under the personal supervision of President Smith, have helped to maintain the Vitagraph standard of excellence; and to the staff have now been added Chester Withey, Ashley Miller and Archer McMackin.

Mr. Withey formerly was associated with David W. Griffith in the production of Fine Arts pictures and some of the most artistic offerings of that company were made by him. He handled Mae Marsh and Bobby Harron in many of their most delightful pictures and he also was chosen to direct Sir Herbert Tree in "The Old Folks at Home," the only motion picture the late great English actor made in the United States.

Ashley Miller, in addition to the benefit of years of stage experience with such stars as Walker Whiteside, Otis Skinner and Henrietta Crosman, brings to Vitagraph the knowledge he has gained as director for Pathe, Edison and the Famous Players-Lasky companies.

Archer McMackin has written or produced more than three hundred photoplays and is noted as the man who directed Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the pictures that made them famous on the screen.

The enormous amount of production now under way at the Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn, which is large enough to accommodate twenty companies at one time, is taxing the capacity of even this huge plant.

Many Companies Now Working

Harry Morey and Corinne Griffith, under the direction of William P. S. Earle, are engaged in making "Who Goes There?" a super feature adapted from the famous story by Robert W. Chambers.

Edward Earle, recently a feature leading man with Metro and other companies, is engaged in work on "For France," another big Blue Ribbon production. Mr. Earle was engaged especially for this role and so was his leading woman, Betty Howe. This feature is under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

Evart Overton, with Miriam Fouche, another newcomer to Vitagraph, playing opposite him, is working in "Soldiers of Chance" under the direction of Paul Scardon.

Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott are joint stars in "An Alabaster Box," a modern drama under the direction of Mr. Withey. Patsy De Forest appears in support of Miss Joyce and Mr. MacDermott in this feature.

Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald, who last worked together in the O. Henry series, are brought together again in "The Princess of Park Row," which is being directed by Ashley Miller.

Little Bobby Connelly is nearing completion of the first ten pictures of the "Bobby Series" under direction of Charles M. Seay. These pictures, it is predicted, will prove the greatest "kid" feature ever put on the market and will show the wonderful little Vitagraph star in the finest work of his career. He is supported in these pictures by his sister Helen and a three-year-old artist, Aida Horton.

Lawrence Semon, with his company of comedians and acrobats, is working on a new series of Big V comedies, the joint work of himself and Graham Baker. In addition to directing the comedies, Mr. Semon is also playing the lead in them. Templer Saxe appears in some of these.

Harry Tighe, famous as vaudeville headliner and musical comedy actor, is engaged on a series of comedies, the first of which will be "The Mixer." He is under the direction of Archer McMackin and has for his leading woman Adele DeGarde, who scored so heavily in "Within the Law."

All of these companies are working at the Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn, while at the western studio in Hollywood three other companies are actively at work. Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburgh are working together in Blue Ribbon features under the direction of William Wolbert, while William Duncan and Carol Holloway have just completed the last episode of "The Fighting Trail," a new Vitagraph serial in fifteen episodes of two reels each, which is scheduled for release early in the fall.

This record of twelve companies at work simultaneously is the greatest in the history of Vitagraph and is just the beginning of Mr. Smith's plan to make the company bigger than ever in its career. Besides the stars already mentioned, Earle Williams and Anita Stewart, the favorite Vitagraph stars, are soon to be seen in new features.

Weekly Program

It is announced by President Smith that the Vitagraph weekly program henceforth will consist of the following standard units:

One Blue Ribbon feature of not less than five reels.

One episode of "The Fighting Trail" serial of two reels.

One "Bobby Connelly" release of one reel.

One "Big V" comedy of one reel.

Two "Favorite Film Features," a comedy and a drama; total, three thousand feet weekly.

In addition, the company will continue its policy of producing four big specials yearly and is now engaged in making one which, it is expected, will prove quite as great a success as "Within the Law" and the other super features produced in the past.

BIG EXHIBITORS FEAST

Midnight Banquet of Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Attracts Hundreds of Convention Delegates to Big Festival

One of the big high lights of the Seventh National Exposition and Convention of the M. P. E. L. of America in Chicago was the big midnight banquet held at the official headquarters, the Morrison Hotel, on the evening of Thursday, July 19. Hundreds of exhibitor delegates from all over the nation were present with their friends or wives and also many stars, film executives and representatives of the press took part.

Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago League and first vice-president of the M. P. E. L. of America, acted as master of ceremonies, and among the speakers called upon were: Lee A. Ochs, of New York, newly re-elected president of the National League; Maclay Hoyne, state's attorney of Chicago; Delegate Friedman, of Missouri; State Senator Manning, of Illinois; Ludwig Schindler, Exposition Director; J. Steven Bush, editor of the Exhibitors' Trade Review; Delegate Eager, of Nebraska; Rose Tapely, official exposition hostess; Fred Hartman, assistant exposition manager; George Laing, manager exposition publicity, and Bryant Washburn, Hazel Daly and Nell Craig, of the Essanay Company.

The assemblage was brilliant with color and nearly one thousand people filled the splendid banquet hall. One of the features of the evening was the presentation by the National League of a beautiful silver service to President Lee A. Ochs, for his past services to the organization.

The menu contained a number of strange dishes, including some very familiar names. It follows:

Exhibitor Hopp Cocktail, Mae Marsh Celery, Pearl White Olives, Radishes a la Schindler, K. E. S. E. Tomato Bouillon Bryant Washburn Style, Filet of Metro Black Bass From Sidney Drew's Chicken Farm, Saulte Goldwyn Meuniere Pathe Potatoes, Champagne Sherbet a la Bushman and Bayne, Lillian Walker Squab aux Selznick, Alice Brady Lettuce Salad, Laing Cheese, Hartman Dressing, Mersereau Universal Ice Cream, Mutual Petit Fours, Edith Story Demi Tasse, World-Blackwell Mint Wafers.

It was about 2:30 in the morning when the big "party" dissolved and the participants percolated to their various hotel quarters.

Artillerymen Guests of Theater

The rousing effect of a timely patriotic film handled with efficient showmanship is reported by General Film for Wilkesbarre, where its two-reel Selig, "Uncle Sam Afloat and Ashore" packed the Sun Theater, and got all sorts of good, legitimate publicity as well. The film was booked and displayed by Manager John J. Reilly of the Sun.

Manager Reilly gave one big day to his friends of the Third Pennsylvania Field Artillery, advertising the date and attraction suitably. The result was the attendance of a large number of artillerymen in the morning as guests, and hosts of their relatives and acquaintances at night. The film, which proved an ideal subject for the event, was enthusiastically cheered.

In his newspaper advertising Mr. Reilly used not too much but very effective text. The gist of it was: "Every mother should see the great care Uncle Sam takes of his soldier boys."

"TAKE SOLDIERS TO SHOWS"

Maxine Elliott, Star in Goldwyn Pictures, Suggests to Exhibitors Method of Getting Khaki Boys to Picture Houses

Maxine Elliott, the Goldwyn Pictures star, whose generous war relief work has drawn praises and thanks from the kings of England and Belgium and the president of France, makes a plea for generous treatment of the man in khaki—the common soldier.

From now on, says Miss Elliott, the towns and cities of America will be filled with men in uniform as they never have been before. They will, most of them, practically all of them, be strangers in whatever places they are stationed. They will be lonely, no matter in how many thousands their ranks are numbered. Much in the way of making them feel at home can be done by the townspeople in the places in which they are quartered.

Because we have not been a military people, and the army has not been personally close to the most of us, Miss Elliott argues, there is as yet a certain feeling of restraint between the average citizen and the average enlisted man. Hence, she pleads for friendliness and open-handed generosity. Later on, after our national army has taken shape, there will be scarcely a man or woman who has not some one near or dear, or at least some one who has been a close friend, in the long lines of the man in khaki. Our soldier boys will so generally and thoroughly commingle with the rest of the citizenry that the military and non-military population will become unified, not only in spirit but also in comradeship. But in the meantime, let the watchword of a ready hospitality be:

"Take a man in khaki to the movies!"

Miss Elliott, while taking a vacation from her long and arduous war relief work in Northern France, came to America to make her first appearance on the screen in Goldwyn pictures. She has finished her program at the Goldwyn Studios, and the first of her screen plays will be seen when "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Megrue and Irving Cobb, is released, the first week in October.

Jane Cowl, stage beauty, in her first Goldwyn picture, "The Spreading Down."

House Organ and Plan Book

"The Exhibitors' Plan Book," a weekly publication dedicated to the interests of the motion picture exhibitors of the United States and Canada, is announced by V. L. S. E., the distributing organization for Vitagraph product.

According to the announcement, the new publication is a combination of the company's house organ, which has been known as "The Vitagraph Exhibitor," and the V. L. S. E. plan book which is issued with each Blue Ribbon feature. The object of the consolidation, it is declared, is to give the exhibitors one compact magazine instead of two.

The first issue of the combined publication will be sixteen pages, printed in two colors and profusely illustrated. When the necessity arises, the magazine will be increased by fifty or one hundred per cent. The title page announces that the "Exhibitors' Plan Book" is devoted to "money-making helps for exhibitors" and its pages are crowded with suggestions on how to put over pictures, special advertising matter and press stories and a forum for exhibitors wherein they may exchange ideas for their mutual benefit.

The magazine is edited by Nat S. Stronge, publicity director for V. L. S. E., who has on his staff trained newspapermen, recruits from Park Row.

"Mary Jane's Pa"

W. P. S. Earle, who directed "Mary Jane's Pa," a forthcoming Vitagraph-Blue Ribbon feature, is said to have duplicated in this subject his triumph in "Within the Law." Marc MacDermott, with Mildred Manning, is featured in the production and plays with consummate art the role that Henry E. Dixey made famous on the legitimate stage.

Mr. Earle, in the making of the picture, has followed the Edith Ellis play very closely and retained in the film version all of the droll humor and philosophy that made the play a joy to audiences all over the country. The story, an unusually strong one, has been made even stronger on the screen than it was on the stage, because picture making has permitted of a great deal more artistic detail than was possible on the stage.

Mr. Earle gave particular attention to the outdoor scenes and the printing office scenes and has succeeded, in the first instance, in giving the production an unusually artistic setting, while in the printshop he has given to the action a remarkable realism.

Rialto Shows "An Even Break"

Triangle Distributing Corporation announces that beginning the week of July 22, S. M. Rothapfel will show on his program the new Triangle play starring Olive Thomas, "An Even Break," written and directed by Lambert Hillyer.

The feature of the Rialto bill the preceding week was another Triangle drama, Bessie Love in "The Sawdust Ring," and the box office reports indicate that it played to splendid business.

THREE MEN HELD FOR THEFT

Charged with Stealing "Joan, the Woman" Positive—Producers Waging War on Picture Pirates Who Menace Them

The biggest achievement made so far in the efforts of film producers to put a stop to the theft of positive films was accomplished by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation last week in connection with the arrest of three men charged with stealing a positive print of "Joan, the Woman," from which a duplicate negative was made. Both the print and negative have been recovered.

Fred Beck, Leo Singer and Louis Weiss, the three men arrested were brought before United States Commissioner Hitchcock and, after a hearing were held for the Grand Jury in $2,000 bail, each.

Following the theft of one of the prints, Ralph A. Kohn, attorney for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation took the matter to the United States District Attorney's office and an investigation was begun. Beck, Singer and Weiss were arrested. It is alleged that the stolen positive was taken to New Jersey where it was being made into a negative film.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is conducting an active campaign against film thefts and has obtained the backing of the government in its efforts to put a stop to the evil. Theft of positives has become a source of considerable loss to producers. The practice has been to filch the film overnight from an exchange and make from it a master negative, to be shipped to foreign countries. It is a mechanical method of picture piracy and has long been a sore point to producers.

The theft and duplication of the "Joan, the Woman" positive would have meant a big source of revenue to law-breakers. The picture was produced by Cecil B. De Mille, Director General of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and has as its star in the name part, Geraldine Farrar. The photoplay appeared at the Fourty-fourth Street Theater in New York throughout the last theatrical season. It was following the winter run that the positive is alleged to have been stolen from a film exchange.

Prosecution of the case will be followed through relentlessly, and the present action in regard to the arrest and holding for the Grand Jury of Beck, Singer, and Weiss is generally regarded as a big thing in the line of producers' efforts to crush out a long-time evil.

Universal Schedule for Week

Following "A Wife on Trial," a five-reel Butterfly Picture released July 30, Universal offers a strong list of diversified subjects, including two dramas, five comedies, and four news and educational features, besides the latest episode of "The Gray Chost," for the coming week.

"Right-Of-Way Casey," a Gold Seal drama featuring Neal Hart and Janet Eastman, will be released Tuesday, July 31. Considerable comedy is introduced into the tale, which recounts the adventures that befall Casey, a traffic cop, who wins the enmity of a crooked sergeant by capturing two thieves who have been working under the superior officer's protection.

"Married by Accident," a Nestor comedy, featuring Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts, will be released on the same date.

"Blackboard and Blackmail," a two-reel L-Ko comedy, in which Merta Sterling, Phil Dunham and Lucille Hutton are the principal funmakers, is the offering for Wednesday, August 1. This unusual combination of thrills and laughs deals with the adventures of a group of school children, their new teacher and a group of light-fingered gentry from the city who take refuge in the school when pursued by the law. The eighty-third issue of the Animated Weekly will also be released at the same time.

Cleo Madison in "The Woman Who Would Not Pay," is the star of the feature release for Thursday, August 2. This story, written by E. M. Ingleton, and directed by Ruth Ann Baldwin, is strongly emotional with an unusually effective climax. "The Battling Bellboy," a Joker comedy, featuring William Franey, will also be shown on August 2. This is a hilarious tale of a bellboy with aspirations to become a fistic champion.

On Friday, August 3, Carter De Haven and Flora Parker De Haven will be featured in a Victor two-reel comedy entitled, "Where Are My Trousers?" written by Daisy O'Connor and Ryder Cunningham. The De Havens take the part of a newly married couple who are the victims of an officious mother-in-law. The thirtieth issue of the Universal Screen Magazine, released on the same date, contains a series of interesting subjects, including scenes showing improved methods of educating the blind; a demonstration of the Hyde ship-brake, an invention that enables craft to stop in little more than their own length, and thus avoid collisions; demonstrations in domestic science; and scenes incidental to the making of an aeroplane.

A Joker comedy, "The Stinger Stung," featuring Gale Henry, will be released on Saturday, August 4. The twelfth issue of Universal Current Events will appear the same day, together with a Powers comedy cartoon and a Ditmar's Educational subject, "In Monkeyland," showing chimpanzee, gorilla, ourang-outang and their brethren in various scenes from life.

The sixth episode of "The Gray Ghost," for release outside Greater New York, will be entitled, "The House of Mystery," and will feature Priscilla Dean, Emory Johnson, Eddie Polo and Harry Carter.

New Styles in Comedies

"Close followers of screen comedy," says Al. E. Christie, himself a successful producer of many years' standing, "have noted within recent months a decided change in the character of pictures released—a relegation to the background of the rough action which has characterized much of the former product, and the substitution of deliciously humorous situations, consistently developed in the plot.

"These bits of action, and the subtle touches which the players give to the development of a situation are the things which bring joy to the heart of the theater patron, and cause many a chuckle after he has returned home. The unexpected propulsion of a custard pie may provoke a shout of laughter, but the tribulations of sane, human characters, and the humorous exposition of their frailties, are the basis of true comedy.

"In the Christie comedies we insist on a consistent plot in all cases, and our stories are interpreted by a company of attractive young players who typify the most potent influence in the world—youth."

TO USE "LEGIT" ADVERTISING

Paralta Will Advertise Along the Lines of Legitimate Theatrical Productions—To Furnish Paper that Compels Interest.

Announcement is made that Paralta Plays, Inc., will direct the publicity in connection with is releases, which are to be made through Triangle Distributing Corporation under the Paralta plan, strictly on the lines of legitimate theatrical productions.

"There are two lines of publicity in the promotion of moving pictures which must be intensively developed," remarked President Anderson of Paralta recently. "Any departure from these lines is waste of effort and money—never losing sight of the fact that the whole structure is based in part on adequate production. First, the picture must be good entertainment and just what theatergoers really want to see. With a really good picture the producer starts right.

"The first line of publicity extends from producers to exhibitors as to story, author, star, company, etc. This connection made, then comes the most important line—between the exhibitor and the public, the vital line, on which the success of the entire industry depends, for upon it rests the patronage.

"In legitimate theatrical interests a production is put before the public beginning with general news items printed in dramatic columns. Then, two weeks ahead of playing time, the advance man comes into town and the actual work of bringing the production to the attention of local theater goers is begun. On the departure of the advance man it is carried on by the local manager till the show comes in.

"Paralta Plays will be made widely known to theater patrons as they are being produced, but their actual promotion in public attention will be carried on in each town exactly as a traveling attraction on the speaking stage is handled.

"Of course it would be impossible for Paralta to have an advance man in every town two weeks to ten days ahead of the showing of a Paralta picture, but this company has devised an effective substitute for "the man ahead," and he will be there in effect, if not in person.

"All Paralta's advertising paper and 'helps' will be framed on strict and well-tried theatrical lines, shooting directly at the mark of creating in the public mind curiosity and desire to see its pictures. The value and effectiveness of these established theatrical methods has been well proved by an experience of fully thirty years.

"Paralta will not issue heralds or other printed matter of any kind giving the synopsis of any story. This is fundamentally wrong, for it gives audiences information which stales interest in a production and hurts and does not help.

BRILLIANT EXPOSITION BALL

National Convention at Chicago Closed by Big Function Under Auspices of Reel Fellows Club—Many Stars Present

The biggest social event of the national convention and exposition which has just closed at Chicago was the brilliant ball given on Saturday evening of exposition week at the Hotel Morrison under the auspices of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago.

The grand march began at midnight. Many shining stars took part or looked on, besides the several hundred fans who attended. Bryant Washburn, of Essanay, and Nell Craig, formerly of that company, winners of the Reel Fellows' popularity contest, led the marchers. Norma Talmadge, Fanny Ward and Jack Dean, her husband, Hazel Daly, Essanay, Rose Tapley, Vitagraph, and some lesser lights were also in the dress parade.

One of the features of the evening was the popular dancing contest. This was won, through the process of elimination, by the charming Mrs. Bryant Washburn and her partner. The newly discovered "star" was presented with a big silver loving cup, which had been provided by the management of the hotel, and which was immediately christened at the ball.

Another high light of the evening was the solo "Butterfly dance" by the captivating Miss Valdeo de Coriche of Riverview park, who also danced in "The Dumb Girl of Portici" with Pavlowa.

The affair came to "Home, Sweet Home" about three o'clock in the morning and the Reel Fellows were once more voted both royal and democratic entertainers.

Mae Murray Becomes Bluebird

Mae Murray, recently star in Lasky features, has signed contracts to become a star in Bluebird, with Robert Leonard her producing director. The deal was closed at the New York headquarters of Bluebird late on Saturday afternoon, July 14, and, after having spent a few days at the Chicago convention, Miss Murray and Mr. Leonard departed for the west coast.

Mae Murray, charming star captured by Universal for Bluebird plays.

Immediately upon arriving in Los Angeles a decision will be reached concerning the first feature Miss Murray will present, and Mr. Leonard will at once begin the work of production. This engagement marks Mr. Leonard's return to Bluebird's directing staff. When the program was in its early stages he directed Ella Hall in several features, leaving Bluebird a few months ago to join the Lasky forces as Miss Murray's director.

Miss Murray's presentations of "A Mormon Maid," "Sweet Kitty Bellaire" and "At First Sight" were directed by Mr. Leonard. Among other features in which Miss Murray has starred are "The Primrose Ring" and "To Have and to Hold." In these presentations Miss Murray has become established as a screen favorite, and Bluebird will make every possible effort to capitalize her popularity, not alone in giving publicity to her features, but in selecting subjects that will best develop her natural equipments for entertaining.

Bessie Barriscale in "Madame Who"

Bessie Barriscale's next production will be a screen version of Harold McGrath's sensation mystery story, "Madame Who," on which Mr. Monte M. Katterjohn has been engaged for some time in making the scenario.

Mr. McGrath's story created a nation-wide sensation among readers of fiction last fall when it was first published in a popular magazine. The scenes are laid in the South during the Civil War. The tale centers around the thrilling adventures of a young Southern girl who is taken as a spy and forced into marriage with one of a band of eleven mysterious men. Throughout the narrative the identity of the unknown husband remains enshrouded in mystery and is not solved until the climax.

This novel has all the earmarks of a typical Harold McGrath story, the development of its incidents constantly illustrating the wonderful ability of this author to keep his readers guessing.

The scenes are laid in various cities and towns below Mason-Dixon's line and much of the action takes place on disputed ground, so many flashes of actual warfare as it was waged in the '60s will find reflection in this picture.

The production of "Madame Who" will be undertaken almost immediately and David M. Hartford, the casting director for the Kerrigan and Barriscale organizations is engaging Miss Barriscale's support.

New Jaxon Product Announced

Following the first successful series of six each, new sets of half a dozen Jaxon Comedies and Sparkle Comedies have been finished by the Jaxon Film Corporation for release through General Film.

The Number Two series of Jaxon Comedies featuring Pokes and Jabs contains these six one-reel subjects: "Counting 'Em Up," "The Baggage Man," "Getting the Coin," "Tough Luck," "Jolly Tars," and "Play Ball."

The second series of Sparkle Comedies, single-reelers of the polite type, contains "An Attorney's Affair," "Her Peignor," "Those Terrible Telegrams," "Stag Party," "Bragg's Poker Game," and "Mixed Nuts."

It is stated by General Film that great satisfaction has been expressed by exhibitors at the method of marketing the Jaxon's product in groups of six releases with service insured well in advance. There has not been a hitch in distribution.

SENNETT BEGINS WORK

Upon Arrival in California Comedy Producer Starts at Once on New Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedies

Almost immediately upon his arrival in California after signing an agreement whereby he will produce comedies for release by Paramount, Mack Sennett went into conference with Jesse L. Lasky, Cecil B. DeMille, Milton E. Hoffman and other officials at the Lasky studio. As a result of his informal chart Mr. Sennett is most enthusiastic concerning the future for Paramount-Sennett productions. The entire Sennett organization at Edendale is to continue intact according to Mr. Sennett, and plans are already completed for the beginning of active operation upon productions of the new Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedies, one of which will be released by Paramount every two weeks under the new agreement.

In an enthusiastic wire to the Paramount Home Office in New York, Mr. Sennett said:

"Work began today on the first of the new Paramount-Mack Sennett Comedies.

"Hereafter all the comedies under my direction will be put on the market under this name. This is the result of an agreement recently entered into in New York.

"Everything at the studio will go on just about as before. Most of the comedians who have become famous in these comedies will be the same; the personnel of my associates will remain almost as heretofore. The only difference will be the plan of distribution and the trade mark over the door.

"The Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies will, as heretofore, be made under my personal direction from the time the germ of the scenario is talked over until the finished film is finally 'cut' in the projecting room."

"Pride and the Man"

William Russell, foremost screen actor of the athletic type, whose work in motion picture drama has made him the idol of young America, is starred in a new play, "Pride and the Man," produced by the Mutual-American studios, which is certain to be one of Mr. Russell's most sensational successes. "Pride and the Man" will be released by Mutual July 30.

In this production the young star is given full swing for his boxing proclivities, which are foremost in his record of athletic achievement. Mr. Russell is seen in the squared circle opposed to one of the most famous professional fighters in the American ring—Al. Kaufman, former heavyweight contender for the American championship.

Mr. Russell appears as "Handsome Jack" Bronson, the American champion, who has withdrawn from pugilism because of a fear that to continue in it would be to imperil the happiness of the woman he loves, but when he later comes to realize that the only way to disperse his enemies is to enter one more championship contest, he signs up for the big fight, which is one of the most remarkable screen spectacles ever filmed.

The love motif of "Pride and the Man" is very prettily carried out by that brilliant young actress Francelia Billington, who is leading woman in the cast.

The great fight is won by Jack in a desperate finish, Tom Hogan, his opponent, being knocked out. Hogan is played by Al. Kaufman, one of the best known professional fighters in the United States. The fight is one of the most scientific boxing exhibitions ever screened.

The staging of this new drama is sumptuous and it is one of the most thrilling stories ever told in picture form. Director Edward Sloman has outdone himself in the fight spectacle, which is true to life in every aspect, the big crowds, the ringside scenes and the contest itself.

Mr. Russell is supported by an excellent cast, which includes, in addition to Miss Billington, Clarence Burton, George Fisher, Paul Weigil and Antrim Short.

First Horsley-Art Dramas

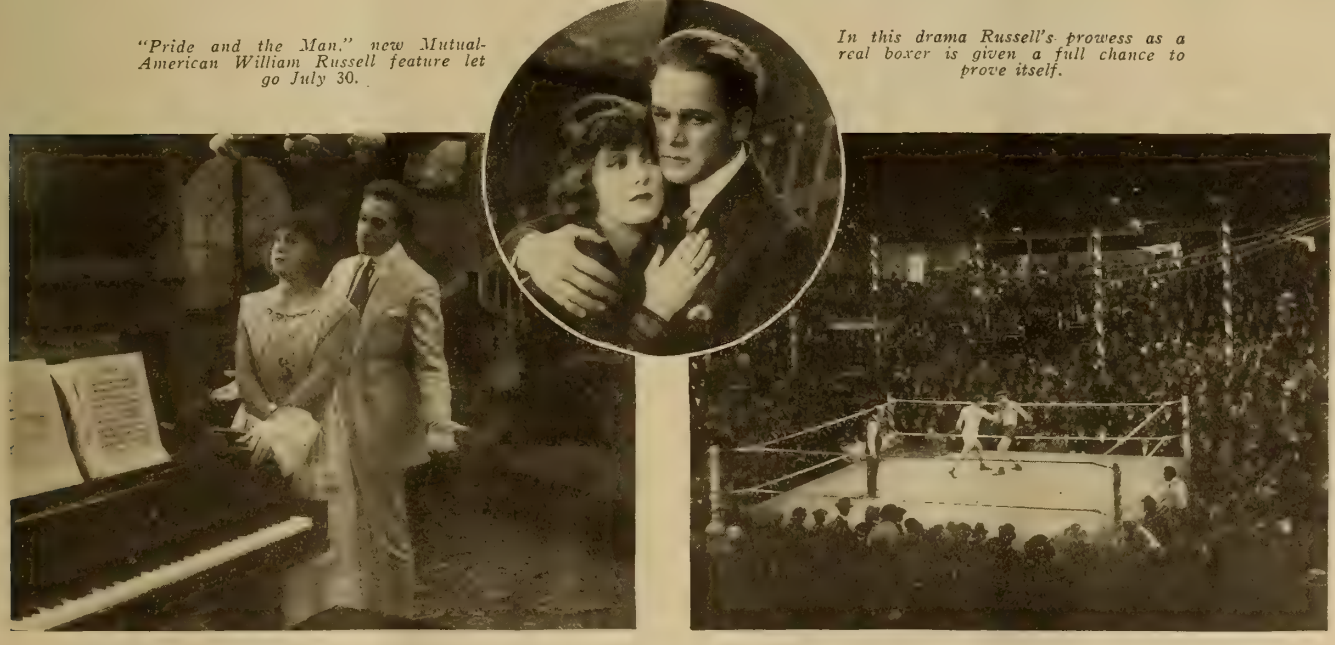
"Eye of Envy," first of the David Horsley productions on Art Dramas program, is considered by those who have seen it to be the best feature production, from the standpoint of story, direction and acting, that the renowned star, Crane Wilbur, has ever graced. The story is a departure from usual motion picture theme, being something entirely new to the screen. It may best be described as a dramatic allegory.

While this type of drama has been done on the stage by great masters of symbolism, such as Maeterlinck and Hauptmann, the screen will have its first taste of it in "Eye of Envy."



A straightforward story of romance and adventure, filled with fascinating complications and thrilling climaxes, and yet possessing an allegorical imputation that raised it far above the level of mere entertainment —such is Mr. Wilbur's first Art Dramas production, according to persons who have seen the picture.

Clever Triple Exposure

A triple exposure, which breaks the record for the number of times necessary to make it to satisfy a director, is one of the many photographic features of "Who's Your Neighbor?" the sociological photo-drama now being state-righted by Master Drama Features, Inc., 1493 Broadway, New York city. Laboratory experts say that this triple exposure is one of the finest things of its kind ever done. It is so delicate a piece of work, requiring such perfect timing to the fraction of a second and perfect synchronization that it had to be taken twenty times before the result was satisfactory to Director S. Rankin Drew.

Ben W. Kanter, New Jersey representative for George Kleine's organization, K. E. S. E., traveling out of the Greater New York city branch, was among the first to be called to the army as the result of the drawing of lots. Mr. Kleine has pledged himself to take back, after the war, all his employes who are called to the service, so New Jersey representatives can see Mr. Kanter immediately after the Kaiser is convinced that he undertook a bigger job than he could finish.

"Pride and the Man," new Mutual-American William Russell feature let go July 30.

In this drama Russell's prowess as a real boxer is given a full chance to prove itself.

Polo Again a Universaler

Eddie Polo has signed a new two years' contract with Universal. He is well known for his strenuous and thrilling activities in "Graft," "The Broken Coin," "Liberty," and more recently in "The Gray Ghost," Universal's latest serial, now being released.

Eddie Polo, circus strong man and acrobat, who remains with Universal.

Polo joined the stock company at Universal City two seasons ago, and is rated as one of the favorite "strong men" of the screen. An Italian by birth, he has appeared before the public continuously from babyhood. At two years of age he drew a regularly salary for walking on his hands, and at seven he was an accomplished acrobat and high diver.

About this time Polo joined the forces of Barnum & Bailey, and for seventeen years remained with that organization. One of his most sensational exploits was a drop in a parachute from an aeroplane while circling above the Eiffel Tower, in Paris, over 1,000 feet in the air. He is credited with being the first trapeze performer to catch a fellow acrobat after a triple somersault in the air. But while effecting this hazardous feat, he was struck in the mouth and all of his front teeth were knocked loose.

As an animal trainer and an under-water swimmer, the agile Italian also stars. He once swam 325 feet without coming to the surface for air. Polo is improving steadily in his work as a screen actor. He has a straightforward, manly personality, and a smile that lingers in the memory, together with his prowess as a scenery wrecker.

Receives Scenario from Korea

The scenario department of Universal City stopped work in a body the other day, to devote their entire attention to a scenario, six pages long, which had just been received in the morning mail. It was not that the story was epoch making, or the plot so original, but that the entire six pages were composed of mysterious heiroglyphics which no one in the picture city could fathom.

The strange document was shown to everyone on the lot, for there is probably no more international crowd in the world than the employes at Universal City. At last a native Korean was discovered who unraveled the mystery.

The author had even cast his play. It is true that he has selected a cast composed of about a dozen Bluebird and Universal stars, but he proved that his acquaintance with the personnel of the two lists of the film actors was wide, for he mentioned Dorothy Phillips, Lon Chaney, Ella Hall, Herbert Rawlinson, Jack Mulhall and Gretchen Lederer. When the story was deciphered, it showed some promise, and there is a possibility that before long our western eyes may behold a screen play from the pen of a native Korean.

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM

Mary Pickford's Newest Artcraft Picture Adapted from Famous Play and Book Said to Be Greater Success than "Poor Little Rich Girl"

Mary Pickford's presentation of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" will live long in the hearts of the many thousands who have seen it but her newest picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," according to an Artcraft executive, will out-Pickford even that famous success. The child type presented by "Littly Mary" in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" was conceded to be the most remarkable characterization of this kind ever screened, which prompted the producers to obtain the screen rights to "Rebecca," the famous story and play by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson.

Under the direction of Marshall Neilan, the capable young Lasky producer, who has attracted wide attention for his artistic achievements under that trade mark, the new Mary Pickford vehicle is now rapidly nearing completion at the West coast studios. The subject was adapted to the screen by Frances Marion, which fact adds considerably to the merit of the production.

Supporting Mary Pickford in her latest photoplay is a splendid collection of talent presenting many well known players including, Eugene O'Brien, Helen Jerome Eddy, Charles Ogle, Marjorie Daw, Mayme Kelso, Jane Wolff, Josephine Crowell, Jack MacDonald, Violet Wilkey, Frank Turner, Kate Toncray and Emma Gerdes.

August L-Kos Ready

J. G. Blystone, general director of L-Ko Comedies, has forwarded to Julius Stern, at L-Ko headquarters in New York, an assemblage of comedies to be released through Universal exchanges in late August and during September. They comprise the work of Directors Noel Smith, Vin Moore, Dick Smith and Phil Dunham, the last named producer now showing his first work as a comedy director. Mr. Dunham has heretofore been an L-Ko comedian and has, therefore, picked up all the way of doing reckless stunts for laughing purposes.

"Streetcars and Carbuncles," directed by Dick Smith, is the August 22 L-Ko, with Bob McKenzie, Eva Novak, Edith Barry and Chester Ryckman doing the main stunts. For August 29, Phil Dunham will show his skill as a director in "A Rural Caesar," in which Lucille Hutton will be featured along with Billy Bevan. The September 5 release will be "From Ranch to Riches," directed by Vin Moore, with Myrtle Sterling the heroine and Al Forbes and Kathleen Emerson prominent in the funmaking. "The Prop's Revenge," directed by Noel Smith, will have Walter Stevens, Gladys Varden and Bert Roach featured in the September 12 release.

Mignon Anderson is the star of the Butterfly feature release for July 30th. Miss Anderson will have the leading role in "A Wife on Trial," a five-part drama taken from Margaret Widdemer's novel, "The Rose Garden Husband," which ranked as one of the best-sellers a season or two ago. She will be supported by Leo Pierson and a capable cast. Ruth Ann Baldwin directed the production.

GOLDWYN MAKES COMEDIES

Marie Dressler Comedies to Be Released by Goldwyn Distributing Corporation—Eight Two-Reeler Fun Films Coming

Goldwyn has closed a contract to release and distribute eight two-reel Marie Dressler comedies to be made by Miss Dressler's own company under an exclusive agreement with Goldwyn. Miss Dressler's comedies are not a matter for future development, for the famous comedienne has been working for more than a month in Fort Lee and will follow the same principle as the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation by always keeping months ahead of release with finished production.

Marie Dressler, who is to make Goldwyn comedies.

Miss Dressler and James Dalton, her husband and manager, have gathered together a trained and splendidly equipped organization for the making of comedies, and this organization promptly took advantage of the Goldwyn studio facilities in Fort Lee and began work in late June on the first of the comedies.

Exhibitors throughout the world who have reaped large returns from Miss Dressler's long comedy productions, "Tillie's Nightmare" and "Tillie's Punctured Romance," especially, will be delighted to know that this big box office star has not only obtained her own producing mechanism, but made a close business alliance with the Goldwyn distributing facilities.

First announcement of this deal was made in Chicago by Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, to a group of the Goldwyn branch managers in attendance at the exhibitors' exposition and to various exhibitors who are following closely the development and expansion of the Goldwyn interests.

Further announcement of a new and pleasant relationship in another direction is to be made by Mr. Goldfish within the next few days. This also has to do with Goldwyn's production of farce comedies of greater length by another important star.

Miss Dressler is one of the distinctive figures of the American stage who in her previous work at once established an equally important place for herself in the screen world. Unlike many of the stars who come from the stage, she secured and established her position with her very first motion picture.

New Selig Comedy

One of Charles Hoyt's best comedies, "A Dog in the Manger," will be the Selig release in K. E. S. E. service Monday, August 6. It is a two-reel farce, and, according to the reviewers, is one of the best of the Selig-Hoyt comedies yet released.

The plot concerns two inventors who come to grief when their bogus sausage machine goes to pieces and they only escape from pursuing policemen by a very close margin. The two arrive at a hotel where all employes have gone on a strike. Both fall in love with the landlord's daughter. Mr. Grump, the star boarder, has the gout and his ailment is not relieved any when the hotel strikebreakers wait upon him. He rides in his invalid chair out of the hotel and down the walk. Fearing the loss of his star boarder, the landlord orders a pursuit. The star boarder's chair never stops until it plunges into the lake. Bright and early, strikebreakers, dive in after the star boarder, who failed to hold his breath as instructed. There is a series of side-splitting episodes, good photography, and the Selig Company promises a laugh in almost every inch of film.

Triangles for July 29

A unique feature of the Triangle program for the week of July 29 will be "In Slumberland," starring Thelma Salter, a fairy-tale production with considerable interest for grown-ups too, which is designed to meet the growing demands for photoplays of juvenile interest.

Little Miss Salter, who was co-starred with Frank Keenan in "The Crab" several months ago, has the part of an Irish child, whose poetic fancy has been stimulated by the fairy-tales told her by an old fortune teller and a genial old man. The action, which is laid at the time of the Boer War, involves an old reprobate of a landlord who persuades a young husband and father to go to the front that he may carry on his suit with the charming wife, whom he long has coveted. How his plans are frustrated by the little girl, with the aid of "little people," is said to constitute an action full of surprises and wtih rare charm.

Triangle's other release for the same week is "Borrowed Plumage," a five-reel production starring Bessie Barriscale, and notable for its picturesqueness and beauty of mounting. It is a story of Georgian England, involving John Paul Jones and a little kitchen slavey who was the only one who did not run when he arrived at the castle with his pirate band.

Bessie Barriscale, who is conceded to be one of the most versatile actresses on the screen today, is probably the first since the celebrated Lotta of days gone by, to rise to fame through her portrayal of soubrette types. In "Borrowed Plumage" she is afforded full scope for her efforts in this peculiar direction.

Alice Moore with Triangle

Mrs. Alice Moore, who has just been appointed assistant art director at the Triangle Culver City studios, enjoys the distinction of being the first woman ever employed in such a capacity at the big Triangle plant.

Mrs. Moore began her dramatic career as an actress and later, when the rank of stage players were being depleted by the rapid rise of the motion pictures, transferred her talents to the screen. While thus employed, her brilliant ideas and suggestions for dressing sets came to the attention of the men in charge of this department and she was induced to work in her present place.

BRAND NEW MUTUALS

William Russell in "Pride and the Man" Leads Attractive Mutual Schedule for Week of July 30

William Russell, first-class fighting man, heads Mutual release schedule for the week of July 30 in

"Jerry's Big Stunt," Mutual Cub comedy for August 3.

"Pride and the Man," a five-reel star production from the American studio.

"Big Bill" has appeared in a series of corking features under the direction of Edward Sloman and "Pride and the Man" is a real Russell picture and, like the rest of the series, built out of a story with a punch.

Russell is a fighter of the first water and Sloman has been giving him an opportunity in each of his recent pictures to put on a fistic encounter of thrilling proportions. He goes farther in "Pride and the Man." Russell plays the role of champion pugilist and the picture puts him into the ring with a foe no less worthy than Al. Kaufman, one time belt wearer.

The picture presents wide advertising possibilities. The name of the star has big box office value. The fight scene can be heavily advertised and the romance around which the picture is constructed is itself sufficient to carry the production over big.

With "Pride and the Man," Mutual will release on July 30, the second chapter of "The Great Stanley Secret." "The Great Stanley Secret" is in eight reels, two four-reel chapters. William Russell and Charlotte Burton play the leading roles. The first chapter, "The Gypsy's Trust," was released July 23. The second installment is under the title, "Fate and the Child." "The Great Stanley Secret" is a gripping melodrama, a corking hot weather picture.

There are two comedies on Mutual's schedule for the week. "Man Proposes," the La Salle for the week, is released on July 31, and the Cub, "Jerry's Big Stunt," reaches the screen August 2. Both are one-reelers. George Ovey, the inimitable comedian, plays the leading role in "Jerry's Big Stunt."

Mutual Tours Around the World, released July 31, covers Marken, an island in the Zuidor Zee, the monastery and convent at LaGrande Chartreuse, and Majorca, an island in the Mediterranean. This one-reel travel picture shows a steadily growing booking, an evidence of a popular demand for short subjects of just this character.

Reel Life No. 66, which is released August 2, covers the following subjects: "Making Machine Guns," "Beads of Rose Petals," "Saving a Wrecked Steamship," "Keeping the Boys Home," and animated drawings from life.

Mutual Weekly, the current news reel carrying pictures of happenings of headline consequence, is released August 1, the day after it goes to press.

August Art Dramas

The revision of program schedules necessary to allow of the immediate release of the Horsley-Crane Wilbur Features on Art Dramas Program has been completed, and the new order of release is here given for the first time.

Several changes in releases for the next two months are indicated. Contrary to first plans, "Eye of Envy," first of the Wilbur Art Dramas, is to be placed among the July releases, and the second, tentatively titled "Blood of His Fathers," will follow in August.

The release schedule, which will be adhered to, as far as is known, presents the Apollo picture, "When You and I Were Young," starring Alma Hanlon, directly following "The Peddler," the Joe Welch feature from the U. S. Amusement Corporation studio.

"When You and I Were Young" is to be followed by "Eye of Envy." This presents Crane Wilbur in a role of a novel sort.

After "Eye of Envy" comes the U. S. Amusement-Art Drama, "Think It Over," in which Catherine Calvert and Richard Tucker are starred.

The first release for the month of August comes from the Van Dyke studios, and is entitled "Peg O' the Sea." Jean Sothern is starred in this, which is a delightful comedy with some unexpected situations.

"Peg O' the Sea" has for a setting a New England fishing village. The entire Van Dyke company journeyed up the coast to a village just like the one in the story, in order to obtain correct atmosphere. Eugene Nowland, who made such a success with Miss Sothern's previous Art Drama, "Miss Deception," is also the director of "Peg O' the Sea."

Another Alma Hanlon vehicle, "Behind the Mask," from the Apollo company, is next in order. An Erbograph production, starring Marian Swayne and directed by Joseph Levering, will be the next feature on the program. No title has yet been selected for this, but officials hope to arrive at the decision in a day or so. The picture is said to be, in tone and theme, similar to Miss Swayne's two previous Erbographs, "Little Miss Fortune" and "The Road Between," both of which were extraordinary successes.

The last production for August will be the second of the Horsley productions starring Crane Wilbur. The working title of this is "Blood of His Fathers." It was directed by Harrish Ingraham and written by J. Francis Dunbar. Mr. Wilbur plays three distinct roles in this —a father, his son and his grandson. The play is said to be stirringly dramatic.

BLACKTON WITH PARAMOUNT

Former Vitagraph Vice-President to Produce Pictures Independently Under New Arrangement—Four Productions Appear

J. Stuart Blackton, former vice-president of Vitagraph, has become an independent producer for the Paramount Pictures Corporation. While retaining his financial interest in Vitagraph, Mr. Blackton ceases all active connection with the concern and will form his own organization for the purpose of producing the new pictures which are to be known as the J. Stuart Blackton series of photoplays. There are to be four productions during the first year, all to be equal in power and scope to "The Battle Cry of Peace," which won Mr. Blackton an international reputation as a director and producer. Active work upon production is to be begun at once and the first picture is to be released about October 1.

Coincidental with Mr. Zukor's announcement, there comes a statement signed by Mr. Blackton relative to his future plans which reads as follows:

"The play's the thing," and I have given careful consideration to the vehicles from which my pictures will be adapted. I believe that the writings of Sir Gilbert Parker offer a greater opportunity for picturization than almost any other fiction of today through their vital, virile action, their unfailing deep themal note of sentiment and mysticism, and above all their high quality of that necessary attribute, imagination.

My affection and esteem for my lifelong friend and business partner, Albert E. Smith, is undiminished, and I shall miss my continual association with him and all of the great army of faithful Vitagraphers more, perhaps, than I realize at present.

MENACE IN FILM EXPORTS

Walter Irwin, V. L. S. E. Manager, Orders Investigation of Disused Film Shipments—Fears They Are Finding Way to Germany

Walter W. Irwin, treasurer, secretary and general manager of V-L-S-E, has called upon picture producers throughout the United States to guard carefully all of their disused film to prevent it from falling into the hands of the enemies of the Allies, or any person friendly to the Central Powers.

The reason for Mr. Irwin's warning is that he has recently ascertained that there has been a largely increased inquiry for discarded film and further investigation tends to prove that at least some of this disused film may be finding its way into Germany through shipment via the Scandinavian countries.

Gun cotton is the basis of raw film stock. Owing to this fact it is of tremendous value to Germany, recent reports from the war zone indicating that Germany and her allies are in need of the ingredients of high explosives.

As soon as Mr. Irwin was informed of the inquiry for discarded motion picture films, he engaged the services of investigators whose preliminary reports tend to show that his surmise that this discarded stock is being shipped abroad is true.

According to the preliminary investigation, the discarded stock is consigned abroad under the guise of films shipped for exhibition purposes. Much of the film will stand inspection by the ordinary layman, or even a government inspector, who might think that this discarded film is still available for exhibition purposes, whereas an expert would know almost immediately that it could not be used for exhibition purposes.

Mr. Irwin feels that his short preliminary investigation has produced results which justify him placing the entire matter before the government and leaving the entire adjustment in the hands of the proper government officials.

As a result of the activities of persons who have been making inquiries for used films, the bid price has advanced approximately six cents a pound in a very short time. The usual price for a pound of gelatine-covered celluloid has remained steady at about twenty-two cents a pound for several months, until very recently, when offers as high as thirty cents a pound have been received.

The amount of discarded film in the hands of the larger producing companies is tremendous. It will run into the hundreds of thousands of tons.

None of the larger companies have sold any of their discarded stock for some time, and, after Mr. Irwin's investigation, it is likely that all will agree to hold their discarded stock until after the termination of the war.

Fairbanks, Idol of the Navy

The following letter of appreciation from Edward H. O'Hara of the U. S. N. was recently received by Douglas Fairbanks:

Dear Mr. Fairbanks:

Will you be kind enough to lay aside for the moment your strenuous activities and listen to a few words of praise from the sailors of the United States Navy?

In these warring times when all good citizens are striving to "do their bit," there are some who need not strive, because by their very occupations they are doing a great big "bit," and foremost amongst these is the multitude of photoplayers who constantly furnish education, amusement and diversion of mind to the thousands of Uncle Sam's fighting men who are about to take part in the great war. This contribution from the movie makers is absolutely essential to the good spirits and content of the men and without contentment we could not have the wonderful navy that we now possess.

It would not be an exaggeration to say that seventy-five per cent of the men now at the Naval Training Station here occupy the best part of their liberties on shore at the picture theaters and all are rapidly becoming devoted "fans."

Recently, the subject of the most popular player came up and you were almost unanimously declared to be the leader of your profession and the logical recipient of this letter. To us you typify everything that is American. Your good nature makes a deep impression on our minds and you inspire us to put as much energy into our work as you do in yours. For this reason you are the bluejackets' favorite and we want you to know in what high esteem we hold you and your associates.

Edward H. O'Hara, U. S. N.

New Lighting Device

Time was when a man lit a cigar on the picture screen and no light appeared, when he struck a match in the darkness, producing a hardly perceptible flame, when a lamp, candle or gas-jet suddenly was illuminated without effect on the lighting of the scene.

But a little invention was perfected early this year by John M. Nickolaus, the superintendent of photography at Universal City, which makes a great step forward in the art of lighting a motion picture. This is a device which can be used in any situation which demands beams of light from a lantern, fire, gaslight, electric droplight, oil lamp, or even a match, in which the direction of the light actually comes from the fixture used in sufficient quantity to be recorded as a bright beam on the screen. Its use lends extraordinary realism to dark scenes, and is responsible for some of the most artistic effects ever obtained by the camera, which have recently been seen in Universal pictures.

Essanay Features for August

Essanay is putting out two big features during the month of August as well as seven two-part subjects. These pictures, which are said to have been especially constructed for hot weather programs, are being released through the K-E-S-E Service.

"Skinner's Baby," a sequel to "Skinner's Dress Suit," and "Skinner's Bubble," will be released August 6. Reports from this comedy-drama, which stars Bryant Washburn with Hazel Daly and the original Skinner company, indicate that it will rival if not surpass the highly successful runs of its predecessors. To exhibitors who have not shown the first two pictures, K-E-S-E is offering special inducements for the rental of the entire series. Harry Beaumont, who produced the original Skinner picture, wrote the story of "Skinner's Baby," and supervised its direction.

The second of Essanay's feature releases this month will be "Open Places." This tensely dramatic picturization of a romance of the Canadian mounted police, is the third of the Western series, featuring Jack Gardner, the former musical comedy star. It is scheduled for release August 20.

Four units of the "Do Children Count?" series are being released, one every Wednesday. These pictures feature little Mary McAlister, Essanay's child star. They are planned for a screen time, approximately, of twenty-five minutes. This series has met with great popularity throughout the country, seventy-one theaters in Chicago alone running it.

The units scheduled for August releases are "The Season of Childhood," "The Little White Girl," "The Bridge of Fancy," "The Kingdom of Hope." K-E-S-E is handling the releases.

The schedule is completed by three Black Cat features which are being released the first three Saturdays of the month. "Vernon, the Bountiful," featuring Virginia Valli and released August 4, is a comedy-drama of approximately 26 minutes screen time. "The Long Green Trail," a thrilling picture based on a kidnaping plot, will be released the following Saturday. It has been screened for 25 minutes. "Don't Lose Your Coat," the third Black Cat feature for release August 18, is a comedy-drama with a screen time of 26 minutes. These subjects are being released through General Film.

Spitzer Reports Good Business

N. H. Spitzer, vice-president and sales manager of the King-Bee Films Corporation, has returned from his transcontinental trip in the interests of the Billy West Comedies. Mr. Spitzer was absent from New York in all about five weeks and visited the important film centers in the country covering in all between 15,000 and 20,000 miles on the trip.

Mr. Spitzer succeeded in disposing of the whole available territory for the King Bee Billy West Comedies. This in itself is something of a record, as the first Billy West comedy was only released on May 15, and the entire United States territory was disposed of in about sixty days thereafter. Mr. Spitzer reports that conditions generally in the picture field of the United States are booming along at a hurricane clip.

Wheeler Oakman With Fox

Wheeler Oakman, one of the best-known of screen "heavies," has joined the William Fox players in the West and will be seen in an important part in a forthcoming picture by R. A. Walsh. Miriam Cooper will have the leading role.

Mr. Oakman has been in films for six years. His last William Fox feature was "Battle of Heaarts," in which he was in William Farnum's supporting cast.

Fifty Stars at Exposition

Nearly fifty stars glimmered at the Chicago exposition, not all at the same time but at one time or another during the nine days. Here is the list:

Mae Marsh, Pearl White, Sheldon Lewis, Doris Kenyon, Lillian Walker, Fannie Ward, Jack Dean, Anita King, Rose Tapley, Violet Mesereau, Nell Craig, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Mae Murray, Robert Leonard, Alice Brady, June Elvidge, Carlyle Blackwell, Bryant Washburn, Mary McAllister, Lew Fields, Taylor Holmes, Hazel Daly, Marguarite Clayton, Shirley Mason, Ernest Maupin, Raymond McKee, George Le Rocq, Virginia Valli, Helen Ferguson, Bessie Barclay, Amy Dennis, Jean Sothern, Norma Talmadge, Francis Bushman, Beverly Bayne, James Young, Edith Storey, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, Viola Dana and Alice McChesney.

Newspaper Man Captured

Carrying out his policy of using only trained newspaper men in the publicity department, Nat. S. Stronge, publicity director for Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., has added another metropolitan star to his staff in the person of Philip A. Fowler, who resigned as make-up editor of the New York Evening Sun to join V. L. S. E. Mr. Fowler is the third seasoned newspaper man to be drafted from Park Row by Mr. Stronge in his plan to put punch into publicity, his idea being to have press matter written in newspaper style and to get away from the old style of "bunk," extravagant adjectives and phony phakes.

Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," her first Goldwyn picture. Miss Marsh was chosen to open the National Exposition at Chicago, July 14

"FIGHTING TRAIL" COMPLETED

Big Out Door Serial Finished Ahead of Schedule—William Duncan and Carol Holloway Risk Life in Vitagraph Thriller

Seven days ahead of schedule time but only after seven months of continuous and strenuous work, "The Fighting Trail," Greater Vitagraph's serial, is finished in the company's studio, in Hollywood, California. It is the first all-outdoor serial ever completed since moving pictures were invented. And scarcely had the camera clicked out the finish of the fifteenth and last episode, when the entire company scattered to enjoy a ten days vacation, a token of the personal appreciation by President Albert E. Smith, of their faithful endeavor.

"The Fighting Trail" is a smashing story of mystery, conspiracy and love, centering about a hidden mine of priceless value, and its scenes are snatched from the wildest reaches in the Sierra Nevadas. Ninety-five per cent of the scenes are of the great outdoors; the only interiors are a few flashes. Wild beasts caught in their native lairs match wild settings and snakes and creeping things imperil the lives of hero and heroine.

William Duncan, who directed the production and took the leading male part, and Miss Carol Holloway, playing opposite, were poor life insurance risks from the first day they began work on the serial. In the taking of mountain pictures, these two took long chances with death and were often exposed to actual peril. On several occasions they received injuries, the scars of which remain as mementoes of their daring.

Duncan's troubles have been many and varied but he never waxes eloquent over them. He just drives ahead, a human dynamo, at times with apparent slight regard for the nerves and muscles of his company. One day he established "The Fighting Trail" record, thirty-six big outdoor scenes between sun up and darkness. On another occasion he worked the serial company for twenty-four hours, in three eight-hour shifts, he alone, being on the job all the time. His production work averaged two reels a week during the making of the picture.

Duncan "cut" into pictures with a Chicago film producing company as leading man, scenario writer, director, and, finally manager. He excelled in leads in the roughest Western pictures. Since joining the Western Vitagraph company, he has added materially to his reputation as a leading man by his masterly portrayals in such pictures as "The Badge of Courage," "The Last Man," and "Through the Wall." His intimate knowledge of all phases of photoplay production was of great value in his production of "The Fighting Trail," and his work in this is certain to fix him as one of the big stars of the screen.

Miss Holloway, who laughs at sheer mountain sides, swims mountain torrents, falls with bridges into bottomless ravines and does other equally hazardous stunts without counting the cost, just because it's in a day's work, is not a western girl, but a product of New England. She is now speeding East to divide her vacation between New York City and her home town, Williamsburg, Massachusetts.

At the end of their vacation period, Mr. Duncan and Miss Holloway will begin work on the first of several Blue Ribbon productions in which they are to be featured.

V. L. S. E., which will have charge of marketing the serial, is planning one of the greatest advertising campaigns ever conducted in connection with any motion picture, the billboard expenditure alone being fixed at $100,000. The merits of this great outdoor serial will be carried into every city, town and hamlet in the country.

V. L. S. E., the distributing organization for Greater Vitagraph product, has been strengthening its sales force for several months past and now announces the addition of two new salesmen, both experienced showmen and former exhibitors. One is Paul V. Phillips, until recently vice-president of the North Carolina Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and the other is Harold Hevia, who was the owner of one of the first picture theaters in Greater New York.

This new version of "Yoo hoo, Skinnay!" is Juanita Hansen, the Keystone charmer, in her cloth-of-gold bathing suit which won her a prize in the recent Pacific Coast Bathing Beauty contest.

A quarette of scenes from Vitagraph's newest Blue Ribbon drama, "By Right of Possession." The stars are the captivating Mary Anderson and the powerful Antonio Moreno. The picture will be available July 30.

BRANCH ESTABLISHES RECORD

Convention Week Smiles Upon V. L. S. E.—250 Days of Bookings for Vitagraph Features Announced by Chicago Manager

Convention week in Chicago was also a boomer for Vitagraph. First, S. E. Abel, manager of the Chicago branch of V. L. S. E., recorded two hundred and fifty days of bookings for Vitagraph features during the week, and then to round things up, the manager of the Revelry Theater, at 342 East Forty-seventh street, Chicago, declared the seven days of the convention period "Anita Stewart Week" at his theater, featuring Vitagraph's dainty star each day in a different picture.

The 250 days' booking reported by Manager Abel sets a record for Vitagraph in the Windy City and is one of the most remarkable showings ever credited to any company. Not satisfied with this performance, Mr. Abel arranged another feature which brought Vitagraph more forcibly to the attention of exhibitors and the public. He had a private showing of "Within the Law," Vitagraph's big feature in which Harry Morey and Alice Joyce show to such great advantage. This was staged in the Alhambra Theater, three blocks away from the Coliseum, where the exhibitors held their exposition, and admission was by special invitation.

The "Anita Stewart Week" at the Revelry Theater was declared by the exhibitor to have been one of the most successful he ever had. He picked out seven Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features in which Miss Stewart is the star and played one a day, the pictures he chose for his program being the following:

Sunday—"The Sins of the Mothers," the story of a girl's inherited passion for gambling.

Monday—"The Combat," wherein a girl is forced into bigamy by an ambitious mother who is unaware that the daughter had been secretly married and deserted.

Tuesday—"The Glory of Yolanda," the story of a little Russian dancing girl who discovers in time the iniquities of men.

Wednesday—"The Juggernaut," the picture showing the famous $40,000 train wreck staged by Vitagraph. Earle Williams also appears in this feature.

Thursday—"The More Excellent Way," in which the girl enters into a loveless marriage to save herself from a worthless suitor.

Friday—"A Million Bid," the tragic story of a woman whose first husband, whom she believed dead, dies while being operated upon by her second husband, a surgeon.

Saturday—"Clover's Rebellion, a society drama in which the girl rebels against wedding a title and chooses instead a poor American doctor.

Fox Films American History

In the belief that American history is a fertile field for the ambitious motion picture producer, William Fox announces his intention to present a number of massive photoplays founded on incidents and personalities familiar to every school child.

In line with this policy the Fox Corporation will present in September, a huge picturization of the career of that romantic figure, General Sam Houston, liberator of Texas and the best friend the Redmen of the Southwest ever had, under the title, "The Conqueror."

William Farnum will be seen in the stellar role, which is unusually well suited to his physical appearance and ability of expressing emotions and red-blooded vitality on the screen. The production was directed by R. A. Walsh, producer of "The Honor System," and other notable Fox offerings.

The story of "The Conqueror" begins with Sam Houston's early days among the Cherokee Indians. For these scenes 500 Sioux warriers and squaws were borrowed from their reservation.

Third Olive Thomas Play

Lynn Reynolds, a recent addition to the Triangle Culver City studio directorial force, this week is preparing the script for his first Triangle play, from his own story, which will star Olive Thomas. It will be Miss Thomas' third starring vehicle.

Miss Thomas will be supported by George Chesbro, while George Hernandex has an important character part. The locale of the story is in Arizona and New York City and Director Reynolds is planning to take his company to the desert to get the true Arizona atmosphere.

Reports of the torrid weather in that state have somewhat quelled the enthusiasm of the star but she has determined to make the trip, which will have been her first location journey since signing with Triangle.

HOLD FIRST CONVENTION

M. P. E. L. of Louisiana Hold "Get-Together" at New Orleans—Have Fine Turn-Out on Initial Occasion

The first state convention of the Louisiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was held at the Grunewald Hotel, New Orleans, and was a pronounced success.

The complaint in the motion picture business in this section, as in many others, has been that the exhibitors have refused to form any sort of an organization which had for its purpose the general good of the industry, and the result in times past has been that the individual theater-owners and operators have suffered unduly because of their inability to act in unison. Predictions are freely made now, however, that the day has passed for the defenseless position which has been heretofore occupied.

About three months ago the exhibitors of New Orleans formed the initial organization. The purpose of the convention was to secure the names of the visitors to the membership roll of the league. Upon arrival in the morning the visitors were registered in the reception rooms of the Grunewald and the first business meeting was held, at which the policies of the organization were outlined. Luncheon was served in the green room of the Grunewald, at which entertaining talks were made by Mayor Behrman, S. L. Rothapfel, of the Rialto Theater in New York; Richard C. Travers, of the Essanay Company, Chicago; E. V. Richards, Jr., managing director of the Stenger Amusement Company; Mrs. J. E. Lansing, chairman of the motion picture committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs for New Orleans; Al G. Shear, N. E. Thatcher and others. President Gugel, of the league, presided as toastmaster.

In the evening, after the regular presentation of the program at the Strand Theater, the visitors and members of the league were the guests of the Saenger Amusement Company at a special showing of the Strand program, which was followed by a luncheon.

Among the visitors from theaters outside of New Orleans were: Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Carlos, Bijou Theater, Jeanerette, La.; J. P. Scully, La Grand Theater, Glenmora, La.; F. J. Deitlein, Adolph Jacobs and F. J. Deitlein, Jr., Princess, Opelousas, La.; Will Isenberg, Grand, Greenville, Miss.; Lionel DeLacroix, Electra, Plaquemine, La.; P. V. Horta and A. M. Melancon, Victory Amusement Co., Lutcher, La.; P. E. Coe, Louisiana, Baton Rouge, La.; Bert Tiller, Southern Amusement Co., Lake Charles, La.; Numa Como, Victory Amusement Co., Lutcher, La.; C. M. Parkerson, Jefferson, Lafayette, La.; A. J. Bethancourt, Bijou, Houma, La.; Misses Lucile and M. Bethancourt, Houma, La.; Mrs. A. Bishop, New York city; S. Ehrlich, Shreveport, La.; Howard Swain, Shreveport, La.; Jac Manning, Alexandria, La.; Mrs. Eva Vernon, Texarkana, Tex.; Harry Vandemark, Houston, Tex.; J. A. Jones, Saenger Amusement Co., Pensacola, Fla.; Henry C. Sterns, Monroe, La., and L. J. Pico, Vicksburg, Miss.

Frank H. Loomis, formerly casting director of the Vitagraph Company, has returned to that organization in the capacity of studio manager. Mr. Loomis, in conjunction with his duties as studio manager, will resume his position as casting director.

New Feature Distributor

M. G. Watkins, who for the past three and a half years has been identified with the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation as secretary and general manager, has organized his own company for the purpose of handling territorial sales on feature productions for independent manufacturers. The new concern will be known as M. G. Watkins, Inc. Offices have already been secured, headquarters being in the Mallers Building, Chicago, with branches in the Knickerbocker Theater Building, New York, and Toy Building, Milwaukee. It is expected that a western office will soon be located for concern in Los Angeles.

M. G. Watkins, who is organizing a feature distributing company.

Mr. Watkins is well known throughout the entire industry, and has a thorough knowledge of the selling end of the business in all its ramifications. He is credited with the formation of a system of thirty exchanges, in addition to having been one of the first men in the state rights field.

Associated with him in the new enterprise are Walter A. Baier and A. H. Grey, both central west film men. Mr. Baier is general manager of the Baier Film Company of Milwaukee, in which Mr. Watkins is financialy interested, and will have charge of the Milwaukee branch of the new concern. Mr. Grey was for many years a leading exhibitor of Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

"There are unlimited possibilities in the field which I am entering," stated Mr. Watkins in a recent interview. "Many excellent state rights productions have been laid on the shelf, or have met with only partial sale because the manufacturers had little or no knowledge of the selling end of the business. In some instances the makers have been hoodwinked by irresponsible, so-called selling agents whose chief occupations were the improper or unnecessary expenditures of money.

"My company will not only handle national and worlds rights sales for the manufacturer, but will lend the hand of assistance and word of advice to him from the time the crank is turned on the first foot of film of his production until it has been entirely sold. We will aid him in the proper selection of paper and lobby material, as well as prepare his advertising and publicity matter, keeping the commercial angle in mind every inch of the way."

The new company has already secured the sales privileges on two feature productions.

John Upton, of the Vitagraph scenic department, has resigned to join his regiment, the Fourteenth New York.

MUTUAL ISSUES CATALOGUE

New Film Bulletin Contains Condensed Information About Stars and Pictures in Which They Appear—Aid to Exhibitors

Feature film productions representing a total investment of slightly more than fifteen millions of dollars, including hundreds of big pictures, are presented in the first quarterly catalogue of the Mutual Film Corporation, just off the press.

The Mutual's catalogue is a compact twenty-four page volume illustrated with pictures of all the Mutual's stars, beginning with the earliest releases and running from the early W. S. Hart and Mae Marsh pictures down to the Mary Miles Minter pictures to be released two months hence, and the coming releases of Charles Frohman successes in motion pictures.

A survey of the Mutual catalogue brings before the reader a surprising array of stars. One finds the familiar faces of many favorites now scattered through the field of picture production. There is Robert Harron, Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum, "Fatty Arbuckle" and many others of the early Mutual luminaries. Coming down to date we find Marjorie Rambeau, Nance O'Neil, Ann Murdock, Julia Sanderson, William Russell, Margarita Fischer, Gail Kane and others of the current Mutual releases.

The catalogue issued by Mutual contains condensed information on each of the stars and each of the pictures, with complete numerical designation, so that the reels can be located promptly in the exchanges and clearing house, regardless of date.

The catalogue is a part of the elaborate system of special service to the exhibitor instituted in the Mutual Film Corporation by President John R. Freuler.

"We will issue a new edition of the catalogue every quarter," said Denis J. Sullivan, of the Mutual's executive staff. "We will constantly have available every picture listed and the list will grow to take in everything among the added productions. Conditions in the motion picture business point to the growing importance of just the sort of service that this catalogue presents."

The Mutual's catalogue will be sent free to any motion picture exhibitor on application to his closest Mutual exchange.

States Rights House Organ

Frank J. Seng, distributor of "Parentage" and a newcomer in the ranks of film magnates, has just issued "The Parentage Messenger," a lively house-organ of eight pages crammed full of advertising hints, money-making ideas and good common sense.

There is no genuine reason why distributors of States Rights features should not reap the benefit of house-organ advertising, yet the fact remains that Mr. Seng has taken Time by the forelock and as the pioneer is entitled to full credit for his enterprise. Exhibitors, who are not usually in very close touch with the manufacturers or distributors of their attractions, will undoubtedly appreciate this service of business-building ideas.

This newest house-organ will be issued every two weeks and will be kept up-to-date by the introduction of stories telling how "the other fellow" put it over, together with reproductions of his advertising matter and stunts.

One feature in particular that should appeal to every exhibitor is a page of program copy showing in detail how the Rialto Theater in New York advertised "Parentage" the week before and during the showing.

Chapter Two of "Stanley Secret"

"The Great Stanley Secret," a photonovel in two chapters, product of the Mutual-American studios, is one of the most thrilling adventure stories ever told on the screen. The second installment, "Fate and the Child," will be released by Mutual July 30.

The plot involves a conspiracy on the part of a gang of English and American crooks, men and women, to obtain possession of the estate and jewels left by the Earl of Stanley, a famous and wealthy Englishman, to young Arthur Stanley, his grandchild, born in Virginia of an American mother.

In the pursuit of young Stanley, the conspirators are aided by the death of the boy's father and mother in a train wreck but substitution is rendered difficult by the fact that Quabba, an English gypsy living in Virginia, and other retainers of young Stanley's parents, are familiar with a birthmark characteristic of the Stanley family, which is present on the child's arm.

The cast is headed by William Russell and Charlotte Burton, who is now Mrs. William Russell.

MacDonald in Vitagraph Feature

"The Princess of Park Row," a forthcoming Blue Ribbon feature of diplomatic intrigue involving a dynamic American newspaper reporter, will serve as the premiere offering of a new feature combination—Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald. This feature also marks the initial appearance of MacDonald on the Vitagraph-V. L. S. E. program.

Miss Manning and Mr. MacDonald have played leading roles together in many of the O. Henry series, their work in these subjects justifying their elevation to featured parts on the Blue Ribbon program.

In "The Princess of Park Row," Mr. MacDonald has the role of a vigorous American newspaper reporter who is instrumental in frustrating the machinations of a band of foreign blackmailers, and incidentally winning a wife in the person of a Princess of European principality who is masquerading as a house maid.

The production is in the hands of Ashley Miller, a recent addition to the Vitagraph directorial staff.

Screen to Help Emancipate Russia

MONK ANXIOUS TO SPREAD TRUTH OF REVOLUTION HERE AND ABROAD

LIFE in the studio has been a novel experience for Iliodor, known as the Mad Monk of Russia, who has been playing the lead in Herbert Brenon's stirring play, "The Fall of the Romanoffs." He has much to say concerning the uses and possibilities of the screen. All conversation with him must be carried on by means of an interpreter as he doesn't speak a word of English.

"Through my ecclesiastical education which lasted until I was thirty-three years of age," said Iliodor in a recent interview, "I was taught to believe that the theater, moving pictures and all kindred amusements came directly from the devil. I realize now what a wrong idea that is. Since coming to this country I have been able to see many things in a different and much clearer light. I am emancipated. I am free from the shackles that bound me for so long, and I find much good where before I could see only evil.

"It is only of late during my association with Mr. Brenon while filming 'The Fall of the Romanoffs,' that I have realized the tireless energy and the careful forethought that are necessary to make a successful picture. No branch of art requires so much vitality and ceaseless effort as the moving picture.

"I consented to take part in this picture, and play the role that I had taken in the recent events in Russia simply because I wished to condemn all evil and to make public to the world the wrongs of Russia. My friends in this country, especially those who were priests in the Greek Church, persuaded me against it. They advised me to keep away from moving pictures on the grounds that such occupations were not fitting to the dignity of a priest. I was in a strange country. I did not know what to do or whom to believe. I longed to give the world by means of the screen my knowledge of Russia's woes and injustices.

"I wanted to spread the truth. But I was afraid that the drama would not be correctly executed, and afraid that whoever the producer might be, he might have little regard for the truth, and that he might be neglectful of detail. It would be useless in Russia should the atmosphere be incorrect or the settings faulty. And should the picture fail to impress Russians it would mean the downfall of all my hopes and aspirations. I feared, too, that the main truths might be distorted and disfigured.

"But Mr. Brenon neglects nothing to make his scenes, his characters and his story correct. The Russian spirit is observed in every detail. For the first time Russians will learn the truth, and they will see for themselves the intrigues of the Russian Court that were the direct cause of so much of the people's suffering and unhappiness. They will be shown who is really responsible for the events which led up to the Russian Revolution and they will see how they were hoodwinked by those in power and by the monarchs of their land.

"For the Russian people never knew what was happening. They never realized how they were being mistreated and misgoverned. It will be a revelation to them. They are only now learning for the first time a few of the facts. Friends coming from Russia, tell me that my book, which since the revolution and the consequent overthrow of tyranny, the people have been allowed to read, is being widely discussed, and that the Russian people are beginning to look with a more friendly eye toward me. Before I was bearing a light in darkness, I was misunderstood and distrusted by my own countrymen. But now they are beginning to see that what I told them was true. History has proved it.

"When at the conclusion of this picture I return to Russia I intend to found a little colony on a safe and sound social and religious basis. In this colony moving pictures will be a conspicuous factor. They will be used in the fight against evil, and will be the chief means of instructing the people. I intend to have a studio properly equipped where we shall manufacture our own pictures for our own use. The knowledge that I have gained in Mr. Brenon's studio will be invaluable to me there.

CONCENTRATING UPON PLAYS

General Film's New Product Being Chosen for Dramatic Excellence—Will Double Releases by Middle of August

General Film, in the process of augmenting its product has determined to concentrate upon dramatic value as the prime consideration, and an announcement of its new product when given in detail will reflect this policy. By the middle of August the total of releases will be doubled.

"The success of General Film in marketing motion pictures that have their outstanding value in the story and in artistic production, devoid of the conventional 'star,'" says an official of the company, "has uncovered a gratifying and wholesome condition in the film field. It has become commercially significant that the public appreciates splendid plays—that it goes to see plays as plays—that it has seen about as much as it wants of stars without plays, and that it enjoys stories from one reel up to five that have good plots and actors, and have been staged adequately. All of our most conspicuous successes have been 'starless.'

"The O. Henry subjects, which have made a profound impression and which have proved so profitable are 'starless.' But they do have story. They do have the human appeal. They are in every sense of the word 'plays.' The same can be said of the Black Cat stories, comedy-dramas produced fundamentally for 'story,' chosen for story and the players adapted rigorously to story. True, the producer, Essanay, has put into them some of its best people, who in five-reel dramas represent the star element that seems so indispensable to part of the public in 'features' even yet. But these people play heart and soul in the short length Black Cats and are establishing a new and enduring school of photoplay that has quality for its first conisderation, where a role is a role and not an overworked 'vehicle.'

"The consistent excellence of the Kalem productions may also be remarked. There every member of the cast plays a vital part—plays right up to the leading man or woman and the latter right along with them—in the sort of story that does not twist the lead, famous as he or she may be, into forced prominence. As a good business stroke and as a well rewarded one General Film is going to fill up its list of product with other such productions."

Kerrigan in "Turn of a Card"

The second Paralta production of the J. Warren Kerrigan Feature Corporation will be begun in their Hollywood studios in a few days. The story selected for this photoplay is Frederick Chapin's tale of romance and adventure in the West—"Turn of a Card."

The screen version was made by Thomas J. Geraghty and the story is said to fit Mr. Kerrigan's personality as snugly as did the part of John Stewart Webster in "A Man's Man," which has just been completed.

Elsie Ferguson Play Begun

Conceded to be one of the most beautiful women on the American stage today, Elsie Ferguson loses none of her charm on the screen. This fact has been proved to the officials of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, handling Miss Ferguson's photoplays. At the office projection room last week the executives of Artcraft viewed with great enthusiasm several hundred feet of film from Miss Ferguson's initial picture, "Barbary Sheep," in which her famous beauty registers perfectly.

Accompanied by Director Tourneur, a large force of his technical staff and the supporting cast, Miss Ferguson left for St. Augustine, Florida, last week, where the company is now producing several pretentious exteriors. Upon completion of these scenes they will travel to Lynchburg, Virginia, to take various other exteriors, after which they will return to the Fort Lee studio, where the production will be completed.

Elsie Ferguson, the American actress of note, appearing at the Artcraft studio for her first screen work. Director Tourneur is welcoming her.

AN OPEN FORUM FOR EXHIBITORS

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

New Empire Theater of Alabama

THE New Empire Theater building now under construction in Montgomery, Alabama, owned by the N. J. Bell Estate, will upon completion be one of the most modern and mechanically equipped picture theaters in this country.

The design is of Renaissance style, with elaborate architectural and artistic treatment, faced with stone and pressed brick, and topped with elaborate stone cornice. A copper marquise over full width of sidewalk is to be erected for entire frontage of building. The auditorium has a bowled floor, with an incline of seven feet and six inches, and has a seating capacity of nine hundred.

The surroundings of the screen are provided with a gorgeous architectural treatment, with niches located on each side of screen, which are provided with full life size cast statuary. A platform is directly in front of the screen for lecturing and illustrating purposes, with orchestra located in front of platform, enclosed with brass railing.

In addition to a complete orchestra, a large and handsome pipe organ will be installed, with pipes concealed in richly decorated chambers, located on left and right side of screen, with keyboard placed in orchestra pit.

Twenty thousand cubic feet of air per minute will be constantly taken from the air shaft and forced by means of a seven foot fan through the air washer and cooler in summer, and thence into the general air chamber, from which the cool air will be distributed by means of three hundred eight inch diameter mushrooms (placed under seats) into the auditorium, from which the air will be constantly withdrawn in volumes above mentioned by means of the exhaust fan in attic and pent house.

Through this method of cooling and ventilating a drop of ten degrees from the temperature in the shade on the outside will be secured in the auditorium, making the auditorium the most ideal pleasure and amusement resort during the summer. The same operation of the mechanical plant takes place in winter, with the exception that the air is forced through a heating chamber instead of a cooling chamber, maintaining a temperature on the inside of seventy degrees, with same ventilation as above set forth. All of the machinery will be operated by electric motors, alternating current, 220 volts—two phase 60 cycles, with a total of 42 horse power.

Another feature of this model picture theater is the vacuum cleaning system also operated by electric power with a number of outlets placed in auditorium.

The system of lighting is that of indirect lighting and has been carefully studied from every angle to obtain the most pleasant and desirable effect for a moving picture theater, with a four color scheme in auditorium, which will enable the operator to use any color of lighting most suitable for the subject on the screen.

The lights in the auditorium close to the front are of very small wattage, but they increase in wattage towards the rear according to established rules for picture auditoriums.

The fire exits are placed on left side of auditorium, connected with an alley leading to the sidewalk in front. The projection and winding rooms are located on the second floor, near the offices of the manager of the theater, and the walls and ceilings are provided with fire proof lining. In these rooms are located the machines and motor generator set.

The theater will be under the management of H. C. Farley, who for many years was in charge of the Empire theater on Commerce street. Only the highest class motion picture productions will be exhibited on the screens accompanied with similar class of orchestra and pipe organ music.

The building will be completed and ready for occupancy by June first, according to plans prepared by Frederick Ausfeld, architect. The erection and completion of the structure is being carried forward by James Hodgson.

Plans are also completed for a two-story commercial building to be erected on lot adjoining the New Empire theater. This building consists of three stories on first floor with club quarters on the second for one of the social clubs of the city.

The Organ in the Picture House

Harvey Robb in the Motion Picture Bulletin, has the following to say about the use of organs in not-too-damp houses:

Until recently the organ had been looked upon as an instrument best adapted to the accompaniment of religious services, and was to be found mostly in cathedrals and churches—with the exception of the homes of a few musical enthusiasts and wealthy people, who could afford to gratify an expensive whim.

The development of the tonal qualities had been in accord with the producing of the serious, stately and legate style of music, and this combined with awkward means of manipulation, tended, especially in solo playing, toward a good deal of monotony and rough and faulty interpretation.

Of late years immense progress has been made in new tonal coloring and effects, with mechanical contrivances to assist in smooth handling of an immense number of stops. Organ builders have successfully experimented in high pressure strings and reeds, and in novel percussion effects, until now, in some of our larger organs, there seems to be no limit to the variety of sound that may be obtained.

Music that seemed ill fitted to the older organs, is quite appropriate on the new, and a style of composition is being introduced by modern composers that is making organ literature more comprehensive and interesting.

In giving musical atmosphere to the screen drama the organ has been put to a new use for which it has proved itself especially fitted. Music on some of our large theater instruments can be rendered to suit every action from the most serious and dramatic to the lightest comedy.

It is to be regretted, however, that many instruments being installed today have a predominance of these ultra-modern additions to the exclusion of the foundation stops of diapason flute, and string qualities, and the result is weak and insincere. In this short article I would like to sound a warning against a careless selection of organs for motion picture theaters.

Tribas, fancy strings and reeds, chimes, bells, xylophones, and even more extreme effects are only pleasing when used in contrast to the more stable tones, and even there much discretion and judgment must be displayed by the organist. Music must be produced that will soothe and not inflame the senses of the listener and picture accompaniments must not be obtrusive and noticeable, tending to detract the interest from the screen.

There should be a good supply of soft eight and four-foot stops of varying color, enclosed in carefully made swell boxes, and the greater part of the registration should be selected from these.

When a really characteristic piece of playing is called for, one may resort to the solo stops, and in so doing will display artistry and forcefulness.

Great care should be taken in placing the organ in a suitable position to play in conjunction with an orchestra. If this is properly done, the orchestra will be tremendously augmented and a perfect ensemble may be had and the effectiveness of the music will be more than doubled.

Should the music appear to be emanating from two distinct sources the illusion of a huge orchestra will be lost and the renditions will be ragged and inartistic.

I would suggest, in conclusion, that theater managements considering the installing of an instrument, should consult several competent players as to the selection of stops and also the placing of the organ chambers, thus circumventing the waste of time and money in ultimate alterations.

What Minneapolis Theaters Run

By J. L. Johnston
Special Correspondent for Motography.

With the summer season for local moving picture theaters just starting it can be truthfully said that there is not one down-town theater in Minneapolis that could be called a program house. A year ago, the New Garrick was practically solid Paramount; the Strand, Triangle and Metro; the Lyric, World and Vitagraph and the Aster practically Mutual Pathe and Fox.

At the present time the New Garrick has temporarily given up Paramount and is running Fox, Vitagraph and other features while the Strand has taken over some of the Paramount features in addition to state rights films, Artcraft, Metro, Bluebird and World. The Lyric is running some K. E. S. E., some Vitagraph, some Fox and some Metro.

The Aster runs various state rights and program features while the New Unique, recently opened as a photoplay house, uses Triangle, Pathe and Mutual features. In St. Paul, Triangle is the backbone of the Alhambra's business while Metro features are on the schedule at both the Starland and the New Princess with Paramount and Bluebirds at the Strand and Fox and state rights features at the Blue Mouse.

Doug Saves His Director

A wireless message from East San Pedro, California, to Avalon, California, telegraphed to the Artcraft headquarters in New York states that Douglas Fairbanks saved the life of his director, John Emerson, when the latter fell overboard and was nearly drowned near the Catalina Islands. When Emerson fell into the water everyone took it for a joke thinking he was trying to imitate the energetic Douglas. On coming up for the third time, however, the star realized the desperate situation and hurled a life preserver over the director with perfect accuracy. Fairbanks then leaped into the water, reaching Emerson as he became unconscious. Once aboard the boat he was quickly restored. The company had been taking some deep water scenes for "The Optimist," the new Artcraft picture, around the Catalina Islands when Emerson fell into the ocean.

Now Making Western Drama

Crane Wilbur, the Horsley-Art Dramas star, is at present engaged on a five-reel western feature at the Los Angeles studio. This is being directed by Lorimer Johnston. Juanita Hansen is leading woman in this picture. The working title is "Devil McCare."

George Marshall, director of western dramas for Universal, has added Al. Kaufman, the well known pugilist, to his company.

HOW OTHERS ARE STEERING THE SHIP

BEGINNING Saturday, July 29, Alfred Hamburger will present at the Ziegfeld Theater, on Michigan avenue in Chicago, the super-feature, "One Law for Both." This is a spectacular drama of Russia and America produced by Ivan Abramson.

Mr. Lee A. Ochs at the close of his speech upon accepting the presidency last week declared that he would not be a candidate for re-election next year. However, it's possible he might be prevailed upon to run again.

C. E. Van Duzee of Minneapolis, managing director of the Alhambra Theater, declares he had the first motion picture machine west of Chicago. It was purchased in 1897 and is now in the class with the first automobile.

More than 100,000 persons in 300 picture theaters were addressed in Chicago during the second day of the National Convention by the "Four-Minute-Men." This week there have been no speeches, as the time is being devoted to completing the work of organization.

The Rialto Theater of New York has begun showing the new Triangle production featuring Olive Thomas, the former Follies girl of New York. On the same bill is also a Sidney Drew comedy, the Rialto animated magazine and scenic film. The program will as usual be supported by special soloists and by the big Rialto orchestra.

The Strand Theater of Red Bank, New Jersey, has just completed a contest that has proved a winner. The men, women and children receiving the largest number of votes have been selected to play parts in a local talent two-reeler, "A Romance of Red Bank," which will be filmed and shown at the Strand.

The South boasted two women delegates to the Chicago convention. Mrs. Belle Levy of New Orleans and Miss M. E. Rollins of Grenada, Mississippi, didn't make any speeches on the floor of the convention but they did considerable talking outside. Just wait! There may be a woman president of the league yet. If there is a charge of gavel rule, then it will be because only the handsome men are recognized by the chair.

Motion picture owners of Salina, Kansas, are planning to run their show houses Sundays, July 25 and August 5. They say the chautauqua will operate on those dates, and that they have the same right to run for profit as the chautauqua. If the Salina picture houses give Sunday performances the whole subject of Sunday closing will probably be fought out in court.

R. M. Chisholm, owner of the Diamond Theater, New Orleans, is planning to start a producing company of his own, if a half million dollar scheme in which he has interested several wealthy New Orleans business men goes through. Richard Travers of Essanay fame, may be found among the stars of the new company, according to report.

The use of pictures by large corporations as a means for educating their employes along lines that will be helpful to them is gaining in popularity. The Allegheny Steel Company at Tarentum, Pennsylvania, is among the latest corporations to give free moving picture shows for its employes dealing with matters of importance to mill workers and showing the necessity of practicing "safety first."

Prominent Omaha men are giving five-minute speeches at each of the twenty-eight performances of the war film, "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre," which started its run last week at the Brandeis Theater. They are urging people to subscribe to the Red Cross and to enlist in the army and navy.

A new use for pictures was recently discovered when President Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio, found places along his road that needed the attention of maintenance engineers while watching a film that was made along a section of his line. Although it is not expected that President Willard will make a filmed inspection of the entire Baltimore & Ohio system, it is believed that pictures have large possibilities with respect to inspecting sections less extensive.

At last Chicago is seeing the latest Mary Pickford picture, "The Little American." It is now attracting unusual crowds at the Studebaker Theater on Michigan avenue. This film, it will be remembered, was held up by Major Funkhouser, chief of the Chicago censor board, on the charge that it was objectionable to our German-American citizens. The case was taken through the courts and at last the Artcraft Company gained permission for its showing after it was endorsed by two hundred of Chicago's leading citizens.

The prettiest delegate at the National Convention came from the state of Wisconsin. Miss Flossie Jones of Waukesha, while the general manager and vice-president of the Waukesha Amusement Company, a concern operating the three theaters that furnish that town renowned for its spring water with amusement, looked as though she had never done a stroke of work in her life. And yet she is said to have a twelve-cylinder business head and be a human dynamo. At any rate she was "just terribly popular" with the rest of the delegates from her state, and with those from other states, too, as far as that is concerned.

The explosion of a film at a theater in Tulare, South Dakota, recently resulted in a number of near-casualties. Two women were severely burned and another was badly trampled under foot during the stampede. The explosion occurred while Walter Ott, owner of the hall, was operating the machine. He was thrown down and badly burned about the face and head.

The name of the new million dollar picture theater which B. S. Moss is to build at Broadway and One Hundred and Eighty-first street, New York, is still the subject of controversy and discussion. The management feels that there is a lot in a name, especially for a theater. The "Blue Bell" and the "Wilson" are the two appellations at present under consideration.

The insurgents as soon as they bolted the Motion Picture Exhibitors League displayed marvelous celerity in getting new literature printed and posting the New Morrison Hotel with it. A card with the caption, "Be a booster for the American Exhibitors Association," was the first broadside that was fired at every man with a badge pinned to his lapel.

Sam Trigger, the deep bass voice from New York, when Lee Ochs refused to withdraw his name as a candidate for president, went into the new organization that was formed with heart and soul. He said he was prepared to give ten thousand dollars to make it "go over" if need be. His offer, however, wasn't called. Dues rather than donations are being relied on for the financial support of the new body.

You can undoubtedly gain some benefit from using cuts, free of charge, from Motography. All you need to do is to write in as soon as you receive the magazine containing the cuts you would like to borrow and ask for them. There is no charge whatever. Just enclose the clipping showing the picture of the cut you would like and state the issue in which it appeared.

Manager Edel of the Strand Theater of New York has completed arrangements whereby all official war films, taken in Europe, by the cameramen with General Pershing's army, will have their first American presentation at the Strand Theater exclusively. The first shipment of these films was received last week and are now being shown at the Strand under the title "Uncle Sam's Troops Training Behind the Firing Lines in France."

A soldier who fought at the battle of the Somme was present recently at the Auditorium Theater, Minneapolis, in connection with the showing of the pictures by that name. Major A. Fortin, a Winnipeg physician, who had seen two years of service in the Canadian army, spoke as the film was displayed and threw sidelights on the picture that gave the audience an idea of the war being waged across the Atlantic that could scarcely be obtained without actual participation in it.

"This is nothing new—this is a joke—these bolting fellows; they mean nothing to our league at all. It's a cinch. I will tell you what I am going to do—am I going to accept it? I'd like to see anybody stop me." If you think you may ever be called upon to make an acceptance speech you ought to memorize this piece of literature. It is the opening of the inspired speech of Mr. Lee A. Ochs upon accepting the presidency for another term.

The Casino Theater of Marshalltown, Iowa, which has been dark since July 1, for redecoration, is to be opened within a few days. Manager Muel Haupt is looking forward to a large fall business with his rejuvenated house, which is now one of the classiest theaters in the state. The new color scheme is old ivory gray and old rose. Max Tschauder, formerly orchestra leader at the Casino, will take over a half interest in the theater at the time of its opening.

Jean Southern found her vaudeville training and experience was still an asset recently when she visited three of the Marcus Loew Theaters, New York. She is an entertainer of great skill on the legitimate stage as well as on the screen. When she appeared at the Royal, Brooklyn, on July 17, and at the Times Square and the Forty-second street theaters three days later, she scored distinct personal successes. Miss Sothern appeared at the Loew Theaters in connection with the showing of her latest Van Dyke Art Drama, "Miss Deception."

Judge A. P. Tugwell, the portly delegate from California, who represented the Pacific state at the Chicago convention, was heard to lament his nearness to the producing centers of the film industry. "I think it's a shame," he said, "that the producers invite people into their places to show them how pictures are made. It takes all the mystery out of the thing. And time and again in my theaters I have heard young folks pooh-pooh scenes where trick photography was employed. They had seen how it was done so that it no longer interested them."

Fred J. Herrington, national organizer for the Exhibitors League during the past year, told the American Exhibitors Association that he thought the day was coming when the national body of exhibitors would pay money into the local organizations instead of vice versa. Mr. Herrington stated that when a telegram was displayed in pictures it was always a Western Union telegram. When a typewriter was shown, it was always an Oliver typewriter, etc. The film manufacturers, he said, are making millions advertising these things, but the day is coming when the exhibitors will be able to demand their share of the profits for allowing the use of their screens.

Did you ever try co-operating with one of your competitors in advertising? This is what is being done in Chicago by Manager H. G. Weil of the Castle Theater on State street and Manager H. C. Miller of the Rose Theater on Madison street, only two blocks away. These managers recently took newspaper space, advertising Douglas Fairbanks in "Wild and Woolly," with the names of both theaters at the top of the ads. At the bottom was the line, "The only theaters in Chicago now showing this picture." Manager Weil stated that the plan saves money and proves to be effective advertising, as the public can easily remember the names of two theaters in connection with one picture.

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent feature of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He has been elected vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you some valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Wants to Konw About I. A. T. S. E.

Please give me some particulars concerning the I. A. T. S. E. Operators' Union. What are the requirements of any one wishing to join the union? Are there any examinations required and if so are they very rigid? I have had about two years' experience with an Edison machine as helper, and about one year's experience with a Power's Cameragrah 6A machine as first operator. What are the fees attached to this union? Is there a local at Dallas, Texas, and if not where is the nearest one? Please give me all information you can possibly afford on this subject.—Harry Marwill, Troup, Texas.

Any man over eighteen years old is eligible to make application to any local of the I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O. Every local has its own particular way of passing on the application of a man wishing to join. All applications for membership must be made in writing and must be signed by one or more members of the local. The application after being presented to the local is turned over to a committee whose duty it is to investigate the record of the applicant as to age, experience and other qualifications.

If this committee reports favorably on the application it is then turned over to another committee who gives the applicant an examination. According to the I. A. laws you are required to make application to the nearest local. The initiation fees vary and the only way for you to find out what the fee would be in your case would be to write to the secretary of the nearest local. There is a M. P. M. O. local, No. 249, at Dallas, Texas. Write to the secretary of this organization and he can tell you what the initiation fee will be and whether that is the one for you.

Is Having Trouble with Worn Slots

I am working in a booth and have two Simplex machines. I am having trouble with one of them. In setting the star to the cam I can get it to fit snug and do not have any lost motion to speak of. But when the cam pin moves through the slots of the star then there is considerable lost motion. Is there any way to eliminate this? I have had the intermittent movement out and the slots in the star are worn, but the outside that fits to the cam does not seem to be worn at all. On the other machine the slots in the star are not worn at all. Would it do any good to use heavy oil or grease in the worn movement?—E. J., St. Louis, Missouri.

The only thing that you can do with the intermittent movement that you are having trouble with is to replace the worn star with a new one. The chances are that you will find the cam pin in the cam to be worn also so that you will have to have both new cam and star. I would advise you to send the intermittent movement to the Simplex factory and have them make the necessary repairs for you. Possibly the worn part was defective in some way and they will replace it for you. If you do not care to lose the use of the machine while sending the intermittent movement away take it to one of the several repair departments that are located in your city and have them do it for you. Using heavy oil in the intermittent movement would not help you any, for a part worn as badly as you say the star is can only be remedied by substituting new parts.

Has Suggestion that Obviates Film Punching

I am a reader of MOTOGRAPHY and am very much interested in the Projection Department. I have noticed from time to time that different operators have sent in suggestions, and some of them have been very good. I have never written to the department before but I have a suggestion to offer which has enabled me to tell when a reel is nearly over without opening the upper magazine door.

I am using two Power's 6A machines and I took the two top magazines to a tinner and had a piece cut out of the door of one three inches long by two inches wide, into which was fitted a piece of fire glass. The hole was so cut that when a reel was in the magazine you could see the hub of the reel. I use my own reels in the booth so I had each cut away leaving the hub exposed when looking at the reel sidewise. On the other magazine I had the hole cut on the back of the magazine and the glass put in in place of it. Then I punched a small hole through the lamp house just over the condenser mounts and to the right of them on one machine and to the left of them on the other.

I hung two small mirrors up on the wall between the machines and had one angled so that the light coming from the hole in the lamp house would reflect from the mirror on to the opening in the magazine door of one machine. The other mirror I placed so that the light would reflect on the opening in the back of the magazine of the other machine.

Now I can sit between the machines and have a light on the magazine of the machine that I am running and with- out any other light in the booth, or without opening the magazine, I can see just how much film is left. This way I have plenty of time to start the lamp and change from one machine to the other without punching holes in the film for warning signs. I do not know whether I have made this clear to you or not. But if you think it worth while you can give it to the readers of your department. I have found it works well for me. I am sending you a rough sketch of the magazine and the reel that may possibly help explain my suggestion.—Walter Kesterson, Local No. 325, Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania.

Extra metal cut from side of reel so that hub may be seen.

Opening cut in magazine for fire Glass.

I am passing your suggestion on to the readers of the department. It is probably very good for the older style magazines that have not the opening in the magazines. Several of the manufacturers are now putting the fire glass in the magazine and that is considerable help to the operators.

Objects to Screen Time on Posters

I am a reader of this department and have a protest to register against the film manufacturers who are putting the screen time of their productions on the posters that they send out with the pictures. I have had several arguments with my manager over this screen time of films. I had a two-reel subject the other night and the poster gave the screen time as thirty-three minutes.

The service that we are using is about seventy to ninety days old and you can see what I am up against. No doubt the two reels were supposed to run thirty-three minutes when they were released, but by the time I get them they have been cut and censored until they won't run longer than about twenty-six or seven minutes. My manager cannot understand. He says that the people that make the picture ought to know how fast to run them. I do not believe that they should put the screen time on the posters. What do you think about it?—Operator, Kansas City, Missouri.

I agree with you, screen time is all right for the new release, but it is a bad proposition for the houses that use the older films. Have your manager measure a reel of film and you can convince him very quickly.

Cohan Picture to Be Released Aug. 26

Walter E. Greene, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, last week announced that the second George M. Cohan picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" has been completed and will be released August 26, following the Douglas Fairbanks film, "Down to Earth," which will be released August 12.

During its sensational presentation on the theatrical stage this play by George M. Cohan, founded on the story of Earl Derr Biggers, amazed the most blase critics of the drama for its utter disregard of all accepted rules and regulations of the demands of a successful offering of the theater. Never in the annals of theatricals had a play so completely bewildered its audience and never before had the critics admitted this fact with such frank commendation.

Heralded as a "mystery farce" it has a combination of novel situations and surprises that keeps the audience guessing from beginning to end. Just when the course of the story seems clear, the clever author gives it a twist that discloses an entirely unexpected theme. At times it appears to be a farce of extreme humor when suddenly it takes on a melo-dramatic aspect ending finaly with a complete surprise that leaves the audience laughing not only at the play but at itself as well.

Staged under the direction of Hugh Ford, the producer of many film successes under the Famous Player banner, the screen portrayal of "Seven Keys" is expected to score a greater success than even that experienced by the play, in view of the greater scope the screen offers in which to present the unique features of the story. The fact that George M. Cohan himself portrays the leading part in the photoplay also gives the film a great advantage over the original play. In the part of George Washington Magee, the novelist, who makes a wager that he can write a story in twenty-four hours on which item the play is built, George M. Cohan is given great opportunity to present his famous characteristics and mannerisms. Supporting him is an exceptional cast including Anna Q. Nilsson, Elda Furry, Corene Uzzell, Joseph Smiley, Armand Cortes, C. Warren Cook, Purnell Pratt, Frank Losee, Eric Hudson, Carlton Macy, Paul Everton, and Russel Bassett.

Kid Pictures Ready

Within two weeks V. L. S. E. will begin releasing the new Bobby Connelly series, in which Vitagraph's boy star, surrounded by his own company, will be presented in an entirely new set of features. Eight pictures, all one-reelers, have been completed and listed for release, which carries the schedule up to the last week in September. The way the list stands now, the pictures and their order of release will be as follows:

August 6—"Bobby, the Boy Scout," a timely little drama in which Bobby plays an heroic role, his conduct being guided by the teachings of the famous scout organization.

August 13—"Bobby, the Movie Director," in which Bobby is showed playing "hookey" from the studio. He takes a bunch of youngsters to a desert island and there stages a movie of his own, but it is interrupted when the kids discover that their boat has drifted away and they are stranded.

August 20—"Bobby, Philanthropist," showing Bobby as a favored child of wealthy parents in the role of a knight to a little ragamuffin newsgirl, who is beset by newsboys who resent her as business rivals.

August 27—"Bobby, the Pacifist," a charming little drama in which Bobby overcomes a natural inclination to beat up all the kids in the neighborhood, rescues his three-year-old leading woman from a band of kidnappers and does other valorous deeds.

September 3—"Bobby's Bravery," in which Bobby dreams he is a Sir Galahad and with the aid of his trusty knights saves teacher from the wiles of his grown-up brother.

September 10—"Just What Bobby Wanted," which shows Bobby, an only child, pining for a little sister. He solves the problem by adopting the daughter of the village ne'er-do-well.

September 17—"Bobby's Secret" brings him forth as a good Samaritan who robs his own bank of $150 and gives it up for an operation that saves the life of a little crippled girl.

September 24—"When Bobby Broke His Arm," a roaring comedy in which a bad boy is banished to the farm and has more fun than if he had stayed in the city.

The pictures are all clean, snappy and replete with the kid element that charms not only the little folk, but their parents, as well. The scenarios were especially written for Little Bobby and his remarkable talent is given full play in the pictures from start to finish.

President Uses Pictographs

The Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, which has been visualizing the thoughts of the country's greatest thinkers during the past two years, will be used by President Wilson to carry the messages of the government to the millions of photoplay lovers each week. A portion of this popular single reel, which is released to all exhibitors by Paramount, will be set aside each week, to visualize the governmental messages. The Pictographs were chosen because of the far-reaching scope this medium has had, and which has proven to be the most popular short-feature of its kind in the industry.

The Convention Story

the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, which check I now present to your treasurer, Mr. Jeup.

Gentlemen, I am glad to be here.

I shall never forget the courtesy, consideration and confidence extended last year in the arduous days successfully spent in organizing the entire industry. Those days, I feel, resulted in many deep and lasting friendships of which I am very proud.

The National Association has more than warranted its formation, by its many acts for the benefit of the whole industry, in most of which acts the exhibitors' branch has been of leading importance, as it must continue to be.

Industry Honored by Government

The thought uppermost in my mind today, as it must be in the minds of all of us, is that this is not time for jealousy or for the slightest thought of smallness between any branches of the motion picture industry. On the contrary, we must now come into complete and harmonious co-operation and unity, for having been called by the Government of the United States, we can no longer think of ourselves, nor of our own individual ambitions, or likes or dislikes, but solely of our responsibility and duty to the American people.

No industry in the history of the world has been so signally honored as this one. Sought by every department of activity, we were called to Washington by the President, by every cabinet officer, and by the head of each department or bureau, in recognition that we possess the greatest vehicle of thought transmission so far known to man, with which to transmit for the government, the information which it is absolutely essential the people should know in this present crisis.

And in the responsibility and the work thus imposed upon us, the exhibitor must take the leading and most important part, for it is through the screen of the exhibitor that the secretary and the treasury must use the industry to teach the people of the necessity of subscribing to future loans; it is through the screen of the exhibitor that Mr. Hoover must tell the people to live primarily on perishable food, in order that the staples may be sent to give life to our allies, where productive man power has been so tremendously decreased, and must teach that the clean plate is primary to success.

It is through the screen of the exhibitor that Mr. Fosdick must teach each community where a soldiers' camp is situated, of its responsibility for the health and of the physical and moral welfare of the soldiers, and must furnish for the soldiers, clean and wholesome means of recreation and education; it is through the screen of the exhibitor that Mr. Coffin must carry his message of the construction of thousands of aeroplanes with which to win the war, and that the building of automobiles must meanwhile almost entirely cease.

It is through the screen of the exhibitor that Mr. Davidson must largely conduct his campaign for one of the greatest of all charities, the Red Cross.

In all probability, the fathers of the industry little realized that the day would come when a representative of several departments of the United States Government would be in attendance upon an exhibitors' convention. Think of it, gentlemen. The existence at this time of this greatest of all means of thought transmission, developed so quickly to its high degree of effectiveness, seems almost providential, for it speaks, as the President says, a universal language understood by all tongues, races and creeds, which is to carry the lesson of democracy to all parts of the world, and is to give all peoples so thorough an understanding of each other as to prevent the re-occurrence of another world's war.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mr. Irwin and Vitagraph for the check.

Other Executives Speak

Other speakers who urged harmony, testified to Mr. Brady's sincerity and told of the honor which had come to the picture industry were Adolph Zukor of Paramount, C. R. Seelye of Pathe, J. Robert Ruben of Metro, William Sherrill of Frohman, Samuel Goldfish of Goldwyn, Joe Brandt of Universal, J. H. Hallberg and Marcus Loew. President Ochs preceded Mr. Loew's speech by an announcement that he had just received Mr. Loew's application for membership in the New York branch of the league.

After these speeches followed a report of the Good and Welfare Committee, which follows:

1. That any exposition, ball or function promoted for profit by any local organization of any state should first have the sanction and consent of state officers and a percentage of profits derived from such function, not to exceed 10 per cent, be turned over to the state organization.
2. Opposed to free picture exhibitions, except when strictly educational.
3. Rules to govern places of amusement should include churches and schools when these give exhibitions.
4. Exhibitors air no grievances in public press. Submit them to the local.
5. A committee on publicity be appointed to aid the government.
6. League declare itself opposed to advertising of salaries of stars.

Following this came the report of the music tax committee, dealing with a very important phase of the exhibitor's business. This story will be found complete on another page of this issue.

Arbitrators' Report

Then the arbitration committee announced itself ready to report and the following statement was read:

We, your committee on arbitration, beg leave to submit the following report and recommendations:

1. That the best interest of the moving picture industry will be served by one national organization composed of the exhibitors of the U. S.
2. That we are of the opinion that the differences can be adjusted fairly and amicably to the satisfaction of all factions by proper discussion in a general convention assembled.
3. That in the deliberation of the convention the fullest privileges shall be granted to all persons in the discussion of all matters under consideration and that the same rights be accorded to the consideration of a minority report of a committee as is accorded to the report of the majority.
4. We recommend that all of the present known candidates for the respective offices retire as candidates for that office and that the convention proceed to the election of officers with a view of securing the greatest amount of harmony and efficiency possible.
5. We recommend that all delegates attend the meeting of the League at the Coliseum at 7:30 this evening and at that time and place the delegates by regular parliamentary proceedings adjust all differences.
6. Recommend that any grievances be referred to a committee of ten, five appointed by each body.

Unanimously adopted.

The convention then adjourned until the evening session.

Two A. M. Session

Something was started when Frank J. Rembusch of Indiana, one of the candidates for president, moved to allow all exhibitors to sit in on the deliberations of the convention. This was seconded by New York and discussed by Joseph Hopp of Illinois. The matter was referred to the arbitration committee, who reported as follows:

Exhibitors who are members of the league or who have applied for membership may be allowed to remain in the chamber, but are not to take part in the deliberations of the body and are to occupy seats outside the circle of regular delegates. Also exhibitors recommended by any regularly elected delegate may remain in the session.

This report was accepted and approved by the convention.

Next came the report of the financial committee. It was stated that the accounts were in the hands of the auditors, who would report later. Joseph Hopp made a report for the committee on constitution and by-laws. This was adopted with the exception of the two clauses upon which there was not unanimous agreement.

The president's report for the year was next read and approved. It showed that he had received but $500 in salary during the year and that the expense of running the office had been low. Several new states were gained for the league. The report was accepted, as was also that of Treasurer Peter J. Jeup of Michigan. The secretary's report, Mr. Sweeney reported, was in the hands of the auditing committee to be brought up later.

Election of Officers

The next business was the real kernel of the convention—the election of officers. Most of this was, of course, done by lobbying and various political methods, off the floor of the convention. The above-board part of the election was started off by Louis Levine of New York, who made a speech nominating Lee A. Ochs, the former president. This was seconded by delegates from New Jersey, Nebraska and Idaho. Upon Ochs' nomination, Jake Wells, afterward elected president of the new exhibitors' body, rose and asked Mr. Ochs if he intended to accept the nomination. The latter replied in the affirmative. Whereupon, Wells turned to the "revolters" and said: "Gentlemen, you have heard his decision." Immediately some thirty-five or forty delegates rose and left the convention hall.

The vote on the nomination was then taken by states. Ochs was given 178 votes. Twenty-nine votes were "passed"—not voting, and the bolting faction represented 35 votes. Following was the way the states lined up:

For Ochs: Illinois, 25 votes; Iowa 6, Idaho 6, Kansas 6, Mississippi 6, Maine 6, Maryland 6, Minnesota 18, Missouri 7, Massachusetts 9, North Dakota 6, Nebraska 7, New Hampshire 6, New York 14, North Carolina 8, New Jersey 8, Ohio 7, Pennsylvania 9, Vermont 6, Washington 8, California 6, Florida 6.

The states not voting were Indiana and Oklahoma. Those represented among the exhibitors who walked out of the convention were Michigan, Virginia, North Carolina, Wisconsin and Washington, D. C. The account of their subsequent organization will be found on another page of this issue.

Following the vote on the delegates, President Ochs stated that their action was the result of the work of one of the motion picture trade journals.

The last action was the election of the other officers already mentioned. These were placed in office by the ballot cast by the secretary, as in no case was there more than one nomination. The election of the three directors to the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, was put over until later as the session had now extended until 2 A. M.

Convention at Boston Next Year

The last important action taken at the late session was the decision to hold the next National Convention and Exposition in Boston in view of the big boosting campaign put on at the convention by the big Boston delegation and their enthusiastic invitation to the delegates to come to the Hub for next year. The motion to go east for next year was made by David A. Rogers of Minnesota and it was carried by a practically unanimous vote. Boston's only competitor was St. Louis, whose representative gracefully withdrew in favor of the eastern city.

Just before adjournment, a committee consisting of Friedman of Minnesota, Horstmann of Massachusetts, Schaefer of Illinois, Furnis of Minnesota and Manheim of New York was appointed to purchase a gift for President Ochs, as an appreciation of his work during the past year. This gift, a beautiful silver service, was presented to Mr. Ochs at the big exhibitors' banquet at the Hotel Morrison the following evening.

Film Man Enters Agency Field

J. K. Burger, known as "Simon Legree" and "J. K.," has left the motion picture industry to enter the advertising agency field, to specialize in the advertising of motion pictures.

Mr. Burger has been identified in many responsible positions with the motion picture industry since its infancy. He has covered every large city in the United States for Pathe and International in the interest of sales promotion.

In his new capacity, as one of the factors in the E. T. Howard Company, Inc., one of the oldest advertising agencies in New York, Mr. Burger will be glad to see his many friends.

The Selig Polyscope Company has announced the next group of Hoyt farce comedies to be released through K. E. S. E. Each of the Hoyt comedies are two reels in length and feature William Fables.

New Skinner Story

Essanay announces that Bryant Washburn's August release will be "Skinner's Baby," the third of the already famous "Skinner" series.

The first subject, "Skinner's Dress Suit," was received with open arms by exhibitors in every part of the United States, it being the answer to the public's desire for true-to-life American comedy-dramas and a relief from the surfeit of problem plays. To date this picture has been shown in nearly one-third of the theaters in the entire country and bookings are still being made for weeks in advance.

What proved most surprising was the "Skinner's Bubble," the second of the series, was so good that it influenced many exhibitors to book the first feature in order not to miss any of the series. Now with the announcement that "Skinner's Baby" is finished no doubt all who have as yet hesitated about contracting for these pictures will do so at once, as an opportunity for an extensive campaign is offered with three subjects in the series.

Bryant Washburn, of course, plays the part of Skinner and Hazel Daly again appears as Honey, his wife. Other members of the cast appear in the same parts they did before. Harry Beaumont wrote and directed the play.

"Alma, Where Do You Live?"

Six-Reel Picturization of Adolf Phillip's Popular Farce-Comedy. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE Newfields Producing Corporation, in presenting in photoplay form this noted musical farce-comedy, offers something that is unusual not only because it is a picturization of a musical comedy—a thing rarely attempted—but because it is a good picturization of a play which was more than mildly successful. In making his version of the play register as good entertainment, Hal Clarendon, the director, was aided by a number of real comedy types in the cast. The original play offered a great number of farcical situations which prove to be pleasingly screenable. Throughout the picture there are many subtitles taken from the song of the stage play, which give promise of adapting themselves to suitable orchestra accompaniment.

At first there is confusion because of the introduction of so many characters, but this straightens itself out nicely later, partly through the use of the name of the speaker before every line spoken in the subtitles. The comedy situations are evolved without any recourse to slapstick; the laughs are in the situations themselves and the way the different "funny" characters are handled. True, the spoken rendition, musical numbers, etc., put the original stage production in a place where it is not on a level of comparison with the screen interpretation, but it seems that the latter, in its degree, is going to be successful because of the commendable way that the adapter utilized the original situations as screen material. Of course, many of these situations are impossible, but the nature of the play excuses that. Toward the end the director introduces a timely note by bringing in some volunteer company soldier stuff, all of this fitting into the action well and bringing the play down to late modern times.

The part of Alma was very suitably given to Ruth Mac-Tammany, whose work in "The Girl at Rector's" will be remembered. As the attractively vivacious actress and artist's model she affords a big degree of life and animation to the picture, and, perhaps, no less a degree of pulchritude. Frank McNish, as Theobold Martin, and Walter Mack, as Anitole Peach, get their share of the laughs, and others in a well selected cast are George Larkin, Jack Newton, John Webb Dillon and Mattie Keene.

"The Warrior"

Seven-Part Itala Production Offered by Harry Raver, Inc. Reviewed by George W. Graves

MACISTE, without the flesh tint which made him the formidable looking black slave in "Cabiria," proves to be in "The Warrior" not only a human steam engine of strength but a comedian as well, for his unheard of deeds of physical prowess, although they excite a rather poignant feeling of pity for his victims, certainly get the laughs. "The Warrior" is essentially a comedy, and it is much better so, since the movie public is beginning to sigh a little restessly over the sombre, morbid war dramas that are being produced in such numbers. "The Warrior" has a few battle scenes, but they subserve the end of comedy more than anything else, giving Maciste a chance to perform his wonders, and there are no scenes of authentic battle attack.

The Alpinos, that wonderful race of strong, hardy mountain climbers, perform a number of feats that will have the audience gaping in wonderment. Among these are views showing the whole detachment of soldiers climbing a perpendicular cliff at a dizzy height with nothing keeping them from the abyss below but the rope, knotted at intervals, upon which they are climbing. The men, seeming no larger than ants, climbing upon these ropes, strung over the face of the cliff with an almost interminable space below and beyond, make a picture not soon to be forgotten. Another remarkable feat of the Alpinos is the climbing over an aerial rope from one peak to another. The men forge their way over the deep hollow in the earth's surface monkey-fashion entirely by their hands.

The plot of the story is very slight, but it is all of sufficient in this case. It tells how Maciste, with a band of Italians, escapes over the Austrian border just as the war stars, how later he hears of the dire peril of his friend, an Italian count living in Austria, returns to the latter country, and, single-handed, makes it more than hot for the Austrian forces stationed at the Count's castle and one Fritz Pluffer in particular, and how the "Warrior," joined later by the staunch little army of Alpinos, exterminates the Austrian roisterers, two of whom are just drawing lots for the pretty daughter of the Count, when the crash comes.

No one can complain that Maciste is not given plenty of "stunts" to perform. The audience on hand to view "The Warrior" went wild with delight at this giant's spectacular feats and rocked itself to and fro with laughter at the ludicrous effect so many of these produced. There is also some good comedy not conjoined with the spectacular, as witness the scenes in the tailor shop where Maciste tries on the biggest Alpino outfits to be had. In every uniform he tries on he bursts through in a new place, while he splits one coat all the way up the back.

Pushing a large tree over, jumping on horseback over a bridge into the water, bowling a horse and rider over on the ground, throwing men around like dolls, etc., the star certainly dominates all of his scenes. In the attack on the castle, where Maciste seizes a great cudgel from the fireplace, dashes onto the balcony like a demon of destruction and lays about him until not one of the Austrian horde exhibits any signs of life, the audience is swayed by the irresistible comedy, and sympathy for the victims, in turns. Singly and in pairs he hurls the men from the balcony as if they were shot out of a sling. The marvel to the spectator is, how many bones were broken in the taking of these scenes?

Some of the most beautiful mountain scenery ever caught by the camera is exhibited in the film. The lights and shadows falling on the snowy peaks and the dark rocky formations are of surpassing beauty. The majority of these Alpine scenes are above the clouds.

As entertainment, "The Warrior" is remarkable. It is a scenic story of comedy and thrills, and an educational subject showing one of the most interesting departments of the allied war schedule. The picture is destined to promote affection between America and Italy, a fact that is worth considering. "The Warrior" is good for crowded houses.

Ad Film Producers Meet

On July 17 the executive committee of the Advertising Film Producers' Association of the World met in session at the Rothacker studios of Chicago. Those present were:

W. A. Harris, president, Cincinnati, Ohio; H. R. Rothacker, vice-president, Chicago, Ill.; R. V. Stambaugh, secretary, Cleveland, Ohio; Fred C. Laflin, treasurer, Chicago, Ill.; Joseph Brandt, committeeman, New York City; Herbert Andrews, committeeman, Washington, D. C.

Ways and means were devised and arranged for the broad extension of this organization and a special meeting was called for August 27, to be held at the Rothacker studios, at which meeting will be all of the members of this Association which is the official picture department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

During the executive session, moving pictures were made of the members in action, which pictures will be combined with the official pictures taken at the National Advertising Convention at St. Louis, which will be shown throughout the country under the auspices of the Advertising Film Producers' Association at Ad Clubs, etc.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE PLAYERS—READY TO CLIP OUT AND PRINT

An average of sixty requests a day for autographed photographs registers the public's appreciation of Norma Talmadge's art as a film actress. Her admirers include all classes of society from "newsies" to magazine editors and bank presidents.

The skeptical may doubt it, but "Fatty Arbuckle swears that his favorite color is blue. By way of explanation the big comedian asserts that this particular shade stimulates his sense of humor. Consequently, he has his dressing room decorated with it and surrounds himself with tones of blue wherever possible.

Fritzi Brunette, Selig star, is now established in a cozy Caliornia bungalow that is half buried in roses and flowers. She even has a tiny vegetable garden, where she works in the early morning weeding and planting lettuce and other vegetables. Fritzi declares that nothing so freshens and puts her in trim for her day's work at the studio as these early morning sessions with hoe or trowel.

Jean Sothern, who appears in Art Dramas, wishes to deny the report printed in most of the trade papers and dailies that she had recently married.

Marguerite Clark, who possesses among other distinctions, the honor of being the only motion picture star who does not drive her own car, is now busily at work mastering the intricacies of the gear shaft. The Famous Player-Paramount star is going to drive a taxicab in her next picture and director J. Searle Dawley insisted that she practice with her own car rather than saddle the company with indemnities for seven of eight hundred wrecked flivvers.

Five hundred dollars is offered by the Horkheimer Brothers for a five-reel photoplay in which Jackie Saunders is to be featured. The competition is open to all and the winning decision will be made entirely on the suitability and merits of the scenario. All photoplays submitted must be worked out into full continuity of scenes, preceded by a synopsis of the story and cast of characters and scene plot, and by viewing the productions in which Miss Saunders has been featured recently, scenario writers will be able to get a line on the class of stories most likely to appeal to her and her managers.

All scripts must be submitted before November 1st and should be addressed to "Contest Editor, Balboa Amusement Producing Company, Long Beach, California," with stamped, self-addressed envelope enclosed. Scripts must be typewritten and as few sub-titles as possible employed in the scenario.

Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle asserts that at least one good joke should be perpetrated at the family breakfast table every morning. This is more essential to starting the day right than the inevitable newspaper or coffee and rolls in his opinion.

Alma Hanlon, who has been acting as "marraine," or Godmother, to a soldier of the French Army, yesterday received from him a table cover, which he made while in the hospital. It is of green silk, and very neatly put together. The soldier, who writes in very correct but sometimes amusing English, remarks: "I have just finished this cover today, and I am very pleased with me."

Here's an American diver that would play havoc with the German submarines, for if a U-boat saw her she could undoubtedly lure it right up onto land, where it could be captured. It's the American-Mutual star, Francelia Billington. If you would like to borrow this cut, just say so to "Motography, Chicago," as soon as possible. There will be no charge.

Some time ago automobile row rocked and swayed to the news that Pauline Frederick had purchased a nile green Peerless roadster as the first sign of spring. Miss Frederick, having possessed the roadster a few weeks, characteristically tired of it and sent it to the shop to be painted a khaki tan. In the meanwhile, in order that she could get from Thence to Thither in an irreducible minimum of time, the Famous Players-Paramount star purchased a specially built racing Simplex which is positively guaranteed to make one hundred miles an hour on the lowest discoverable gear. Incidentally when the Frederick heel alights upon the cut-out, the noise of the recent British bombardment at Messines fades into pale pink insignificance.

Ruth Roland is spending a few days in Los Angeles visiting Friend Husband and about ten thousand other friends. Miss Roland states that she is returning to New York to appear in a seven-reel feature and that Milton Sills will play opposite her, after which it is quite probable that Miss Roland will go west again.

Grace Cunard and Joe Moore are fond of motoring to Santa Monica of an evening for a dip in the ocean after dark. This is not very kind of Miss Grace as her bathing costumes are creations in themselves and she is an excellent swimmer.

"It is easy to be a real heroine," says Anna Little. "When Fred Balshofer stood on an overhanging rock on location in Arizona and I saw the supporting rocks crumbling I grabbed his arm and pulled him back and the big rock went down, down the canyon. It was just the natural thing to do." Miss Anna is supporting Harold Lockwood in "Under Handicap" and the company recently returned from Arizona.

SLITER IN ALBANY MUTUAL OFFCE

F. G. Sliter, traveling representative working out of the Albany office of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been appointed manager of the Albany office, to succeed W. F. Holdermann. Mr. Sliter has been covering the state for the Mutual Film Corporation for the past two years, coming to the Mutual organization shortly after the opening of the Albany branch, during Mr. J. M. Mullin's administration.

Mr. Sliter received his promotion through hard and faithful service, his qualities being recognized by the Mutual Film Corporation through their policy of selecting branch managers from the ranks of their representatives who have shown unusual executive sales ability.

Mr. Sliter has a host of friends in the territory who wish him success in his new venture.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Pigs and Pearls—(One Reel)—La Salle—August 7.—A caveman, his sister and her pet pig live contentedly in their woods cabin until one day Billy, his sister Matie, and his sweetheart, Pearl, ride out to the woods and Pearl falls for the prowess of the caveman. Later, Matie, in order to cure Pearl of her mad infatuation, invites the caveman to a dinner party. He comes accompanied by his sister and the pig. The guests receive one shock after another, and Billy, to get even with Pearl, makes love to sister. When Matie overhears the caveman planning to kidnap Pearl, she gets busy, and putting sister in Pearl's hat and long cloak, the caveman is fooled and carries her off, leaving Billy, Matie and Pearl watching, relieved at their departure.

Jerry on the Railroad—(One Reel)—Horseley—August 9.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry selects a railroad track for a quiet siesta. He is interrupted by the whistle of an onrushing engine. He jumps to safety. Section hands nearby impress Jerry into hard labor from which he escapes by jumping on a hand-car. Arriving at a bridge Jerry seeks shade under a buttress. Here he finds a fuse leading to a charge of dynamite. He hurls the bomb away just as it explodes. The section hands seize the wondering Jerry, haul him off to jail. Jerry falls in love with the daughter of a neighboring rancher, who is the object of the affections of Hank, a railroad man, and Joe, a half-wit. In confinement he finds that his prison adjoins a storeroom to which Joe has a key. Jerry watches through a knothole and sees the half-wit plugging an apple with cyanide. He realizes that Joe is going to give this deadly poison to the lovely daughter. Jerry makes his escape to where Joe is teasing daughter with the poisoned apple. Jerry strikes it from his hand and they fight. The battle rages until father and the section hands, attracted by daughter's screams, separate them but not until Jerry has been felled. They carry him into the house where, finding his heart has stopped, they place him on a couch and fold his hands across his chest. Jerry has been experiencing a nightmare. Sleep had overtaken him while waiting his call for a movie part.

Universal Program

Married by Accident—Nestor—July 31.—With Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Edith Roberts, and Vera Lewis. Bob loves Edna, but mother objects to him because he has no money. Chauncy, his roommate, has more money than brains, and thinks he loves Edna's maid. Bob persuades Chauncy to act as a shield for his courtship. Edna leaves a note saying that she has eloped with the man she loves. Mother and the maid start after the couple and arrive just as the minister has married Edna and Bob. Mother faints. While she is unconscious, Chauncy is united to the maid.

The Battling Bellboy—Joker—August 2.—With Wm. Franey. Bill is a bellboy. Lillian and her husband quarrel, and Lillian comes to the hotel to live. Milt falls for her at once, and Bill is wild about her. Mr. Pugilist, Lillian's husband, arrives and Milt as Bill's manager, tries to make a match between the two. At the fight Bill is completely knocked out. Bill learns that Lillian is Mrs. Pugilist. The manager knocks Bill down, and Za Su, who is passing, runs in and lays out the manager and Milt.

The House of Mystery—Episode No. 6 of The Gray Ghost—July 30.—With Emory Johnson, Harry Carter and Priscilla Dean. In this episode we see the Ghost's men and their method of robbing Arabin's jewelry store. Meanwhile, the Gray Ghost with Morn Light and Wade Hildreth land on a mysterious island. Wade is put into a room with Olmstead. The Ghost tells Olmstead that the police are still anxious to know of his whereabouts for the murder of his father, the banker. Morn Light is locked in a room and is told by the Ghost that Hildreth will never leave the place alive.

Right-of-Way Casey—(Three Reels)—Gold Seal—July 31.—With Neal Hart, Joe Richson and Janet Eastman. Casey is a traffic cop and is in love with the same girl that the Sergeant, his superior officer, is in love with. Knowing this the Sergeant plots with two crooks to get Casey out of the way. They succeed, and Casey arrives in a Western town somewhat dazed. Meantime, the two crooks make a big haul, and after dividing this with the Sergeant, they decide to "blow" the town for a good time. They arrive at the same town where Casey is and are recognized by him. Casey arrests them, gets the girl he loves and also the position of the Sergeant, who is found to be the crooks' accomplice.

In Monkeyland—(Split Reel)—Powers Educational—August 4.—We see the gorilla and the orang-outang. Then the chimpanzee of Africa, who seems to speak to us. He has a cage chum, a Malayan orang-outang. The orang has small ears, because he lives in trees and has few enemies. The saki of Brazil is an extremely rare monkey, clad like an Eskimo. The tiny Brazilian marmoset has a savage countenance. Some of the monkeys register expression as well as any screen favorite. We see a baby Peruvian crying for its mother. Then a Cacaque chewing tobacco. Only the Old World monkeys have cheek-pouches for storing food. On the same reel with "A Good Liar."

A Good Liar—(Split Reel).—An old veteron tells two pickaninnies how he received his medal. He tells them that back in '61, when he was a young private on sentry duty, the enemy attacked them in an aeroplane. He managed to overcome them, and then discovered a huge bologna sausage, which was the enemy's entire food supply. He reported to headquarters, and was presented with the medal for this achievement. The boys then give him a medal with "Liar" on it. He is disgusted and tells them they don't know a real liar when they see one. On the same reel with "In Monkeyland."

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 30—August 3.—First is a demonstration of the methods in use in an Ohio institution in teaching the blind to "see." The girls learn to sew, crochet and weave baskets. The boys are acrobats, and their favorite sport is "wrastlin'." A new invention is the Hyde shipbrake, which enables crafts to stop in little more than their own length, and thus to avoid the tremendous loss of ships and cargoes through collisions. Domestic Science is represented by a demonstration of how to make a fireless cooker. Making an airplane is perhaps the most interesting subject in this number. The reel closes with a clay cartoon, "Faces U Face," by the sculptor, Willie Hopkins.

The Stinger Stung—Joker—August 4.—With Gale Henry, Milton Sims and Charles Haefli. Maud and the Judge are spooning near a beehive. Jeremiah, the girl's sweetheart, pokes the bees with his rake and stirs them into action. Jeremiah is arrested and brought into court, tried and found guilty. He is sentenced to be electrocuted. Maud discovers that bees cannot be held accountable for their criminal actions. She shows the Judge her authority and he writes her a pardon for Jeremiah. She hastens to the execution chamber and saves him just in time.

Where Are My Trousers?—(Two Reels)—Victor—August 3.—With Carter De Haven, Flora Parker De Haven, Eva Lewis and Danna Ong. Van Kirby and his pretty wife, Vera, are happily married until mother-in-law appears. Vera and her mother leave for the country and Van is to come that night. Before going, Vera sends all of her husband's clothes to the tailor's to be pressed and sent on to the country by evening. Van arrives at the depot but slips on a banana peel. Not wishing to appear in the country in such a condition, he goes back to his office and sends his trousers to the tailor. By mistake they are sent to the country with the others. Trying to get in his city home, he is arrested as a burglar. The next morning delirious from cold he is found raving about his trousers. Later dressed up in new clothes, but looking very pale, he goes home. Vera promises never to leave him again.

Blackboards and Blackmail—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—August 1.—With Lucille Hutton and Phil Dunham. Lucille and her mother, two light-fingered persons from the city, arrive in the village. Lucille accepts the place as the new school teacher. Mishap, the cook in the boarding house, and the President of the Board, take a great fancy to Lucille. While the President is escorting the teacher to the school, Lucille's pal robs his safe. Mishap gets Lucille and elopes with her. The crowd ropes the auto, and Mishap and Lucille take refuge in the schoolhouse. The crowd then blow it up, and Phil and Lucille high in the air, shower the crowd with the stolen money.

The Woman Who Would Not Pay—(Two Reels)—August 2.—With Cleo Madison, Frank Whitson, Daniel Leighton and Bertram Grassby. Duane Lovett was a woman whose husband adored and trusted her after four years together. One of her old lovers, Malcolm Leroy, who had clung desperately to the edge of her attention for years, became jealous of Daredevil Dan Hargreaves, her latest victim. One night, making certain that Dan was with Duane, he hastened to inform Lovett. Cautiously Lovett entered his home, but Duane was warned in time to hide Dan in the wall-safe. After her husband had left her room, she rushed to the safe, Dan's body fell out before her—dead. Lovett came in smiling malignantly at her. Duane stood staring at the body of Dan. At last she had paid.

State Rights Features

The Little American—(Five Reels)—Artcraft.—Featuring Mary Pickford. Angela Moore is engaged to a German youth living in this country. Just before the war commences he returns to his native land to take his place in the military organization. Angela finally starts for Europe to take care of some estates in France that belong to her, but on the way the liner on which she is traveling, is torpedoed. A sensational rescue is effected, and Angela at last arrives in a remote quarter of France, only to learn that her relative has died. War sweeps down upon her house in all its fury and soon the place is the headquarters of the Germans. She meets her fiance, Karl, again, under the most repulsive circumstances. The latter is gradually led to discern the wrongs of his military system, and when, finally, Angela is to be shot as a spy, he vehemently denounces his countrymen with the result that he is named to die with the girl. But a miraculous escape is in store for both and as they story closes both enjoy their freedom. Reviewed in this issue.

Alma, Where Do You Live?—(Six Reels)—Newfields Producing Corporation.—Released State Rights. Featuring Ruth MacTammany. Gaston Duval, a young artist, while out riding one day meets a beautiful girl with whom he instantly falls in love, but she will divulge none of her affairs outside of the fact that her name is "Alma." The latter, a talented dancer, is engaged by Count Ladislaw for his production and it is through this connection that she again meets Duval, whose father is a friend of the Count. About this time a "rube" character, Anatole Peach, is the center of the manipulations of his guardian who is trying to trick him out of his inheritance. To help Anatole get his inheritance Alma agrees to lure him into a proposal, but, although she does not know it, she is helping the guardian appropriate the inheritance, because the will reads the opposite of the wily guardian's representations. All kinds of complications set in concerning Alma and the many lovers circumstance ascribes to her, resulting in an out-and-out quarrel between Alma and Duval. Alma, dressing in a boy's uniform and pretending to be her own lover, causes more trouble. Finally matters are cleared up and the befuddled lover discovers to his great relief that Alma is not a wholesale heart-breaker. Reviewed in this issue.

Butterfly

A Wife on Trial—(Five Reels) Butterfly—July 30.—With Mignon Anderson, Leo Pierson and L. M. Wells. Phyllis has charge of the Children's Department at the library. One day she receives a note from her friend, Mrs. De Guenther, that she has a new line of work for her. That night she learns the sad story of Allan Harrington. One day while out riding with his fiancee, he was severely injured in a motor accident and his sweetheart killed. His dying mother wishes her son, now a hopeless cripple, to have some one to care for him who will have more interest than a hired stranger. It means that Phyllis would have to marry him. Thinking over her sordid circumstances and little money, she consents. Several weeks later we see Phyllis and Allan in the country. Realizing that Phyllis has been cheated of her birthright, Allan tells her that their marriage must be annulled. A sneak thief enters the house. Phyllis, hearing her husband's cry, rushes into his room and attacks the man to keep him from Allan. The thief has nearly overpowered her, when her husband with great effort reaches her. With the reaction, they realize what has happened, and their love for each other.

Mutual Star Productions

Pride and the Man—American—(Five Reels)—July 30.—Starring William Russell. Jack Hastings, a well bred young fellow, who has entered pugilism as a career because of a love for boxing, is known in professional circles as "Handsome Jack" Bronson. In his private character he meets a beautiful and wealthy young woman, Thelma Everett, who falls in love with him. Hastings is for a time determined to avoid meeting the beautiful girl, for whom he has conceived a deep affection, but after pondering the matter he abandons his ring career as champion heavyweight of the world and marries Thelma. Hastings' efforts to make money as a contractor prove futile because he has not sufficient capital. His wife secretly puts money into his business in order that he may not be discouraged. Despite this the firm goes to smash and Hastings discovers that he owes his wife $50,000. In order to meet this debt he decides to meet one more candidate for the world's championship and does so. The young wife, believing that her husband's broken promise is proof that he no longer loves her, falls under the sway of plotters against Hastings. He wins the fight and pays Thelma the $50,000. They are reconciled.

Souls in Pawn—(Five Reels)—American—August 6.—Starring Gail Kane. Prince Kondemarck, chief of the German secret service in Paris, has been ordered to secure for the service of his govrnment the cleverest and most beautiful woman obtainable in aid of plans important to his government. Liane Dore, beautiful widow of the late Sebastian Dore, killed mysteriously at the door of his home, agrees to serve on Kondemarck's promise to reveal to her in one year the name of the man who killed her husband, against whom she has sworn vengeance. The Prince himself killed Dore. The latter, posing as a bachelor, betrayed the former's sister in Germany. Kondemarck killed Dore accidentally in a scuffle. In the course of their association as spies, Liane and Kondemarck fall in love. The war throws open Liane's home to wounded Frenchmen. Von Pollnitz, unsuccessful in inducing Liane to reveal French secrets in the absence of Kondemarck in Germany, denounces her as a spy. She is arrested and sentenced to death. Kondemarck returns from Germany, uses his spies to rescue Liane after she has agreed with the prefect of police to betray him, the latter having revealed to her that Kondemarck killed her husband. On the verge of arrest, Kandemarck produces letters showing that Dore betrayed his sister. Liane is carried on board the Kondemarck yacht and the lovers escape.

New General Manager

IN order to improve facilities for distribution in the Albany territory, which has been without a branch of General Film, that company has just made an appointment of a manager with headquarters in the capitol city who begins his duties at once. The appointee is Raymond E. Gallagher, who has been connected with the sales department of the New York exchange.

The important Albany territory has not been served by General Film from an office in that city, the distribution having been from New York. There was, however, such a demand for General Film product developing there that it was considered due the exhibitors to have better facilities. General Manager Harold Bolster of General Film determined that the office at 48 Howard street should be opened and a live, aggressive agent placed in charge. The service given by the company will therefore be directly available.

Raymond E. Gallagher, who now joins Sales Manager Kent's aides, has made an unusually good record as a film salesman in the New York district. Before joining Branch Manager Buxbaum's force he was for years at the Vitagraph plant in Brooklyn, which city is his birthplace. Mr. Gallagher was formerly private secretary to Commodore J. Stuart Blackton. Before that he was in the publicity department of Vitagraph, being one of the two original members of the first publicity staff engaged by that company. He knows the film business from every angle and has had in fact seven or eight years of experience in it under conditions that were exceptionally valuable. Still he is quite a young man and is probably the youngest branch manager on the rolls of General Film. He is being congratulated on his new appointment by a wide circle of friends in every branch of the film industry. It is expected that he will be welcomed to an equal extent at Albany, where there has been such a desire manifested for some one of his abilities to be on the ground with General Film's interests in charge.

CAUGHT AT THE CONVENTION

L. M. VALDIZ, manager of the Royal Opera House, at Laredo, Texas, came in to impart the information that business is very good down in the Lone Star state.

Edwin Booth, manager of the Alhambra at Indianapolis, got in Wednesday morning, the same old Edwin, a glad hand for everybody.

Chas. M. Olson, Ollie Moore, Edwin Booth, A. C. Zaring, Ike Beitman, J. C. Reed, all of Indianapolis, took the village by storm. Zoring still has the old smile that won't come off. Olson is remodeling his Alhambra Theater, and comes forth with the word that the Alhambra will be some theater when he gets through with it. Edwin Booth will manage the house.

O. O. Parks came all the way from Marion, Ind., to do the convention. While here Parks is arranging for his vaudeville and road attractions for the coming season.

W. C. Quimby, owner of the Jefferson Theater at Ft. Wayne, Ind., came in for the convention. Clyde is not reluctant to say that business is good.

Frank Heller, manager of the Starland at Anderson, Ind., and the Fisher at Danville, Ill., dropped in to say hello. Frank avers that, while he is not giving John D. any chase for financial honors, he manages to eat hominy three times daily and smoke good cigars. More power to you, Frank.

R. W. Abbett, sales manager of the Central Film Co. of Indianapolis, arrived Thursday night. Mr. Abbett was very much enthused with the Xposition, this being the first one he has attended.

C. G. Hite, manager of the Cincinnati Goldwyn branch, is here to get acquainted with the stars. Claude is some star himself.

Mr. and Mrs. Sirk of North Manchester, Ind., came in to meet their many Chicago friends.

Roy Andrews of Muncie, Ind., meandered into town. Roy came on to help put Frank Rembusch in as president.

Olson and West, Galesburg movie moguls, while here gave the burg the up and down.

Dad Hines slipped in from South Bend to look things over.

Al Friedlander, that congenial film peddler, came all the way from Dallas, Texas. You know Al, used to wish Pathe service on you. Al would not spill any of his plans, but we suspected that he might hook up with one of the big exchanges here.

Sam Sax, manager of the Bluebird office at Indianapolis, made a hurried trip. Sam is a very busy man.

Sammy Greenbaum, manager of the Garden Theater at Davenport, Iowa, arrived with a party of friends.

Ira Howard of Winnemac, Ind., decorated everybody with Frank Rembusch badges. Some booster, this Howard person.

George K. Landis, manager Indianapolis World office, was here boosting World pictures. Several competitive salesmen gave George the raspberry. We don't know who had the best film when the argument ended.

The Weekly Movie Herald, the well known publication issued to fans in behalf of several picture houses of the city, had a booth at the exposition, and attracted the interest of a large number of picture patrons.

Chicago Notes

Billy Hamburg is organizing a new film club for Chicago, to be known as the Screen Club.

Sam Katz, of the Balaban-Katz Company, has just completed a honeymoon trip spent at Yellowstone Park.

The National Welfare and Educational Association of Chicago has gotten out a special propaganda film entitled "Uncle Sam's Babies."

H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation of New York, was in Chicago last week for the purpose of consolidating the Peter Pan and Toyland Corporations.

Mildred Considine, Chicago scenario writer, leaves for New York this week, to join Julian Johnson, former editor of Photoplay Magazine, in the editorial department of the Selznick Enterprises.

Harry Weiss, the well known tall and graceful manager of the local Selznick branch, is right up in the first rank of men drafted for Uncle Sam's new army. Harry says sure he'll go—if he has to.

Among the Chicago film men drawn for the first conscript army on the first draft in Chicago are the following: Pathe, F. H. Christolph, C. Bestar; Universal, Thomas Greenwood, Henry Igel, Wallace West; Mutual, Louis M. Noto, A. P. Desormeaux, E. H. Duffy; K. E. S. E., Harry Wellington; Vitagraph, H. H. Finney, George Hueth; Famous Players, Thomas Murphy, Teddy Peterson. Motography, Carlyle Fliedner.

Mae Murray, late of Paramount and one of the most popular stars in filmdom, who has signed a long term contract to work for Universal in Bluebird pictures, made a hit with Chicago exhibitors at the exposition. She will be directed by Bob Leonard, who is as well known as a director as she is as a star.

Joe Brandt has returned to New York where he will again become the general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. While at the exposition Mr. Brandt was one of the hardest working men in the city, and was accused of being everything from Irving Mack's assistant to general manager of the Exposition.

F. M. Brockell of the Goldwyn offices, reports contracts coming in for fall bookings on the Goldwyn program. The coming season in the picture business is going to be one of the best that we have ever had if indications around Chicago exchanges, based on the amount of fall bookings, can be taken as a criterion.

The Chicago office of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., is about to undergo complete alterations. The increase of business necessitates a larger shipping room and larger office space. Although this concern has been in the business but a year they have grown so rapidly that they claim the entire fourth floor of the Orpheum Theater Building and find this space too small to successfully carry on their business.

Goldwyn Pictures

Two Goldwyn Pictures Win $728,000 in Contracts

GOLDWYN'S only trade showing in all America to date is the one held last week in Chicago when an invited group of exhibitors saw Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine" and Mae Marsh in another production not yet announced by name to the public.

As a result of this one Chicago showing, Goldwyn booked contracts in a single afternoon aggregating $728,000.

In other words: Goldwyn Pictures sell themselves on sight to the biggest and ablest exhibitors of the nation; sell themselves through sheer merit; through their strength and beauty and because they reveal in every foot of their length the fact that skilled producers have put their hearts and brains into the making of them.

When, within the next few days, Goldwyn Pictures are revealed at trade showings in our twenty-five offices in North America even you cannot conceive of the sensation they will create, or estimate the volume of bookings these showings will induce.

We have been truthful and accurate about Goldwyn Pictures. We have awaited their completion before announcing their virtues. . . . And Robert Lieber, the great Indianapolis exhibitor, voices the opinion of hundreds of exhibitors when he says: "Goldwyn Pictures are better than you ever said they would be."

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

Vol. XVIII CHICAGO, AUGUST 11, 1917 No. 6

New Exhibitors' Association States Aims

ONLY OWNERS OR MANAGERS ADMITTED TO A. E. A.

SINCE the Chicago convention, the two national exhibitors' organizations have been a good deal before the eyes of the trade.

Of particular interest has been the activities of the American Exhibitors' Association, the body organized by the theater men who bolted the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, which was held in Chicago July 16 to 22.

The complete story of the organization of this new exhibitors' association has already been printed in MOTOGRAPHY. The general manager, Charles Pettijohn, of Indianapolis, is to draw a salary of $10,000 per year. We are now able to offer a complete statement of the general ideas and principles of the American Exhibitors' Association, which has just been officially issued by that body. These follow:

Aims of American Exhibitors' Association

The purpose of the organization is to improve and protect the business interests of its members, and to care for the interests of the exhibitor first, but work in harmony with all branches of the industry.

Only bonafide motion picture exhibitors can obtain membership, which means theater owners or accredited managers.

A member discontinuing in the picture theater business will immediately forfeit his membership.

This national body shall work to assist the United States government in times of war or great crisis.

To demand and encourage the production and showing of pictures of a high moral character.

To adjust and arbitrate differences between different branches of the industry.

To Fight Censorship

To work against adverse legislation and legalized censorship and in every way to be a medium that will uplift and promote the prosperity and best interest of the picture industry.

This organization shall be incorporated in regular business form and shall not be used for any money-making schemes or profit.

It shall depend for its support upon its members through subscriptions and donations.

"Packed Convention" Impossible

The plan of organization is such that the national body can never be controlled by a few and a packed convention will be impossible.

The plan will be such that the organization will be more representative and large cities will not be able to control delegations as they have in the past, because the very large cities will be given a charter and must operate under separate charter from the balance of the state.

For example, the city of New York will have a separate charter and the state of New York will have a separate charter. Past experience has proved that the conditions under which an exhibitor in smaller cities and larger cities works are different, therefore both work better and more efficient as separate bodies, and the larger cities have been able to bring an immense delegation to conventions and in that way control the organization. At the same time we are giving the larger cities the proper power and consideration by giving them a separate charter equal to the state.

Plan for Convention Delegates

Delegates to the national convention will be more evenly distributed because representation will be based on the following plan:

Each charter shall be entitled to two delegates, one the state president and the other a delegate elected by the charter, and then each charter shall be allowed one delegate for each one hundred members.

On this plan it will be impossible for one charter to have the power of selecting all of the committees doing the work of the convention, or be able to come to a convention with enough delegates to control the convention.

The executive committee shall be composed of the presidents of the charters and a plan will be inaugurated by which a referendum of votes by mail may be taken on urgent questions.

Exhibitors in New Association

Among the exhibitors prominent in the formation of the American Exhibitors' Association were the following:

California, Attorney O'Donnell, Los Angeles; District of Columbia, Harry Crandall, Washington; Chicago, A. J. Krug; Indiana, Frank J. Rembusch; Kansas, W. H. Willey; Kentucky, Louis Dittman; Louisiana, N. Thatcher; Maryland, Guy Wonders; Massachusetts, Harry L. Kincaid; Michigan, S. A. ## "Couldn't Be Done"—He Did It

Two days before the Chicago exposition a Windy City firm had notified Goldwyn it would be impossible to secure stands for the posters that company wished to place in less than 10 days. Eddie Hardin, a well-known member of the Friars of New York and manager of the motion picture department of the Poster Advertising Company, literally gathered the Goldwyn posters under his arm, stepped on a crack train to Chicago and by keeping the wires hot en route secured the necessary boards for his paper before he completed the 18 hours' journey. The paper went up almost overnight and when the exposition opened the thousands who traveled down Wabash avenue or Michigan boulevard to the big Coliseum saw stand after stand papered with the Goldwyn announcement.

Upon the lithographs are head pictures of Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Maxine Elliott and Mary Garden. The posters are in brown, white and blue with natural color portraits of Goldwyn's famous stars. Before another month has passed every city in the United States of more than 5,000 population will be included in the bill board campaign which is a part of the Goldwyn promotional schedule.

Alan Forrest, as in "Charity Castle," is cast as Mary Miles Minter's leading man in "The Call to Arms," now being produced.

Producer Speaks Mind

Motography, Chicago.

In my opinion one of the very best things you have done is "What the Picture Did for Me." I hope you increase this department until it covers the entire country.

I am not an exhibitor. I am on the producing side. But I am an advocate of the better picture—the clean, the artistic, the worth-while. Only by doing bigger and better things can the motion picture reach the ultimate usefulness and greatness that will result in the largest popularity and profit.

The old days are gone. With their passing passed the cheap picture and the cheap theater.

Your department, "What the Picture Did for Me," will do more to improve the business than anything I can think of. It will serve as a barometer to producers and exhibitors alike. If you will extend the department so that each week it reflects the pictures throughout the country, you will have rendered a service of incalculable value.

The reports reflect the tastes of different audiences, and by comparisons one may easily arrive at the true value of each picture. They reflect the drawing power of both subject and stars. They reflect what the public wants, or, better still, what it is willing to pay for. They reflect the more popular producers. Incidentally and indirectly they furnish much food for thought.—Edwin L. Barker.

Douglas Fairbanks recently offered to co-operate with the American Red Cross, by collecting funds among his friends. The offer was gratefully accepted. and the Artcraft star at once began just the sort of a campaign that might have been expected of him. As the result of his vigorous efforts, he has turned over to the Red Cross nearly $800, and the returns are just beginning to come in.

THE NEWS MAKES A SCOOP

THE Motion Picture News, our orange-hued eastern competitor, grows enthusiastic in its last issue over the Vitagraph booth at the Chicago exposition, stating Rose Tapley was one of the attractions at "Vitagraph's elaborate booth."

There's only one thing wrong with the News.

There wasn't no Vitagraph booth at the exposition.

Outside of that little inaccuracy, the News' account of the booth was O. K.

Ever run any pictures that had the advantage of being made in the actual very presence of the star featured? Here's a house that has. Witness one of its latest advertisements:

"Notice: Don't confuse our Clara Kimball Young pictures with others. These pictures were made in the presence of Clara Kimball Young personally."

Some of the younger, unmarried exhibitors who visited the Chicago branch of the Fox Film exchange were startled last Friday to find a sparkler the size of a piece of coal on the significant left-hand finger of the pretty siren at the switchboard. Orline blushed and confidentially whispered that it didn't really belong to her. But we didn't know whether to believe her or not. Dollars to doughnuts it's some darn soldier at that. Gee, won't it be a relief when those fellows get out and stop flashing diamonds everywhere they go? Then the rest of us poor cripples 'll have a chance.

Bill Sweeney, while he still looks terribly thin as a result of his strenuous efforts to catch the hot bolts that flew about the convention hall during the recent rioting of the exhibitors, was looking better upon his return from a one-day vacation to Batavia, Illinois. He and the Mrs. took a trip up the Fox river.

Fred Laing and A. C. Krebs, two of the pilots responsible for bringing the exposition into a gold-bottomed harbor, are acting like a pair of babies now. They sleep all night and all day, too, and a good many of the rest of us are doing the same.

MEMBER OF FAIRBANKS COMPANY DROWNS

Douglas Fairbanks photoplay, "Down to Earth," has been delayed as a result of the death of one of the members of the company. The player fell overboard near the Catalina Islands during the production of a scene for the new film and was drowned. Despite the loss, the picture will be finished by next week, according to Director John Emerson. The wire from the Fairbanks organization reads: "Production of 'Down to Earth' delayed. Important member of company drowned off Catalina Islands despite frantic efforts to rescue him. Another player has been secured only after a long search. Picture will be finished next week, says Emerson. The drowned player was Pep, a mongrel cur."

WHAT THE PICTURE DONE TO HIM

We're going to run a little "What the Picture Done to Me" of our own this week—me and Bert Goldman. Here's Bert's reports, dog gone him.

Motography, Gentiles:

Blind Man's Luck—Pathe. Excellent picture. Poor title. Business cheesy. But they both enjoyed it.

Lest We Forget—Sidney Drew Comedy. Very funny. Organist laughed out loud.

God of Little Children—Standard good picture. Business Film Corporation. (Let's forget it.) Pleased the ushers immensely.

* * *

The Man Who Was Afraid—K. E. S. E. Very timely. But so many effects worked up on battles, leader couldn't sleep.

Bert Goldman, Manager,
New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Next convention Chicago will get some sleep, for the darn thing's in Boston. It won't matter there; Boston's sleeping most of the rest of the time.

ACTUAL CRITICISM OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS, FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT

(Editorial Note:—"The trade paper than can give the most accurate information about current features is the paper every exhibitor wants," said a prominent manager recently. In addition to its regular reviews Motography publishes in each week's issue the actual, unvarnished opinions of exhibitors on films they have run in their houses, with the idea of aiding other exhibitors in making up their programs. The theaters mentioned here are in Chicago, unless otherwise noted. Managers and bookers like to get various opinions concerning a feature before they run it. Upon request Motography will gladly furnish the opinion of men who have run the feature in question. Give both titles and makers of pictures about which you inquire. Simply address, Motography, Chicago.)

THE AMAZONS, with Marguerite Clark (Artcraft-Paramount)—"The first picture on the new program. A very good picture which seems to please everyone. Should satisfy any audience."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

Joan the Woman, with Geraldine Farrar (Paramount special)—"Great. The star is good. Photography very good."—E. N. LaJeunesse, Premier Theater, Littleton, N. H.—In high class neighborhood.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"Excellent production, well liked by the audience. Capacity business."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Wild and Woolly, with Douglas Fairbanks (Artcraft)—"A sure slapstick picture. Fair drawing card."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

Less Than the Dust, with Mary Pickford (Artcraft)—"Star, direction and story excellent. Business S. R. O. in spite of hot weather."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Each Pearl a Tear, with Fanny Ward (Paramount)—"One of the best pictures with this star we have ever had. Everyone liked it."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Little Lady Eileen, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"For some reason this subject did not draw very well for us, but I consider it a splendid picture."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

The Parson of Panamint, with Dustin Farnum (Paramount)—"Thoroughly interesting, with delightful bits of humor. The strong ending makes the story carry home its lesson. I had a lobby full of people waiting for the second show and nearly everyone complimented the picture."—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theater, Eminence, Ky.

Her Better Self, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Business good with this feature, due to the title and the star. Our patrons seem to like Miss Frederick's work."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhodo.

The Little Boy Scout, with Ann Pennington (Paramount)—"Not much to this picture. Star hasn't much drawing power."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Sapho, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"A fine production. The star is great and is popular here."—E. N. LaJeunesse, Premier Theater, Littleton, N. H.—In high class neighborhood.

Heir of the Ages, with House Peters (Paramount)—"The worst yet."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"A fair picture to fair business."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Giving Becky a Chance, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"Business fair. Story ordinary but interesting."—H. A. Schwahn, Eue Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Her Strange Wedding, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"Drew fair business. Picture only fair. Star has no box office value here."—H. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Freckles, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff (Paramount)—"This combination of stars, the story and the way it is put over is very good. It was well liked by all who saw it."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Tennessee's Partner, with Fannie Ward (Paramount)—"This is a good western drama, full of beautiful out-of-door scenes; as a whole, is a very pleasing picture; brought us good business and the patrons were well satisfied."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—A college town.

Madam La Presidente, with Anna Held (Paramount)—"In my three years' experience as an exhibitor this is the poorest excuse of a picture I ever ran. I had more complaints from my patrons and more people left the theater while the picture was on than any picture I ever ran. A few immoral pictures like this one will ruin any exhibitor's business. Business was very poor, and every one was disgusted with this picture."—C. C. Hubert, Opera House, Newark, N. J.—A college town.

The Undying Flame, with Olga Petrova (Paramount)—"Although the story is laid in ancient times, the picture went over well. Owing to the fact that this is the first Petrova picture that has come out under the Paramount banner, the people expected a different kind of a picture."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Undying Flame, with Olga Petrova (Paramount)—"Good settings and scenic effects, but our neighborhood does not care for these partly Egyptian stories. Business only fair. The star is decreasing in drawing power."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Stolen Treaty, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A very good detective story. Earle Williams always pleases. Business pretty good."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Soul Master, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"Pretty fair picture. True to life. Pretty good business."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

My Official Wife, with Clara Kimball Young (Vitagraph re-issue)—"A very good picture with excellent drawing power. Pleased everybody."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Sixteenth Wife, with Peggy Hyland (Vitagraph)—"A pretty fair picture. Business good."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Fall of a Nation (Vitagraph special)—"The best picture I ever ran. I can't say too much for this picture. Everybody pleased. Good business."—Harvey Nelson, Grand Theater Newberry, Mich.

The Chattel, with E. H. Sothern (Vitagraph)—"A great feature, good enough for any theater. Star is immense."—E. N. LaJeunesse, Littleton, N. H.

O. Henry Stories (Vitagraph)—"Very, very good pictures. Business good."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Aladdin from Broadway, with Edith Storey (Vitagraph)—"A good Arabian play, but our audiences really do not enjoy this kind."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Apartment 29, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"A wonderful picture. Everyone who saw it commented very favorably. The star is very popular here."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation (Vitagraph special)—"Fine picture. Went over big and patrons were well satisfied. Played two days at advanced prices. Increased business the second day."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

What Does the Box Office Show?

IS THE picture you are running in your theater today a money maker? Pass the word on! Does the picture draw the crowds? Tell the exhibitors in the other states. They may want to book the same pictures. Tell them in Motography's "What the Picture Did for Me" Department.

Your box office is the test of popularity. Which picture on your program do you consider superior box office attraction? (Write in pencil.)

The Cave Man, with Robert Edeson (Vitagraph)—"This is a wonderful picture. Vitagraph features are our best money-getters and this one is great. Full of thrills and big scenes. All my patrons enjoyed it immensely."—H. E. Manor, Opera House, Hebron, Ill.

Sins of the Mothers, with Anita Stewart (Vitagraph)—"The star excells herself in this picture. The play is so real that it grips the entire audience. Did a big business. Earle Williams has great drawing power."—H. E. Manor, Opera House, Hebron, Ill.

The Maelstrom, with Earle Williams (Vitagraph)—"This picture drew big. Was liked by the audience."—H. A. Gundling, Bryn Mawr Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Mother Instinct, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"A fair picture. Business nothing extra."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Mother Instinct, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"Miss Bennett surely is a find. The work done by her is almost perfect and the story and direction will make Triangle hold its own.—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Mother Instinct, with Enid Bennett (Triangle)—"A good picture to fair business."—S. Trinz, Covent Garden Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Wild Winship's Widow, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"Business fair. A good picture that registered very satisfactorily."—W. A. Schwahn, Eau Claire Theater Co., Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

The Sawdust Ring, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"Bessie Love makes her appearance on the screen as a bareback rider. It is a delightful love story of the circus, and Bessie Love surely makes the hit of her career. The story is a little improbable but was well liked by everyone."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Sawdust Ring, with Bessie Love (Triangle)—"A pretty fair picture. Business fair."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater.—In high class neighborhood.

The Patriot, with Wm. S. Hart (Triangle)—"Mr. Hart endeavors to describe the true American soldier of the western type who, after living in the despths as a Mexican renegade comes back to prove himself a true American. Mr. Tart and Georgie Stone are excellent."—Edward Trinz, West End Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Sins Ye Do, with Frank Keenan (Triangle)—"Excellent. Star great. Fine from start to finish. Title against it. Business fair."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

The Female of the Species, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle)—"A good picture but the patrons do not like this sort. Business poor."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

Sudden Jim, with Charles Ray (Triangle)—"A good picture. Business not good on account of the hot weather."—M. J. Weil, Castle Theater, Lake Shore, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

In Slumberland, with Thelma Salter (Triangle)—"A very poor picture with no drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The Hater of Men, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"A popular star and a good drawing title. An ordinary, pleasing program picture. Business with it was good, considering the summer weather."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Madcap Madge, with Olive Thomas (Triangle)—"A new star that is likely to become a favorite in the future. She acts and screens well and has a pleasing personality. The story is of the comedy-drama nature."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Corner in Colleens, with Bessie Barriscale (Triangle)—"A good picture which went over big. Everyone was pleased. Don't be afraid to boost it."—H. N. Turner, Family Theater, Pine City, Minn.

The Bugle Call, with Wm. Collier, Jr. (Triangle)—"A good production and a good drawing card."—Wm. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Her Fame and Shame, with Louise Fazenda (Keystone)—"We played this with a Mary Pickford feature. Excellent comedy. Excellent business."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

Her Circus Knight, with Ora Carew (Keystone)—"Good comedy. Business fair on account of an unknown star."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

On Trial (Essanay special)—"A great picture that draws on the strength of the title. The picture is one that will hold the interest throughout its entirety. Do not be afraid to boost it. It is a box office attraction."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Country That God Forgot, with Thomas Santshi (Selig-K. E. S. E.)—"Good picture and good print. Good crowd and satisfied patrons."—E. C. Snodgrass, Snodgrass Theater, Scottsboro, Ala.

The Prince of Graustark, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"A poor print. Such prints hurt the business. This did not give the picture justice. The star is good."—E. C. Snodgrass, Snodgrass Theater, Scottsboro, Ala.

Skinner's Dress Suit, with Bryant Washburn (Essanay-K. E. S. E.)—"We have never presented a picture to greater advantage. It seemed to embody the much desired qualities of star and story and we know of no one who could have expressed with such life-like fidelity this human personage, Skinner. We cannot but feel that continuation of this series would meet with the greatest success."—S. Barrett McCormick, Circle Theater, Indianapolis, Ind.

---

The Serpent's Tooth, with Gail Kane (American-Mutual)—"Production good. Star well liked but the story leaves a bad taste. Fairly good business."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

---

High Play, with William Russell (American-Mutual)—"Star and play fine. Business poor on account of hot weather."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

---

A Modern Cinderella, with June Caprice (Fox)—"A fine picture with a good lesson attached."—Wm. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

---

East Lynne, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"A good play, well staged. Enjoyed capacity business, but Theda Bara is out of her place in a role like this one."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Two Little Imps, with Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox)—"One of the best children's pictures shown by us. Business fair."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

Heart and Soul, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"Big business in very hot weather. Picture pleased everybody."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

Some Boy, with George Walsh (Fox)—"A hit in every sense of the word."—Guy Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Piper's Price, with Dorothy Phillips (Bluebird)—"A good play of its kind but too suggestive. Why they keep making plays like this is more than I can understand. Fair business."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland, Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Golden Bullet, with Harry Carey (Universal)—"Harry Carey is O. K., a second W. S. Hart. Story good."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Brand of Hate, with T. Marshall (Universal)—"This picture went over big. Book it sure."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Young Patriot, with M. Anderson (Universal)—"A good picture to good business."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N.Y.

The Reed Case, with Allan Holubar (Butterfly)—"A very good story. Drew great. Business fine but—do you know why I drew a crowd? Because I put an ad in the newspaper, mentioning the name of Eddie Polo in heavy print. Mr. Holubar is a good actor. He played his part perfectly, but he hasn't the power to draw the crowd. Eddie Polo is a better drawing card than two Charlie Chaplins and three Max Linders! In this way no exhibitor need fear to book this picture. The weather was hot but with 'Eddie' I made a 'clean-up'."—J. L. Goral, Variety Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Little Miss Fortune, with Marion Swayne (Art Dramas)—"Popular star, good production, audience pleased. Played to big house."—R. J. Sullivan, Princess Theater, Vincennes, Ind.

The Road Between, with Marion Swayne (Art Dramas)—"A very poor picture with no drawing power."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

The God of Little Children, with Alma Hanlon (Art Dramas)—"Good picture. Business—let's forget it"—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Serials

Pearl of the Army, with Pearl White (Pathe)—"This is the tenth episode and the serial is still drawing capacity houses. My people are all well pleased with it. It is very timely."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

Patria, with Mrs. Vernon Castle (Pathe)—"This serial has not been the drawing power for me that it should be on account of a miss-out in getting started. It is only a fair serial."—C. Everett Wagner, Dreamland Theater, Chester, S. C.

The Voice on the Wire, with Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber (Universal)—"This serial is about the best that has been made. It surely packs them in here. We are also running "The Mystery of the Double Cross" the same night and show to capacity. We can take care of 1,200 easily but they come strong. These serials please all."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.

The Secret Kingdom, with Charles Richman and Dorothy Kelly (Vitagraph)—"A serial that is drawing nicely and is well liked. Stars are excellent."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.

Patria, with Mrs. Castle (Pathe) and Pearl of the Army, with Pearl White (Pathe)—"These are both good money getters and good pictures throughout."—Thomas Lancaster, Theater Grande, Detroit, Mich.

The Great Secret, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne (Metro serial)—"A very good serial. The stars are liked exceedingly well. Drew big crowds. Well liked by our patrons. Very good business while running this serial."—Mrs. George Volk, Kensington Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Hart's Co-Director Starts Work

Cliff Smith, who as William Hart's co-director during the past two years, has been responsible for much of Hart's success, has just signed a new contract with Triangle for a term of two years and will start immediately on a new series of western productions starring Roy Stewart.

These will be produced at Hartville, the scene of Smith's former activities, where the topography of the land and character of the buildings and exterior sets are particularly adapted for the type of productions that he will direct. Smith keeps with him his former assistant, Charles Rush, as well as his technical staff, and Triangle followers may look forward to some gripping new plays of the early West.

EXHIBITORS AID GOVERNMENT

Indiana Theater Men to Be Active in Co-Operating on Publicity Plans—Rembusch Sends Letter to Managers

Indiana exhibitors are to set a good example to all of the other theater men of the country in co-operating with the government in connection with the war.

Frank J. Rembusch, president of the Indiana Exhibitors' Association, and temporary chairman of the organization committee of the American Exhibitors' Association, has sent the following letter to the exhibitors of the Hoosier state:

The President of the United States has honored and recognized the motion picture industry as a great force in assisting the United States government in the present war crisis.

The exhibitors of the United States have been asked to work especially with the Committee on Public Information, William A. Brady, chairman, and there will be two methods of distributing information.

1. Our screens. (Showing slides and short films.)
2. Four-minute talks in our theaters.

On July 23, your state president was called to Indianapolis by Dr. Barnard and other members of the Food Conservation Committee. Our first work is to assist this committee in enrolling the housewives of America. (Enrollment date is August 15.) Slides will be sent you this week. You are to begin showing them at once contiuously until August 15, and then return the slides to Box 176, Shelbyville, Indiana.

The Conservation Committee has no funds to carry on this work and our organization is asked to finance same. These slides will cost about $250 for Indiana. Therefore, each and every exhibitor in the state is earnestly requested to immediately forward his dues of $12 a year so that we will have available funds. (These dues may be paid $1 per month.)

In view of the fact that the United States government has been lenient with the motion picture exhibitors on the recent proposed tax of 10 per cent of gross receipts, which will probably not be passed because Congress appreciates the fact that this tax would undoubtedly ruin and bankrupt many theaters and put many theaters out of business, the same as it has in Canada, every exhibitor in Indiana and in the nation should show his appreciation and patriotism on this occasion by doing his bit in financing the work now requested by the government.

Your president will advance money to pay for these slides and trusts that a generous response will be forthcoming from all Indiana exhibitors, in the way of dues and donations.

A prominent member of the Food Conservation Board stated: "The motion picture industry has been under severe criticism in the past—perhaps oftimes rightly. The industry is asking for special consideration by the people in the way of liberal legislation. I believe everything asked for in reason will be granted if the motion picture industry shows itself worthy."

Therefore, please, first, run the slides; second, on August 16 return the slides; third (of greatest importance), "Do your bit big" and help finance this splendid work.

To Produce "Just a Woman"

Eugene Walter's well known play, "Just a Woman," will be produced as a photodrama by Julius Steger, in association with Messrs. Lee Shubert and Joseph M. Schenck.

Miss Charlotte Walker will be the star, playing the title role which she created in the original stage version. She will be supported by an excellent cast headed by Lee Baker. The production will be under the personal direction of Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden.

Trooper 44, the Dixon Boardman super-feature in five reels, has been disposed of in the United States through the agency of James A. Stiles, 220 West 42nd street, to Mr. M. L. Tobias, of 729 Seventh avenue.

FILM MEN DRAFTED

Large Number of Young Bloods in Industry to Be Taken Into First National Army—Many Actors Included

A large number of film men have, of course, been affected by the draft for the conscript army. Among them are the following:

From the Famous Players' studio, Adolphe Menjou, who recently appeared in the support of Marguerite Clark in "The Amazon"; Paul Vogel, assistant camera man; Joseph Goodrich, assistant camera man; George Vandermunder, property chief; Crawford Kent, leading man for Pauline Frederick. Some of these enlisted in various branches of the service before the draft numbers were announced.

Six Gaumont men are in the Tenth Regiment of the New York National Guard; eight more will be called into service upon the first allotment of the draft: These are:

Frank H. Mayer, Charles Francis Ward, Frank Eugene Bellese, Charles Merkle, Harold William Lewis, John Schafer, Lawrence D'Armour, and John Diviny.

Considering the number of men from the motion picture industry registered for the selective draft, the result was really astonishing in the way it avoided the West Coast studio colony. However, the colony was no altogether neglected and many of the boys will have to leave the camera and shoulder a gun for some time to come.

One of the very first to be drafted was Wallace Reid of the Lasky Company. He will claim exemption because of his wife and child. The securing of this exemption may be difficult owing to the fact that his wife, professionally known as Dorothy Davenport, may be adjudged as capable of supporting herself and child.

Tom Forman and Lucien Littlefield of the same studio were drafted, but had already enlisted, Forman in the Coast Artillery and Littlefield in the Ambulance Corps in France.

Victor Fleming was the only one at the Douglas Fairbanks plant to be called and will claim no exemption.

George Walsh of the Fox Company was among the early ones on the list. His wife, Seena Owen, who has been playing opposite him, was taken sick and sent to a sanitarium the same day. Walsh will probably claim exemption. Victor Potel, known as Slippery Slim; Charles Parrot, comedy director, and Ralph Spence, scenario writer, were others at the Fox studio called for the first quota.

Jack Klyston, head of the L-Ko comedy staff; Jay Belasco of the Christie comedy company, and James Harrison of the same organization were named.

Charles Ray, the Ince star; Lynn F. Reynolds, Triangle director; Pliny Goodfriend, husband of Mary Anderson of the Vitagraph Company; William Franey, Milton Sills, Craig Hutchinson, Francis McDonald, George Marshall, Lloyd Whitlock and J. Webster Dill of the Universal company were drawn.

Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lockwood and J. Warren Kerrigan were overlooked. Carlyle R. Robinson, Chaplin's press agent, was among those selected, however.

More Bison Western Features

Hereafter Universal will release a Bison feature every other Tuesday, alternating with a Gold Seal drama.

"The Soul Herder," a transcript from life on the frontier, featuring Harry Carey, will be the first release under the new arrangement, bearing the date of August 7.

Film War Committees Appointed

CHAIRMAN WILLIAM A. BRADY NAMES REPRESENTATIVE PICTURE MEN

THE personnel of the committees from the picture industry who will work with the government at Washington in connection with the war is now given out by Chairman William A. Brady.

Sometime ago President Wilson, who is one of the most progressive of modern minds in realizing the extent and power of the picture industry, appointed William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, to mobilize the entire film business, to the aid of the government. Mr. Brady was asked to co-operate directly with the Department on Public Information, headed by George Creel at Washington.

Following this appointment, President Brady and a number of representative film men went to Washington and held numerous conferences with the heads of different departments there. Also the government sent four representatives of as many different departments to Chicago, who addressed the convention of the picture industry held there July 14 to 22. The convention voted to support Chairman Brady and his co-workers to the fullest extent and to do all possible to be of service to the government, as an aid in winning the war.

Exhibitors pledged themselves to give publicity through their theaters to any material the government may send out through the motion picture committees and also to turn over their theaters for the use of the "Four Minute Men," speakers who are now addressing audiences all over the country through the picture houses.

Complete Committees Appointed

Chairman Brady has named the following men upon his various committees, assigned to co-operate with the various departments of the government:

War Department—P. A. Powers, Universal Film Com-Company, 1600 Broadway, New York City; Eugene M. Clark, Jefferson Theater, Natchez, Miss.; William A. Johnson, editor Motion Picture News, 729 Seventh avenue, New York; Cecil B. De Mille, Lasky Studios, Los Angeles, Cal.

The Smart Set Comedy Company held a trade showing in New York this week of its two new two-reel comedies, "Intolerants" and "Hodscotch." These productions were written and directed by Captain Leslie T. Peacocke and feature Harry Crouch.

Theaters Publish "News"

Mutual Weekly, the one-reel topical produced by Gaumont for release through Mutual, is covering a wide range of interesting subjects in these days of big news and, due to Gaumont's method of rapid assembly of film and Mutual's facilities for quick distribution, exhibitors are able to throw news on their screen as soon as the newspapers in their communities are able to get the illustrations of current events into print.

Exhibitors are coming to a general realization of the advantages of a topical reel. The public is, in these days, more keenly interested in news than it ever before has been and with the American troops already in France this interest will grow. The exhibitor who is able to throw onto his screen pictures of current events as soon as the newspapers in his locality publish illustrations of the same news, is building a reputation for being "a live one" and a reputation for being progressive has high box office value to the exhibitor.

An evidence of the wide variety of subjects handled by the Mutual Weekly is apparent for the summary of Weekly No. 134, which follows:

Washington, D. C.—Senate employees present an ambulance to the Red Cross for service in France.

Marseilles, France—English Colonial troops arrive.

Holtsville, Calif.—Combination highway and railroad truck. The U. S. army is adopting advanced transportation methods.

Cambridge, Mass.—Gen. Vignal inspects trenches dug by Harvard's embryo officers.

Mare Island, Calif.—New destroyer added to U. S. fleet. Thousands see the "Caldwell" launched.

Coronado, Calif.—Society takes to aquaplaning.

Seattle, Wash.—Three girls start on hike to San Francisco.

New York City—MacLane and Gordon Highlanders capture New York. Picturesque Scots give send-off to 100 navy recruits.

"Somewhere in France"—How Uncle Sam will care for his wounded. First hospital train goes into service.

Fort Slocum, N. Y.—Raymond Hitchcock and his beauty chorus from "Hitchy Koo" distributes 50,000 cigarettes to boys encamped there.

Paris, France—General Pershing and U. S. Regulars are given a great public reception here. Prostrate France wildly welcomes American fighting men.

Atlanta, Ga.—Miss Julia Quinn's unique pets.

Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.—First mounted inspection of cavalry recruits.

Honolulu, Hawaii—Relief for French war orphans.

Auto Race in Jaxon Comedy

Journeying to the scene of the big automobile race between Ralph DePalma and Barney Oldfield on July 20, the cameramen engaged on the Jaxon Comedies production secured some zipping "cut-ins" for one of the forthcoming Jaxon comedies. This is probably the first time a big race of speed stars like this has been directly utilized to aid a comedy production. The scenes secured will be inserted in a Jaxon comedy appearing in the third series starting about Sept. 15.

Metro Studio Enlarged

Three acres of ground have been added to the Metro studio at Hollywood, California. The additional space was acquired when Director Fred B. Balshofer discovered that to properly stage the forthcoming Metro wonderplay de luxe, "Paradise Garden," he would have to have more stage and studio room. "Paradise Garden" is to be a seven-reel Metro special production. It is an adaptation of the popular novel from the pen of George Gibbs and will have as its star the capable and versatile Harold Lockwood.

Close estimates place the cost of this production at not less than $100,000 and it will require months to complete it. Recently Harold Lockwood has been seen in all sorts of roles from the fantastic light comedy, "The Haunted Pajamas," to the athletic and virile role he portrayed in "Under Handicap." In the new and bigger production Mr. Lockwood will be seen in the role of a society man.

Triangle for August 5

Olive Thomas in her second picture, "An Even Break," will be presented on the Triangle program of August 5, together with Wilfred Lucas and Elda Millar in "The Food Gamblers," produced under the superivsion of Allan Dwan.

"An Even Break" is the second play in which Miss Thomas has appeared since signing her contract with Triangle, and it is said to be one of the most pretentious offerings released as a program feature.

The story, which is by Lambert Hillyer, parallels the star's own career from nonentity to Broadway fame. What is said to be the largest and most elaborate setting ever constructed on the Triangle Culver City stages was used for a scene depicting the nocturnal gayeties of a Broadway cafe. More than five hundred people, including dancers, a Jazz band, professional entertainers, and a large company of guests assembled about the candle-illumined tables, were employed for this episode.

Through such scenes of riotous splendor the star trips her way in costumes that only a "Follies" beauty can wear. She also dances in that lithe, spontaneous manner that established her as a musical comedy favorite.

In the large company supporting her appear such Triangle favorites as Charles Gunn, Darrel Foss, Charles K. French, J. Frank Burke, Margaret Thompson, and Louis Durham. The production was directed by Lambert Hillyear, the author.

A play that will undoubtedly evoke considerable discussion because of its timely subject is "The Food Gambler" in which Wilfred Lucas and Elda Millar are featured. Miss Millar has the role of a young newspaper woman who makes a sensational expose of food speculation as practiced by certain prominent financiers. Lucas has the role of Henry Havens, food commissioner, who assists Miss Millar in her struggle to indict the enemies of national welfare.

Among the supporting players are Mac Barnes, Russell Simpson, Jack Snyder and Ednardo Cianelli. The production was directed by Albert Parker under the supervision of Allan Dwan.

Minister Entertains Company

After the day's work on "The Little Samaritan" had been finished at the Erbograph studio last Thursday, Reverend Clarence J. Harris, who wrote the story for Marian Swayne, took the principals to his Yonker's' home in his car, and entertained them royally with a reception and banquet. Speeches were made by Miss Swayne, Joseph Levering, the director, and Reverend Harris.

George Fisher, leading man for Mary Miles Minter in four of her recent productions, has been cast as chief support of Juliette Day in her second American picture, "The Rainbow Girl," work on which commenced immediately upon completion of her debut number, "Betty and the Buccaneers."

The Master Artists and the "Buckeye" Artists

THERE is a fellow a few blocks from here who stands in the window of his store and paints pictures. They are good-sized canvasses, with good oil colors laid upon them. When he finishes one you can have it for a dollar and a half. If you are an ordinary dub like most of us, you will say it is a pretty picture. You may even think it is beautiful. He sells it for a dollar and a half because it only takes him twenty minutes to paint it. He is a master of technical tricks that show more genius, in a worldly sense, than the painstaking, laborious care of the "great" artist. He makes the branch of a pine tree with one stab of a wide brush. He makes the wheel-ruts in a country road with two quick sweeps of a fine point. He is through before the temperamental type of artist gets his colors mixed. And, as we said before, to most people the result looks at least "pretty."

This piece-work picture painter is not peculiar. His is a recognized trade. They call it "buckeye" painting, and some commercial studios that turn out "art" for department stores and mail order houses employ his kind by the dozen. They cover several square feet of canvas to the hour, and so make good wages. Some of their stuff retails as high as five dollars with a frame; and when it gets old and dusty and second-hand it probably brings two and a half or three dollars.

Meanwhile the real artist works by no clock and resorts to no time-saving cleverness. When his work is finished he gets a thousand, or two thousand dollars for it, because somebody offers that much for it. And when it is old and dusty and second-hand, it brings fifty or a hundred thousand dollars at an auction sale.

There is almost that difference between film producers. Motion pictures is not an art in the same sense that painting is an art, because the lines of the image itself are made by nature, and not by man. But the distinction is scarcely more than a quibble of words. The structure of the motion picture is based on art just as truly, in the broad sense, as is the structure of the painting. And so some of the motion picture artists are masters and some are "buckeyes."

Now any artist who has the makings of a master in time can degenerate into a "buckeye" if he allows himself to be tempted by the promise of steady demand for his product and good pay for his time. If he has not enough respect and love for his art to devote his whole energies to it without regard either for time or for the exact size of the expected reward, the "buckeye" system will seem the easiest and safest way.

There has always been a market for "buckeye" paintings, and there will always be a market for "buckeye" films; and goodness knows there are plenty of "artists" ready to supply them. The majority of pictures come dangerously close to that clasification, because they are turned out by the foot on a time schedule. The truly artistic picture can have no time schedule and no predetermined footage.

The motion picture producer who is not entirely consumed by commercial ambitions must decide whether he will be a master artist or a buckeye artist. With the latter decision there is no doubt that he will make a living. With the former he may experience a period of struggle and unappreciation; but in the end, if he has the material in him, his reward will be the greater for his disregard of it.

Next in Importance to Pictures

FOR making a satisfied patronage, unquestionably music is next in importance to pictures. What is more, good music goes a long way toward overcoming the distress caused by poor pictures. Every exhibitor who has experimented with different forms of music knows that the effect on the audience is great. The success of some of our nationally famous picture presenters is due as much to their knowledge of music as to their selection of films.

But the exhibiting business would be rather discouraging if no exhibitor could hope to succeed without a musical education. Probably the average picture theater man knows as little about music as the average man in the street—which is mighty little.

The only musical education an exhibitor really needs he can get very quickly, through his eyes instead of his ears. He will observe that the houses with the best music get the best and biggest and most reliable patronage. He will see that money judiciously spent for better music immediately pays a profit in better attendance. To realize the importance of worth-while music—that is all he has to know about it.

The musician employed in a picture theater, whether he be a lone piano and organ player or an orchestra leader, should certainly be able to fit appropriate music to the scenes of each picture. A six dollar a week girl cannot be expected to do it; but with that exception it is not a difficult task. Any player whose training extends farther than his fingers can handle it nicely, and generally without resorting to suggestion pages written by "experts."

There are dozens and hundreds of suitable bits of music for every character of scene that can appear in a picture. It is almost ridiculous to pick out one of these and insist that all exhibitors use it when playing a certain picture. One of the greatest of picture musicians discovered early in his career that the same musical rendering does not equally please all communities. The local musician is, or should be, a far better judge than the desk "expert" attached to a trade paper or a producer's office.

The public's attitude toward music seems somewhat peculiar to the man who insists on analyzing what he sees. During the recent Red Cross campaign, when that institution took over numerous picture theaters for one-night benefits, extra contributed attractions in the way of quartets, soloists, etc., frequently appeared. It is doubtful if advertising these novelties would have increased the attendance any. People seldom pay admission to hear a local quartet sing. Yet in almost every case these performers were encored again and again, and the pictures had to wait.

The exhibitor who prides himself on his program is apt to exclaim "This is not a concert, it is a picture show!" But that same exhibitor concedes the necessity of some sort of music by hiring a piano pounder who is much worse than nothing at all. There is no showmanship in spending a hundred dollars or more a week for film service and then begrudging twenty-five dollars a week for music.

A department store lunch room or a chop-suey joint provides better music than nine picture theaters out of ten—and has less real reason for providing any at all.

A really competent piano player for seven nights and two matinees will probably cost twenty-five dollars a week in the cities—less, of course, in smaller towns. A four-piece orchestra might be had for eighty to a hundred dollars. Prices of this kind, of course, are dangerous things to quote for country-wide reading. A great deal depends on the musicians' ability to secure other employment for hours when the show is dark. Music teachers make good candidates for this kind of a job.

Nothing good can be had for nothing, and not much can be expected for a few dollars a week. Music is not cheap—though some of the ingenious instruments now on the market make it quite economical, and are really excellent substitutes for expensive orchestras. But the thing we would like to see exhibitors recognize is that good music, bought judiciously, is always a splendid investment—and sometimes changes failure into success.

Ask for Charter in A. E. A.

CHICAGO THEATER MEN AMONG FIRST TO AFFILIATE WITH NEW BODY

ONE of the first groups of local exhibitors to hold a meeting in order to affiliate with the new American Exhibitors' Association was a group of Chicago picture men, formerly known as the Illinois Theater Owners' Association. They met July 27 in a hall at 19 West Adams street, and decided to send in an application for a charter to the new national body.

According to the constitution of the American Exhibitors' Association, cities with over 1,000,000 population are to have chapters separate from those of the states in which they are located. The meeting was called by H. Schoenstadt in order that the Chicago men could hear Judge A. P. Tugwell, of California, former vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and Fred Herrington, the league's national organizer during the past year, before these men left the city. Both men had been largely instrumental in the forming and launching of the American Exhibitors' Association, and it was thought a good plan to have them address the prospective Chicago chapter before they left for their homes.

Regret Politics in League

The speakers regretted the fact that the old league had been made a political football and warned against politics creeping into the new organization. Mr. Herrington dilated on the necessity of an exhibitors' body that would really work for the interests of the exhibitor on the questions, local and national, that keep coming up. This, he said, the league had failed to do, and at times had even acted in a manner contrary to the best interests of the theater men of the country.

Mr. Herrington said there was no denying that the old league had done a great deal of good or Mr. Ochs would never have been so desirous of securing control of it.

"But," he said, "at the present time it is a one-man organization, conducted to further the interests of a trade paper. It no longer represents the exhibitor. In fact, it is often employed in a manner antagonistic to his best interests.

Theater Men Owe Great Deal to League

"But the good it was able to do before it fell into the hands of politicians was immeasurable. It was used as a weapon to kill the showing of pictures in hotels when they threatened to creep in and menace the theater. It forced one of the largest department stores in the country to abandon its plan of showing free films. Time after time, when the picture theater was threatened by unfair competition, the league stepped in and saved the day.

"That was possible only because the league represented the theater men of America. Its voice was authoritative. It was the spokesman of the millions and millions invested in picture theaters all over the United States. So it wielded tremendous power.

Still Has Power

"It still wields power, but many of us feel that that power is misdirected. That is the reason we are so anxious to start this new American Exhibitors' Association off right. We need an organization that will really represent us again—that will fight for us when unjust legislation is proposed—that will oppose the workings of willful censorship. We need an organization, in fact, not dominated by a single man to further his selfish motives, but one which has at heart the advancement of the screen from the exhibitors' standpoint."

Mr. Herrington and Judge Tugwell were given a rising vote of thanks for their addresses, and then attention was centered upon getting the Chicago chapter properly enrolled under the banner of the new national association.

A committee of five was appointed by President Schoenstadt to meet with a similar committee from the Chicago exchanges to see what could be done about abolishing deposits. Mr. Schoenstadt declared he had talked with the managers of the various Chicago exchanges and found them in a very receptive mood to consider changes which would remove this load from the shoulders of the local theater owners. Louis H. Frank, G. P. Morris, A. J. Krug, George Henry and A. J. Mulligan were the men appointed by Mr. Schoenstadt on this committee.

Decide to Resign from League

Before adjournment a motion was unanimously passed urging members of the new organization to give up their membership in the local chapter of the league. Another motion, favorably passed upon, placed in the hands of the executive committee the task of drawing up in suitable form a list of the reasons for withdrawing. Each member will be given a copy which is to be enclosed in the envelope carrying his resignation.

George Henry, former president of the Chicago chapter of the league, greeted the new organization, wishing them success, after which the meeting adjourned.

New Marguerite Clark Play

"Bab's Burglar," the first "Sub-deb" story by Mary Roberts Rinehart in which Marguerite Clark portrays the character of the seventeen-year-old school girl, has been completed and is now being made ready for release by Paramount some time in September.

Mrs. Rinehart, who makes her debut as a picture-play author in the present story, has given a fiction a new character in the little sub-debutante, Barbara Archibald, youngest daughter of a wealthy family, whose greatest misfortune is that she is "to juvenile for words," twenty months younger than her sister, Leila, and greatly "misunderstood owing to her so-called imaturity." She has not yet finished boarding school and has not been introduced to society as a debutante. These two trials in her life are to her the most important, seconded only by her difficulties in the matter of "love and romance."

Mary Pickford, having just completed her next picture, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," is enjoying a brief vacation, much of which is being spent in the surf. Meanwhile Frances Marion, who writes her scenarios, and Marshall Neilan, her director, are at work on the preliminaries of the next Pickford-Artcraft release.

New Universal Releases

Variety is the distinguishing feature of the Universal releases for the week of August 6. Monday will be Butterfly day, as usual, signalized by the release of "Follow the Girl," a strong western play, featuring Ruth Stonehouse and Roy Stewart. In addition, several comedies, a western thriller with Harry Carey in the star role, three big news reels and the latest installment of "The Gray Ghost," the mystery serial, will be released.

"The Soul Herder," a Bison drama of the old frontier, is the offering for Tuesday, August 7. Harry Carey will have the leading role. It concerns the regeneration of a reckless knight of the plains, who through force of circumstances is forced to protect and later provide for two homeless children. At the same time, he is obliged to impersonate a parson, and in this guise puts over one of the most effective "sermons" ever heard in the lawless hamlet of Buckhorn. "The Love Slacker," a Nestor Comedy, featuring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, will be shown on the same date. It depicts the misadventures of a would-be woman-hater, who finds it impossible to evade the blandishments of the fair ones, despite his most heroic efforts.

The two-reel L-Ko Comedy, "The Little Fat Rascal," heads the releases for Wednesday, August 8. Number 84 of the Animated Weekly will be issued on the same date.

Mary Fuller will be the star of the dramatic feature for Thursday, August 9, which is entitled "The Untamed." It tells of the romance that comes into the life of a daughter of a Southern moonshiner who finds herself thrown into contact with a young revenue officer. Striking scenery and the acting of Miss Fuller give this feature unusual charm.

"O-My the Tent Mover," a Joker comedy, featuring William Franey, is scheduled for release with "The Untamed." A brief and pungent burlesque of "Omar the Tentmaker," this story tells of the misadventures that befall on Launcelot Briggs, an old clothes dealer who is lost on the desert and rescued by a Sheik. William Franey is supported by Lillian Peacock, Za Su Pitts and Milburn Moranti.

"Like Babes In the Wood," a Victor two-reel comedy of exceptional novelty, featuring Violet MacMillian and Fred Woodward, will be released on Friday, August 10. This is a drama story, in which the imaginative adventures of two children are depicted with appealing realism. On the same day the 31st issue of the Universal Screen Magazine will make its appearance.

Besides a Joker Comedy featuring Gale Henry, and entitled "The Vamp of the Camp," there will be a Power humorous travelogue, entitled, "Seeing Ceylon With Hy. Mayer," released Saturday, August 11, together with the 13th number of Universal Current Events.

The 7th episode of "The Gray Ghost," the mystery serial featuring Priscilla Dean, Eddie Polo and Harry Carter, released during the week, will be entitled "Caught in the Web."

To Star in Own Scenario

Ruth MacTammany, star of "Alma, Where Do You Live?" is now busily engaged in putting the final touches on the manuscript for her next production, which will be directed by Hal Clarendon for the Newfields Producing Corporation. Miss MacTammany herself adapted the screen version of "Alma, Where Do You Live?" from the stage success, which had very little plot, so that making the "Alma" scenario was practically writing a new play. Into this she succeeded in getting a great deal of dramatic action and strength.

The new production will start within a few days and not only the title of the picture but its theme is being kept secret as the producers desire to spring a complete surprise on the public.

When Miss MacTammany was in Italy pursuing her operatic career she had the opportunity to visit some of the finest motion picture studios in the world. It was there that she started her writing and several of her scripts were made into successful productions in Italy. The script which she is now completing will be the first entirely original play by herself in which she has played the star role. Much of the picture will be taken in the White Mountains.

GOLDWYN MAKES NEW HAUL

Big New Picture Corporation Signs Contract for Series of Rex Beach Productions—Get "The Auction Block"

All future Rex Beach pictures, made from the stories and novels of this world-famed author, are to be distributed and controlled by Goldwyn under a contract signed by Samuel Goldfish, Benjamin B. Hampton, president of Rex Beach Film Corporation, and Mr. Beach himself.

This contract places the Goldwyn distribution in immediate possession of Mr. Beach's recently completed production of "The Auction Block," made from one of his greatest novels.

"The Auction Block" was directed by Larry Trimble, a director of imagination and force who, since its completion, has joined Goldwyn and is now directing Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn."

By obtaining a series of Rex Beach productions Goldwyn comes into possession of stories that will rank as the biggest box office attractions in the film world and is thereby enabled to offer these pictures to exhibitors throughout the world in addition to the twenty-six pictures previously announced as constituting Goldwyn's scheduled annual output.

"I think," said Mr. Beach after signing the contract, "that the entry of Samuel Goldfish, Edgar Selwyn and their associates into the field of motion picture production brings in just the type of men needed to make pictures one of the great arts. They have established a rapidly expanding organization that reaches around the world and I believe that their genius and abilities, which will henceforth be utilized in the making of my productions, will be responsible for a marked advance in this industry."

Thus far the trade has been told very little about "The Auction Block." Announcement of this and other Rex Beach pictures to be offered by Goldwyn will be made shortly.

Drama of the Cattle Country

Ruth Stonehouse and Roy Stewart are the featured players of "Follow the Girl," the Butterfly Picture scheduled for release August 5. The story deals with the adventures that befall an orphaned Swedish girl, Hilda Swanson, whose dreams of the wonderful attractions of America are suddenly answered one day when the agent of a Swedish-American colonization company agrees to furnish her transportation to this country for a nominal sum.

NO CHANGE IN POLICY

V. L. S. E. Rental Prices to Remain Same, Says General Manager Irwin—Exhibitor Watching Producer Closely

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of V. L. S. E., distributor of the Greater Vitagraph product, has notified the exhibitors of the United States and Canada that there will be no change in the rental policy of V. L. S. E., and that the present policy of that distributing organization will continue as it has been for several months past.

The statement by Mr. Irwin, which was issued through the publicity department of V. L. S. E., was called forth in answer to numerous inquiries from exhibitors as to what they might expect in the future.

"Other companies are changing their policies," one prominent exhibitor wrote. "They are increasing their rental prices to a figure considered exorbitant by some of us, and we want to know if V. L. S. E. purposes to follow in their footsteps."

V. L. S. E., according to Nat S. Stronge, publicity director of Greater Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., has no idea of increasing its rental prices to the exhibitors of the country.

"After being in attendance during the entire week at the Chicago convention, where I met numerous exhibitors from all parts of the country," said Mr. Stronge, "I have reported to General Manager Irwin that every exhibitor to whom I talked had a good word to say regarding Greater Vitagraph products and spoke in an appreciative manner of the way in which the V. L. S. E. branch exchanges throughout the country are handling the Greater Vitagraph product.

"I was amazed to learn of the extent to which the exhibitors are watching and investigating the production end of the business. Many of them have almost as good an idea of costs as the producers themselves.

"One item the exhibitors are watching very closely is the star salary question.

"In discussing this question one prominent Minnesota exhibitor diagnosed the question from the standpoint of the exhibitor. He had just called attention to the fact that one company recently had signed a contract with a male motion picture star at a salary of $10,000 a week.

"According to his figures, this salary meant that a five-reel feature in which this particular male actor is the star would cost not less than $120,000 to produce. This figure he based on a production time of six weeks, making the salary of the star during that period $60,000. He allowed a similar amount for supporting cast, direction and incidental expenses. On top of this cost, he asserted, must be added the cost of prints and distribution.

" 'Right at this point,' " this big Minnesota exhibitor continued, " ' the exhibitor is affected. We know that there is not a producing company able to spend $120,000 on a five-reel program feature and rent that feature to the exhibitors of the country at an equitable price. By an equitable price I mean a price at which the exhibitor can make money.

" 'Several of the larger producing companies appear to be working on the assumption that the exhibiting end of the business can stand a greater tax in film rentals.

My prediction is that they have not made a thorough investigation of the purchasing power of the business. These companies cannot double the price of their film rentals and expect to retain their exhibiting patronage. The exhibitor of today is rapidly becoming a business man to whom cost problems no longer are an enigma.

" 'Recently I was approached by the salesman of one of the companies which has adopted the policy of doubling its film rental. I explained that not one of my houses had the seating capacity to stand the increased tax and that I did not feel justified in increasing my admission price to meet it. The outcome was that the salesman threatened to rent the product to my competitors. He did not know that I and my business competitors had held a meeting and discussed his proposition. All of us agreed that his proposition was impossible and each agreed that to sign a contract with the company would mean business suicide. For this reason none of us signed, and those of us who had previous contracts with this same company sought the V. L. S. E. Minneapolis exchange. Upon being assured that Greater Vitagraph's rental policy would not be changed, we made arrangements to show the Blue Ribbon Features.' "

New Essanay Features

Trade showings of two Essanay feature productions are now being offered at branch offices of the K. E. S. E. Service. One is "Open Places," the third of the Essanay-Western series in which Jack Gardner, the former musical comedy star, is being featured. This photodrama, which has been built to meet the general public demand for red-blooded action on the screen, will be released August 20. The second production is that in which Taylor Holmes, the stage comedian, is to make his screen debut. This is a comedy-drama entitled, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," and will be released September 3.

"Open Places" presents the adventures of a little New England school ma'am who attempts to teach the "wild and woolly" West its A B C's. In the little pioneer town of Rawhide, Montana, on the Canadian boundary, she meets a typical bad man, and impressed by his picturesque appearance, weds him. Their honeymoon is cut short by a deadly duel in which her husband slays another man and is forced to flee across the boundary to escape justice. A year passes in which the little teacher gradually grows interested in Constable Calhoun of the Canadian Mounted Police. The dramatic climax comes when, as their acquaintance has ripened into mutual love, the bad man turns up again to claim his wife. The picture has a screen time, approximately, of sixty-five minutes. Ruth King and Carl Stockdale head the supporting company.

Taylor Holmes has been given the same type of subtle comedy characterization in his first picture, which made "His Majesty, Bunker Bean," "The Third Party," "The Million" and other of his stage successes so popular. The story, written by Clarence Budington Kelland and published in the Saturday Evening Post, presents the actor in the role of an "efficiency bug" who seeks to win the love of a girl by the application of modern business methods. To more successfully compete with his chief rival, who plays a guitar, he purchases a saxaphone. His plan works contrarily to his intentions, however, in the long run efficiency wins out for him. Virginia Valli takes the leading feminine role.

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" has a screen time of sixty-eight minutes.

Posters in Yiddish for "The Peddler"

So popular is Joe Welch, the famous character actor who is presented on Art Dramas program in an adaptation of his famous play, "The Peddler," that special posters, printed in Yiddish, have been gotten out for use by exhibitors catering to members of that race.

This is probably the first time that posters on a regular production have been printed in a foreign language. The move was initiated by Charles Streimer, manager of Modern Feature Photoplays, Inc., which distributes Art Dramas for New York and New Jersey.

As soon as the announcement was made that Joe Welch's play was to be done in screen form by the U. S. Amusement Corporation, theaters in the districts which are populated largely by members of the Jewish race began making inquiries, at the demand of their patrons. Mr. Streimer reports that he booked the program in many of these theaters purely on the merit of "The Peddler."

The reason for this unprecedented demand will be clear when it is remembered that Joe Welch is practically idolized by the Jews of America, for what he has done to present their racial characteristics in a true light on the stage.

FOR YOUR PROGRAM

One of the Leading Offerings for August 6 is Gail Kane in "Souls In Pawn," Chief Mutual Release for Week

"Souls In Pawn," Gail Kane's fourth Mutual-American production, tops the list of Mutual releases for the week of August 6.

"Souls In Pawn" is a story of international intrigue laid in the days which immediately preceded the great European war, and in the first months of the world conflict.

Miss Kane appears in the role of a French woman of high cast and wealth who, to avenge the murder of her husband, sells her soul to an alien spy-in-chief, falls in love with the buyer and gets into deep complications when hostilities break out.

The beautiful Mutual-American star, whose screen successes include "Whose Wife?," "The Serpent's Tooth" and "The Upper Crust" has never been seen to greater advantage than in "Souls In Pawn." She is, in the first three reels, a vivacious, gorgeously dressed society woman. In the last acts of the picture she is a Red Cross nurse, and the uniform of the Red Cross becomes few women as it does Miss Kane.

"Souls in Pawn" is a war picture in that it shows none of the horrors of the war, and yet in a stricter sense it is a war picture, for its theme is world politics immediately before and dealing with the war.

"Pigs and Pearls," a one-reel LaSalle, released August 7. There is a heavy demand for one-reel comedies and both the Cub and LaSalle brands have been booked by hundreds of exhibitors with gratifying results. George Ovey has built a wide following with his one-reel laugh provokers and exhibitors report regularly to Mutual offices that Ovey is the most popular of the host of film comedians who are turning out one-reel subjects. M. De La Parelle who is directing La Salle comedies has struck a popular chord in his subjects and although the first release was made only a few months ago, the brand has been booked heavily.

Reel Life, Mutual's weekly film magazine, enters a new and novel field in its release of August 9. It shows undersea pictures. E. B. Gray, celebrated photographer, was commissioned to get sub-sea pictures for Reel Life and selected the sea gardens near Miami, Florida. The pictures are so unusual that they will stand a week's booking. The same issue of Reel Life shows a colored baptizing in Old Virginia, pictures R. E. Madsen, the Nebraska boy giant, shows how the human heart generates electricity and covers a variety of other subjects, including animated cartoons from Life.

Mutual tours around the world, released August 7, covers a trip down the Senegal river in French West Africa, Bruges, an old city of Belgium and a trip through the fishing villages of France. Mutual Weekly No. 126, the one reel topical film carrying current events up to the hour of release, reaches the screen August 8.

Adds to Story Corps

The Misses Helen Starr and Elizabeth Maloney, trained and tried writers, have been added to the Dazeys, Charles and his son, Frank, Daniel F. Whitcomb and Clifford Howard, as scenarioists for the American. This is in line with Persident Samuel S. Hutchinson's plans for ever-better stories.

---

A novel booking has been arranged by Charles Ledin and his assistant, N. Hass, whereby Fox's Jamaica Theater will introduce something of a novelty next week in a two-part program which shows a clever booking angle. The first portion of the program will be devoted to M. H. Hoffman, Inc.-Foursquare feature, "The Sin Woman"; the second half will present Fox's picture, "The Innocent Sinner."

"PARENTAGE" TO MAKE MONEY

Hobart Henley, Author and Director, Tells Why He Feels Confident His Thought Film of Home Life Will "Clean Up"

"A great many of my closest friends tell me that I am altogether too methodical in my work," declares Hobart Henley, the creator and director of Frank J. Seng's "Parentage." "Perhaps they are right," he confesses, "but I've always found that it pays to take an infinite amount of pains with tasks that must be done well, and I feel certain that my own theory is not such a bad one when I took ten weeks to make 'Parentage.'

"It has been exceptionally well received, and I am naturally proud of my part in its success as a states rights production. I also have my own ideas of what might have happened to this production had I rushed it through in the usual time allotted to directors of seven-reel pictures

"I know 'Parentage' is going to make big money for its exhibitors and I am very glad of it. It is a type picture, therefore a human picture, therefore a picture that will draw the masses. The artists, most of them without previous experience in pictures, do not stalk through their parts; they live them and the result is that audiences accept them at their face value.

"'Parentage' will be welcomed by the exhibitors of this country and enjoyed by the millions of fans primarily because it is clean and wholesome entertainment and there are no smutty scenes in it which require justification on the grounds that they impart knowledge. I could have gone further and introduced scenes dealing with the seamy side of life, but I saw no necessity for it. I have never believed the 'off color' pictures were in demand and the way 'Parentage' packed 'em into the Rialto settled that question for me once and for all time.

"All in all there are so many evidences of success tacked on to this production that I feel highly gratified that experienced film men have unanimously acclaimed it a money maker for everybody."

Theaters Run "Her Fighting Chance"

The activities of the various Hoffman-Foursquare Exchanges throughout the country are progressing in a satisfactory manner. Jerome Abrams, Eastern Division Manager, has just established the Philadelphia Foursquare Exchange at 1325 Vine street, and during the past week closed a number of important contracts, among which are: "The Bar Sinister" and "Her Fighting Chance" for Poli Theater, Scranton; Victoria Theater, Harrisburg, and eight prominent Philadelphia theaters. The St. Louis Foursquare Exchange, in charge of Sidney J. Baker, among a large number of bookings, has placed "The Bar Sinister" for a week in Kansas City.

George W. Weeks, division manager of the Detroit Foursquare Exchange, taking care of Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, placed "The Bar Sinister" for a week at the Colonial Theater, Columbus, O., and has also signed a number of important contracts that indicate that this will be one of the many active territories covered by a Foursquare exchange.

MISS DALTON WITH PARAMOUNT

Through Association With Thomas H. Ince, Popular Actress Joins Charles Ray and Enid Bennett in New Affiliation

Another Thomas H. Ince star has been added to those already announced by the producer as following along with him in his new affiliation with Paramount. Dorothy Dalton's name is to be added to those of Charles Ray and Enid Bennett as Ince stars to appear in pictures hereafter to be released exclusively through Paramount. There will be eight Dorothy Dalton pictures scheduled by Paramount.

The announcement places the name of Dorothy Dalton in the list of Paramount stars along with Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Billie Burke, Lina Cavalieri, Julian Eltinge, Enid Bennett, Jack Pickford, Vivian Martin, Wallace Reid, Charles Ray, Sessue Hayakawa, George Beban and others.

Miss Dalton, by the terms of the new arrangement will continue under the direction of Mr. Ince, through whom she has achieved film fame. Pictures made under his directions and with Miss Dalton as star will be released regularly by Paramount.

Second Mayfair Production Soon

"Persuasive Peggy," the production in which dainty Peggy Hyland makes her Mayfair debut, is ready for its trade showing, and preparations are under way for the filming of the second picture which is promised not to fall below its predecessor in any way.

Even after the final crank of the camera in "Persuasive Peggy," Miss Hyland found her efforts needed in the completion of this production. The little finishing touches had to be made and her time was well filled arranging these many details in co-operation with the members of the producing and artistic staff. The subtitles which were written by the authoress, Maravene Thompson, has to be placed in suitable frames.

But "Persuasive Peggy" is at last ready for the trade showing and the second Peggy Hyland-Mayfair production is coming in for its just share of attention. M. A. Schlesinger, president of the company, is not yet ready to announce the title of this offering, but in it Miss Hyland once more finds a role ideally suited to her capabilities.

The studios at 515 West 54th street are preparing for her return and the carpenters and stage hands find their time well occupied planning the attractive scenes which will be erected. Each detail will receive every bit as much attention as it received in the filming of "Persuasive Peggy," and as soon as Miss Hyland returns from the country where she is resting for a short time before beginning work on the second picture, the formal announcement will be made.

NEW PROJECTION DISCOVERY

Mazda Lamps to Supplant Carbon Illumination for Picture Projection—Discovery Would Be a Boon to Industry

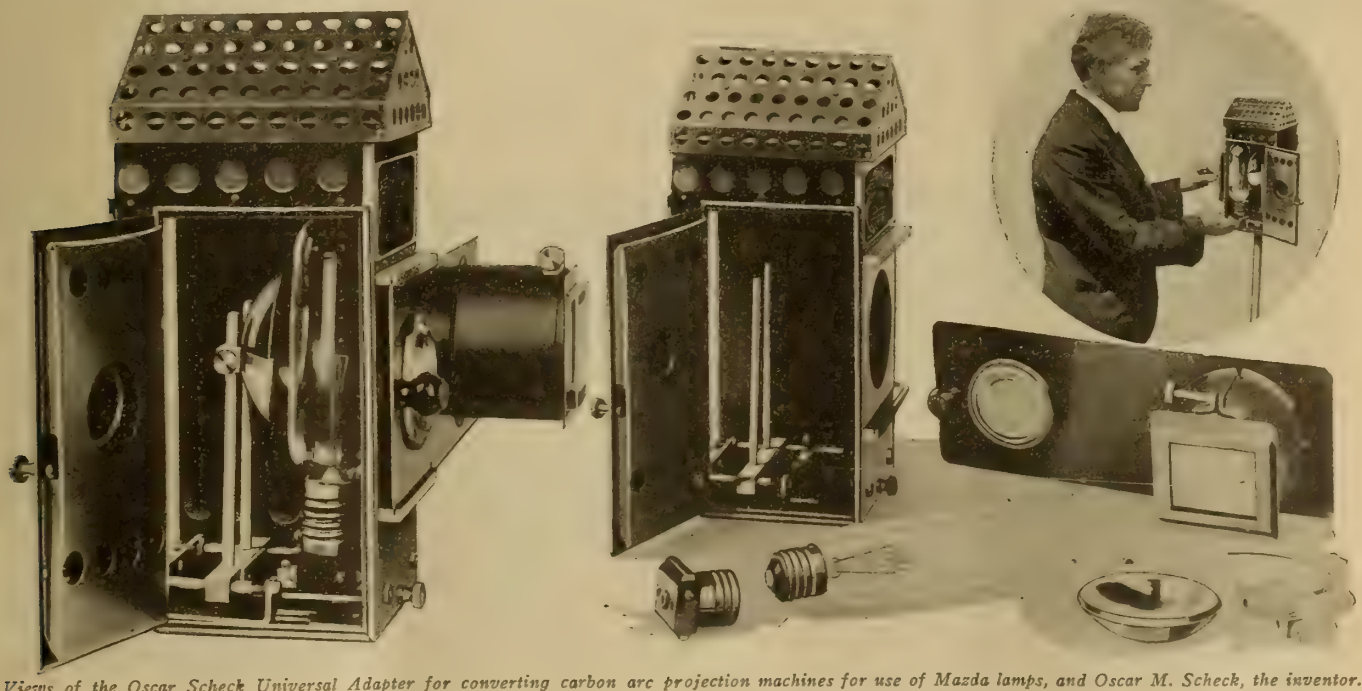
Mazda incandescent lamps for motion picture projection are no longer an experiment but a proved and established success, according to advices received this week from the Mazda Lamp Laboratories and from the Argus Lamp and Appliance Company of Cleveland, Ohio.

This latter company has correlated the development of the mazda motion picture projector lamps by perfecting the Sheck Universal Adapter which will immediately convert any type of motion picture projection machine with carbon arc to the use of the new mazda lamp. The announcement of this company includes the fact that these adapters and lamps are now ready for the market.

Prominently identified with the development of the mazda lamp for motion picture projection and the designing of the universal appliance for the adapting of carbon arc machines to the use of the mazda lamps is Oscar M. Sheck, a lighting engineer well known in the fields of stage and motion picture illumination. The adapter now being exploited by the Argus Lamp and Appliance Company is the invention of Mr. Sheck who has been for the past year working hand in hand with engineers of the Mazda Development Laboratories.

Mr. Sheck, in addition to his engineering activities, finds time to discharge the duties of one of the general organizers of the National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators. He is personally known to thousands of operators throughout the United States and Canada, all of whom will be greatly interested to learn of the Sheck appliance. Indeed, operators everywhere have been anxiously awaiting the introduction of the mazda motion picture illumination, for the reason that arc lighting with its poisonous gases, has had a most distressing effect on the health of the operators. Mazda lamps will, of course, eliminate all fumes in the booth and will be infinitely safer.

The claim is made for the mazda lamp, in addition to the health-giving features noted above, that they will give better light; that they will completely eliminate flicker on the screen and that they will do away with all eye strain by removing the harsh qualities now present in carbon illumination. In addition, it is certain they will further recommend themselves to exhibitors by so reducing the amount of current consumed as to materially lower the cost of projection.



In preparing this lamp for practical service, however, no provision was made for an appliance with which the mazda lamp might be adapted to the present carbon arc motion picture installation. The Argus Lamp and Appliance Company of Cleveland, however, has undertaken the distribution of the Sheck Adapter, which permits the use of the mazda lamps in the present carbon arc housings without cutting or marring the housing in any way.

H. H. Cudmore who has been prominently identified with the mazda lamp industries for many years, is now general manager of the Argus Lamp and Appliance Company and is personally directing the distribution of the Sheck Universal Adapters.

Since the preliminary announcement of the new adapter was made Mr. Cudmore has been flooded with inquiries from all parts of the world. It is in no way any exaggeration of the facts to say that the new discovery will eventually revolutionize the entire motion picture industry.

Artcraft Issues Classy Magazine

One of the finest business organs in the industry, if not the very finest, is now published by Artcraft Pictures Corporation, of New York. Norman S. Rose is editor. Volume 1, No. 1, is dated July 30, 1917. The classy little magazine is called "Artcraft Advance" and contains twelve pages of interesting reading matter, attractively illustrated. The cover is a splendid decorative design in colors, showing Mary Pickford in "The Little American."

NEW ASSOCIATION DIRECTORS

Prominent Film Men to Guide National Association of Motion Picture Industry Coming Year—Successful Season Closed

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has held its first annual meeting of members and practically all of the prominent figures of the industry were present. The gathering took place at the Princess Theater at the time of the Chicago convention.

The Association has really made remarkable progress and its accomplishments, revealed in reports of the executive's secretary, Frederick H. Elliott, and President Wm. A. Brady, are surprising both in quality and value to the business as a whole.

In order to save traveling expense and time, the association voted to held its directors' meetings quarterly instead of monthly. The work of the transportation committee was reported by Wm. L. Sherill, of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, and Arthur S. Friend, of Paramount, reported the progress of the insurance and legislative committees.

31 Censor Bills Killed

D. W. Griffith, chairman of the censorship committee, being in Europe, his report was made by Theodore Mitchell, who stated that censorship bills had come up for passage during the last year in the legislatures of no less than 31 different states in the union. All of these, thanks to the energy of the committee, were successfully combated, in spite of the fact that the committee worked practically without any financial support. All of the reports were accepted, including that of the secretary and treasurer, with those of the association, for the inestimable services rendered.

There are 73 companies and many individuals now represented in the association, including all of the various branches of the industry. There are 40 producers, 11 distributors, 18 supply and equipment companies and 4 publication concerns, among the factors of the organization.

Director Elected

Screen Club's "First Reel"

The Screen Club of New York has celebrated its "First Reel."

The scenes of the festival were the Casino Theater and the Screen Club's clubhouse on West Forty-sixth street. Most of the important personages of filmland were present at one place or the other during the evening or the early morning of Monday, July 30. The proceeds from the performance at the Casino will go toward the financial support of the club.

Among the notables who took part in the "show" were Raymond Hitchcock of his "Hitchy Koo" fun-maker; James Morton, the monologist; Lillian Walker, Flora Finch, Wally Van, Hughie Mack, Albert Roccardi, Arthur Ashley, Laura Walker, in a scene from "The Man Who Came Back," Alice Brady, Stanley Forde, Marjorie Bonner and William Powers.

"Taking Over" Story Mistake

Edwin Thanhouser makes the following statement to MOTOGRAPHY:

The story that the Thanhouser studios has been taken over by the Clara Kimball Young Company it a total mistake and I would like you to give the fact publicity. The accurate news in the matter is that Miss Young's company is producing its first picture at our studio, picking our plant for this after an inspection of every large studio in and around New York City.

I appreciate that no harm was meant by the erroneous item, which clearly came from the pen of someone uninformed as to the size and facilities of our place at New Rochelle. Not only is it housing Miss Young's company but our own under Director Ernest Warde, and we are considering letting some independent producers of large features partake of our facilities, too.

The Thanhouser studios rank among the largest glass studios of the country and they have not been taken over by any single producing company, but indeed are negotiating now to house several.

Horsley Hit By Draft

Uncle Sam has called eight men from the David Horsley Studios for service in the new American army. Horace Davey, director of Neal Burns and Gertrude Selby in Selburn Comedies, was the first man to be published as a conscript. H. B. Lull, assistant director to Horace Davey, and Clair DeWitt, assistant director of George Ovey in Cub Comedies, were also drawn, as was George George, who plays with George Ovey. The comedy jinx was broken when Ben Cohn, scenario editor, discovered his number in the tabulated lists. Two stage carpenters reported themselves as drafted, while Harry Ryan, a property man, enlisted in the Coast Artillery several days before the great military lottery.

"The Natural Law" Coming

According to advance information available, "The Natural Law," produced by Charles H. France, of the France Film Corporation, will be one of the strongest dramatic subjects ever produced. As a play "The Natural Law" had a run of nine months at the Republic Theater. The screen presentation is said to be an emotional triumph for Miss Marguerite Courtot, who is featured, while both the leading male characters, Howard Hall as the doctor and George Larkin as the boy, are played with tremendous force.

The production is an elaborate one and the film is now being prepared for a trade showing. Publicity campaign is under the direction of the Hessner Publicity Bureau.

Mutt and Jeff Visit Rialto

Arrangements have been completed for the new Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons to be shown daily at the Rialto Theater, New York. Mutt and Jeff are sure some devils in their own home town. Not content with the handsome reception accorded them daily at the Strand Theater, they have now with their amusing whimsicalities, laid siege to the Rialto and captured it by storm. And news comes that they are capturing strongholds all over the country with gas attacks—laughing gas.

Mabel Normand With Goldwyn

LITTLE STAR TO BEGIN WORK WITHIN FORTNIGHT

Mabel Normand and Goldwyn Pictures Corporation have resumed friendly relations again and it is expected the little star will be at work in the Fort Lee studios within a fortnight.

Miss Normand signed a contract with Goldwyn last fall and came East in May to begin work. Temporary differences, now fortunately adjusted by Gabriel L. Hess, general counsel for Goldwyn and Arthur Butler Graham, counsel for Miss Normand, delayed the beginning of her work, but during the intervening time plans for the star were not held up. A great amount of literary material had been purchased from famous authors and the scenario department buckled down to the preparation of her first two pictures.

Goldwyn's plans for Miss Normand contemplate giving her even more distinctive comedies than she has done in the past and the technical and artistic facilities which Goldwyn contributes to all of its productions mean much for this exceptional artist whose vogue is as great in foreign lands as it is here at home.

Announcement will be made soon of the director and staff who are to make Miss Normand's first Goldwyn Picture.

Goldwyn Signs More Big Exhibitors

Goldwyn's first and only trade showing, held last week in Chicago, resulted in a landslide of contracts for Goldwyn Pictures with some of the nation's greatest exhibitors.

This trade showing at which only two of the Goldwyn productions were shown, produced many surprises. At eleven o'clock in the morning an invited group of exhibitors from all sections of the country saw Madge Kennedy in "Baby Mine," her first Goldwyn picture and at its conclusion cheered and applauded. After luncheon the same group of guests saw Mae Marsh in a Goldwyn production which has not yet been announced by name to the public.

As a result of the Chicago showing contracts were signed with:

Robert Lieber for the Circle Theater, Indianapolis. This is the largest and finest theater in that section of the country and one of the distinctive motion picture houses in the United States.

Edward A. Zorn for the Temple Theater, Toledo. Mr. Zorn is one of Ohio's biggest exhibitors and also one of the pioneer exploiters of pictures through the medium of newspaper advertising.

William Sievers, New Grand Central Theater, St. Louis, who has one of the largest and finest motion picture theaters in that city.

William Flynn for the Twelfth Street Theater, Kansas City. Mr. Flynn is one of the most successful exhibitors in his section of the country and besides having two Kansas City motion picture theaters is also the lessee of the Willis Wood Theater.

Nathan Ascher for his twelve Chicago theaters. The Ascher Brothers' chain of theaters are large, modern amusement places in the best neighborhood locations in America's second city.

Other important contracts covering a score of the larger cities have been signed within the week by exhibitors without the necessity of trade showings.

A second trade showing was held in Boston last Friday in conjunction with Harry F. Campbell, manager of Goldwyn's Boston offices. Exhibitors throughout the territory were present by invitation.

Philadelphia will have its trade showing this week and similar showings are being announced for all of the Goldwyn offices in the United States and Canada.

Mabel Normand, probably the screen's most popular comedienne, who is to begin work for Goldwyn Pictures soon, a scene from Jane Cowl's first Goldwyn production, and Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus."

New Additions to Scenario Department

Two important additions have been made to the scenario staff in the persons of Franklin B. Coates and Miss Catherine Sminck, both of New York City.

Mr. Coates is well known to the photoplay writing world for his adaptation of "Poppy," "Pawns of Destiny" and more than a score of other multi-reel stories that have had an international showing. His story, "John Mainwarning," won the $1,000 grand prize in a picture play writing contest of recent vintage. Mr. Coates has been made assistant to Adrian Gilspear, who has had charge of the writing and of some of the more important Goldwyn productions.

Mr. Coates is also known as an explorer of more than amateur note. During the years of 1913 and 1914 with three companions he explored the Amazon River from its source to its mouth by way of the uncharted Hullaga River.

Miss Catherine Sminck has the distinction of being the first member of the Columbia University class in photoplay writing to become associated with a producing company. This class is under the direction of Dr. Victor Oscar Freeburg and that photoplay writing is included in the curriculum of one of the largest American universities is a significant sign of the times. Recently Goldwyn presented the Columbia class with sets of still photographs from Maxine Elliott and Madge Kennedy productions. These are being used as models in the lecture course. This fall the members of the photoplay writing class will visit the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee for the purpose of making a first hand investigation of film dramas in the making.

Triangle-Keystone Studio Opens

With five companies ready for action and directors and people engaged for several others, the Triangle-Keystone comedy studio has been officially opened in the old Fine Arts plant on Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles.

All of the directors and performers in the reorganized aggregation were with the old Keystone Comedy management and were foremost among the artists who contributed to the phenomenal popularity of the famous two-reel productions.

The five companies now on the job are headed by Harry McCoy, Charles Avery, H. Haymaker, Reggie Morris and Harry Kerr, and each of the directors has brought with him the players and assistants with whom he was associated before Triangle reorganized. The studio itself has been completely renovated, and improvements added at an approximate cost of $100,000.

The facilities of the plant compare favorably with those of the largest producing concerns in the country and it is stated that the company is prepared to excel in volume and quality its previous output.

First New Big V Comedy

On August 6, Greater Vitagraph will release the first of its new series of rollicking Big V Comedies. These comedies, which are of the slapstick variety, but refreshingly devoid of the pie-hurling element, are produced under the direction of Lawrence Semon, who plays the leading male role and also collaborates with Graham Baker in writing the scripts.

In the cast supporting Mr. Semon are some of the most intrepid performers before the camera, chief among whom are Joe Simberg, Earl Montgomery, Joe Basil and Ed. Dunn. All of them are tranied acrobats, recruited from circus and vaudeville stage to provide laughs and thrills for the Big V Comedies.

The new series of comedies will be characterized by some of the most remarkable trick photography ever seen on the screen. The new stunts in cinematography which are being concocted by Cameraman Len Smith and Director Semon are calculated to create a furore in film circles when the first of the new Big V Comedies is released.

The first of these new farces will be "Boasts and Boldness," a fast-moving comedy, telling of a man who constantly is impressing upon his fiancee how brave he is. The complications are fast and furious to the end.

Serial Thriller in Mutual Comedy

"Beach Nuts," the Cub comedy released by Mutual August 16, carries an explosion scene which would do justice to a serial thriller, but it was semi-accidental.

An imitation filling station after the style of those which John D. Rockefeller is building on almost every city corner in the country, was erected on the lot at the Horsley studio almost under the edge of the bleachers of the ball park where Los Angeles was battling Salt Lake City.

The "business" required that George Ovey, star in the Cubs, drive into the filling station, run amuck with his car at which an explosion was to ensue. A charge of black powder was installed to furnish the explosion. But the director underestimated the explosive power of the charge and as a result the ball game was hastily suspended and that section of Los Angeles began to use the telephone to determine what "the Germans" had done.

Bobby Connelly Series

V. L. S. E., distributing organization for Vitagraph, announces the inauguration, next week, of the new Bobby Connelly series of kid features starring the wonder boy of the Vitagraph plant. The series will contain ten one-reel subjects, each a story complete in itself and built on experiences that come into the life of every red-blooded boy of this or any other generation. Eight of the pictures have been completed, the first five having been directed by Wesley H. Ruggles and the last three by Charles M. Seay. The latter will complete the series.

"Bobby, Boy Scout," is the title of the first picture, which is scheduled for release August 6.

The play is said to be highly instructive and filled, from start to finish, with real boy humor and activity. Bobby Connelly is supported in this picture by a strong company of juvenile actors, the chief of these being little three-year-old Aida Horton and Bobby's sister, Helen Connelly. Mabel Ballin plays the role of Bobby's mother and Bill Shea that of the skipper.

New Manager Named

H. J. Smith of the sales force of the Minneapolis branch of the Mutual Film Corporation has been appointed manager of the sub branch at Fargo, N. D., vice F. B. Thompson, who tendered his resignation.

Director James Young, who directed Bessie Barriscale's production of "Rose O'Paradise," at her studio in Hollywood, California, has returned to New York.

Food Commissioner Aids Triangle

HELP PRODUCING COMPANY STAGE "FOOD GAMBLING"

"The Food Gamblers," a Triangle picture dealing with the greatest problem that confronts the American nation today, is about ready for release. It was produced under the supervision of Allan Dwan who, realizing the serious and far-reaching value of the subject, sought the co-operation of John J. Dillon, commissioner of foods and markets of the State of New York, for the purpose of gaining accurate statistics wherewith to give the play the power and conviction of truth. He found Mr. Dillon not only ready to furnish details but even willing to appear as an actual character in the story.

One of the dramatic situations is that where Elda Millar, as a newspaper reporter on the New York Globe, consults the commissioner as to exposing the food gamblers and is shown a complete diagram tracing the distribution of food from the producer through various crooked channels down to the consumer. Through the assistance provided by Mr. Dillon it was not only possible to expose existing conditions but to provide a suggestion for correcting them. The sincerity and whole-hearted interest which the New York Commissioner is taking in this problem is indicated in the following article, prepared by him for special use in connection with the production and presentation of the film.

Gambling in Human Lives

The American people are paying through the nose for the barest necessities of life. They are tamely submitting to being gouged out of their hard-earned wages; they are being mulcted of that spare cash that should go to buying some of the finer things of life, and all because they have permitted a group of parasites to wedge themselves in between producer and consumer.

In polite parlance, these parasites are known as commission men because they pay themselves a commission which comes out of the ultimate consumer's pocket. As a general proposition the jobber or speculator performs a useless service. No one who has investigated the situation by which a group of from five to eight of these food gamblers pass the product of the farm and garden from one greedy hand to another until the cost has multiplied, doubts that food gambling is as bad for the body politic as the ordinary gambling with roulette wheel or faro box. It is held in some communities that there are honest gamblers with the ordinary tools of their trade, but in food gambling the dice are always loaded, the wheel is always crooked; the box is always "braced" and the cards are always stacked.

To get down to a concrete fact: New York spends each year one billion dollars for food. Out of this billion the commission merchants and food sharks seize nearly three hundred and fifty million dollars in commissions for a service that is not only worthless but iniquitous in that it represents sheer waste. That situation is duplicated from one end of the country to the other wherever there is a community of people who buy and sell food in any quantity other than that of the individual need.

Need for Action

There is no need to get hysterical over the situation. Calm consideration is better, but there is need for action when it is considered that the gouging methods referred to have raised the cost of such things as bread, potatoes, vegetables, eggs, butter and so on, one hundred per cent. This would not be so serious, perhaps, did not the bulk of the population live without a margin of safety. To raise the cost of a loaf of bread, of a quart of milk, or even the cheapest grade of meat one hundred per cent merely means in cold words that over fifty per cent of the men and women and children in our larger communities will eat just half what they used to eat. Now it is an unquestioned axiom that thirty per cent of the population is underfed. Malnutrition is the basis of much physical degeneracy. Social workers are familiar with its effects in what is known as "rickets." It breaks down the physique of the child; it results in an increased attendance in our insane asylums, our reformatories, our hospitals and our prisons.

Today the food gamblers have increased the problem of malnutrition so vastly that to a great part of our population the problem is not "What shall I eat?" but "How shall I eat at all?"

Getting Down to Cases

Let us take the concrete case of one single bushel of potatoes. The farmer on Long Island who raised that bushel sold it last October and got 80 cents to $1 for his labor. Yet, and this is curiously strange, you and I will walk into a grocery store and will pay from 10c to 12c a pound for that same bushel. As there are 60 pounds of potatoes in a bushel we will pay at the rate of $6 for the bushel that the farmer sold for $1.

You ask, "Who got the difference?"

We cheerfully arise to answer: "The railroad got a little, the buyer got a little, the commission man got a little, the wholesaler got a little, the first, second and third jobbers got a little, and the retailer got a little. The housewife pays a dollar for food for her family. On an average the farmer gets 35c—the cost of distribution is 65c. Last fall the farmer got 80c to $1 a bushel for potatoes. In the grocery store the housewife paid $6 or more.

But the middleman and the food gambler lies about the situation first; he says there are no potatoes to be had, and he conceals his bushel in a storage warehouse.

So much for the condition—the disease, if you will—but what of the remedy?

The Remedy

The answer lies in state control of food distribution. The one answer to the ever rising costs; the one possibility of eliminating the gouger who fattens on the misfortune of his kind is in central markets or distribution points to which food can be shipped by growers, and from whence it can be distributed by state superintended means. Those who wish to deal in food products shall be licensed by the state, and they shall so conduct their business that they take a fair toll for a reasonable service. Under state supervision demand and supply will regulate prices and the independent food gambler will deal on the square or go out of business. The remedy is simple, but it is not possible until we awake from that typically American apathy which leaves vital problems of human relationships to those who can wring the most profit from these relationships.

Little Star in "Pants"

Essanay is filming Little Mary McAlister, its child star, in a five-part comedy-drama, the title of which is "Pants."

Little Mary went over big at the Chicago convention, never failing to get a good hand from the crowds when she was introduced. She recently was appointed a sergeant in the regular army and attracted much attention also in the Army booth at the Coliseum where, garbed in her diminutive uniform, she solicited recruits for Uncle Sam's fighting forces.

"Pants" will be the first feature production in which the little actress takes the leading role. However, President Spoor of Essanay believes her past successes have created a demand for her in something bigger, and that her work deserves the better chance.

The story presents the contrast between the life of a rich little girl, hemmed in by prim governesses, and that of other children who, though poorer, enjoy the full freedom which childhood needs. While the important roles, essentially, are played by children, the story carries such realism that it will form a picture equally as enjoyable to adults as to children.

PICTURES FOR SOLDIERS

Ninety Army and Navy Training Camps Completely Equipped—Weekly Attendance of 250,000 Soldiers at Y. M. C. A. Halls

Preparatory to the mustering in of the National Guard and the selective draft army of a million men, the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., in conjunction with the Fosdick Commission on Training Camp Activities, has installed picture machines in about ninety army and navy training camps in this country.

Nearly two million feet of film are being shown weekly and this will be increased eight times when the greater army is mobilized. An average weekly attendance of one quarter million enlisted men is reported at the picture exhibitions in the Association huts. By arrangement with the Community Motion Picture Bureau of Boston the photoplays are now accessible at the Y. M. C. A. building wherever young men are training for the army and navy, for aviation work and ambulance service, for engineering duties and for coast defense.

Provision is made for one building for each five thousand men, or, in some instances, one for each three thousand men. There are now one hundred and fifteen buildings and large tents at the ninety camps, and plans are made to double this number when the selective draft army goes into the cantonments.

In most of the camps an average of five exhibitions a week are given, which aggregates three thousand showings a week—a record in the picture business. The leading motion picture producers and distributors of the country are co-operating in this work.

"Motion pictures serve especially well as a form of recreation, entertainment and instruction in the camps," said Lee Hanmer, head of the Committee on Motion Pictures of the Fosdick Commission. "The strenuous program of physical activities, coupled with the required periods of intensive study, demand just the kind of relaxation and amusement that a motion picture exhibition affords.

"Selecting and producing suitable films is, however, a most difficult task. It requires a degree of good judgment, discrimination and business organization far above the ordinary. The picture must be virile, gripping, clean and inspiring, but also there must be comedy, as well as tragedy, in the well-balanced program. To secure such films, insure their prompt delivery at the appointed times and places throughout our extensive system of training camps, and make special adjustments to meet the needs of special occasions, is a highly difficult and technical undertaking. The Commission on Training Camp Activities is fortunate in having in this connection the services of the Community Motion Picture Bureau."

New Mrs. Castle Picture

"The best Castle picture yet!" was the verdict of Pathe officials after the private showing of the third feature starring Mrs. Vernon Castle, the best-known, best-dressed, best-advertised woman in America. It is the first appearance of Antonio Moreno as Mrs. Vernon Castle's leading man.

The picture holds the interest from beginning to end. It is an intense murder mystery story dealing with the diabolically clever manner in which one man kills another, proves an apparent alibi for himself and throws the suspicion upon his rival in love.

In this picture, Mrs. Castle appears to better advantage than in any of the features yet completed, not only from the standpoint of her acting but she actually looks more beautiful. Features of the production are the sets and backgrounds. Antonio Moreno is a splendid hero and the two make a fine pair. Their work is one of the strong points of the picture.

New Wholesome Films Official

Guy McConnell, widely known as a motion picture producer, and a magazine writer of note, has joined Wholesome Films Corporation of Chicago, in the capacity of director general. McConnell's genius will guide the continuity and production of all Wholesome subjects.

Guy McConnell, general manager Wholesome Films Corporation.

Wholesome Films already has begun productions under Guy McConnell's direction, of "The Penny Philanthropist" by Clara E. Laughlin. Ralph Morgan of the "Turn to the Right" company, has been cast in the leading masculine role. Production is to begin soon, M. J. Weisfeldt, general manager, announces, on a serial picture from McConnell's talented pen.

The basic idea of Wholesome Films, of which the company's name itself is indicative, is proving a Mecca for leading lights in film and literary circles. Mr. Weisfeldt declares that more than fifty leading writers have already agreed to bring their pen-creations to Wholesome for production.

"As director general of Wholesome Films Company," asserted Guy McConnell, "I shall bend my every effort to an accurate mirroring on the screen of the author's point of view. In no way will the works of recognized good authors be sullied by cheap thrill injected by directors—in no way will false action be thrust upon the picture public in order to put the so-called 'punch' in mediocre stories.

"The Wholesome policy is the selection only of the best, cleanest and cleverest stories—the Wholesome kind—and the rigid exclusive of all else. Wholesome Films Corporation is dedicated to a new high standard of motion picture entertainment. It shall be my duty, and I shall strive in every way, to see that this new standard is in all respects maintained."

Danger from typhoid and other germs in drinking water does not worry folks at the Greater Vitagraph studio, in Brooklyn, for there is an artesian well right on the property.

FILM AIDS RECRUITING

Army Officer Writes to Author, Telling How Young Men Join Uncle Sam's Legions After Seeing "Little American"

That "The Little American," the great Mary Pickford-Artcraft patriotic production, is one of the best aids to recruiting which the government has, is being demonstrated every day by the hundreds of letters received by the "Little American" herself, by Cecil B. De Mille, the producer, and by Jeanie Macpherson, the author of the story.

Miss Macpherson recently received a letter from Lieut. Jas. Douglas, Second Separate Troop, Louisiana Cavalry, now at the training camp on the border. Lieut. Douglas writes:

"We have placed a recruiting officer outside of the theater where "The Little American" is being shown, and grab many young men as they come out after seeing this wonderful play. I don't know how soon we are going to the front, but if we ever reach the firing line, I wish that just before going into battle we could show 'The Little American' to our boys, for I know they would then be in the right frame of mind to charge all the way up to Wilhelm's castle in Berlin.

"That story of yours has furnished the most opportune and inspiring play I have seen in years."

NEXT FARRAR PRODUCTION

"The Woman God Forgot" Powerful Story of Aztec Life, Containing Remarkable Settings and Effects, Directed by Cecil B. De Mille

That the first picture made by Geraldine Farrar as an Artcraft star will be far out of the beaten track, and on an unusual scale of production, is the statement that comes from Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

"The title of the picture," says Mr. Greene's announcement, "will be 'The Woman God Forgot.' It is a colorful and powerfully dramatic story of Aztec life, introducing the historic character of Montezuma and revealing the splendors of his court. Jeanie Macpherson, whose great patriotic play for Mary Pickford, 'The Little American,' has made her the most talked about screen writer in America today, is the author of 'The Woman God Forgot,' and it will have the personal direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

"Mr. De Mille and a staff of research experts have been at work for many weeks preparing data for effects and costumes, and we expect the cost of the tremendous special settings which will be built to run into figures which might be considered excessive if they did not pertain to so magnificent and important a production.

"Among the special sets is a tropical jungle, containing a lake for water fowl, the whole fenced and covered over with 10,000 feet of wire netting, to prevent the escape of the animals and birds."

New Victor Moore Comedy

Victor Moore for his next release (July 30th) returns to the "family series," in a comedy called "Motorboating." Most of the scenes are taken down at the Seashore, and they make the comedy a splendid release, particularly for the summer time.

"Immensely Valuable" to Exhibitor

MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

I regard MOTOGRAPHY by far the best medium for imparting to exhibitors the kind of information they should know, and which they would pay most for. In no other picture publication do we find reviews on current pictures, by exhibitors themselves. This alone is immensely valuable to us all. Besides that, anyone can see that MOTOGRAPHY is well edited, I mark it, unhesitatingly, at the top of all magazines of the trade that come to my desk. Not so big in pages, but superior in quality.—The McGhie Theater, N. W. Huston, Owner, Columbus, Kansas.

Statement by H. O. Davis

With plans for the future development of the Triangle Film Corporation's immense producing plant at Culver City that will make it the largest concern of the kind in the world, H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Triangle, has arrived in Los Angeles from New York, to spend several weeks here in the interests of the company.

"Accomplishments are always more convincing than statements," said Mr. Davis, "but the vital theme to be conveyed to exhibitors and public alike is that the new Triangle quality in pictures and program will be the foreword of our entire organization.

"The slogan recently adopted by our Eastern department strikes the keynote of the situation. It is: 'The best of Yesterday will not be good enough for Tomorrow.'

"The producing facilities of the Culver City plant are greatly to be increased and as rapidly as possible stages and other producing equipment will be erected on the sixteen acres purchased last week adjoining the present eleven acre plant. More than a score of new companies will be added immediately, for which the directors and playing forces already have been chosen. Triangle will produce comedies on a large scale as well as feature dramas that will have a distinctly different tone.

"The time has come when Triangle will no longer attempt merely to make motion pictures; we will be making dramas and telling stories. More money will be put into the quality of the productions than ever before in the history of the industry, and how well we will have succeeded in accomplishing the desired results will be evident in the finished offerings."

First Artcraft Hart Play

The past week has been a very busy one for Thos. H. Ince and that bright luminary of the Ince firmament, Wm. S. Hart, who accompanied Ince into the Artcraft fold. The name of the first Ince-Hart-Artcraft picture is not yet announced, but it is said to be a story of an entirely different type from anything in which Hart has recently appeared. C. Gardner Sullivan, who has provided the gun-fighting star with so many of his best known vehicles, is the author of the piece, so it is reported.

Studio conferences between producer, star and author have been many, and production work is expected to begin in the near future.

Louis Glaum in "Golden Rule Kate," a coming Triangle.

LOUISE GLAUM IN NEW ROLE

Triangle Vampire Reverts to Militant Tactics of Pioneer Days in "Golden Rule Kate"—Says to Keep Public Guessing

Few fans will recollect that Louise Glaum, celebrated as the "peacock siren" of Triangle pictures, is a graduate of the school for gunfighters, having served in many pictures under the command of William S. Hart. In her latest picture, "Golden Rule Kate," to be released August 5, she quits the effete atmosphere of perfumed liars to return to the dance halls of the rugged West, which formed the setting for her conquests in the earlier pictures.

Soon after her appearance as feminine opponent to William S. Hart in Triangle western pictures she took up the vampire art and attained a master's degree.

Like her male prototypes Golden Rule Kate rules her domain with an iron hand and settles all disputes at the point of a gun. When a minister encroaches upon her domain and opens a church in competition to her dance halls she immediately orders him off. Ignoring her threats, he delivers a sermon to his flock on the evils of such resorts as that conducted by the "sagebrush hen." "The Heller," one of Kate's confederates, rushes to inform her that the sky-pilot is preaching heresy to her loyal patrons and is planning to clean out the saloon. Immediately she orders the "Heller" to enter the church, rope the minister in his pulpit and drag him to her place. There at the point of a gun she invites him to take a drink at the bar in the presence of the crowd. His calm refusal causes her to relent. Later she strikes a compromise with him, agreeing to attend church every Sunday if he will tend her bar one hour each day. The first indication of the woman's regeneration is in the announcement she issues that married men cannot drink whiskey in her dance hall.

Miss Glaum is perhaps the first woman star to present a type parallel to that of the famous "bad men" of the screen. It is one which will require entirely different methods from the parts which she has played with marked success for the past year. The story by Monte M. Ketterjohn was chosen by the star herself as a vehicle, because she is determined not to be typed and because she finds zest in developing characters of striking contrasts.

"Keep the public guessing," is the slogan advanced by Miss Glaum in a recent interview. Surprise them, shock them if necessary, but keep them on the alert for your next play. That is the secret of a picture player's continued success. Once a screen star gets in a rut and does the same things over and over her future is jeopardized. People become tired of the sameness. They do not believe she can do anything other than the screenworn characters which she has ceaselessly interpreted. True, a type may become a fad of the hour, but only for the hour, and, any way, what ambitious actress wants to be catalogued as a fad?"

TRIANGLE STARTS RE-ISSUES

Hart and Fairbanks Plays to Appear in Special Series —Many Notable Stars in Supporting Cast

On September 1, the Triangle Distributing Corporation will commence re-issuing its series of Triangle pictures starring Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart. The first will be a Fairbanks feature, the title of which will be announced within the near future. This will be followed by a Hart subject, to be released about September 15.

"We are re-issuing these plays in response to the insistent demands of our exhibitors," is the statement issued by Triangle's New York office. "They will not be marketed on the 'open booking plan,' but in a series. Incidentally, the rental price will not be of the 'open booking' scale but so moderate that every exhibitor in every city, town and village can avail himself of the opportunity to reap profits on the stars whom he has helped to make.

"These will be the Triangle masterpieces of the stars, carefully selected from the large number of successes in which they appeared. During his association with Triangle Douglas Fairbanks was featured in twelve pictures. William S. Hart has appeared in Triangle pictures exclusively during the past two years, making no less than sixteen during that time.

"These Triangle pictures featuring Hart and Fairbanks might be termed 'all-star features,' for many of the supporting players are now stars of the first magnitude, rivaling in popularity even the men featured. Among the number are Bessie Love, Louise Glaum, Dorothy Dalton, Margery Wilson, House Peters, George Fawcett, Seena Owen, Enid Markey, Alma Reuben, Sylvia Bremer and Clara Williams. The plays were produced by star directors from stories by leading scenarioists and novelists.

URGES 15-CENT ADMISSIONS

President Freuler of Mutual Says Ten-Cent House Will Soon Be in "Jitney Class" in the Eyes of Public

By John R. Freuler,
President Mutual Film Corporation

The time is here for a general price-raising movement among the exhibitors conducting theaters with a ten-cent admission. A great many, probably most, of these theaters are giving a great deal more than ten cents' worth of amusement. Their costs of operation have considerably increased and the standards of film production have vastly improved since the day when the ten cent price became general. The public ought to pay more and it is willing to pay more.

There was a time in the early history of the motion picture when the public was glad to see a one-reel show for five cents admission. Now, for only twice the money, the public can see about a hundred times as much amusement on the screen, under better conditions, in a better house, with better projection, and the fifteen-cent price that the exhibitor should be getting now is more available than the nickel was then.

When I consider the big investment that is being made at the studios supplying the Mutual Film Corporation with its star productions, and the studios of some of our worthy competitors, and when I consider the products of their big capable institutions, the strong box office power of the present day stars, I am convinced that the ten-cent theater is rapidly passing into the past along with its busy predecessor the "five-cent show."

Make it "Fifteen Straight"

The exhibitor will find little difficulty in increasing his price to fifteen cents if he will only make an effort to make his show look like the money's worth. That is largely up to the exhibitor. The same pictures that run on Broadway in New York for prices around fifty cents a seat are being shown elsewhere at prices from ten cents on up. The pictures are the same, but the presentation makes the difference. A new coat of paint, comfortable seats, music, fresh air, cut flowers and a little politeness along with the advertising will easily make the difference between a fifteen-cent house and a ten-cent house.

It will also prove a much better policy to put in a straight fifteen-cent admission price, than to follow the line which some exhibitors have adopted of putting in an occasional special day with a twenty-five cent admission. The public likes to know what it is going to pay when it starts for the show, not when it gets to the window. The special price for a special show in a neighborhood house particularly is as destructive of good will and patronage as the old practice among five-cent houses which used to hang up a ten-cent sign when they were "holding them out."

Suggested 15-Cent Piece

The general application of a fifteen-cent admission price will be easier of course when it can be paid in one piece of money with a fifteen-cent piece. The Mutual Film Corporation originated the idea of a special fifteen-cent coin, made particularly for the benefit of the motion picture industry. The idea is growing in favor and if the exhibitors of the country will help the thing along by writing to their congressional representatives it will be a simple matter to get the necessary legislation. This movement will have the advantage of incurring no foes, as did the movement some years ago for a recoinage of the three-cent piece.

I have been a consistent advocate for the steady increase of the admission price for the motion picture theater from the beginning. It is pleasant at this time to point back to the time when at the launching of "The Diamond from the Sky" we launched a campaign for the general institution of a ten-cent admission price. That campaign succeeded admirably. The new ten-cent houses steadily pulled patronage away from the five-cent houses. The increased price carried a suggestion of higher quality which took with the public. I remember at that time I said to the exhibitors of the country in a book entitled "How to Increase Your Box Office Receipts," "Be sure to make your show look like a quarter's worth when you ask for a dime." The same rule holds good today. Make it look like more. Treat your show as though you think it better and you will have the public convinced. Ten cents is not enough money for a seat at the representative motion picture theater today. Get fifteen.

Brenon Beats His Best

Herbert Brenon is being congratulated on all sides because of the fact that his latest production, "The Lone Wolf," has now beaten the run of his previous sensational success, "War Brides," at the Broadway Theater, New York. The picturization of the Louis Joseph Vance story has gone over heavier than any big feature recently shown in New York and is undoubtedly destined to run all summer at the Broadway. "War Brides," of course, was a tremendous success and Mr. Brenon would have been well satisfied if "The Lone Wolf" had equalled its record. But now that the big thrill picture has beaten "War Brides'" record the director is feeling very good over the whole thing. The Selznick offices report a big advance demand for "The Lone Wolf" throughout the country. The ten pre-release showings in the principal cities of the United States will take place early in August and will undoubtedly be followed by a great rush of regular bookings when the picture becomes available for regular release.

When Williard Mack was induced to direct his trenchant pen into channels other than the drama it was to have been expected that he would provide something well worth while. He has written a vital and compelling story to which he has given the title "Who's Your Neighbor?" and it has been ground into celluloid and presented by the Master Drama Features, Inc. Willard Mack has given to the stage more than a score of plays, many of them likely to endure for a period much longer than the average life of work builded upon a timely topic. His contribution to the screen drama was probably prompted by the distressing Ruth Cruger mystery, which was so cleverly solved by Mrs. Grace Humiston, and follows very closely many of the phases of that drama in real life that shocked the world.

---

Alice Brady's next drama for World-Pictures is "Betsy Ross," founded upon the historic flag-making episode of Revolutionary times. This picture play carries a touching love story punctuated with heroism and adventure. It was written by H. A. Du Souchet from his own widely circulated novel of the same name. Mr. Du Souchet also wrote the vastly successful stage play, "My Friend From India."

MUTUAL'S FALL SCHEDULE

Productions Under Way for Fall Release to Include Bevy of Twinklers—Chaplin at Work on Last Mutual Picture

Mutual stars who will appear in the forthcoming fall releases issued by that company include the following well known names: Mary Miles Minter, William Russell, Gail Kane, Juliette Day, Margarita Fischer, Edna Goodrich, Ann Murdock, Julia Sanderson, Olive Tell, Charles Chaplin.

Miss Minter, whose "Melissa of the Hills" has just been released, has virtually completed "Charity Castle," the first of her productions under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham. Her next picture will be "Call to Arms."

William Russell has completed "Sands of Sacrifice," and has started work on "The Sea Master," in which his nautical role gives him a chance to be an entirely different kind of hero. Both productions are under the direction of Edward S. Sloman who has supervised the recent Russell successes, the last of which to be released was "Pride and the Man."

Juliette Day, the new addition to the Mutual-American studio forces, has about completed "Betty and the Buccaneers" and "The Rainbow Girl" has been selected for her second picture. Miss Day is under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon, who formerly directed Gail Kane.

"The Unafraid," will be Gail Kane's next production following "Souls in Pawn," scheduled for release August 6. "The Unafraid" was originally known under the working title of "For the Family Name."

At the Empire studios in Glendale, Long Island, Ann Murdock is at work on "The Impostor." "The Beautiful Adventure" and "Outcast" have already been completed.

Edna Goodrich is producing "A Daughter of Maryland," upon the completion of which it will be released with "Reputation" and "Queen X."

"The Runaways," featuring Julia Sanderson is nearly completed and her second production has been decided upon.

It was agreed when the project of presenting Frohman stars in pictures was launched by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation and Alfred Hayman, representing the Frohman interests, that there would be no releases until three subjects had been completed by the stars.

Jackies Saunders has completed "Bab, the Fixer," set for release August 13, and has left the Horkheimer studios for Honolulu, where she is spending an extended vacation.

Miss Margarita Fischer has been recuperating at San Diego from a serious illness and has been working slowly on her forthcoming production, "The Girl Who Couldn't Grow Up," under the direction of her husband, Harry Pollard.

Charles Chaplin is producing the twelfth of his Mutual specials at the Lone Star studio near Los Angeles. Chaplin has been taking nearly four months to complete his recent comedies so that the date of release of the twelfth is speculative. The title of the production has not been selected by Mr. Chaplin, and probably will not be until it is completed.

Second Selective Paramount Picture

Jack Pickford's and Louise Huff's first bow as stars in the Paramount's new "Star Series" selective booking policy to be inaugurated August 5, will be made in an adaptation of Owen Johnson's Lawrenceville story, "The Varmint," familiar to millions of Saturday Evening Post readers. Both young Paramount stars have established themselves in the favor of the picture-play public by their exceptional work in "What Money Can't Buy," Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," "Freckles," "The "Dummy" and other equally important productions. Their new vehicle is suited especially to their needs and to the importance of the inauguration of Paramount's new booking policy.

New Fox Policy

William Fox has indicated his producing plans for next season as follows, beginning Sunday, September 2:

Standard Pictures

Eight Theda Bara Superpictures under a separate and independent contract on the open market.

Eight William Farnam de luxe pictures under a separate and independent contract on the open market.

"Jack and the Beanstalk"—nine amazing reels of action, children, thrills, novelties. This picture will be booked on the open market.

"The Honor System"—the greatest human story ever told on stage or screen. This picture can be booked on the open market.

Twelve Fox Kiddie pictures. This series can be booked on the open market. Among the stories already produced that will be released in this series are "Treasure Island," "Babes in the Woods," "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp," "The Brownies,' "Mikado," "Pinafore,' "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves."

Trade shows will be held in every important exchange center of the United States, showing Standard Pictures before release dates. We will not book Standard Pictures unless the exhibitor has actually seen them on the screen. My confidence is supreme.

Fifty-Two Fox Special Features

Beginning Sunday, September 2, we will release every week one Special Feature picture, from five to six reels, each production based on a successful stage play or novel, headed by a star of box office drawing power, staged by a great director, and produced with skill and care, regardless of expense.

Comedy Pictures

Twenty to twenty-six comedies, two reels each, during 1917-1918. We will not talk or advertise them for booking purposes. We will not book our comedies until they have been seen by you. Each comedy supervision of Henry Pathe Lehrman, the master wizard of comedy making.

It is a human impossibility to guarantee more than twenty-six meritorious comedies during the next twelve months. Therefore, we have limited our output to twenty-six. We have ten of the greatest comedy pictures ever made on our shelves. We will show them to you. Our release date will be announced later.

Recapitation

Fox Film Corporation will offer the exhibitor during the coming season the following pictures:

Thirty-six Standard pictures on the open market.
Fifty-two Fox special features on contract.
Twenty to twenty-six comedies on open market.

Call at our nearest exchange and make your arrangements now. I can assure you that the two million and one half dollars that we have expended in finished productions are worthy of your earnest and immediate attention, and I advise you to call at our nearest branch office and see the pictures screened at trade shows. I have personally witnessed the first six months production and I believe they will insure the 1197-18 success of any exhibitor who is fortunate enough to secure our contract.—William Fox, President Fox Film Corporation.

Geraldine Farrar, the popular prima donna, in "The Woman God Forgot," her first Artcraft production.

Mary Pickford Play Completed

The last foot of film rolled through the camera a few days ago in the making of the new Mary Pickford-Artcraft release, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Taking into account the star herself, the story, its adaptation and its direction, there seems no reason to doubt the expectation of all connected with the production that it will take rank as Mary Pickford's greatest artistic success, and will follow the Pickford precedent of new box-office records.

It was with the greatest enthusiasm that "Our Mary" entered upon the making of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Kate Douglas Wiggin's famous story had always been one of her best-loved books, and she had many times wished that it could be her privilege to enact upon the screen the irrepressible and lovable little maid whose pranks as well as her winsome traits are so well depicted in Mrs. Wiggin's novel.

In addition there has been a continual stream of letters, addressed to the little Artcraft star, ever since she began to rise to fame, asking her to play "Rebecca." They made a strong appeal to her, in view of her own fondness for the heroine of the story. Meantime, the picture rights for "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" had been sought by many producers, for many stars, but without success. But when the rights were sought for Mary Pickford, they were readily granted.

Mrs. Wiggin's story, published in October, 1903, attained a sale of 337,000 copies in seven years. The play, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," in which Mrs. Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson collaborated, was one of the big successes of the season in which it appeared on Broadway, and met with equally great favor on the road. For the film production, the adaptation has been made by Frances Marion, well known as one of the most capable writers connected with the screen. The picture was directed by Marshall Neilan, remembered as Miss Pickford's leading man in "Madam Butterfly," and since heralded as one of the cleverest as well as one of the youngest in the directing field.

The great triumph by "America's Sweetheart" in her recent portrayal of child life, "The Poor Little Rich Girl," is still fresh in the memories of her admirers. In "Rebecca" they will see another little girl of an entirely different type—a breezy, joyous little madcap, with a heart of gold, who conquers the stern natures of two elderly maiden aunts, and finds a wonderful romance awaiting her in the little village where she goes to live with them.

In the supporting cast of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" are such well known players as Eugene O'Brien, Helen Jerome Eddy, Charles Ogle, Marjorie Daw, Mayme Kelso, Jane Wolff, Josephine Crowell, Jack MacDonald, Violet Wilkey, Frank Turner, Kate Toncray and Emma Gerdes.

Cuts Picture on Train

With ten thousand feet of the New Douglas Fairbanks Artcraft production, "Come Down to Earth" under his arm, Director John Emerson with Billy Shea, head of the assembling department, departed for New York last week to be gone three weeks. Emerson cut and titled this Fairbanks production while en route to New York, and took Billy Shea to assist in the work.

In order that they have all the facilities of the studio cutting room, arrangements were completed with Mr. Hoppe of the Santa Fe Railroad to remodel three connecting drawing rooms and grant the carpenters a free hand in making these rooms practical for John Emerson and his associates.

While in New York, Emerson will interview a number of players for his next Douglas Fairbanks cast, in addition to discussing some big stories with recognized screen authors.

Red Cross Gets First Showing

Lewis J. Selznick donated the first public showing of his first Constance Talmadge picture, "The Lesson," to the Long Beach Branch of the American Red Cross, and it was seen by a big audience at the Hotel Nassau Sunday evening, July 29.

The most beautiful scenery in any recent photoplay is claimed as the background for "Souls Adrift," a new World-Picture Brady-Made, of which Ethel Clayton is the altogether charming star. This story was photographed upon an island off the coast of Georgia, where the vegetation is tropical in its luxuriance and splendor.

America's champion grinner, Douglas Fairbanks, in his newest play, "Down to Earth."

Fairbanks August 12 Release

Douglas Fairbanks has left the sun-steeped hills and valleys of California for a vacation trip to Wyoming, where he will pursue mountain lions to their lairs.

The vacation trip follows the completion of "Down to Earth," the Fairbanks-Artcraft release of August 12. The last "shot" of this picture had hardly found its way to the developing room when Douglas hopped a rattler-de-luxe for the northwest. With him were his camera men, Victor Fleming, Bull Montana, the actor-wrestler-trainer, and a wealthy easterner named Henry Mosler who is taking a pleasure trip through the West, and was glad to include lions in his itinerary. Three hunting dogs also went along.

Fairbanks has hunted many kinds of game, but this is his first trip after mountain lions. The party is reported to have taken along enough ammunition to win of couple of battles in Europe, and its members confidently expect to come back with at least a couple of dozen lion pelts. While the athletic star is absent from the studio, Anita Loos and Joseph Henaberry, under the supervision of John Emerson, are busy on the next Fairbanks scenario—selecting the cast, ordering the settings, and getting everything in readiness so that the star can begin on his fourth Artcraft picture as soon as he returns from the wilds.

Timely Military Scenes

Scenes incident to the war predominate in the eighty-second issue of the Universal Animated Weekly, just released.

Among the scenes naval recruits are shown at their training station near San Francisco going through the various tactics that will fit them to be regular war dogs. A sham battle on Goat Island in which the boys take part adds a dramatic punch to the scenes.

Canadian veterans, home from the trenches, are pictured on a visit to a picture theater in Montreal, where the feature of the day is the recent Animated Weekly Special devoted to General Pershing's reception in France.

Other scenes are devoted to the construction of U. S. Cantonments at Yaphank, Long Island, where 40,000 men will be prepared at a time for field service; the recent big recruiting rally in Brooklyn led by Sergt. Richard Fitzgerald of the Canadian Highlanders and an unusually effective series of pictures showing a group of young cadets from St. Agnes Convent going through a maze of military convolutions with the precision and sangfroid of grizzled veterans. Hy Mayer contributes his usual timely cartoon feature.

Salisbury a Bluebird

Monroe Salisbury had been added to the acting forces at the Bluebird studios.

Salisbury, by reason of his long experience, both on the legitimate stage and in filmdom, is one of the most talented picture actors of the present day, and has a host of admirers throughout the land.

He appeared in the first Lasky picture, "The Squaw Man," playing with Dustin Farnum, and also was the lead in "The Goose Girl," one of the first of Marguerite Clark's vehicles. One of Salisbury's most recent notable characterizations was that of "Alessandro," leading role in the screen production of Helen Hunt Jackson's beautiful story, "Ramona." He also made a distinct hit as "Conrad La Grange" in "The Eyes of the World" and subsequently played with George Beban.

League Discourages Donations

Vitagraph started something when it donated a $1,000 check to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Not that the league objected to receiving $1,000, but they discussed the question for some time at the last session of the National Convention, just passed, and it was decided to discourage manufacturers from the practice of making cash donations rather than exhibiting at the exposition.

Although the Motion Picture News mentioned Vitagraph's elaborate booth at the Chicago show, the fact is that Vitagraph made no exhibit there at all, due to the fact that the company was unable to send any of its stars to Chicago at that time.

A millionaire's magnificent steam yacht burning to the water line at sea is one of the big pictorial effects of "Souls Adrift," a mid-August publication of World-Pictures, Brady-Made. Ethel Clayton is the star of this play, and the setting a tropical island.

"BABBLING TONGUES" READY

Ivan Film Productions Soon to Release Its Second Big Photoplay—To Have Especially Arranged Musical Accompaniment.

"Set society to glancing slyly at a man and a woman whose relationship to each other is really innocent and there is started the impalpable power of suggestive force of whispered opinion, rising into a whirlwind of babbling tongues which will blow its victims giddily into the arms of an awful tragedy."

The above paragraph is the basic argument of the scenario of "Babbling Tongues," the second production of the Ivan Film Corporation.

James Morrison, Grace Valentine, Arthur Donaldson play the leading parts, and such artists as Paul Capellani, Louise Beaudet, Carolyn Birch and Gladden James support them.

The story is one dealing with the trials and vicissitudes brought on by inconsiderate remarks and actions of people, not exactly malicious, yet so poignant in their effect, that they bring death to a noble and kind man, and the destruction of the peace of others who were entitled by their inherent virtues to happiness. Then, being whipped and scourged by evil tongues out from the shelter of society, the victims find happiness and peace in each other's arms, conscious of the all-sufficiency of a pure love tried as by fire.

"Babbling Tongues," full of new situations and climaxes, will have a specially arranged musical accompaniment, the synchronization of which with the action of the picture has been entrusted to George W. Beynon. His work in Morosco's "Peer Gynt," in Famous Players Company, Lasky Company and Paramount, is unquestionably of great value as a musical contribution to moving-picturedom.

"Let me say," he says, "that 'Babbling Tongues' is one of the best pictures I have ever seen, and by all means the greatest in its capacity for a musical adaptation.

"The bright beginning calls for a light vein of music, such as waltz and bright intermezzo, with a frivolous twist to the domestic scene of the maid and the butler. Gradually, as the tongues begin a-babbling, there comes an undertone of discontent, mutterings and sinister crashings. The play moves quickly into a tragedy, and the music becomes ponderous, interwoven with broken melodies and dissonant chords, themes and counter themes striving one against another. Steadily and surely the play develops, and the music grows in its dignity of purpose, assuming a grandeur and a mysterious character, with an increasing undercurrent of chattering as the darts of the babbling tongues pierce to the quick.

Grace Valentine, attractive heroine of the new Ivan Film production, "Babbling Tongues," which is soon to be released as that company's second feature, and a scene from the play.

Three of the big guns responsible for Ivan's "Babbling Tongues." From the left, Arthur Donaldson, James Morrison and William Humphrey, director.

"Finally, as the plot moves swiftly to its close, the music rises in a mighty crescendo of fear and foreboding, commanding in its dignity, compelling in its force, and, reaching the zenith of its fearsomeness at the climax of the story, suddenly and with abruptness —stops.

"A happy surprise follows, and the theme shouts out its triumph, crying out its joy, shaming the backbiting, venomous motives, and brings the picture to its happy ending."

Organ for Foreign Buyers

J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York, are issuing a bulletin for circulation among buyers of films in all countries outside the United States. The bulletin takes the form of an illustrated catalogue fully descriptive of a large list of films released on the open market. The nature of the bulletin will at once be realized when it is stated that Brockliss handles the worlds rights of such recent notable successes as "The Deemster," "The Barrier," the Billy West Comedies, "The Land of the Rising Sun," the U. S. Navy, "The Canadian Army," the A-Kay Productions, Motoy Comedies and many others.

Mr. Brockliss, president of the company, is one of the world's pioneer film men, his business having been established in London, England, many years ago. He has a list of film buyers in all parts of the habitable globe; and in New York at the present time ranks as perhaps the largest operator in the foreign markets.

A two-reel picture practically completed in six working hours is the record established by Director Burton George, who has just finished the staging of "In the Same Boat," a Universal Nestor comedy starring Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran.

August Vitagraph Features

V. L. S. E., the distributing medium of Greater Vitagraph product, announces its August list of four features, the first of which, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," will be released on the sixth. The others on the schedule are "Mary Jane's Pa," "Transgression," and "The Divorcee." The official announcement from V. L. S. E. contains the following:

August 6—"The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," adapted from the most daring play ever written by Sir Arthur W. Pinero. It is the story of a woman whose heart was good, but who died a victim of her own indiscretions and the prejudice these engendered. The stage play, made famous here and abroad by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, is exceeded in heart grips and soul thrills by the extraordinary production Vitagraph has given it. Sir George Alexander and Miss Hilda Moore, two of the greatest living artists of the English-speaking stage, are cast in the leading roles.

August 13—"Mary Jane's Pa," a masterful screen version of Edith Ellis, delightful drama in which Henry E. Dixey scored one of his greatest successes as a star of the legitimate stage. A brilliant, sparkling story in the original, it has been even bettered under the artistic treatment given to it by W. P. S. Earle, director of "Within the Law" and assistant to J. Stuart Blackton in the production of "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation." Marc MacDermott, who played the Turkish nobleman in the fine satire, "The Sixteenth Wife," appears in the title role and his portrayal is said to be one of the best of his career. Mildred Manning plays the part of Mary Jane and Eulalie Jensen, Templar Saxe, William Dunn and Cleo Ayres, complete an all-star cast.

August 20—"Transgression," a tale of modern politics and chicanery, in which the melodramatic interest is highly developed. Earle Williams plays the role of mayor of a great city, a man of ideals, who stakes his own career in his devotion to a younger brother accused of murder. Corinne Griffith plays opposite to Mr. Williams. Two of the finest pieces of acting in the play are those of Webster Campbell and Florence Billings. "Mother' Mary Maurice, in this picture, celebrates her golden jubilee as an artist, this marking her fiftieth anniversay on the stage.

August 27—"The Divorcee," with Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburgh in the featured roles, is a skillfully handled satire on the Reno divorce colony as it was in its palmy days. There is a fund of humor, of near-tragedy and fine riding in the picture and its story is one that handles a delicate subject in an inoffensive manner.

The September releases of Vitagraph have all been listed and the titles of these soon will be announced.

Picture Demonstrates old Axiom

That history can be stranger than fiction is remarkably demonstrated in Herbert Brenon's big production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which is rapidly nearing completion at the Brenon Studios. This picture is an authentic screen story of the stirring events that have happened in Russia during the past few months, yet it is as weird and fantastic as the wildest dream of a scenario creator. Iliodor, the mad monk, who played an important role in the recent revolutionary events, is playing himself in "The Fall of the Romanoffs," and it is his revelations that form the basis of the story that will be unfolded on the screen.

In "The Fall of the Romanoffs," Herbert Brenon is giving to the world at large the mad monk's story of the events which hastened the revolution: The realization of the people that they were being tricked and cheated by their rulers, that their destinies were being presided over by an unscrupulous peasant, a traitor to Russia, and the interests of the Russian people, and that the czar and czarina were in treacherous communication with the enemy and were about to betray their country into the hands of the enemy by signing a separate peace with Germany and forming a treacherous alliance regardless of the deepest interests of Russia and their pledged word with the allies.

Mr. Brenon in his picture is producing these events with all possible accuracy so not only will the picture be a form of entertainment but an education and a little essay, so to speak, of these historical events in Russia. He traces, too, from historical sources, the extraordinary career of the charlatan, Rasputin, who had no claim to any honors whatsoever, no education and no purpose save to gain his own selfish ends.

Stranger than fiction is this tale of modern Russia. Events have taken place there of late that have astonished the world, and caused it to gasp with wonder. It is a remarkable story from first to last, and one that lends itself to the screen with peculiar aptitude. But the strength of Mr. Brenon's new picture, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," lies not only in that it is a tale of real human beings, people who have lived through one of the most dramatic periods in history, but in that from start to finish it is true and that it is not a truth of bygone days but of today.

Pugilist Joins Big "U"

George Marshall, director of western dramas for Universal, has added Al Kaufman, the well known pugilist, to his company.

Kaufman, who stands six feet two inches and weighs two hundred and five pounds, has had a large following in this country since 1904 when he first gave evidence of real prowess in the squared circle. He has faced many of the best heavyweights in the business, and in 1909 gained much prestige by battling Jack Johnson to a standstill.

Al Kaufman is not new to the motion picture game, having made his first appearance eight years ago with the Lubin company. During the past twelve months he has been in the employ of the Keystone comedy company.

"Song Hit in Photoplay"

The latest "Song Hit in Photoplay" number to be featured by Universal in co-operation with Waterson, Berlin & Snyder, is "Indiana," which will be presented by Claire Rochester, well known to vaudeville audiences.

It has a swinging military air, easy to march to, and the words of the lyric, while exploiting the special charms of the good old Hoosier state, can be twisted to fit almost any regiment.

Many of the troops embarking for France have secured copies of "Indiana," and it is expected that the special photoplay featuring the song will prove equally popular.

Scenes from Herbert Brennon's remarkable Russian revolution drama, "The Fall of the Romanoffs."

History to Be Seen in "Romanoffs"

Aside from the fact that Herbert Brenon's latest production, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," is to be a notable feature and one that promises to take its place in the constellation of great pictures, a resume of its cast of characters will be of great interest since the list includes a half dozen famous international figures. The Czar and the Kaiser are both important characters in the story, and other notables who figure prominently in the action are the Czarina, the Grand Duke Nicholas, Prince Felix, Rasputin and, of course, Iliodor, the mad monk—this role being assumed by Iliodor, the real character.

All of these roles are being played by widely known film players although in each instance particular care has been taken by Mr. Brenon to secure a man who as nearly as possible resembles the famous original. Edward Connelly is credited with a really remarkable characterization as Rasputin, the religious impostor, who was responsible directly for the overthrow of the Romanoffs dynasty. Nance O'Neil, famous picture star, is the Czarina. She gives an impressive presentation of the Empress of Russia, now reduced to one of the common people by the recent revolution. Alfred Hickman is the Czar, while George Duenenberg, a well-known French actor, was strangely enough chosen to play the Kaiser. Although the task is probably not to his liking, still he will be revealed on the screen as a lifelike War Lord. Charles Craig, playing the heroic Grand Duke Nicholas, is another true-to-life portrayal, while Conway Tearle is receiving wide praise from those who have seen advance portions of the feature for his characterization of Prince Felix. With a story absolutely true to recent history and the principal, that of Iliodor, the mad monk, played by the real monk, "The Fall of the Romanoffs" gives every promise of being a great screen triumph.

Laboratory Work Improving Fast

"The war has brought another American advance and it is in motion picture laboratory work. Up to 1914 the 'finish' of European positive film, especially on the big features, was the despair of the dark-room workers of this side, but 1917 sees American laboratory work the equal of the foreign."

This is the significant statement of Charles C. Field, a motion picture laboratory expert of 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, who goes on to say:

"When announcement was made in former days of the release in this country of a great Italian or French spectacle film, American film men in all lines rushed down to the advance showing. The producing people were not the only ones interested, because marvelous as the 'big scenes' in their handling were to our studio workers, more marvelous were the exquisite tints and tones to the American laboratory workers.

"But they don't marvel any more. They equal it. That seems to be the American war-time idea regarding anything European that has to do with dyes and chemicals, and so the film laboratory man has joined his American co-worker in all fields of laboratory endeavor and used the war years to bring his standard of perfection up to that of the foreign film manufacturers'. The result is that there are pictures showing on Broadway today, made in America from start to finish, that give way to no European feature in any branch of workmanship."

Here's Something New

Carl Anderson, president of Paralta Plays, Inc., who was actively identified with the two years most exhaustive investigation of the motion picture industry on which the Paralta Plan was founded, has created a new office in motion picture production—the executive director.

Joseph B. Maxwell, Paralta executive director.

This functionary will be an all powerful man in the Paralta management and will be subject only to the action of the board of directors. He will have general supervision of efficiency men, for it is the purpose of Paralta to carry its investigations to their ultimate conclusion and to subject the production end of the industry to the same crucial inquiry that was applied to distribution and exhibition.

Mr. Anderson and the executive committee of the Board of Directors of Paralta not only created this office but they filled it, immediately appointing Joseph B. Maxwell to the position.

Mr. Maxwell has been for many years widely known as the greatest producer of feature vaudeville acts in this country and has accumulated a fortune in this branch of constructive amusement enterprise. In the development of this work he has maintained a small private theater for rehearsals and a costume department, and has managed his business on lines of such great efficiency and economy that he has attracted the attention of the entire theatrical profession.

The appointment of Mr. Maxwell to the position of executive director of Paralta is in line with the policy of this company to fill all executive positions with experienced theatrical men of high standing whose exceptional abilities are well known. This company believes that the motion picture industry is fast coming to follow well tried theatrical business methods, especially in connection with productions, and is therefore placing its production division under the direction of an executive supervisor clothed with sufficient power to make his work effective.

Mr. Maxwell's many years of experience as a theatrical producer especially qualifies him for the office he has undertaken to fill. He is also in full sympathy with the work before him, for he is one of those practical minds who cannot see why a picture that is scheduled to cost $50,000 on liberal estimates, should show a cost of $65,000 to $70,000, or more, when the balance sheet is struck.

Mr. Maxwell will make his headquarters in New York, but he will spend much of his time on the coast, where he will do a great deal of investigating to establish a system of cost computation in relation to picture production. He will also go deeply into exhibition, his long experience as a showman making this branch of the industry particularly interesting to him.

Mr. Anderson has also engaged Edward Hemmer as chief of the Eastern scenario department. Mr. Hemmer has been identified with Artcraft, representing Mary Pickford's interest, and has been noted for his particular aptness in selecting stories subject to exceptional development on the screen.

May Head Own Company

Since it became generally known that Virginia Pearson's contract with William Fox is about to expire, the popular star has received several flattering offers from well-known producers who are seeking her services for pretentious film productions.

Although Miss Pearson would neither deny nor affirm it, the rumor that she is considering an offer which will place her at the head of her own producing organization, releasing through one of the big distributing concerns, appears to be well founded.

Miss Pearson has been appearing under the Fox banner for over a year and has become one of the most popular box office attractions in the industry. Among her most prominent characterizations during this time were those presented in "Blazing Love," "Tortured Heart," "Hypocrisy," "The War Bride's Secret," "The Bitter Truth," "Sister Against Sister," "Royal Romance," and other well-known film successes. Prior to her affiliation with Fox, Miss Pearson appeared under the Vitagraph brand, coming to that studio after a successful stage career, during which time she attracted wide attention as the creator of the first vampire role in "A Fool There Was."

Latest Butterfly from "Best Seller"

Mignon Anderson is the star of the Butterfly feature released July 30. She has the leading role in "A Wife on Trial," a five-part drama taken from Margaret Widdemer's novel, "The Rose Garden Husband," which ranked as one of the best sellers a season or two ago.

In writing the book from which "A Wife on Trial" is adapted, Margaret Widdemer was credited with evolving an unusually entertaining story out of elements that might easily have become unsympathetic in less skillful hands. Miss Baldwin has handled the story in a way to bring out its essential atmosphere, at the same time strengthening the plot. Mignon Anderson's characterization of the pretty library clerk, whose ambition to own a rose garden results in one of the strangest marriages ever conceived of, rings true to life.

Doris Schroeder Joins "U"

Miss Doris Schroeder, well known and popular among scenario scribes, has assumed charge of the reading staff of Col. J. E. Brady's manuscript department at the Universal studios.

Miss Schroeder was formerly associated with the Vitagraph scenario department, of which she was editor of their Pacific Coast studios. Previous to joining the Universal staff Miss Schreoder had been engaged for almost a year as a feature play writer for the American Film Company.

The Man Inside the Booth

PROJECTION DEPARTMENT, CONDUCTED BY E. C. SCOBEY

THIS department is a permanent feature of MOTOGRAPHY. Its editor, Mr. Scobey, is a former secretary and treasurer of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local No. 194, I. A. T. S. E., and was formerly associated with the Central Film Service Company of Indianapolis. He is vice-president of the Central Labor Union of Indianapolis, the first operator to be so honored. The idea is to make this department just as helpful as possible to operators and exhibitors. Send your questions and problems to Mr. Scobey. He is sure to give you valuable information. Address, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Has New Device

I am a reader of your department and I have been very much interested in the different articles that I have seen there. The manager of the theater where I am employed had an Automatic Signal Device for Moving Picture Machine Operators installed on the Powers 6A machines in the booth. We used the device for three weeks and then took them off, as the manager was not satisfied with them.

I got interested in the principal of the device and since that time I have installed a device of my own which I find works very satisfactorily in every respect. I will give you an outline of the one that I installed and if you think it worth while you can pass it on to the department. To start with, I take a piece of tin foil six inches long after rewinding the film so that the tail piece is out on the rewind, and as the last frame of the picture shows at the hub of the reel I start to count and count back three cranks of the rewind. At this point I apply the tin foil to the film by using film cement. The tin foil is applied on the emulsion side of the film and extends from the edge of the film to the edge of the picture, and is a strip about six inches long. I rewind back ten cranks of the rewind from where I applied the first piece of tin foil and apply another piece the same way as the first. This second piece, of course, comes through the machine first (remember the tin foil is at the tail of the reel), and is used as a warning to light the lamp on the other machine. The first piece that was put on comes off last and is used as a warning to start the other machine. So far for the film end of the device.

The rest of the contraption is installed as follows—connect three dry cells in series, and run a bell wire from the carbon side to a buzzer or bell (I use a buzzer), and from the buzzer or bell to the top magazine of each machine. Then run the bell wire from the carbon side of the battery to the frame of the machines. This wire can be attached to any part of the head or frame of the machines.

Next insulate the top magazine from the rest of the machine. I used card board for an insulator. I bent a piece of the card board across the head plate of the machine and let it extend over so that it reached below the flanges of the magazine. Then I punched two holes to allow the passage of the bolts that hold the magazine to the head. Next I cut two short pieces of mica from a piece of tube mica to use as an insulator, so that the bolts and the flanges of the magazine would not touch each other. The above process applies to both machines.

The device is now ready to use. In preparing the reels apply the tin foil to each reel as described above. On the 6A machines I have found that I had to apply more tension to the reel in the top magazine, so that the film would not run slack from the magazine rollers to the top sprocket of the head. On the 6B machine, however, the new tension device is strong enough to take care of this. The batteries and buzzer can be located any place that is convenient. I have mine located at the rewind bench. The best place to attach the zinc side of the battery to the frame of the machine is at the ground connection on the frame located between the front legs. The rollers of the magazine must be kept clean and free from dirt and dust, otherwise the tinfoil will not make a contact when passing through them.

I have experimented with several kinds of cement and find that the Bull Dog cement gives the best results for fastening the tin foil to the film. The firm that is manufacturing the device that was first put on the machines have tried to cause me trouble. They ordered me to take my device off, but I am still using it, and if any of the operators care to try it I think that they will find it an excellent substitute for the punch that has been causing so much trouble to the exchanges, managers and patrons of the theaters.—Sam E. Fear, Starland Theater, Anderson, Indiana.

Your letter in regard to the attachment for a warning device for film was received several weeks ago and the only reason that I have not printed it sooner was that I had had an operator experimenting on your suggestion and at this time can say that it works as nearly perfect as any of the numerous devices I have seen used. It certainly will cause a stop to the punching of film if the operators will try it. I do not know what caused the argument between you and the company that is manufacturing the device that you mention, but I do know that as long as you are using your device for your own benefit and not trying to sell it to anyone, they can not bother you one bit. The only fault that I could find with your device would be that in using it the operator will have to watch the amount of tin foil he uses on the film and be sure that it is firmly attached. I find that to get the best result that six inches are plenty and that if more is used the results are not as good. I also find that the speed of the machine has no effect on the workings of the device.

Several weeks ago there was mention made in the projection department of a sample of film cement sent in by an operator in Wisconsin and at that time I said that I could not recommend it until I had given it a fair test and was satisfied that it would do all that was claimed for it, namely, that it would make a perfect patch without scraping the emulsion from the film.

I took a reel of advertising film and made eight patches on it with the cement and that reel has been in active service for the last three weeks at a house that runs in the evenings only. The patches were made according to the directions sent with the cement and at the end of the third day one of them came loose and since then all but one of them have come loose. I think that the party that made the cement was honest in his convictions when he thought that he had discovered a new cement, but as I said in the other article on the subject, I have never seen a cement yet that would make a good patch without scraping the emulsion from the film and I do not believe that anyone else has found one either.

There may be one discovered some day but up to date it is not on the market. No doubt the party that was experimenting with the cement was only using the film for one day at a time.

The Exhibitors' Supply Company, of Indianapolis, Indiana, have just closed a contract with the Central Amusement Company, also of that city, for two of the latest model Simplex machines for the new Alhambra Theater. The Exhibitors' Supply Company is a new concern in the field, and is a branch of the Exhibitors' Supply Company of Chicago, Illinois.

WORLD STARS DRAW CROWDS

Brady Pleased at Ovations World Players Received at Chicago Coliseum—Thinks It Speaks Well for Program System

"If ever my mind had carried a shadow of doubt regarding the program system as the survival of the fittest, Chicago would have dispelled that fleeting shadow for all time," declared Director General William A. Brady, of World Pictures, following his return from the convention and exposition. Resuming, Mr. Brady said:

"This story I am about to tell is not a case of brag, but a recital of hard, cold facts. It is not a boost of World Pictures for themselves but as they stand for a principle—and here are the details:

"Until the day set aside for us, the Coliseum had been full but not uncomfortably so. In the daytime the big edifice had been sparsely occupied and at night only fairly full. On World Pictures day the crowds began to pour in as soon as the doors were opened, and by three in the afternoon the assembled multitude were setting up a clamor for our stars.

"When Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge and Alice Brady arrived at half past eight that evening they had to be smuggled in through a side entrance because the regular avenues were choked with men, women and children who could no longer get in and were having a hard time forcing their way back across the sidewalk into the street.

"Inside, the mass of people was so dense that nobody could move without help from the police and firemen, of whom there were forty extra members on duty.

"The enthusiasm with which the World's stars were received was such that it will never be forgotten by any of those present, and after the reception if you wanted to locate Miss Elvidge, Mr. Blackwell or Miss Brady, all you had to do was to look at the spot or spots where the people were jammed in so they could not move.

"Now comes the most remarkable part of the narrative: We did not decide to send any of our stars to Chicago until the day before the exposition opened. It is a serious business matter to pause in the making of so much as a single picture, and as our stars work all the time in our plan of efficiency, the visit of three World artists meant the stopping of three pictures.

"Our publicity manager left New York on Sunday, one day after the exposition opened. He had not sent a line or a photograph to the newspapers in advance, and did not know who were to be the World attractions until he arrived on the spot.

"Thus, we broke every record of attendance and attention, by a wide margin, and the only way I can account for it is upon the theory that the stars on a thoroughly well established program, appearing before the same audiences every week or oftener, in a great number of theaters, establish a popularity enormously outdistancing that of the overpaid stars of special features coming around once in a while—sometimes with a success and sometimes without.

"We made no effort at all to get the result that came to us, and it was doubly gratifying on that account. It not alone sealed the wonderful popularity of World pictures and stars, but proved a theory to which we have adhered faithfully in the face of criticism that has often amounted to reproach."

NO EXPORT OF DAMAGED FILM

Government Officials Request Picture Producers and Distributors to Refrain from Selling Mutilated Film Until Close of War

Government officials, acting upon the suggestion of Walter W. Irwin, treasurer, secretary and general manager of V. L. S. E., have requested every representative motion picture producer and distributor in the country to refrain from selling mutilated motion picture films to any person, whatsoever, until after the termination of the war. Every big producer and distributor has agreed to co-operate with the government in this matter.

During the recent annual convention of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, held at Chicago, Mr. Irwin served notice upon his colleagues numbered among the magnates of the business that information had come to him which tended to prove that Germany and her allies had secret agents in this country who were attempting to corner the market of disused and mutilated films which they were using for the manufacture of high explosives.

The basis of motion picture films is gun cotton which also is the basis of nearly every high explosive. It is understood that Germany and her allies are experiencing a shortage in gun cotton to such an extent that they are prepared to pay fabulous sums for any substance of which gun cotton is a component part.

Just as soon as a motion picture film producing or distributing company receives a report from an exhibitor or from a branch office that a print of a picture has been damaged, the print is called in, "junked," and placed in storage. There are many millions of feet of damaged film in storage. In one western city it is declared that there is an entire storage warehouse given over to the storage of damaged film and it also is declared that the secret agents of Germany have been endeavoring to negotiate for this tremendous supply, offering as high as forty-two cents a pound for it as against the usual market price of about eighteen cents a pound.

According to the preliminary investigation the damaged film stock which has fallen into the hands of the German secret agents has been shipped to Germany via the Scandanavian countries and has been shipped as motion pictures to be used for exhibition purposes. Through shipment in this manner it has passed the government officials without question.

Hereafter all motion picture films will be subject to strict examination before shipment. If any are found to be damaged so as to be worthless for exhibition purposes they will be barred from shipment.

The Exhibitor and The Story

THEATER MEN CAN CO-OPERATE WITH PRODUCER—NEW YORK MANAGER TALKS

By Mildred Considine

A PRODUCING concern has come to the front and offered the exhibitor an unlimited opportunity and it is up to every theater man to avail himself of it.

"As the relations of producer and exhibitor are beginning to become those of co-operation instead of commercial enmity, it would not only be practical but beneficial for the producer to request a representative exhibitor to pass upon a short synopsis before a story is put into picture form," says Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Greater Vitagraph.

Evidence enough that a new regime is in order, is it not? And very timely, too, I would say, for some solution to the chaotic state of affairs in the picture industry is absolutely necessary.

"Story Most Important Factor"—Irwin

"The story is the most important factor of a picture," Mr. Irwin goes on to say. "It is the basic foundation, and without a good one, no director, no matter how clever he is, nor how good a cast he has to work with, can turn out a meritorious picture!"

The question came up regarding original scenarios by special screen writers, and the relative value of adaptations of noted works.

"So far the adaptations of some of the works of noted authors have not proved successful because they have not given the serious attention to the scenarios that they have employed in their literary works," Mr. Irwin told me.

Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities," what a beautiful picture it was! The director, Frank Lloyd, modestly admits that he subordinated himself to the author, yet his brain is evident in every foot of the picture. Nor was any the less credit due him because he did not have his finger in the pie of writing it over. Therein lies the secret of a successful photoplay. When a book is purchased for adaptation, it is handed to a continuity writer, who, finding it seriously lacking in the material which according to his opinion belongs to every picture, attempts to combine it with various ideas of his own, and the result is a hodge-podge that is neither one thing nor the other . . . then the director finishes the job. Neither of the authors hit upon his ideas and he promptly rips and tears it into a thousand pieces, putting it together with his own material and the result is a hit-and-miss affair that is about as understandable as a Futurist picture.

Three people cannot write the same story . . . unless they do it in collaboration! Every creator of stories should know the technique of the screen and put his own ideas into a working script—or continuity—that a director can go to work upon without revision. This is imperative. Then and then only will we have good stories!

I saw a picture the other evening that illustrated very clearly the disastrous effects of a poor story that served as the vehicle of a well-known star who was making her first advent into pictures. The effort was pathetic, and very unfair to the public. It seemed to me that there was no honesty behind the production. The whole idea was to exploit the star regardless of what the result would be and it was an awful conglomeration of nothingness. I nearly wept in mortification for the star, for every natural charm that she possessed was obliterated by the inconsequential trash that she waded about in. Luckily I was a guest of the management, or I should have been prompted to demand a return of at least fourteen of the fifteen cents required for admission.

"The Barrier" is a good example of a successful scenario. The actors in it are practically unknown with the exception of one or two, yet I have never seen a better picture. It was directed by the author, not rewritten by the director. The electric sign read "The Barrier, by Rex Beach." In every instance the author's name was the only one featured, yet I don't believe that anyone had cause to complain. It was virile, filled with red-blooded people who lived and who sounded the depths of your emotions at every turn and it left you with a satisfied feeling that your evening had been put to good account.

Not that I am an advocate of featuring the author. This would be foolish in most cases for the ordinary picture public isn't interested in him, but this picture proves that a picture can be a success without featuring a star to the obliteration of everything else.

New York Rialto's Director Talks

I asked S. L. Rothapfel of the Rialto Theater, New York, what his idea was regarding the relative value of stars and authors.

"Every exhibitor likes to book a well-known star when he can," Mr. Rothapfel said, "and it stands to reason that an established screen favorite has a box office advantage over players of lesser reputation, but it has been my experience that if a star is not provided with a good story, both star and theater will notice the bad effect of the inferior vehicle.

"Some of the pictures which have pleased the patrons of the Rialto the most were selected because they told a clean, wholesome, light-hearted story, even though not a player in the cast was of stellar rank. The time has arrived when that kind of a story will please more patrons of the silent drama than any other. The grim and menacing character of the news in the daily papers is driving the public to seek something in the way of entertainment which will come as a relief and relaxation from the horrible conflict into which our nation has been drawn.

"The value of an author's name in connection with a picture varies in accordance with the author's reputation.

"To my notion it would be unfair to the producer if the exhibitor tried to pass upon screen stories before they were put into film form. The exhibitor must deal with the finished product. But the producer must be on the look-out for stories that deal with the many likable qualities common to most of mankind. Let him play upon the simple emotions, let him make sure that his plots are developed with some degree of artistry and subtilely, let him spread all the laughter and sunshine possible, and he won't have to consult the exhibitor beforehand. The exhibitor will buy his pictures and the great warm-hearted, amusement-loving public will pay him back a thousand fold!"

Mr. Rothapfel's message is the reiteration of what every other exhibitor in the country should convey to the producers of the pictures that he uses in his theaters!

New Moreno Picture Ready

On July 30, Greater Vitagraph will release another of its "sure-fire" box office attractions in the form of a scintillating story of the great out-doors by Alvah Milton Kerr, called "By Right of Possession." Featured in this new Blue Ribbon feature are Mary Anderson and Antonio Moreno, who demonstrated their abilities as box office magnets in "The Magnificent Meddler."

Miss Anderson is seen as a self-reliant girl of the West who is confronted with the trials and tribulations of managing a mine which she has inherited. To add to her troubles she takes possession, while a violent labor riot is in progress, but she succeeds in quelling the disturbance and bringing the strike to an end.

During the period of turmoil, the girl meets the sheriff, played by Antonio Moreno. She is impressed with his stalwart manliness and after rescuing him from a precraious situation, a realization of love comes to both. Through a misunderstanding the lovers are parted only to be reconciled through the sheriff's heroism and the ingenuity of a mutual friend.

Included in the picture is a vividly reproduced cattle stampede in which hundreds of cattle were used, the filming of which consumed several weeks owing to the indisposition of the "beefers" to disport themselves before the camera. There are a great many underground shots showing the workings of a big mine and there are also some exterior shots filmed in the Sierra Nevadas, which lend much atmosphere to the offering and greatly enhance its appeal.

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Civilization Pioneer Film Corporation, who has recently acquired the exclusive distributing rights for the sensational photodrama based on pre-natal influence entitled "Hate," produced by the Fairmount Film Corporation, reports that this picture has established a new record for summer business. Among the big circuits which have already contracted for this picture are the Loew chain, which have booked it solid for sixty-five days for the whole chain. Several other circuits are at the present time negotiating for a run on this picture.

---

Millard Webb has been engaged by Douglas Fairbanks to assist John Emerson in the staging of his Artcraft productions. Mr. Webb closed a successful three-year engagement with co-directors C. M. and S. A. Franklin, starting at the Triangle and terminating at the Fox Western studio, to accept the offer from Douglas Fairbanks. Some of his best work with the Franklins was assisting in the preparation of the scenarios for "Jack and the Bean Stalk" and "Treasure Island," in addition to taking an active part in their picturizations.

New Standard Office

The Standard Film Corporation, distributing the Art Dramas Program for numerous states in the northwest, has just opened a new office in Omaha, Nebraska. C. W. Taylor, who is in charge, was formerly manager of the General Film Company's exchange in Omaha.

Woods Engaged by Lasky

Frank E. Woods has been engaged as general manager of productions of the Lasky Company under Director General Cecil De Mille. Mr. Woods is the author of the original scenario of "The Birth of a Nation" and was former general manager for D. W. Griffith and supervisor of productions of the Fine Arts Studios.

As the right hand man of David W. Griffith, with whom he was in intimate association at the Fine Arts Studios, Mr. Woods did excellent work in the supervision, selection and preparation of material for production and in the actual assisting of the various directors in the staging of their photoplays. His activities under the new arrangement will be practically the same and he will occupy a similar position on the west coast to that which is now held by Hugh Ford in the eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"Hell's Belles"

"Hell's Belles," new Mutual special for immediate release, a twenty-minute review of the dress parade and evolutions of the Forty-eighth Highlanders, crack Canadian regiment that fought at Vimy Ridge, constitutes one of the principal picture news features of recent issue.

The famous regiment appeared in Grant Park, Chicago, Monday morning and the Mutual's five hundred foot picture was screened the same evening.

"Hell's Belles" was the name given the Forty-eighth by Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, after the Scots had cut up his troops in disgraceful fashion during fighting along the Somme and in a finish battle with the bayonet at Laengemarck, during which the Forty-eighth lost half its strength but wiped out three times their number of the enemy. The regiment has been again recruited in Canada to nearly its full strength and is shortly to return to France.

"Hell's Belles" is of historical importance since it pictures the first body of British troops that has carried arms on American soil for over a century.

Chicago bookings on the picture were heavy, and immediate orders for bookings began coming in from Toronto and all parts of Canada, as well as from many cities of the United States.

Dowlan, Metro Director

The latest addition to the directing staff of Metro Pictures Corporation is William C. Dowlan. Mr. Dowlan recently came from California, where he had been working with the American-Mutual forces, and was at once engaged by B. A. Rolfe to assist in the production of Metro wonderplays at the Metro studio, 3 West Sixty-first street, New York.

Mr. Dowlan has been director of many important photodramas. For many years he was with Universal, both as actor and director. He played De Maupras in "Richelieu" under Alan Dwan's direction, and himself directed such stars as Violet McMillan, Carter De Haven and Flora Parker De Haven. With the last named artists he produced the six-reel feature, "The College Orphan." "The Madcap" was another of his successes. For American-Mutual he directed Mary Miles Minter in "Youth's Endearing Charm," Richard Bennett in "And the Law Says," others being "The Light" and "The Lawmaker."

What Theater Men Are Doing

NEWS FROM EXHIBITORS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

This is a department of, by and for exhibitors. We want YOU represented here. Other managers and proprietors of picture theaters want to hear YOUR experiences, your opinions and your advice. Write to this department telling us your story, how you started, how you grew and all about your theater and how you manage it. Mention your advertising methods and your lobby displays. If possible send in photographs of yourself and your house. Address, The Forum, MOTOGRAPHY, Chicago.

Exhibitor Adds Another House

THE Apollo theater, Princeton's (Illinois) oldest and largest playhouse, has passed into the hands of the Taylor circuit, when a five year lease was signed for the rental of the theater to Chris Taylor, a Kewanee showman of thirty years' experience. Mrs. Thomas B. Henderson, who has bee n running the house since she canceled the Allardt & Codd lease in February, has turned over the control of the theater to Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Taylor has announced that during the summer the Apollo will be conducted as a moving picture house, but beginning next September it will also be devoted to vaudeville and legitimate drama. The theater has been closed for a few minor changes in the lighting arrangement. During August extensive improvements will be made in the building and the house will be closed except on Saturdays. It will reopen on full time fair week.

Mr. Taylor is an old and successful showman. For the last ten years he has been located in Kewanee, where he is the manager of the new Rialto and Dreamland theaters and Windmont Park.

Crowds See Classic in Chicago

Exhibitors, in the downtown section at least, of Chicago are finding that classics pay. The last evidence of this was found in the presentation of Pathe's version of "Les Miserables," the famous novel by the French writer, Victor Hugo, at Orchestra Hall, under the supervision of Tom North, of Pathe's super feature department.

The first presentation occurred on Sunday night, July 15. On the second evening, Monday, the crowds were unable to gain admittance to the big auditorium, which seats 2,856 people. The admission charged was twenty-five and fifty cents.

The accompanying photographs are the best evidence of the manner in which patrons flocked to see the classic film. The pictures were taken at 9:25 in the evening of the second night of the run. J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, and C. R. Seelye, business manager, who were in Chicago for the National Motion Picture Convention, went to the theater to see their film and were unable to even get in the house.

How to Nab the Theater Mashers

Do you have "masher" troubles? If so, you will be interested in the following note on the subject taken from the Weekly Film News, the organ for the John H. Kinskey theaters of Detroit:

"A man annoying women in the Liberty Theater was arrested, fined and jailed in double-quick time last week, which makes a few thoughts on this subject particularly timely and useful.

"The theater masher is a pest that John H. Kunskey, through his 'plain clothes' department, is trying to stamp out, and so successful has the policy of watchfulness been, that very few reports of this sort of annoyance are received.

"The theater masher is a male creature who chooses a seat next to an unaccompanied woman, sits as close to her as possible, and accidentally (?) touches her with his hand or arm. There are many methods of flirtation and downright annoyance practiced by these idle, brainless creatures, but any woman who finds one sitting next to her will recognize the pest in an instant.

"If patrons who are so annoyed will report the case to the manager immediately, something can be done to give the fellow the lesson he needs or place him where he will have time to think it over.

"Should a man of this sort persistently annoy you, don't speak to him or glare at him; call the nearest usher or find the manager."

Splendid New Walla Walla House

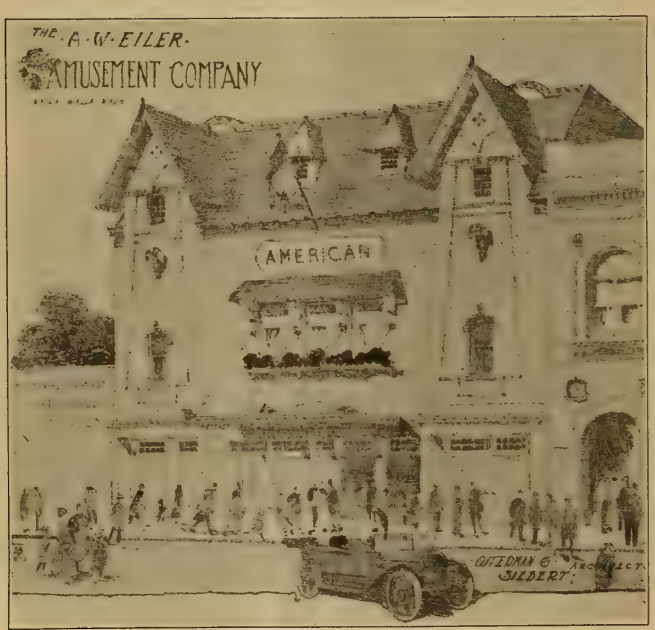
What is considered to be one of the most beautiful and up-to-date theaters in the northwest will be opened about the fifth of August by the pioneer showman of Walla Walla, who eleven years ago opened the first film house in that city.

Mr. Eiler is erecting a building which will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. The building site is within 400 feet of the center part of town, situated on the Main street. The building is 60 by 150 feet, three stories high and strictly fireproof, being made of concrete, tile brick with cream colored terra cotta front made up in an original design of Holland architecture.

There are no stairways, but easy inclines lead to the balcony covered with green velour carpet. The lobby is of cream colored marble and tile, with large marble pillars.

There is a $10,000 heating and ventilating system, water cooled air in the summer and steam heat in the winter. There is a unique lighting system, as the entire parquet and balcony may be flooded with light without injury to the picture, all fixtures made up from original designs.

The seating capacity is 1,000, using large roomy mahogany chairs upholstered in Spanish leather, back and seat.



The operating room on the main floor is elevated so that the picture will have a straight throw to the center of the screen. The room is made of concrete and steel, strictly fireproof. Two 6B Powers machines, are installed.

There is a nursery, checking room for baby cabs, rest room for ladies, smoking room, and checking room for parcels.

A $25,000 organ put out by the American Photoplayer Company will be in the pit, which is large enough to accommodate an orchestra of twenty pieces.

The stage is 25 by 50 feet and 48 feet from floor to gridiron, with a 25 by 20 feet opening, is fully equipped to handle any kind of road or vaudeville show. There are large, roomy dressing rooms.

The interior color scheme is old ivory, gold, buff and green.

The new American Theater, Walla Walla, Washington.

The front is to be lighted by daylight system from opposite side of street by powerful flood lights.

Theis Buys "The Crisis"

Theis Production Company, headquarters, Orpheum Theater, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, buys Eastern Pennsylvania rights to Selig's production, "The Crisis."

"The Crisis" shall be shown at the Garrick Theater, Philadelphia, for a three-weeks' engagement, starting August 13, and will be shown in an elaborate fashion.

In addition to the photoplay and augmented orchestra, there will be a large singing chorus of thirty people, which will be seen on the stage between the first and second acts, depicting some of the scenes as shown in the pictures.

The same production as shown at the Garrick Theater will make a tour of the larger cities in Eastern Pennsylvania and carry its own scenery and effects as if it were a large musical comedy.

"Fighting Trail" Completed

While the finishing touches are being put on the last episodes of "The Fighting Trail," at the Vitagraph plant in Hollywood, the artists at the company's studio in Brooklyn are rushing work on the titles, etc., for the earlier episodes of this serial.

This feature will be in fifteen episodes, the first of which will be released in a few weeks. The story was written by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady and J. Stuart Blackton and centers around the hunt for a lost mine which is known to contain an ingredient almost priceless in the manufacture of explosives. The mine is the property of a girl, portrayed by Carol Holloway. She is aided in its recovery by a young mining engineer, played by William Duncan. A band of outlaws, inspired by a foreign agent, plots the seizure of the mine, and their efforts lead to an unending series of thrilling incidents.

The suspense of the audience is maintained throughout, because, in addition to the numerous stirring events of each episode, there is a punch at the close of each chapter. The story picks up naturally and goes through with a smoothness and continuity not always found in serial productions.

"The Man Without a Country"

"The Man Without a Country," will appear upon the screen shortly, the Thanhouser Film Corporation having just completed a present day multiple reel feature, based upon Edward Everett Hale's immortal story.

Florence La Badie is featured in the production, in the role of a patriotic American girl, while H. E. Herbert, a well known Broadway actor, plays Lieut. Nolan, the unfortunate army officer, whose later years are spent as a prisoner on a naval ship.

Ernest Warde directed "The Man Without a Country," which will have its initial showing within the next few weeks.

Making Machine Guns

When Gaumont releases "Reel Life" No. 66 through Mutual August 2 the public will see on the screen how machine guns are made. A Gaumont cameraman made a trip through one of the largest American factories, securing some highly interesting pictures.

The crowds, however, refused to leave until they had seen the "good bad man" and people packed the lobby and sidewalk for nearly a block. Bill certainly is the Hart of America.

The Grand Opera House of Calcutta, India, the largest and finest theater in India, is being converted into a moving picture house under the supervision of E. H. Du Casse, proprietor of the Bijou Picture Theater at Calcutta. "India's Cinema de Luxe" is being provided with a roof garden and a floral bower besides the usual lounges, rest rooms and other apartments found in the best English and American theaters. And yet we always think of India as the home of semi-civilized, smoke-skinned barbarians.

Dick Travers, the Essanay star, appeared at the Crystal Theater, Dallas, Texas, on two different occasions while on his recent southern trip. The Strand and Hippodrome at Fort Worth, Texas, were also recipients of a visit from the actor-star a day or so before he left for Dallas. He made speeches at each appearance, some dealing with the way pictures are made and others along recruiting lines.

"The Little American," the Mary Pickford play that stirred up such a typhon in Chicago, seems destined to cause trouble wherever it goes. Mayor Van Lear of Minneapolis was very doubtful as to whether he ought to allow the film to be shown in the twin city, because like Chicago's censor chief, Major Funkhouser, he thought it very wrong to do anything to offend our German citizens. Are all the executive positions held by pro-German officials?

Exhibitors will find a good deal of interest and usefulness in the new catalogue of pictures issued by the Mutual Film Corporation of Chicago. The booklet contains in handy reference form lists of pictures available at Mutual exchanges whose total cost was some $15,000,000. The past productions of about 40 stars are represented in the "library" and exhibitors can draw upon them all for present programs.

Another of the possibilities of the film as an advertising medium is seen in recent arrangements made by the Detroit dealer for the Franklin automobile to show a reel on the talking points of his car over a chain of forty first class theaters in his territory. A play that he staged with the Franklin as the conspicuous neuter lead proved so popular in Detroit that he is carrying his screen advertising further and extending it over a large district.

A new extension, in the shape of a fine new entrance on Washington street, has been added to the Strand Theater of Portland, Oregon. The management has given this theater another and more beautiful face with which to attract the passer by and lure him in. For the lobby and foyer are luxuriously furnished and white lights make the front fairly sparkle. The entrances on Park and West Park streets are still to be retained but will be used as exits.

The Idle Hour Theater at Cambridge Springs, Pennsylvania, takes a page in a quarterly bulletin called "The Bubbler," which is issued for and concerning the business interests of the town. S. V. Wallace, manager of the Idle Hour, is a good booster for Cambridge Springs. He offers to send free, with posters, 2,000 feet of interesting and scenic views of the mineral water town in which he lives—views which he claims make good screen material for any exhibitor.

A new Turner and Dahnken playhouse, said to be the third largest picture theater in the state, has been opened at Stockton, California. It has a seating capacity of 2,540 people and the decorative features are said to be second to none. An exterior attraction which has already been the cause of much comment is furnished in the shape of four large steam urns which parapet the top of the building at the entrance. These urns, similar to those which were seen in the Court of Abundance at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, send up a blaze of colored lights which play on the rising steam.

In writing to the Lord Mayor of Liverpool in connection with an effort that is being made in that city to raise a fund for supplying films for the Grand Fleet, Admiral Sir David Beatty delivers himself of the following appreciation of the motion picture: "I know of no better means by which the minds of the petty officers and men under my command can be temporarily withdrawn from the monotony of immediate surroundings, and thereby refreshed and reinvigorated to renew their endeavors than by the work your fund intends to carry on."

A resolution permitting picture shows to stay open on Sunday in order that the soldiers might take advantage of them was advocated recently by Alderman John H. Tuohey before the city council of Little Rock, Arkansas.

The resolution follows:

Whereas, There is at this time a large number of young men who are in training for the honorable and all important positions of officers in the army of the United States at Fort Logan, and whereas, some manner of entertainment should be provided for them, and especially on Sunday afternoons, when they have most of their leisure time. Therefore, be it resolved, that the mayor and city council place no interference in the operation of picture shows on Sunday afternoons from 1 to 6 o'clock.

The lobby of the Ziegfeld Theater, Chicago, was turned into a recruiting station by Major Franklin R. Kenney during the recent showing of "The Slacker," featuring Emily Stevens. The popular major who has had charge of recruiting in Chicago felt "The Slacker" was such a tremendous argument and powerful appeal for recruits that it would be too bad to make the youths who came out after viewing the play suffer torture until they hopped a car and rode all the way to the recruiting station. So he fitted one up in the lobby.

The Board of Moving Picture Appeals at Dallas, Texas, passed upon its first film following an inspection at the Queen Theater of "Enlighten Thy Daughter." Mrs. Ethel Boyce, moving picture censor, has not condemned the picture, but on account of the nature of the film, asked the board to view it. The usual course is for the censor to pass upon the picture, leaving the theater the right of appeal if it is condemned.

Alterations amounting to $50,000 have been completed on the old Broadway Theater, now the Liberty of Portland, Oregon. This rejuvenated Jensen & Von Herberg house is now one of the finest in that city. A big, new Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones unit orchestra has been installed and elaborate decorations make the theater itself a picture. Two of the unique features of the house are a 35 foot electrically lighted statue of the Goddess of Liberty, and two framed vistas on either side of the screen with miniature waterfalls at the end of each vista.

"Souls in Pawn"

Gail Kane in American-Mutual Melodramatic Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THIS is a well complicated story, interestingly set forth. It is a melodrama which will go well in any theater, for all audiences like pictures with plenty of action, suspense and unexpected twists of plot, such as are contained in this. While there is plenty of excitement, there are no unpleasant scenes, nothing to offend any patrons. It is, in short, a rapid adventure story, with pleasing characters, an interesting foreign setting and a timely element. It contains elaborate settings and fine photography, with excellent night lighting effects.

The scene of the play is Paris, 1914. Under present circumstances, it is rather peculiar to have a play presented for American audiences in which the hero is a German, acting as a spy against the French government. The picture was doubtless begun while America was still neutral. However, since the political and national phase of the situation is entirely subordinate to the love and adventure element, this phase of the story will be scarcely noticed by the average audience. The story does not deal, except incidentally, with the war.

Gail Kane does very good work in this play. Donald MacLean, who played opposite Miss Kane in "The Upper Crust," appears as the prince and is well cast. There are a number of character roles played well by well-known American actors. One of the best is Charles Newton as the cobbler-spy.

The Story: Prince Kondemarck, chief of the German secret service in Paris, has been ordered to secure for the service of his government the cleverest and most beautiful woman obtainable in aid of plans important to his government. Liane Dore, beautiful widow of the late Sebastian Dore, killed mysteriously at the door of his home, agrees to serve on Kondemarck's promise to reveal to her in one year the name of the man who killed her husband, against whom she has sworn vengeance. The Prince himself killed Dore. The latter, posing as a bachelor, betrayed the former's sister in Germany. Kondemarck killed Dore accidentally in a scuffle. In the course of their association as spies, Liane and Kondemarck fall in love. The war throws open Liane's home to wounded Frenchmen. Von Pollnitz, unsuccessful in inducing Liane to reveal French secrets in the absence of Kondemarck in Germany, denounces her as a spy. She is arrested and sentenced to death. Kondemarck returns from Germany, uses his spies to rescue Liane after she has agreed with the prefect of police to betray him, the latter having revealed to her that Kondemarck killed her husband. On the verge of arrest, Kondemarck produces letters showing that Dore betrayed his sister. Liane is carried on board the Kondemarck yacht and the lovers escape.

"Skinner's Baby"

Bryant Washburn in Third Essanay "Skinner" Feature. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

WHILE this third "Skinner" picture lacks the plot material of the earlier releases, it contains enough of human interest to "get by" easily with most audiences. Its story is stretched rather thin to cover five reels, and the lack of action is made up for by the clever, unusual incidents which characterized the other pictures in this series. There is also less real humor and more exaggeration in this picture. But Bryant Washburn as "Skinner" and Hazel Daly as "Honey" are as likeable as ever. There is the same good supporting cast with a number of attractive youngsters added, pretty scenes and good photography. The picture will undoubtedly draw wherever Bryant Washburn is known, and it forms a pleasing, light offering for summer weather.

The Story: The joy which their friends take in their children lead Skinner and "Honey" to realize that there is something lacking to make their lives perfectly happy. They are overjoyed when they learn that a baby is to come to them. Skinner announces the fact at the office and gives the clerks a holiday. He and "Honey" lay many plans for their son, for they are sure the child will be a boy. The day of the great event, Skinner gets first news of the little stranger's arrival via telephone and proudly announces the arrival of William Manning Skinner, Jr., to the office. Everybody rushes out to buy presents and gets to the house as quickly as the new father himself, with toy guns, hobby horses and everything else a baby boy could wish. Alas, though, it is a baby girl. But "Honey" and Skinner happily decide that a girl should be the first born, anyway.

"The Little Terror"

Violet Mersereau Plays Child Role in Bluebird Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE pranks of a mischievous child in a sedate household form the basis of this offering. Violet Mersereau always plays a child role in an appealing and amusing fashion and upon this ability of the star's the whole play rests, for it has almost no story to hold the interest. For this reason it is rather light fare to offer most audiences. However, many neighborhood houses, whose patrons wish a cheerful, frivolous picture on a summer evening, will accept this, especially if they like Violet Mersereau.

Scene from "The Little Terror."

The story begins in a circus atmosphere, but this only introduces the play. The rest of the action takes place in the household of the heroine's grandfather. Pet animals, governesses, a society fop and the other associates of the heroine are worked into comedy situations, some of them exaggerated.

Rex Ingram directed the play. Supporting the star are Robert Clugston, Sidney Mason, Jack Raymond and others. The photography is good.

The Story: Alice is a child of the circus. Her father had been disinherited when he married a circus rider. Wallace Saunders, Alice's grandfather, repents of his action years later, but this is after the death of Alice's mother and father. The grandfather takes Alice into his home. In spite of the mischief which the child is always engaged in, the old man becomes very fond of her and changes his will so that she and not her cousin, a young man who appears half-witted in the play, inherits his fortune.

After Alice returns from school, a young lady, she meets George Reynolds, whom she had known in her circus days. They fall in love with each other and elope. The grandfather is angry, believing Reynolds is seeking Alice's fortune. But the young man proves that his talent as a cartoonist is bringing him a fortune of his own, and he wins the grandfather's admiration. So all are reconciled.

"In Slumberland"

Triangle Subject in Five Reels Released July 22. Reviewed by George W. Graves

A PICTURE to be arranged in the list of light, wholesome, "pretty" offerings is this story of the fairies, with more comedy in the balance than drama and a plot which is simple and familiar relying entirely on acting, treatment and production to make it attract. That it does attract there is no doubt. Little Thelma Salter, one of the best known and most liked child actresses on the screen, brightens the whole with her smiles. She is entirely unaffected. Laura Sears, as the child's mother who is harassed by a grasping land owner intent upon getting her into his power, makes a very favorable impression, and J. P. Lockney and Walter Perry in Irish character parts provide a good share of the entertainment.

Irvin Willat, the director, created a fine Irish rural atmosphere and made some very startling coups in artistic production with the scenes in fairyland. The whole picture is a human and artistic one. It is characterized by good acting. It will make delightful entertainment for those to whom sensational, lurid stories have no appeal and who like a story of this quiet kind, with plenty of quaint comedy and something beautiful to catch the eye most of the time. The story has an especial appeal to children.

"A Touch of Nature"

Essanay-K. E. S. E. Feature A Good Baseball Picture. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THE photodramatic possibilities of the national game are being recognized by directors, and here is a story that will thoroughly delight any baseball fan. It is taken from a story by Peter B. Kyne, published in The Saturday Evening Post. It is interesting, human, humorous and realistic. It is also rather out of the ordinary and will please any audience. The baseball game will surely excite all the youngsters in your house, and many of the elders, to applause and cheers. They will be interested, too, in seeing John J. McGraw as a picture actor. He comes to the hero's rescue with a contract to play on a ball team after father has disowned him.

The play is well directed and there is good acting and photography. John Drew Bennett plays the hero, William Cosgrove. Viola Cain is charming as Madame de Montignon, the vaudeville performer with whom he falls in love. George Henry appears as Old Man Cosgrove, who combines "baseballitis" and a weak heart. Edward O'Connor is a good type as Shamus O'Brien.

The Story: William Cosgrove falls in love with a little vaudeville performer, Madame de Montignon. He decides to marry her, and his father threatens to disinherit him if he does. This does not stop him, however. He and his bride, whose real name is Peggy O'Brien, set out to win, independent of the Cosgrove wealth. Then young Cosgrove gets a position on a big league baseball team, and father is torn between anger and pride. He attends a game in which his son plays and in the exciting events which follow he and his son and the young bride become reconciled.

"The Iron Ring"

Peerless-World Sex Melodrama in Five Parts. Reviewed by George W. Graves

THE average spectator who sees this won't be able to tell the story comprehensibly to his family at the breakfast table next morning, inasmuch as there are so many characters and so many complications intertwined throughout that he will be doing well if he keeps it all straight while viewing the picture. Whether or not the intelligent theatergoer is able to assort and assemble the various situations in his mind in some kind of order, it is questionable as to the extent he feels himself being entertained. In the story we have three more or less illegitimate love affairs involving six married folks, and one real virtuous courtship thrown in on the side, probably in the attempt to introduce a slight tinge of wholesomeness.

Aleck Hulette's wife, Bess, believing her husband grossly negligent, falls into a trap set for her by Mrs. Georgie Leonard, who, the mistress of Brown, wishes to see Bess an outcast like herself. Jack Delmore, the man who is angling for the really innocent Bess, has a sister, Dorothy. The latter has "fallen for" Dr. Hogue, a married man well supplied with children. The attempts of Georgie, in league with Jack Delmore, to ruin Bess, base the melodramatic complications. Finally things are cleared up when Delmore, through the narrow escape of his sister with the doctor, and Georgie, through her husband's suicide, realize the error of their ways.

The story leaves no impression on the viewer other than that of a jumble of unpleasant situations involving too many characters to keep him interested even did the situations smack more of likelihood and reality. Undoubtedly there are theaters where "they eat" this morbid sex stuff, but it is no wholesome repast for the family theater. Situations of this kind devolved for real dramatic reasons and those created mechanically for their own sake on the theory that they have "got to go in" are not the same things.

George Archinbaud's direction is one of the better things about the picture, as is the photography.

"The Long Trail"

Famous Players-Paramount Drama in Five Reels. Featuring Lou-Tellegen. Reviewed by H. D. Fretz.

A STORY brimful of action, with its romantic settings in the great Northwest country, its punch and thrills intermingled with a great love, is wonderfully shown in "The Long Trail," the new Famous Players picture. It is well told, convincing, and the work of Lou-Tellegen in the role of

Lou Tellegen in "The Long Trail."

Andre Dubois, a big-hearted trapper, is splendid throughout. Mary Fuller plays the part of Louise Graham, an orphan, whose hypocritical relatives try to force her to marry a man she detests. How she is deserted by her friends, and how, in order to save her from the scandal of the lumbermen, Andre marries her, makes an intensely interesting story.

The photography is excellent and the snow scenes are most beautiful. The photoplay was written by Eva Unsell and directed by Howell Hansel. With these two screen favorites as stars, the picture will undoubtedly be popular with the picture-goer. A splendid cast is in support of Lou-Tellegen and Mary Fuller, including Winifred Allen, Sidney Bracy, and Franklin Woodruff.

Andre Dubois, a French-Canadian trapper, lives with his little sister, Michette, on the edge of "The Long Trail." When she grows to womanhood he sends her to the convent at Montreal to receive her education. About this time, Louise Graham visits the North Country. She and Andre become great friends. When she is denounced by her finance and friends, Andre offers her his name and the shelter of his home.

Michette and Louise's brother, Paul, have an unfortunate love affair. With his sister's death, Andre vows vengeance on the man. The climax comes when Paul, seeking refuge from the police, stumbles into the little shack on "The Long Trail" and pleads to be saved. For Louise's sake, Andre endeavors to aid Paul to escape. But Paul is shot and killed by a mounted officer. When Louise sees her brother dead and Andre manacled for helping the fugitive to escape, she explains everything. The policeman puts her hands in Andre's and rides down the trail leaving the two alone.

"The Planter"

Nevada M. P. Corporation's Ten-Reel Dramatization of Whitaker's Novel. Reviewed by G. W. Graves

IT should be the purpose of the producers of a picture of pretentious proportions to incorporate within the boundaries of the subject material whose appeal will be universal. Any deviation from the line of general appeal by catering either to the sensation seekers or any other distinct and relatively small class is taken at a hazard. The appeal of "The Planters" is purely sensational. We have fights, brutality, horrors, arrayed in a way to transfix and engross those who care for such things, and to be absolutely abhorrent to those who do not.

The story, with its theme of love and hate, intermingled with an episodic arrangement of the cruelties suffered by the Yaqui slaves on American owned rubber plantations in Mexico, is slow in its telling and quite without suspense. Intelligent handling of mob scenes, production on a big scale, good photography, etc., together with fine acting by a well typed cast, give the picture what holding power it has. Perhaps the two most glaring faults of the picture are its excessive length and the overdoing of brutal detail, attacks on women, etc.

The exhibitor can promise his patrons good acting and call their attention to the fact that Tyrone Power, a dramatic actor of real talent, has the featured role, and he can also increase his patrons' anticipations by informing them of the splendid exotic atmosphere and types. However, he cannot guarantee satisfaction on the point of pleasant entertainment or real artistic handling, because the many revolting situations prelude the former, while the story wanders and fails to hold of itself. The star is submerged for a long time, while the love-interest between the rather negative hero and his "woman" is being developed. Later on we find that this love development was a non-essential, since the hero's real sweetheart is entirely another person. The story has a queer habit of carrying certain characters for a while and then forgetting all about them. When a certain situation calls for their reappearance, back they come to life.

Evidently much time and money was expended in the picture's production and it is a truly regrettable fact that so much of the inartistic and the unpleasant mars the entertainment. However, there are many picture house frequenters who will exclaim "Great!" and sit on the edge of their seats with the enthusiasm usually coupled with such a posture.

In the cast, the work of both Helen Bateman and Lucille King is especially worthy of praise. The latter is a perfect type for the part. Others in a very large cast are Mabel Wiles, Pearl Elmore, L. Encinas, George Odell and Lamar Johnstone. "The Planter" was adapted and produced from Herman Whitaker's novel by Harry C. Drum, assisted by T. N. Heffron in the capacity of director.

"Richard the Brazen"

Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, Five Parts, Released July 23. Reviewed by George W. Graves

DR. CYRUS T. BRADY and Edward Peple collaborated on the story, "Richard the Brazen," while Percy N. Vekroff directed. The popular and strong team—Alice Joyce and Harry Morey—were assigned to the chief roles. As a result we have an attractive piece of film from the entertainment standpoint and one that is satisfying technically. A rather strong comedy coloring excuses, or at least relegates to a point well out of view one or two situations of improbability. This humor, as well as the picture's dramatic side, which gets more and more exciting toward the end, was not wasted on the cast, the members of whom cope ably with their parts. The roles provided Harry Morey and Alice Joyce, while not as strong dramatically as they are capable of handling, will give audiences a chance to see the favorites in lighter work and there is little doubt but what they will be pleased. However, both the stars appear in some tense scenes contributing to an exciting climax. Other players who appear are William Frederic, Franklyn Hanna, Agnes Eyre, Robert Kelly and Charles Wellesley. Because of its effective presentation in all departments, the film can be counted upon for satisfaction and results. The picture has the air of being carefully produced.

The plot has to do with an American youth, Richard Williams, who, through circumstances, is obliged to impersonate an English lord and live in the house of a man whom he later learns is a bitter business rival of his father. Falling in love with his host's charming daughter, Harriet, Richard resolves to "brazen it out." The fact that he is ignorant of the girl's knowledge of his real identity makes for some good comedy, as does the attempt of his valet to betray him. At last comes the clash over the business difficulties of the parents, but as Richard has rendered good account of himself in saving Harriet's indiscreet sister from a blackmailer, the at first indignant host realizes that he really is indebted to the brazen deceiver. The rival of Richard's father also learns that the young man was not trying to trick him in any way, but only accepting his hospitality for the joy of the smiles of Harriet. The two fathers at last come to amicable terms on the contested munitions contract, which is bestowed on the young people as a wedding gift.

"The Garden of Allah"

Selig Production of Hichens' Novel Presented in Chicago. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

AGAIN has Colin Campbell demonstrated his unusual ability to put into picture form the very spirit of the book he is dramatizing. The director of "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er Do Well," and "The Crisis," has given an equally faithful translation of "The Garden of Allah," Robert Hichens' novel of the Saharah desert. All the glamour of far-off places, the color and movement of the African cities and the mysticism of the great desert have been caught in this picture and so much imagination and poetic feeling has been used by the director that even a critic finds it easy to forget about "sets" and "locations" and to believe that she is really looking into the quaint eastern cities or catching a glimpse of the desert itself.

The play is filled with beautiful and interesting pictures, among the most impressive being the windstorm scenes, which are truly remarkable. But excellent as are the scenic effects, they do not overshadow the human drama; instead they form a fitting background. This vivid and active background throws into high relief the emotional and psychological action of the plot. The main interest is always in Domini and Boris, the two restless spirits who come to the desert seeking peace and find and aid each other. Helen Ware and Thomas Santschi, in these roles, are excellent. The minor characters are also well portrayed by a cast which includes such well known players as Al. W. Filson, Eugene Besserer, Harry Lonsdale, James Bradbury, Will Machin and Matt B. Snyder.

"The Dog in the Manger"

Selig Hoyt Comedy is August 6 K. E. S. E. Release. Reviewed by Genevieve Harris

THERE are a number of funny situations in this latest two-reel Hoyt comedy directed by J. A. Richmond at the Selig studios. Much action and some trick photography and an absence of objectionable scenes make the offering one which will be enjoyed by all slapstick comedy lovers. The cast is the same as in earlier releases and includes Amy Dennis, William Fables, James Harris, Edgar Murray, Fred Eckhart and James West.

There is a thread of plot in the comedy. It concerns the adventures of two crooks who are caught while attempting to sell a patented sausage machine which is a fraud. They escape and after a chase go to a hotel. The servants of the hotel have gone on a strike and the crooks are employed in their stead. Then follows a host of mishaps as the awkward pair assume their duties as waiters and general servants.

"Land of the Rising Sun"

"The Land of the Rising Sun" is one of the most unusual film offerings of the year. In New York, where it played at the Rialto Theater for several weeks, the critics of every newspaper praised it as a decided novelty—a travel picture that was much more than a scenic—a revelation of that most wonderful of countries—Japan, its mystery, its charm, its glorious beauty. There are ten episodes in all, and each of them is distinctly original. After seeing the entire series, one may truly say that they "know Japan." Taken entirely from the human interest viewpoint, the spectator is bound to feel an intimate and personal association with the happenings as they develop.

The episodes, in the order in which they appear, certainly show everything that a tourist would see—and it is said that to visit all the places depicted would cost several thousand dollars. The opening number of the series is called "First Impressions," and introduces us to the magic of the Orient.

Unusual Theme in Fairbanks Play

"Down to Earth," the Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft picture scheduled for release August 12, has a name which has set the Fairbanks fans guessing, and the play, it is promised, is quite as unusual as its title. Like all Fairbanks' pictures, it is unconventional in treatment, and its amusing scenes are said to be built around a theme that will make audiences think as well as laugh.

Director Sherwood MacDonald really did not want to go to New York, anyway, and now that he is again signed up for the direction of the new Jackie Saunders series, life seems again worth while, as Mr. MacDonald is relieved of the anxiety of wondering just how they do things now in New York, anyway!

Crane Wilbur and Juanita Hansen, is the new combination which will be offered to the film public with the release of the fourth Crane Wilbur feature on the Art Dramas program. This well-matched screen team have begun work under the able direction of Lorimer Johnstone.

"I should like to see you very much but it is can not," writes Susumu Hasegawa, a little Japanese admirer, to Baby Marie Osborne. Little Susumu San lives in Tokyo, owns lots of canaries, plays a piano—a little—and loves Marie most honorable much.

Ruth Stonehouse is acquiring much knowledge of Chinese customs, also a variety of strange Chinese souvenirs in Los Angeles' Chinatown, where she made ninety scenes for a new Universal feature.

Alfred Vosburgh has been made a permanent addition to the Vitagraph Hollywood studio, where he will continue to play leads with Mary Anderson in five-reel featurese.

In his work when making scenes at Huntington, L. I., in "For France," the Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, Edward Earle, who is featured with Betty Howe, was called on to operate a Lewis machine gun. He fired 200 shots on two different days and on one fired 100 at a target, scoring 44 perfect hits.

Cleo Madison is taking the leads at the Wigwam Theater in San Francisco. Miss Madison received a nice offer from the management and the call of the footlights was too strong for her. She does not intend to desert the screen, however.

The youthful American sailor who gets the sweater which Pauline Frederick is knitting for the navy need not be surprised if he catches cold, for there are going to be a number of drop stitches and other curious apertures in the garment. Who could sit in a racing Simplex going at top speed and expect to get every stitch correct? The Paramount star declares that frequently it is a question of dropping a stitch or her life, and so far the stitches have suffered.

Rose Tapley, the Greater Vitagraph favorite who has been touring the country for more than a year, has been elected an honorary life member of the Cleveland Screen Club.

Women guests at Buckwood Inn, Delaware Water Gap, sat up and took notice when they heard Valeska Suratt, famed Empress of Fashion, was coming there to make some exterior scenes in "Wife Number Two," her latest William Fox production. All were prepared to get enough ideas for gowns from watching the star to last them a lifetime. When these same women saw Miss Suratt they opened their eyes and gasped. Except when she was dressed for scenes or for the dining room the Empress of Fashion wore a walking skirt and a sweater. Golf and other sports occupied her spare time so fully that she hadn't a chance to think of dressing up just for the sake of wearing fine clothes.

Mary Martin, the beauty of William Fox films now playing opposite William Farnum in super de luxe production, whiles away her leisure hours writing verse.

William Dietz, distinguished for his finished work in "Lonestar," an American Film production of last year, has returned to the Santa Barbara studios to appear in several productions planned for summer making. "Lonestar," for by this sobriquet he is better known, before his screen sucess, coached the football team of the Washington State College to the national championship of 1915. He was one of the best athletes ever developed at Carlisle, the Indian school.

Valda Valkyrien, the noted Danish beauty and screen star, is spending the summer at Long Beach, Long Island. Early rising is a popular amusement since it has become known that the prize beauty of Denmark takes her morning dip and does ballet exercises on the sands before the seven o'clock whistle blows.

Julian Eltinge, noted feminine impersonator, is on his way to the Lasky studio, where preparations are under way for his motion picture debut in Paramount Pictures.

Fay Tincher, one of the bright, particular comedy stars from the coast, who has been working under D. W. Griffith for the past three years, is now in New York, "freshening up."

Mae Murray is also taking a long-needed rest at a milk cure over the river in Jersey.

At the tender age of three weeks, "Fatty" Arbuckle was attracting the serious attention of the public and press. He gurgled his way to the first prize at a rural baby show out in Smith's Center, Kansas, due entirely to the fact that the judges found him a perfect infant Adonis.

FILM COLONY GAMBOLS

Sponsored by a few of the press agents of the Los Angeles film colony and attended by newspaper scribes, scenario writers and trade correspondents, the Oh, Oh, Gambol and Clambake held recently at Santa Monica was one of the social triumphs of the busy recreational season of Southern California filmdom. The crowning event of the day was a wrestling match between Bull Montana, Fairbanks' champion wrestler, and six press agents of the local studios. Needless to say the six publicity dispensers threw the Bull in record time, thereby hanging up for themselves laurels heretofore unequaled in motion picture publicity circles.

Mabel Condon of MOTOGRAPHY and the Dramatic Mirror, insisted on being included in the list of chaperones, but after Miss Condon and Mrs. George Proctor entertained with a specialty dancing number with Irish music on the accordion, and someone asked Mrs. Bill Wing if Mabel wasn't her other daughter, the well known correspondent reluctantly resigned from the post.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Tom Geraghty, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Thew, Lasky; Mr. and Mrs. George Proctor, Triangle; Walter MacNamara, Kathleen Clifford, Balboa; H. O. Stechan, Balboa; Bennie Zeidman, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McGaffer, Lasky; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Wing; Carlyle Robinson and Eric Campbell of the Chaplin forces; Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan Bickers; Bull Montana and Spike Robinson from the Fairbanks corporation; J. B. Woodside, Triangle; Pat Dowling, Metro-Yorke; H. P. Keeler, Universal; Kenneth O'Hara, Paralta; Ben Rothwell, Scoop Conlon, L. A. Times; Lester Cuneo, Metro; Hank Mann, Dave Allen; Mr. and Mrs. Al Cohn of Photoplay Magazine; Florence Larence of the Los Angeles Examiner; Verne Harding Porter, Green Book; Carmelita Geraghty, Eleanor Nichols, J. C. Jessen, Motion Picture News; Mabel Condon, A. L. Selig, Fox.

Complete Record of Current Films

This record is intended to give, for the convenient use of the exhibitor in booking films, all the information about each film that it is possible to present in a space limited to one line. The classification is indicated by the letter at the left (D for drama, C for comedy, T for topical, S for scenic, E for educational, etc). Next comes the date and the title, followed by the names of the stars in parentheses. At the extreme right hand end of the line is the distributor's booking number, preceded by the name of the producing company. The figure appearing just before this name indicates the number of reels—the letter S meaning a split reel.

Mutual Pictures

The Widow's Might—(One Reel)—La Salle-Mutual—August 14.—The widow Tightfist lives in an apartment house and is enviously watched by her neighbors, Mr. Vee Gates and wife, who hatch a scheme to marry her to Otto and go fifty-fifty with him on the money. Assisted by the widow's cook and the janitor, all works out smoothly, but after the wedding the widow refuses to loosen up on the purse strings. The doctor finally decides to have the janitor drop a brick on Otto, which will cause a dangerous malady, curable only by granting his every desire. Otto submits, but already sore at the bunch, takes advantage of the situation, not only to extract money from the unsuspecting wife, but to make love to the doctor's wife, and before the doctor can figure out if Otto's condition is real or feigned, the plotters are all given a run for their money.

Beach Nuts—(One Reel)—Horsleey-Mutual—August 16.—Featuring George Ovey. Jerry admires the girl he sees entering a park. He follows her but a policeman interrupts his flirtation. Father and Count arrive in time to see him "shooed" away and they take daughter to the beach. Jerry is on the sands when they arrive, having a fine time with a bevy of lovely girls. When they discover him in the dressing room daughter shields him from their pummelling. Jerry gets dad and a Count into a fight with the police and then he and daughter beat it in a stolen automobile. Jerry drives his "flivver" into an automobile service station and a terrific explosion drives him into jail.

Universal Program

The Little Fat Rascal—(Two Reels)—L-Ko—August 8.—With Phil Dunham and Merta Sterling. Pop Snodgress disapproves of Phil for a son-in-law, so Phil and Mert decide to elope. Pop catches them as they are coming down the ladder. He sends Mert to school. Then exciting incidents take place. Mert is kidnaped by Melba and Ted. Phil goes to rescue her, but she is carried off in an auto. A policeman chases Phil and at last they are both caught in the safety catchers of the street-car.

The Soul Herder—(Three Reels)—Bison—August 7.—With Harry Carey. The new parson, while on his way to Buckhorn, is killed by some Indians. Cheyenne Harry finds the parson's little daughter sobbing for her father. Harry tells her he is to be her new father and to please her puts on the clerical waistcoat. When they arrive at Buckhorn, Harry is received by Jane Brown as her brother-in-law. He enters her home seeing no way out of the predicament. When she finds out the deception, she orders him out of the place. Later Harry is forgiven by Jane and they are happy together.

The Vamp of the Camp—Joker—August 11.—With Gale Henry, Charles Haefli and Milton Sims. Little Butterfly is the vamp of the camp. She becomes interested in a stranger, and tries her best to win him, but her charms have no effect on him. At last she persuades him to tell her the cause of his sadness. He says that the old homestead is to be sold because he has not enough money to pay off the mortgage. He promises to marry her if she will get the money. She has just robbed the gambling den, when the sheriff arrives. Little Butterfly then learns that her trusted stranger is Slick Stevens, wanted in a dozen places as a worker of a confidence game. He has already flown.

O-My the Tent Mover—Joker—August 9.—With William Franey and Lillian Peacock. Launcelot Briggs is lost in the desert. He is found by the Sheik who dooms him to a life of drudgery unless he can make him laugh. He does so and the old man gives him his daughter, Saharah Sarah. Launcelot loves the younger daughter, Paprika. Plans for the wedding with the awful Sarah are in progress. If he marries her, Skootch will kill him, if he does not, the Sheik will. At last he has a brilliant idea, to hide in the tent and running away inside of it. The last they see of him, the tent is careering madly over the desert. The natives think it a manifestation from their gods.

The Love Slacker—Nestor—August 7.—With Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Edith Roberts and Fred Gamble. Eddie decides to become a woman hater because he is not popular. He goes to the country and all the girls fall for him, so he has a hard time avoiding them. Lee, the only young man in town, resents Eddie's arrival. Lee and the girls are out motoring, Edith seeing Eddie climbs out of the back of the car to go to him. She complains of a sprained ankle. It begins to rain and Edith forgets all about her ankle. They take refuge under the awning of the drugstore. They become so interested in each other that they do not notice when the revengeful Lee pulls up the awning and lets them get soaked.

Like Babes in the Woods—(Two Reels)—Victor—August 10.—With Violet MacMillan, Gordon Griffin, Fred Woodward, and Jack Nelson. A fortune-teller gives Violet and Billie a ring, which she says is a wishing ring. Seeing Hank, the mule, in the yard, Violet wishes that he had a bag of oats, and immediately it appears. Then they wish that the bear rug would come to life. It does and chases them. They rush out to Hank and the three run into the woods. Violet becomes tired and wishes that the bear would go away. The children think of the story book and wish they were the real Babes in the Woods. Their clothes change into rags and they become bare-footed. Violet and Billie are awakened from their deep sleep by the braying of Hank. They realize that it was all a dream.

Caught in the Web—Episode No. 7 of The Gray Ghost—August 6.—With Harry Carter and Priscilla Dean. Hildreth tries to escape from the mysterious house, but is overpowered by several men. Hildreth and Jack Olmstead become very friendly. The crooks are forced to tell the Ghost that they have missed the necklace. Jerry and Marco go to the hospital to see Jacques. The doctor has taken notes of what Jacques has said and Marco reads, "Morn Light—Ted Daly—at Morn Light's apartment—save them. In his apartment the Gray Ghost murmurs, as he looks at the picture of Morn Light, that he would kill her if he did not love her. When Jerry, Marco and two detectives enter Morn Light's apartment they are surprised to see the Ghost. Many shots are fired.

Seeing Ceylon with Hy Mayer—(One Reel)—Powers Travelaugh—August 11.—The climate of Solombo, in Ceylon, is very hot, and the costumes of the natives suit it. We see a Buddhist procession with its dancers in their strange headdresses. Hy Mayer then suggests in a cartoon, that this more picturesque headgear should be adopted on Broadway. The foliage of Ceylon is wonderful and the variety of trees immense. We see the elephants' bath-room, and then Hy Mayer suggests the use of an elephant as a shower bath. Native dancing to the sound of the tom-tom is the suggestion for other cartoons.

The Untamed—(Two Reels)—Mary Fuller Feature—August 9.—With Mary Fuller, William Welsh, Johnnie Walker and Helen Slosson. The revenue officers attack the moonshiners, and Casga's father is shot. She continues to run the still herself. Howard Pike, a revenue officer, admires Casga's wild beauty. His fiancee, Rose, takes Casga to her home. She confides in Casga that her father wants her to marry Howard, but that she loves some one else. Clem, because Casga will not have anything to do with him, determines on a coward's revenge. He informs Pike that there is an illicit still on the place, and shows him where it is. Pike goes to investigate, and is bitten by a rattlesnake. Casga hears his cry for help and goes to his assistance. In the meantime, Rose has eloped with the man she loves. Casga tenderly nurses Howard back to health, and the first thing that they do when he is well, is to break up the still.

Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 31—August 10.—Rose breeding is the first subject of this issue. Then a demonstration is shown of a new motor for an airplane, which is so constructed that the propellers perform the double function of driving the machine at top speed and at the same time cooling the motor. "Going to sea in an armory" is the next study, and shows the preliminary training of sailors on land, before they ever see a battleship. These pictures were taken in the armory of the Second Battalion of Naval Militia at Brooklyn, New York. Physical culture for women is more important than ever now that women have to take the place of men. Fine exercises are illustrated by experts for the Screen Magazine. The last subject is a "miracle in mud" by Willie Hopkins, called "The Darwin Theory Upset."

K. E. S. E.

Skinner's Baby—Essanay special—(Screen Time 65 Minutes)—August 6.—Starring Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly. The head bookkeeper in Skinner's office becomes a proud father and as Skinner sees his joy he marvels, realizing that he is missing one of life's greatest pleasures. All the way home the realization deepens as he sees other people with their babies. He talks the matter over with Honey. Sometime later Honey confides a wonderful secret to him and elaborate plans are made for him, for of course it will be a boy. The day of the great event Skinner gets the news by telephone and proudly announces the arrival of William Manning Skinner, Jr. Everybody rushes out to buy presents and go to the house loaded with toys, hobbyhorses and everything for the young man. Alas, though, it is a baby girl. But Honey and Skinner happily decide that a girl should be the first born, anyway. Reviewed in this issue.

The Little White Girl—(Screen Time 25 Minutes)—Essanay—August 8.—Featuring little Mary McAllister. Gyp, an orphaned child, wins the heart of Captain Shay, a crusty old recluse.

New Essanays. From the left, "Seventy and Seven," and "Vernon, the Bountiful," a couple of Black Cats, and "The Uneven Road," one of the "Do Childern Count?" series.

She recalls to his mind his daughter Anna, whom he had sent from the house years before. To make the child happy he spends money liberally. Her dressmaker turns out to be the Captain's daughter Anna and when they begin to trace the origin of the child she is found to be Anna's daughter, whom she had abandoned when facing starvation. Thus the three are reunited in happiness.

The Bridge of Fancy—(SCREEEN TIME 25 MINUTES)—AUGUST 15.—Featuring little Mary McAllister. Little Esther hears her mother talk of a brilliant social event and this brings a dream to her. She, too, is a beautiful lady, courted furiously by Captain Jingle of the American boy scouts and Count Espanol, who claims a Spanish title. She loves the captain but the lure of a title predominates. The two suitors fight a duel in which the captain is triumphant, but this does not alter Esther's decision. There is a brilliant banquet at which the engagement is to be announced. All the society of the nation is present. Just as Esther's father is arising to announce her betrothal to the count, Captain Jingle rushes in and causes the count's arrest as an impostor. The attendant hubbub causes Esther to awake, screaming for her mother.

A Dog in the Manger—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—AUGUST 6.—A. Jackson Bright, an inventor, and Colin Early, his partner, come to grief when their bogus sausage machine goes to pieces and they only escape the police by a very close margin. They arrive at a hotel where the employes have gone on a strike and are immediately put to work as chefs, waiters, clerks, elevator boy, etc. Both promptly fall in love with Gay Somers, the landlord's daughter. Mr. Grump, the star boarder, provides some excitement in his wheel chair, riding out of the hotel and down the walk. Boniface Somers, seeing his star boarder leave, instructs Bright and Early to give chase and they do so accompanied by Gay. Grump's chair never stops until it plunges into the lake. Bright and Early follow it and none of the three ever come to the surface again.

State Rights Features

Should She Obey?—ARIZONA FILM COMPANY—6 NORTH MICHIGAN AVENUE, CHICAGO—EIGHT REELS.—William Gordon is a rather lazy young man though physically perfect. When he meets and falls in love with Lorna, the village belle, he becomes imbued with ambition and goes to work in a coal mine. His industry and application win him the attention of the owner of the big iron works and he is offered a place in the laboratory. Later, aided by his wife, he makes a discovery that makes him rich. One son, William Junior, comes to them. Association with men of wealth brings him more opportunity for growth and larger investments. At the height of his career he meets and becomes infatuated with Marie Gibson, a show girl. He finally compels Mrs. Gordon to go to Reno and establish residence to secure a divorce, so that he may marry Marie. When Mrs. Gordon's appeal to Marie fails, she does as her husband wishes and he marries Marie.

In Treason's Grasp—FIVE REELS—RENOWNED PICTURES CORP., 1600 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.—Featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford. Ralph Avery and Robert Young are partners conducting a munition factory. Both are in love with their secretary, Molly Carson. Avery, illegally, has in his possession certain plans belonging to the government and when hunted down by Secret Service men hides them in Young's desk. Young is convicted and sentenced to twenty years in prison. A formula stolen from Young makes Avery rich and he persuades Molly to marry him. Their daughter Lucille is the picture of her mother and about to be married. On the day her engagement is announced the safe containing the formula is stolen by Young's agents, Lucille goes out for a motor ride and collides with a car. The occupants take her into a convenient house which turns out to be Young's and here she learns where the formula is. When Young searches for his uninvited guest he cannot find her. As he is crossing the Atlantic on his way to Europe with the formula she appears and he is struck by her resemblance to Molly Carson. She tells him who she is and that it was her mother's dying wish that should she ever meet Young she should try to right the wrong done by her father. Young loses his bitterness, gives up the formula to Lucille and wires to Ralph Avery to that effect.

Butterfly

Follow the Girl—BUTTERFLY—AUGUST 6. With Ruth Stonehouse and Jack Dill. Donna, a secret agent, is sent to America with some important papers. While on board the steamer she learns that the Secret Service are aware of her mission and are awaiting her arrival. When all are sleeping, Donna goes to the bunk of Hilda Swanson, and places the papers in the hem of the girl's skirt. Arriving in New York, Martinez, Donna's accomplice, follows Hilda and Olaf, who take a train for the West. Hilda and Olaf find employment with Larry O'Keefe, a cattle owner. Martinez makes arrangements with some Mexican cattle thieves to kidnap Hilda. When they find that the papers have been left at the ranch-house, Martinez determines to raid the house. Hilda escapes and meets the Secret Service men who are after Martinez. She gives them the papers and they assure her that she has done a great service to her new country. Larry takes Hilda in his arms and tells her that he will make an American citizen of her.

Christie Comedies

Skirts—(ONE REEL)—CHRISTIE COMEDY—JULY 23.—Having received notice of an inheritance, Harry and his chum, Jimmy, secure an automobile and a beautifully furnished flat on the strength of their anticipated wealth. Then a telegram informs Harry that a later will leaves it all to his cousin Mary. Harry tells the landlord that he is to marry the cousin that afternoon and he decks Jimmy out in feminine apparel. When the real Mary and her chaperone, Ethel, appear, Jimmy is introduced as the bride. When the girls go out Harry and Jimmy have a conference and decide that "she" will be ill when the girls come back. The girls are most sympathetic when they learn this and start to make the bride a cup of tea. Jimmy attempts to escape in his own clothes, but the girls discover the fraud and the boys fess up. It turns out that every one is satisfied, even the landlord, who thinks he may rent two flats.

Mutual Star Productions

Bab, the Fixer—(FIVE REELS)—MUTUAL-HORKHEIMER—AUGUST 13.—Starring Jackie Saunders. John Porter, a wealthy broker of Wall Street, goes broke at the game, and after the liquidation of his debts he has little left. With his wife and daughter Bab, he goes West and buys a small ranch. Ten years later Bab has grown to womanhood, a daring rider and an expert with the rifle. Now comes Richard Sterling, formerly a broker's clerk but now rich. He loves Bab and she loves him, but her mother has greater ambitions for her daughter. The water on Porter's place gives out and when he drills a new well he strikes oil and becomes a money king again. Bab is sent East to school and while she is gone her parents separate. When she returns she finds her mother queening it in society but her father is absent. Bab plans a reconciliation between her parents and succeeds in bringing them together. Then she and Sterling are married.

Paramount

The Long Trail—(FIVE REELS)—FAMOUS PLAYERS-PARAMOUNT—JULY 23.—Featuring Lou-Tellegen. Andre Dubois, a French Canadian trapper, lives in the wilds with his little sister, Michette. Louise Graham is an orphan whose only near relative is her scapegrace brother, Paul. When her hypocritical friends desert her, Andre marries her to save her from the slander of the lumbermen of the place. Meanwhile, Michette and Paul have an unfortunate affair. Complications of all kinds occur. Andre and Louise, since their strange wedding, have been living in a house divided, but incidentally come to care more and more for each other. The story is brought to a happy ending, and Andre and Louise are left alone in their long-delayed happiness. Reviewed in this issue.

Triangle

In Slumberland—(FIVE REELS)—TRIANGLE—RELEASED JULY 22.—Featuring Thelma Salter. Nora and Patrick McCree, parents of a happy little family, live in a quaint Irish village in the cottage owned by Peter Kennedy, a grasping and covetous old soul. Having long had his eyes on Nora, he deliberately plans to get her into his power by removing the husband from his path. As per the villain's prearranged scheme, Patrick, led to think he is a murderer, enlists with the Queen's troops and leaves for Africa to fight the Boers. Just about when the little Irish family, in poverty, is about to succumb to the demands of old Kennedy, Patrick finds his way back to the Emerald Isle. Further operations, however, on the part of Kennedy, prevents him from reaching his needy family. Here "the fairies," whose power is invoked by the children, intervene, and all ends happily for the brave little family. Reviewed in this issue.

General Program

The Long-Green Trail—BLACK CAT FEATURE—ESSANAY—(SCREEEN TIME 30 MINUTES)—AUGUST 11.—"There's many slip twixt the cup and the lip" and so it proves with young Bobby Hopper. His father wants him to marry the daughter of his business competitor in order to consolidate the business. Bobby refuses, and his father employs Jim Dykeman, an ex-convict, to force the marriage. Dykeman plans to kidnap the two and force them into marriage. He gets Bobby but mistakes the girl for her maid, Yvonne. Bobby and Yvonne effect a thrilling escape, fall in love with each other and are married. Just how it turns out for the best is told in the next chapter. Sure the whole thing is just the picturization of a newspaper story a hobo is reading.

The Smouldering Spark—(TWO REELS)—SELIG—JULY 30.—Bessie Basset, a pretty village lass, is loved by Bob Hartley, a wealthy yachtsman, young and attractive, but dissipated. Cal Cooper, another suitor, is a robust sailor lad. Though Bessie loves Bob she dismisses him in disgust, after finding him in a drunken stupor on the beach. Captain Conrad, Bessie's godfather, watches her with loving eyes and seeing her failing health, takes her on a sea voyage. Bob, while drunk is shanghaied and shipped on Conrad's vessel. Then begins the regime of abuse for Bob by the mates and sailors of the ship. Bessie will not own that she knows him, thinking the treatment may make a man of him. Her theory proves the right one, for he licks both mates, takes the office of first mate, and when the ship catches fire, puts it out and brings it safely into port.

The Love of Madge O'Mara—(ONE REEL)—SELIG—AUGUST 4.—In a cheap chop house on the water front Madge O'Mara works as a cashier to support her invalid mother. There she meets Reginald Van Dorn, and prompted by ambition and love, promises to marry him. Her employer is jealous of the millionaire lad and the millionaire lad's parents strenuously object. Between them all they wreck Madge's happiness and she is left with only a deep resolve to be revenged. Three years later Reginald meets with an accident and Madge, now a nurse, attends him. In her hands she holds the power to let him live or die and though she is strongly tempted, the professional honor of a nurse, and her old love for him, finally triumph and she saves him.

Selig World Library—No. 12—AUGUST 1.—The Tortoise Market—The tortoise, valuable for food, oil and shell, is a habitat of the tropical seas. Picturesque Water Battle of India—The Maharaja of Jodhpur's water battle is a gala sporting event given annually. Francisco Villa's Mausoleum—Magnificent mausoleum erected by Villa, rebel chief in the city of Chihuahua, Mex. Our Great Cotton Industry—Cotton seed and pods, gin house, suction method of unloading, conveyors, warehouses, etc.

Minneapolis News

Manager Peevey, of the Minneapolis branch Paramount-Artcraft office, was a recent visitor with Max Goldstine and C. J. Stoughton, at the Chicago office.

Reben & Finkelstein, owners of the six largest downtown theaters in Minneapolis and four in St. Paul, have contracted for the entire output of the Paramount-Artcraft productions for the coming year. In Minneapolis the productions will be run in the New Garrick and Lyric theaters, and in St. Paul Reben & Finkelstein have just completed a deal whereby they take over the Strand Theater.

The St. Paul Strand is closed at present, undergoing extensive remodeling and decorating. It will open August 12 with "The Little American." The name will be changed to the New Garrick, and Manager Calvert of the New Garrick in Minneapolis will stage all of the new productions and they will be moved to St. Paul intact each week.

Each of these big houses will feature, in addition to these big attractions, a special musical program. It has been definitely decided that the admission will not be less than twenty cents, and possibly twenty-five cents. It is rumored that Charles Branhan, formerly publicity man for the Strand, Minneapolis, will have charge of the St. Paul house.

Extensive alterations are also going on at this time in the R. & F. New Garrick in Minneapolis. When the two houses are complete, they will be the best theaters in the Northwest.

W. K. Howard, formerly manager of the Vitagraph exchange in Minneapolis, and later with Metro, is the first Minneapolis exchange manager to book up with Uncle Sam. Mr. Howard has already enlisted and expects to leave not later than September first. During the time he has been in Minneapolis, he has met with unusual success and will be missed by not only exhibitors in the territory, but by his numerous friends as well throughout the exchanges.

Chicago News

Judge A. P. Tugwell, who came on from the "grand and glorious" state of California, according to his own phraseology, to represent that commonwealth in the Chicago convention, left for the Golden Gate last Friday. Before he left, however, he addressed the first meeting of the Chicago chapter of the new American Exhibitors' Association. Fred J. Herrington was another of the honor speakers on that occasion. Both men wished the new organization success and were very optimistic as to its future.

The Chicago Metro exchange continues to report unparalleled success for "The Slacker," featuring Emily Stevens. The Beach Theater at Fifty-first and Harper has run the picture four days. The management was requested to show the feature by a number of south side women headed by Mrs. William Duff Haynie, chairman of the D. A. R. Red Cross committee. They saw the film at the Ziegfeld Theater in the loop and immediately decided that their local theater would have to play it.

Richard R. Nehls, manager of the American Film Company, Inc., of Chicago, Santa Barbara and London, has returned from New York, where he closed an important deal for the showing of American features abroad. The contract is said to involve the entire European market of the entente allies with an approximate weekly distribution of 30,000 feet of positive film.

Several special meetings of the Reel Fellows Club have been held of late, with the idea of providing ways and means of placing the popular organization on a solid financial basis. At the gathering on last Tuesday night, a special committee was appointed to take up matters vital to the interests of the Club. When the bar licence was denied by the city it took the wind out of the Club. Everyone is opposed to the idea of closing the quarters for the attractive rooms are the only place where film men of the city can gather for social good times.

Jack Lait, whose special stories you have often read in the Chicago Herald, has gone over with the Tribune, and will write a series of stories for that publication to be published in the form of photoplays. These stories will be syndicated in papers throughout the country prior to their release in drama form. Mr. Lait handled the publicity of "A Daughter of the Gods" during its run at the Studebaker Theater.

NEW EXHIBITORS' ORGANIZATION OPENS NEW YORK OFFICE

IT is estimated by General Manager Charles C. Pettijohn that there are already some 3,000 exhibitors who are members, or about to become members, of the American Exhibitors' Association, the new organization of theater men formed at the time of the national picture convention in Chicago in July.

The complete accounts of how the association was formed by men who bolted from the convention of the Motion Picture Exhbitors' League of America and reports of its subsequent progress have already appeared in MOTOGRAPHY. At the time of its formation there were but three hundred exhibitors who joined the new organization. Since then the movement has spread and theater men all over the country have become familiar with its work through MOTOGRAPHY and the other trade journals.

New York Office Opened

The headquarters of the American Exhibitors' Association is New York. An office has already been opened in the Times Building there by General Manager Pettijohn. Mr. Pettijohn is the Indianapolis attorney and film man who, at the time of the organization of the new association at Chicago was elected to his position at a salary of $10,000 a year. He was one of the leaders on the floor of the Chicago convention, and continually attempted to prevent a split in the ranks of the exhibitor delegates. At the end of the sessions, however, the exhibitors who afterward formed the new organization, dissatisfied with the conduct of affairs by Lee A. Ochs, M. E. P. L. president, bolted from the convention. Regarding this action Mr. Pettijohn has made the following statement to the New York press:

Bolt Not Pre-Arranged

"It has been said that the Chicago bolt was prearranged. It was no such thing. Jake Wells, now our president, had nothing further from his mind. From the way things were going, the idea of another exhibitors' body grew and grew. When it had been mapped out, a number of us went to Wells and asked him to accept the leadership, because we wanted a man who had always been aloof from factions or parties and was unidentified with any exhibitors' organizations. And Wells accepted on condition that he be given a man to work with who would devote all his time and energies to the association." The man chosen for that job is Mr. Pettijohn.

According to Mr. Pettijohn, the plan of forming the various states into units through professional organizers has been found unnecessary, and because of the expense entailed has been thankfully abandoned. In most communities individual exhibitors have been found who are willing to devote their time and money to the cause, and in their hands will be left the work of organization. Mr. Pettijohn has given out some amazing figures of the growth of the association.

36 States in Association

While no organization has as yet been effected in a number of states, the following were pointed out by Mr. Pettijohn as being already in the association:

Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Washington.

In addition, chapters have been started in Brooklyn, New York, Boston, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Mr. Pettijohn then called attention to the present law of the association, limiting the city branches to centers of population of 1,000,000 or more. This, he said, was proving too strict, and would undoubtedly be changed to include smaller cities when the organization's convention was called in Detroit. Another point to be brought up at that time will be a reconsideration of the zone system of representation, discussed but discarded in Chicago.

Big Exhibitors' Mailing List

"The work of organization is going forward as fast as is humanly possible," said Mr. Pettijohn. "I have already compiled a mailing list of exhibitors which I believe is larger than any previously in existence. We took other lists, compared them, cut out duplicates, and now have 15,465 names. I shall soon send out applications for membership to every one of these men. What we want exhibitors to believe is that we do not intend to set up an autocracy. Everyone knows that it is better to hold a convention with the smallest possible number of men in order to expedite matters (how would it work if all the stockholders attended a corporation meeting?) but every member can expect to be fairly represented, and when affairs of importance arise we will always resort to a mailing vote.

A Remarkable Service for You

FOR YOUR benefit, MOTOGRAPHY has inaugurated a remarkable new exhibitors' service.

INFORMATION

You may ASK US ANYTHING that has to do with the business and we will do our level best to secure for you the desired information.

USE CUTS FREE

You can borrow, free of all expense, any of the cuts you see in MOTOGRAPHY to run in your programs or other printed matter. Simply ask us for the cuts immediately after they appear in the magazine.

We will aid you in your advertising—write it for you, if you wish—and help in the making of your programs.

BOOKINGS

We will make any booking you may desire, or give you information regarding bookings you wish to make.

We will get reports from exhibitors on the business done on any picture you contemplate running and want to be dead sure of.

If there is anything you want to purchase or get prices on, ask us and we will help you to the best of our ability. Give us detailed information.

Ask us if you would like some practical aid in making your house pay, or making it pay MORE, also in regard as to how to build, remodel, and so forth. Ask us about screens, organs, ticket venders, or any form of theater equipment.

IT'S YOUR TRADE PAPER

In short, MOTOGRAPHY will tell you anything that can be found out, and will do anything possible for you that you cannot conveniently do for yourself.

Remember: MOTOGRAPHY is YOUR TRADE PAPER, to help YOU and our other 9,000 exhibitors first, last and all the time.

ASSAIL DEPOSIT SYSTEM

Chicago Exhibitors Ask to be Treated Like Other Business Men—Committee to Confer With Exchange Managers

Outcries against the injustices worked by the deposit system and effective remedies which might be applied to lessen the evil occupied a large part of the time and came in for pretty thorough discussion at the second meeting of the Chicago chapter of the American Exhibitors' Association last week at 19 West Adams street.

The plan being applied by the Milwaukee Photoplay Association was cited by A. J. Krug as a practical way to eliminate deposits and still leave the exchange ample guarantee against being victimized by unscrupulous exhibitors. Under the new system the association itself agrees to stand for any losses which the exchange may suffer through the actions of its members. Exhibitors are not required to put up deposits with each exchange with which they do business but place their own deposit with the association which thus becomes their guarantor.

The exhibitor who wants to make a booking merely has to present a card certifying that he is a member of the association and his credit immediately becomes as extensive as he desires to make it. The exchange is safe because it knows the association is behind each one of its members.

A committee holds hearings on grievances and has the power to settle disputes and protect all parties.

"What we want," said Mr. Krug, "is to be treated like business men and not like a bunch of scalawags. There is no trouble any longer in Milwaukee where this system is in operation and we certainly need something like that here in Chicago. Other business men are given credit if they are honest and don't ask more than their interests are worth. Why shouldn't the exhibitor be shown the same courtesy?"

The question of a substitute will be taken up this week by the committee appointed at the last meeting by President Schoenstadt to confer with the Chicago exchange managers. And the prospect of real results are said to be very promising.

A motion was passed to acquaint Charles Pettijohn, general manager of the American Exhibitors' Association, with the efforts of the music publishers to levy a seat tax on theater owners. It was decided best to take no official action in the matter until he had been consulted.

Applications for membership continue to come in, the total enrollment at present being nearly eighty.

Jere J. Cohan Dead

Jere J. Cohan, head of the noted theatrical family known as the Four Cohans, and father of George M. Cohan, died on August 1 at his home in New York.

It is estimated that more than a thousand people of the theatrical and motion picture world attended the funeral services, held at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, New York, August 3.

Mrs. Vernon Castle, the Pathe star, and a company of seventeen players together with director Frank H. Crane of the Astra, are at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks where several weeks will be spent in taking scenes for Mrs. Castle's next feature.

The Weaker Sex, with Dorothy Dalton (Triangle) —"A very good picture. Title was against it for this section."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

Might and the Man, with Elmo Lincoln (Triangle) —"A good crowd. Good picture."—C. A. Natter, Jr., Eagle Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y.—In middle class neighborhood.

Pinched in the Finish, with Ford Sterling (Keystone)—"Fine comedy."—J. W. Allender, Lyric Theater, Spokane, Wash.

The Squawman's Son, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A very fine picture. Well liked. Fair business."—E. C. Miller, Alcazar, Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The Squawman's Son, with Wallace Reid (Paramount)—"A fair picture. Plot unconventional. Well acted."—Bert Goldman, New Princess Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

The Long Trail, with Lou Tellegen and Mary Fuller (Paramount)—"A wonderful picture. Seemed to be liked by everybody. It has an all-star cast. With its beautiful snow scenes, it is a good offering for this time of year and brought unusually good business during a hot week."—E. C. Miller, Rose Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

ing to brag about. Business was average. The star is not as popular as we would like her to be."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Burton Holmes Travelogs (Paramount)—"Good program bracers are these single-reel scenics. We have patrons who come to see them alone."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Out of the Drifts, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"Wonderful photography. Action very good and star very pleasing. A good summer show."—M. H. Whitham, Allendale Theater, Buffalo, N. Y.

Maria Rosa, with Geraldine Farrar (Paramount)—"Great picture. Pleased my audience. Photography good; interiors and exteriors excellent. Star absolutely first-class, and story interesting."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Rainbow Princess, with Ann Pennington (Paramount)—"None of them beats Ann very much. Delightful entertainment from start to finish."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Seventeen, with Jack Pickford (Paramount)—"Chock full of good entertainment."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Redeeming Love, with Kathlyn Williams (Paramount)—"This is a picture full of human interest, and which gives many a tug at your heart-strings. My audience liked it very much."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Each to His Kind, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"This star draws well. Story good. Oriental settings."—J. B. Reisman, Dale Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Silks and Satins, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount)—"The star saves the play. Too much costume."—J. B. Reisman, Dale Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Freckles, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff (Paramount)—"A good picture with two young stars that are due to be winners. Business good. Title seemed to attract."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

Snow White, with Marguerite Clark (Paramount) "It is impossible to produce a more entertaining picture. The universal comment was 'What a beautiful picture for the children,' but I noticed that both old and young were kids during the showing of it."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Ashes of Embers, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Excellent, a regular Pauline Frederick picture. This star always draws well here."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Traveling Salesman, with Frank McIntyre (Paramount)—"Good. High class comedy. Sure to please any audience and change grouches to grins."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Rough House, with Roscoe Arbuckle (Paramount)—"I make it a point to run every high-class comedy made. Judging from the applause and laughter, this beat 'em all. 'Fatty's on the map.' To save the roof, I opened all the doors and gave the screams full vent. People one or two blocks away heard the enthusiasm and came to the Crystal, taking their place in line to wait for seats."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Right Direction, with Vivian Martin (Paramount)—"A pleasing, well-liked star in a good picture, unusual enough to give variety to any program."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Plow Girl, with Mae Murray (Paramount)—"A good story, well acted, and a valuable picture on account of its unusual character, giving spice to one's program."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Soul of Kura San, with Sessue Hayakawa (Paramount)—"An elaborate picture, well acted, with good photography, wonderful interiors, dazzling costumes. My audience liked it, but as a rule Japanese pictures are not so much in favor here as some others."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Slave Market, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Fine. The kind of picture no one can play as well as Pauline can. Pleased my audience."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Evil Eye, with Blanche Sweet (Paramount) "Far below the Paramount standard."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Parson of Panimint, with Dustin Farnum (Paramount)—"Say, don't miss this one. Dustin Farnum as a parson in a tough western mining town—somethin' doin'!"—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

The Spider, with Pauline Frederick (Paramount)—"Another characteristic Pauline Frederick picture and a good one."—Walton McNeel, Crystal Theater, Burlington, Wisconsin.

Honor and Obey, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"This is one of the best Fox films in several weeks and it pleased. Business light."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

Honor and Obey, with Gladys Brockwell (Fox)—"Excellent production but too strong for this town. Too much eternal triangle. Producers should let up on this."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

Wife Number Two, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"Just a fair picture."—E. C. Miller, Boston Theater, Chicago.—Downtown house.

The House of Terrible Scandals (Fox comedy)—"We played this on a return date and it was another hit. Will likely get it again."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

The Siren, with Valeska Suratt (Fox)—"I consider this film a bad one, edited to save throwing it away. It gave satisfaction to possibly fifty per cent of the patrons."—Gus Myers, Metropolitan Theater, Grand Forks, N. D.

Patsy, with June Caprice (Fox)—"A very good comedy drama, full of funny situations. Star, directing and business good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Two Little Imps, with Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox)—"Excellent production. Pleases them all from nine years to ninety. Business good."—Thomas Lancaster, Grande Theater, Detroit, Mich.—In foreign neighborhood.

Her Greatest Love, with Theda Bara (Fox)—"A good feature, much better than 'The Darling of Paris'."—Wm. E. Maguire, Gem Theater, Silverton, Colo.

Maternity, with Alice Brady (World)—"Pleased the higher class of patrons very much. Business only fair."—A. O. Landry, Victor Theater, Abbeville, La.

On Dangerous Ground, with Carlyle Blackwell (World)—"Very timely story. Holds the interest."—J. B. Reisman, Dale Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Tillie Wakes Up, with Marie Dressler (World)—"Farce comedy does not go well in this house."—J. B. Reisman, Dale Theater, St. Paul, Minn.

Youth, with Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge "The two stars have increased in popularity since their personal appearance at the Chicago exposition. This picture is good and business was good. I think June Elvidge deserves featuring alone in the future."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

A Self-made Widow, with Alice Brady (World)—"A fairly good picture. Fair drawing card."—M. J. Weil, Lake Shore Theater, Chicago.—In high class neighborhood.

Aladdin's Other Lamp, with Viola Danna (Metro)—"A pleasing, ordinary picture with a popular star. The title is not as good as it could be. Business good."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

The Call of Her People, with Ethel Barrymore (Metro)—"The star has not the personality and youthful looks to be featured in girl roles. Business poor, due to the type of story, although the picture has plenty of punch and action. Deals with gypsy life."—Charles H. Ryan, Garfield Theater, Chicago.—In middle class neighborhood.

First Bobby Connelly Film

This week marks the inauguration of the new Bobby Connelly series, a set of ten one-reel subjects produced by Vitagraph and featuring the famous little eight-year-old star who scored such a triumph in his other series, the "Sonny Jim" pictures.

V. L. S. E., through which the new "Bobby" will be released, announces that the bookings for the series already indicate that it will exceed in popularity its predecessor. The first picture on the list, slated for release August 6, is "Bobby, Boy Scout," a drama founded on the teachings of the famous juvenile organization.

It shows Bobby in the heroic role of defender of his mother and the protector of his country's laws. He captures a band of smugglers and thereby earns a reward that saves his mother from eviction. The story has a moral for every boy, especially the members of the scout organization.

Screenshine

By Mel

WERE YOU WOUNDED?

THERE were two women exhibitors officially present at the recent gone-but-not-forgotten convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of this country.

They were Flossie Jones, who runs most everything in the theater line at Waukesha, Wisconsin, and Mrs. M. M. McFadden, owner and manager of the Lincoln Theater, Chicago.

This influx of the fair sex into the national convention is, of course, to be expected in war times, when women are misplacing lots of men.

And, too, it was a very good thing to have the women present at the convention, for many onlookers expected that at any minute it would be necessary to organize a corps of Red Cross nurses to care for those put out of commission in the sessions of the convention.

The verbal bombardments and the gas attacks were sufficient to put any man on the verge of first aid; there was many a man "hurt" and there was many a horse de combat.

Dennis J. Sullivan, general manager of Mutual Film Corporation, isn't naturally shy and retiring—only on special occasions. Just at present, however, he is admitting only strangers and those on serious business missions to his private sanctum. Friends, and especially the kind that slap you on the shoulder with a "hail fellow, well met" are barred. Mr. Sullivan is even at swords points with his coat. And the reason? The Mutual manager let the sun get too close to him while bathing at Wilson beach, and since then he's been particularly touchy.

THE SHIPPING CLERK'S PIPE DREAM

Miracles are always miracling in the realm of percolating pictures. Witness this latest, from K. E. S. E.:

"From shipping clerk in a film exchange to a millionaire's estate with a bank account of $1,750,000, is some shifting of positions. That is exactly what has happened to Thomas S. Hackett, employed until last week in George Kleine's K. E. S. E. branch office at Washington, D. C.

"Mr. Hackett was recently notified that this sum, representing his grandfather's estate, had been placed to his credit in the Bank of England. He left with his wife last week to claim the fortune."

WRECK OF AN IDEA

Film directors are accustomed to staging all kinds of wrecks, terrible to behold, but usually safe to the participants.

In view of this fact, railroads should arrange to put all their wrecks under charge of directors. It would save a large number of lives each year.

We're going to send this idea to the New York Central and ask them five thousand for it.

The new exhibitors' organizations are each claiming that the other is dead, or never was alive.

Let's see which one will prove it.

When Del Goodman, Pathe salesman, buys that flivver he has been flirting with for weeks, eight salesmen for the Chicago exchange will be paying the gasoline tax. Oh, for the life of a fillum man.

Losers That Were Made to Pay

HOW FIVE BANKRUPTS WERE CORALLED AND CAPITALIZED

"How to Make a Loser Pay"

THIS story is the first of those to be given direct from the experiences of men who have tackled the job and won. Conditions vary, of course, and alter cases, but the principles involved in switching a loser to the profit side of the books are much the same throughout the country.

Watch for these invaluable articles. They mean money for the men who have "losers" on their hands.

FIVE theaters in competition, serving the picture needs of a town of twenty thousand inhabitants, were on the verge of bankruptcy a year ago. Today, five theaters controlled by one management, supply the same populace and are prospering. This is the recent history of the amusement business in Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

Of the five theaters in the city, all managed by the Eau Claire Theater Corporation, three are strictly picture houses; one, the Grand, occasionally plays road-shows and speaking plays and is devoted to special feature pictures at advanced prices, and one, the Orpheum, runs vaudeville with pictures. Three of the theaters run matinees daily; all run two matinee performances on Sundays, at 2:30 and four o'clock. Most pictures at each theater are given a two-day. Since all of the theaters are located in the downtown district, no picture is run at more than one theater, unless on a repeat booking. Each house has its orchestra.

H. A. Schwahn, who has managed the theaters for the corporation during the year, gives thoughtful attention to the problem of pleasing the people and his good judgment has doubtless been a large factor in the success of the project.

"We Gave Them Better Pictures"

"One of the reasons why we are making money now, where the houses formerly lost, is that we are giving the people better pictures," said Mr. Schwahn, in discussing the problems he encountered during the year. "Under the separate managements, the exhibitors were spending a large sum of money on newspaper advertisements in order to compete with each other and then were running sensational and cheap films. The people were disgusted and were remaining away from picture shows. Now we run announcements of our programs at each theater in the daily paper, but our appropriation for newspaper advertising for the five theaters is not more than one house spent formerly."

Attractive combination programs announcing the features for the week at all the theaters are issued also. These are well arranged, with plenty of "white space," and illustrated with cuts, some of them borrowed from MOTOGRAPHY. Billboard advertising is not neglected.

Run No Unclean Pictures

But the selection of pictures Mr. Schwahn considers most important. "At the beginning of our management," he said, "we decided firmly on one thing. We would show no sensational or suggestive plays. We would not even consider one whose title might offend. We also decided to run the best pictures we could get, pictures that will entertain and please. Cheap and sordid pictures make enemies. By our policy we have avoided any question of censorship and have made converts to picture-going."

So important does Mr. Schwahn believe the question of selection to be that at the beginning of the summer he changed his method from program to open booking for most of the theaters. In selecting pictures he uses a guide, MOTOGRAPHY's "What the Picture Did For Me" department, to which he is also a faithful contributor. As soon as the magazine arrives, Mr. Schwahn goes over this department carefully, and, in order to get the most value out of the reports, he has his secretary card-index them so that he has a large number of comments on each picture. In this way, he has a very fair idea of the "pleasing power" of each feature on the market. A picture which pleases the majority of audiences from Spokane, Washington, to Haverhill, Massachusetts, will doubtless be liked in Eau Claire, Wisconsin, while a feature which is judged excellent for a downtown Chicago theater, but does not go well in the neighborhood district may be passed by in favor of something else.

Unique System of Repeat Showings

Mr. Schwahn has worked out a unique system in the matter of repeat showing. At one of the theaters,

The Orpheum, O'Klare and Lyric Theaters of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, losers that were made to pay.

the Lyric, he shows re-issued favorites each Saturday and Sunday. He advertises this fact and the patrons watch with interest the announcement of the Lyric programs, hoping to see again a well-liked picture or catch one they had missed. Mr. Schwahn reports unusually good business at these showings.

As a rule, a happy, briskly moving play pleases the audiences best, clever comedy-dramas and well costumed society plays, and entertaining love stories, says this exhibitor. Vice investigation reports, morbid sex-stories, tragic melodramas, anything of this sort fails to please, and this sort of picture will not be shown to Eau Claire patrons while Mr. Schwahn has charge of the theaters.

CABANNE'S CONTRACT ENDS

Noted Metro and Griffith Director May Produce for the Open Market—Has Remarkable List of Pictures to Date

Unusual interest throughout the trade and among motion picture exhibitors and patrons alike centers around the future plans of William Christy Cabanne, one of the foremost directors in the field who has just added additional laurels to his long record in the presentation of "The Slacker," a seven-reel Metro product featuring Emily Stevens and dealing with the foremost topic of the day. It is known that his famous contract, through which Metro pays him $1,000 per week, terminates on September 1. Thus far there has been no announcement as to whether he will remain with the big producing concern or will accept one of the number of attractive propositions which have been made to him. It is known that he will at least conclude another picture for Metro before his present contract expires. The nature of this story and the name of the star has not yet been announced.

Director Cabanne, rumor has it, may form his own producing organization and make feature pictures for the open market. This report was neither confirmed nor denied at the offices of the director in New York. It is considered not improbable, however, that he will follow this course, as present market conditions seem to favor such action.

During the year just drawing to a close Mr. Cabanne has achieved a remarkable record. In addition to "The Great Secret," the Bushman-Bayne serial, he has directed Emmy Wehlen, Frances Nelson, Emily Stevens and others in successful releases.

Prior to joining the Metro forces, Mr. Cabanne acted as chief of staff for D. W. Griffith, directing many multiple reel productions for Triangle, Mutual and Biograph. Though comparatively young, he is one of the old timers in the film business. We await with interest the announcement of Mr. Cabanne's plans for the future.

Gerrard with Fairbanks

Charles Gerrard, a member of Douglas Fairbanks' supporting cast in "Down to Earth," has received from Fairbanks a contract calling for his appearance in the next two productions which the actor-athlete will make for Artcraft. Gerrard played speaking parts on Broadway for several seasons, and went West a year or so to do picture work in the Morosco studios, going from there to the Lasky company, where Fairbanks found him.

FINISH VITAGRAPH FEATURES

"Clean-up" Week Results in Completion of Four Blue Ribbons for September Release—to Increase Production

Last week was "clean-up" week at Vitagraph's plant in Brooklyn, no less than four Blue Ribbon features being rushed to completion simultaneously.

Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott, who have been working under the direction of Chester Withey in "An Alabaster Box" finished up their labors Tuesday. Evart Overton and Miriam Fouche, who have been doing "Soldiers of Chance" under the direction of Paul Scardon, also completed their task Tuesday, and the following day Ashley Miller brought Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald under the wire in "The Princess of Park Row."

Edward Earle and Betty Howe, who have been engaged for five weeks on "For France," a big feature being handled by Wesley Ruggles, ended their work Thursday.

"Who Goes There?" a super-feature in which Harry Morey and Corinne Griffith are being directed by W. P. S. Earle, is nearing completion, the director working the great Chambers' story with extraordinary dispatch.

While the eastern directors were cleaning up, William Wolbert, at the western Vitagraph plant, was taking the final scenes of "The Bandit's Double," featuring Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman.

Four of the five completed features will appear on the September release schedule of Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., the list being arranged as follows:

Sept. 3—"Soldiers of Chance," by James Oliver Curwood. A story of financial intrigue involving a young American man and girl in a South American revolt.

Sept. 10—"An Alabaster Box," from the book by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman and Florence Morse Kingsley. It is the story of a daughter's loyalty to her father, a weathy man who met ruin and was sent to prison as an embezzler. Alice Joyce plays the role of the devoted daughter and Marc MacDermott that of the father.

Sept. 17—"For France," a romantic story by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady dealing with the love of a young American for a little French girl, the daughter of a famous artist. The war serves as a background for the main love theme, but there is an absence of battle scenes, the war element being confined to brief flashes that serve as high lights for the love story.

Sept. 24—"The Bandit's Double," by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady. A story of an outlaw's infatuation for a beautiful girl. She mistakes another man for the outlaw and by so doing brings him close to death.

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph company, announces that with the beginning of September the Vitagraph product will be turned out at the rate of twelve reels per week, and in some cases even this will be increased. In order to maintain this rate of production the several star combinations who have just wound up their work were assigned new plays and production on them has already been started.

H. E. Friedman, formerly branch manager at Minneapolis and associate branch manager at New York, has just been appointed manager of Pathe's Denver exchange.

We Offer Service

THE only proper policy for a trade journal is "Readers first." The primary purpose and aim of an honest trade paper is to interest and inform and benefit and serve its readers. There is too much tendency nowadays in the publication field to regard the advertiser as the logical recipient of first service. The advertising in a trade paper is really the publisher's by-product. It is only incidental to the real purpose of the paper.

Sometimes—generally, indeed—this "by-product" is the only profitable part of the business. But that condition is not peculiar to the trade paper. Look at the meat packing industry, for example. Its profits are in its by-products of hides and hair and glue and soap and fertilizer and so on. Turning out meat alone, it would lose money. Nevertheless, meat continues to be its reason for existence.

And the exhibitors' meat in a motion picture trade paper continues to be its reason for existence. The policy of "Advertisers first"—the commonest of all policies—brings more advertisers; but that does not justify the violation of the publisher's unwritten pledge—"Readers first."

We are glad to be able to say that MOTOGRAPHY has always considered its readers more important than its advertisers. For nearly nine years it has adhered as closely as possible to the principle that its duty to advertisers is merely to present their messages to as many customers as possible; but its duty to readers is not fulfilled until it has exhausted every means of rendering service to them.

We find now that we can afford to increase our service to readers. It is our ambition and our purpose to build this "service-to-readers" idea until it surpasses that of any trade paper in any field. That is a pretty big order, because some of the older industries, like iron, and coal, and lumber, have trade journals, with well developed service policies. We cannot accomplish all our ambitions at once; it may take years to develop plans that satisfy us. We may not be satisfied even then.

But we are biting off a pretty large chunk of service right away, just as a starter. Read the announcement on page 328 of this issue. Read it with the assurance that we are backing up every word of it with an organization prepared to carry out all its promises. And remember our nine years of experience in this business—all of which we place at your service.

You will note that all of this service work that we announce is outside of MOTOGRAPHY'S pages. It is something that we give in addition to the magazine. And it is freely available to all motion picture exhibitors. They need not even be among MOTOGRAPHY'S nine thousand subscribers. The only pass-word necessary is "I am a picture theater man."

We aim to spend considerable money and time on this service work, and we want exhibitors to take advantage of it. We want them to realize that there are no strings tied to it and that it is absolutely free.

In the announcement we have tried to make it clear that we are prepared to undertake any sort of commission that any exhibitor will entrust us with. If we have not managed to convey that impression, let it be said here. If the specific thing you want is not mentioned, ask for it anyway.

We are enthusiastic about this service proposition, and we expect to devote much time and money from now on to perfecting it. As the years go by we hope to develop the best trade paper service ever given.

And our readers can be certain that as long as there is a motion picture business (which looks, from here, like forever) MOTOGRAPHY will be in front when it comes to serving its readers. For that, as we started out by saying, is the main duty and privilege of the true trade paper, and the only policy that leads to permanent success.

Give a Film a Bad Name and Kill It

GREAT pictures, as a rule, have had great titles. The same thing cannot consistently be said of great novels, or even of great short stories. Some stories achieve celebrity in spite of poor or indifferent titles. But seldom has a picture become an extraordinary success unless it was cleverly named.

Which shows that films need closer attention to title than do stories in type. Generally they do not get it. Wise fiction writers of the modern school consider a story half sold when it has been well named.

Wise producers doubtless hold the same theory, but a good many of them do not give enough time to the subject of names for their products.

The grouping of a few words to form a title seems a small matter to spend a lot of time on. Men accustomed to handling big projects grow impatient when the precise combination they want eludes them, and turn the task over to a subordinate. Sometimes they give it up, because they are searching for something impossibly brilliant. And sometimes, it must be admitted, the talented producer of dynamic pictures simply is not qualified, mentally, for the turning of a clever title.

That does not matter, of course. Big men soon learn that the things they cannot do they can employ others to do, with skill and economy. Title writing is almost a profession in itself, like newspaper headline writing. The fault of some producers simply is that they have not grasped the importance of the trick.

A poor picture with a good title may not be a repeater, but it will bring them in the first time all right. A good picture with a poor title might as well be a poor picture. Instead of a ballyhoo, as it should be, the bad title is a knocker; it stands out front and shouts, "Don't go in; the show is no good!" On the printed program for the week, which the enterprising exhibitor distributes in his neighborhood, the bad and indifferent titles put the readers' interest to sleep. "Oh," they say, "there's nothing here that I care to see. Let's go to a 'regular' show."

When the title does not attract, the producer has to fall back upon his stars. The people may not know what the picture is about, but they like Maurice Jones, or Francilla Smith, and that brings attendance. So the producer has another reason for paying big salaries to players —they take the place of a title.

Because title writing looks simple (judged by the size of the finished work) the idea of letting a man devote a great deal of time to the task is doubtless repugnant to the average employer. Yet there have been many film titles that were worth weeks of thought—and some of them were one-word titles at that!

"Give a dog a bad name and kill it" becomes a serviceable proverb for the picture business if we but substitute "film" for "dog." Give a film a good name and it will sometimes rise above its own mediocrity and have greatness thrust upon it. People judge the picture after they have seen it; but they judge the title before they open their pocket-books. A poor picture looseneth the tongue of criticism; but a good name relaxeth the purse-strings and keepeth the box office alive.

The thing to remember is that a good title is not merely a name; it is an advertisement, a ballyhoo, an invitation, a promise. And those are the things that bring business and make the exhibitor write to our What the Pictures Did for Me department, "People liked this picture; played to a record crowd!"

Children Programs Successful

"BETTER FILMS" COMMITTEE REPORTS STEADY PROGRESS

THE July bulletin of the Affiliated Committees for Better Films has just been issued by the National Committee for Better Films. It contains many points of interest for the exhibitor in neighborhood theaters who is striving to please the young people of his district and their parents. The report opens with a thought-compelling article by Orrin G. Cocks, secretary of the committee.

Some of this material an exhibitor may wish to present to his patrons, and he may make extracts from it for his program, or even have it published in the local newspaper.

Children vs Boys and Girls

Mr. Cocks says: "I have a few plain words to say to those who talk about pictures for little children. Don't try to find films for them. They are better off with absolutely no knowledge of the joys of the screen until they enter the period of rapid mental and physical development. With the boys and girls whose minds are racing with their bodies toward maturity the problem is different. In this period of increasing activity the picture has messages to deliver which are almost beyond expression by even the loving parents or the well-trained teacher. Selections of motion picture stories may well be made for them by sensible men and women who know and love this irrepressible group. Those of us who care for young people will freely use the motion picture with boys and girls, while we exert all our influence with parents and others to make the screen a rare treat for the children."

Young People's Shows in England

The following letter has been received from Dr. Charles, editor of the Educational Department of the Transatlantic Review:

We look forward to a great increase of specially selected juvenile pictures both for educational and entertainment purposes after the war. As Mr. Tibbett was recently appointed honorary organizer of the film section of the National Service on behalf of the British Government, we are taking up this question with various government departments, both from a propaganda and development side and are developing our organization all over the country so as to be able to cope with opposition when the time arrives. We consider it an excellent idea that your national board of review should have installed a juvenile motion picture department and shall be pleased to receive regularly their list of films selected for children and give it suitable publicity so that their example may be followed on this side. We shall be pleased if you will communicate the substance of this letter to the various groups interested so that they may communicate with us further items of interest in this matter.

Better Films in Oregon

Mrs. Edna A. Bell, chairman of the motion picture committee of the Portland Federation of Women's Clubs, reports:

Special matinees have been found impracticable in Portland on account of extra expense involved. It is thought the best way to encourage better films is to see that really worthwhile pictures are well advertised. This will also insure the co-operation of the exhibitor, as publicity is one of his most difficult problems, and it often happens that the best films fail to draw because of inadequate publicity.

I would suggest that a committee from each club in town send a request to the school board to allow a notice of motion picture plays especially suitable for young people to be posted on the school bulletin boards, on the recommendation of a general committee of five or six well-known women interested in this work. There should be only one general committee in town, and the names and phone numbers of its members should be at the exchanges, that their co-operation might be easily obtained by the exhibitors.

This way of working seems to me the most practical, as little can be done for children's films without the co-operation of the schools, and if the school board knows the parents' desire they will do their part.

Pictures in War Time

The importance of the picture theater during the war was emphasized in the answer the committee made the question of summer programs for children.

We have found that many committees have felt that they ought to discontinue the special entertainments for young people during the summer. In some cities it is far wiser to do this than to try to attract the children. In every case, however, we have advised that in view of the coming on of war conditions it would be dangerous to drop the better film entertainments lest they have the same moral conditions in the United States which are quite prevalent in England, France and Germany. We believe it is a patriotic duty, therefore, to transfer the emphasis to the family pictures and work for them just as enthusiastically during the summer as committees have been working for the children during the winter. Almost everyone recognizes the primary importance of good entertainment for those who are making high wages because of the war and those others who feel the effects of the withdrawal of breadwinners.

Successful Young People's Performances

Mrs. Irene Page Solomon, a Philadelphia exhibitor, has had unusual success with young people's performances. She first sought the co-operation of other theater managers. She then interviewed heads of Mothers' Club, Fathers' Association and Home and School League, teachers, editors of local papers, and other prominent people. All welcomed the idea and promised support. Several preliminary circulars explaining the plan were sent broadcast. A letter was addressed and read to the Mothers' Club, Fathers' Association and Home and School League, and the matter was discussed at these meetings as being a good departure.

The honor pupils and teachers in one of the local schools were invited as guests at the first performance. It had been planned to make this a permanent feature, but the proper permission could not be gained from the school authorities.

The performances are not called children's matinees, but are advertised as "Saturday Specials, something new for the Youngsters and Grown-ups, too."

They are given at 2:15 Saturday afternoon, a different program being substituted from the usual Saturday matinee, a new departure in Philadelphia. Other features besides pictures are introduced. Mrs. Solomon dubbed herself the movie mother, and is present at every performance, always giving a little talk to the children before the pictures start. There are songs accompanied by Richard Bach on the big organ. Prizes are being given for essays on subjects relating to the pictures. Sometimes souvenirs are given. There is also a contest with a prize for the one getting the most words out of the caption, "Frankford Theater," which is proving more popular than the essays.

Special Performances in New York

For a year and a half special performances of selected films for young people have been conducted in the upper part of Manhattan by Mrs. E. R. Dessez. They have been very successful from every point of view, thousands of children attending them. "We (Mrs. Dessez and Mrs. Speed, now of Washington) began the work of establishing the children's matinees," said Mrs. Dessez, "without any organization, believing that the children's matinees, to be successful, should be community affairs. Also we sought to combine an ethical interest and financial profit by sharing receipts with the exhibitor, hoping to open up a new field of activity for ourselves and for other women who might be interested in this kind of work. A result has been that the children of the neighborhood have been withdrawn from the other performances.

"I feel strongly that with the number of productions that are suitable for young people there is no reason why the young people's matinees or the family performance should not be established in every community theater in New York. The interest has grown enormously in the last year and I am hoping by next fall to get some of the war relief organizations to take up the subject of motion pictures through their committees on recreation. Certainly in any effort to keep the national life normal an inexpensive and wholesome amusement is a necessity and I hope and believe that the work will take enormous strides within another year."

CRITICISES PRODUCERS

M. A. Schlesinger of Mayfair Urges Legislation to Protect Exhibitors and Stars from Release of Old Pictures

In an interview M. A. Schlesinger, president of the Mayfair Film Corporation said to MOTOGRAPHY:

Individual producers oftimes are responsible for much of the unjust criticism heaped upon the trade owing to abuses indulged in by them. A very flagrant case has just come to my notice pertaining to Mayfair's star and the history is interesting: She appeared quite sometime ago in a production made and released by a foreign company in England. She had just then about made her debut on the screen. She was "found" by an American producer and brought to this country; made exceptionally rapid strides to success; was soon in great demand and one of the largest producing companies induced her to join their staff. For fear that the old English film might be exploited in America to compete with the star's better works here, the film was purchased and shelved by the American producer, but immediately the star completed her contract and severed her connection with the firm, the American manufacturer released the old English production under the guise of being American make and of a recent date. It is an imposition on the exhibitor who contracts for the latest made releases and an imposition on the exhibitors who pay their money to see the star in her latest pictures.

It would spell fraud in any other industry, but in the present chaotic state of the film's business little or no objection is raised to this condition.

Should Date Each Print

At the next session of the Legislature, I shall have a measure introduced compelling producers to conspicuously brand each positive print of film with the date of the production and the date of the copyright. This practice is common in the publication of books and other works—why should the films be different?

A remedy might be found if actors and actresses would insist upon placing a time limit in their contract with producers whereby the producers would be prohibited from releasing pictures in which they appear after a certain specified term has expired.

The Mayfair Film Corporation has voluntarily decided upon an innovation whereby they will refrain from exhibiting pictures in which the star is featured after a fixed period, without the written consent of the star who is featured.

This will save many an artist the awkward embarrasment after reaching the pinnacle of success, of finding a crude work of his or her infancy on the screen, working out great detriment to the artist, to the exhibitor and the public alike.

NEW UNIVERSAL OFFERINGS

Releases for Week of August 13 Include Two Strong Dramas, Half a Dozen Comedies, and Novel News Features

Willard Mack is the author of "A Wife's Suspicions," the Gold Seal drama which heads Universal's regular schedule of releases beginning August 14. This follows Jack Mulhall in "The Midnight Man," a Butterfly picture released Monday, August 13, under separate booking arangements. Val Paul and Betty Scahde are featured in the leading roles. The story has to do with the complications that arise when Mary Bradford surprises her husband in conversation with some ill-conditioned strangers who appear to be on familiar terms with him. "The Rushin' Dancers," a Nestor Comedy, featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will be released on the same date. This is an uproarious burlesque of the classic dancing craze, and details the events that transpire when a dancing teacher opens a studio "for ladies only" in Cactus Flat.

"Rough Stuff," a two-reel L-Ko Komedy, featuring Dan Russell and Gladys Varden, will head the releases for Wednesday, August 15. Directed by Noel Smith under the supervision of J. B. Blystone, this carefree tale tells of the many laughable events that happened simultaneously with the opening of a fashion pageant in the hotel run by Mrs. Doehound and her flirtatious husband. The 85th issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will also be released on the same date.

Harry Carey will be the star of the dramatic feature issued the following day, Thursday, August 16. The title of Carey's vehicle will be "Cheyenne's Pal." It is a colorful and swiftly-moving little drama of the horse and cattle country, written by Jack Ford and Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and produced by Jack Ford. "Out Again, In Again," a Joker Comedy featuring William Franey, will appear on the same day. This unusual commentary on prison life was written by Tom Gibson and produced by William Beaudine. It tells of the misadventures that befell Prisoner No. 13 who is elected to be guest of honor at his own execution. Harry Mann, Eileen Roberts and Milburn Moranti fill the other roles in support of Franey.

"The Brass Girl," a two-reel Victor Comedy, featuring Matt Moore and Jane Gail, is the offering for Friday, August 17, together with the 32nd number of the Universal Screen Magazine.

Universal Current Events, which has shown a remarkable increase in popularity of late, will appear in its fourteenth issue on Saturday, August 18, together with a Joker Comedy, featuring Gale Henry, entitled "Back to the Kitchen," Powers' Educational devoted to "Algeria, Old and New," and a Powers' Comic Cartoon, "Doing His Bit."

During the week, the eighth episode of "The Gray Ghost" will be released outside Greater New York. This will be entitled "The Double Floor," and features Emory Johnson, Priscilla Dean, Harry Carter and Eddie Pole.

Teams, horses and swarthy drivers continue their task of leveling that part of the Vitagraph studio land in Hollywood which is to be the site of the new administration building. A fate of distinction is in store for the building which now houses the company's business offices; it will be converted into stars' dressing rooms.

Scenes from Greater Vitagraph's visualization of Edith Ellis' noted stage play, "Mary Jane's Pa." Marc McDermott and Mildred Manning are in the leading roles.

"Mary Jane's Pa"

August 13 is the date set for the release of Greater Vitagraph's visualization of Edith Ellis' famous stage play, "Mary Jane's Pa," with Marc MacDermott and Mildred Manning in the stellar roles.

As a stage play, this vehicle made a phenomenal success, attaining long runs in New York, and as a road attraction.

The story, which is known to the majority of stage followers, deals with "Pa Perkins," a man of lackadaisical tendencies, who, in a fit of wanderlust, deserts his family, consisting of his devoted wife, Portia, and his two little daughters, Mary Jane and Lucille.

Eventually he returns, broken in spirit and pocket, a victim of his own perfidy. His true identity known only to his wife, who seeks to hide it from her daughters, he assumes the duties of man of all work. In this guise he wins the affection of lovable "Mary Jane," who regards him in the light of a sage and makes him her confidant.

How ultimately he expiates the wrong to his wife and redeems himself in her eyes by heroically defending her from an infuriated mob, makes a photoplay replete with quaint comedy, pathos and a well sustained suspense.

Playing the title role created on the stage by Henry E. Dixey, Marc MacDermott gives a portrayal of the temperamental wanderer that is declared to be one of the most finished character portrayals ever transmitted to the screen. The part is a difficult one, involving a "heavy" characterization, but one calling for sympathy.

Mildred Manning plays with consumate art the part of the twelve year old girl, "Mary Jane," who is instrumental in bringing about the regeneration of her beloved "Pa." This picture marks the debut of Miss Manning on the V. L. S. E. program, after gaining an extensive following and greatly increasing her prestige by her work in the series of O. Henry stories.

Triangle for August 12

Louise Glaum and William Desmond are presented as the stars of the Triangle program for the week beginning August 12th.

Miss Glaum, known as "the peacock siren," will appear in "Golden Rule Kate," a play that offers her a strikingly different characterization than any she has assumed since becoming a star. Instead of appearing in the silken integuments of a vampire, she will step forth in the beads and buckskin of a western dance hall girl.

William Desmond appears with Alma Reuben in "Master of His Home," the story of a man's determination to have a home and a wife rather than just a house with a woman in it. He marries a social butterfly; he does not appreciate the old-fashioned glory of maternity. But when a baby comes she turns from her mother, an arrogant society woman who has poisoned the girl's outlook upon life, and goes to the rugged young husband at their cabin home in the mountains. The production was directed by Walter Edwards from a story by R. Cecil Smith. In the supporting cast are Joseph J. Dowling, Eleanor Hancock, Robert McKim, Susie Light Moon and Will H. Bray.

CHICAGO LEAGUE MEETS

Exhibitors Hold First Session After Exposition—Set Date for Open Meeting to Consider Music Tax

The first meeting of the Chicago Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, since the big national exposition and convention, took place at its hall in the Masonic Temple Friday, August 3.

The league felicitated those of its members who "staged" the big show for the exhibitors of the country and carried it to so successful a culmination. Despite the split which occured during the convention there seemed to be plenty of optimism as to the future of the league.

The meeting was more of an "after the party" affair than a business session, although the music tax came in for some serious discussion. President Joseph Hopp appointed a committee consisting of George Laing, Fred Hartman, Robert Levy, Charles Stewart and Mrs. M. McFadden to take the matter up and report on it.

An open meeting, set for August 17, is expected to result in some definite action against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The exhibitors realize how serious a thing they are handling, and feel that their efforts will be more effective if they enlist music users in general who will be hit by the tax.

George Laing, A. C. Krebs, and V. Booth were named on another committee which was appointed to revise the constitution and by laws in order to bring them in conformity with those of the National League.

The application of three new members were considered and all were accepted, after which the meeting broke up into a social affair.

Smith Has Absolute Authority

Greater Vitagraph has issued a formal statement to the industry calling attention to the fact that Albert E. Smith, its president, is an absolutely one man power in the corporation upon whom devolves the duty of making every final decision connected with the production end of the business.

During Mr. Smith's recent trip to the western studios of the corporation production conditions at the eastern studio at Flatbush, Brooklyn, reached such a condition that hurried calls were sent requesting him to return. Upon his return there were several conferences between him and his associates with the result that President Smith was placed in absolute charge, but only with the understanding that his decision would not be questioned in any way by other persons interested financially in the corporation and that he was to have a free hand to designate the pictures to be made, and could supervise production, as well as have the final say on all studio financial matters.

In designating Mr. Smith as the sole man power the directors of the corporation first learned that he was directly responsible for ninety per cent of the five-reel features released by Vitagraph since the first five-reel feature was made. The investigation by the directors further proved that it was upon its five-reel features that Vitagraph first made its reputation for super program pictures which it has retained for so many years. They also found that the five-reel pictures which have been released by Vitagraph for so many years were the financial prop of the company.

While other persons connected with Vitagraph had been working on artistic effects which were made at tremendous cost and released as special Blue Ribbon features, Mr. Smith went right along building on a solid foundation, making pictures at a price at which they would make money for Vitagraph and for the exhibitors of the country.

New Essanay Educationals

An innovation in Essanay's portion of the K. E. S. E. program in the future will be a series of one-reel educational subjects to be entitled: "The Wonders of Nature and Science."

For several months branch managers of the K. E. S. E. service, and Essanay officials have been conducting an exhaustive investigation into the present-day demands of exhibitors for program material. The inquiry has covered the entire country, including the small exhibitor as well as the large. And the general public attitude has been sounded out, as well, to determine the opinion of the people on how much of a show should be given for the admission price. In almost every instance there was a demand for one reel scenics to fill out the program.

The forthcoming Essanay series is the result of this investigation. The units will be released one each week and can be used with any program.

There will be ten pictures in the series, and these will be divided between the two subjects, the wonders of nature and the wonders of science.

Plenty of Action in New Serial

Breath-taking, mile-a-minute thrills! The crash of firearms, the smash of bone and muscle in honest-to-goodness knock down and drag out fights, a plunge from a two hundred foot cliff into swirling rapids, aeroplane raids, terrific explosions, the wrecking of a dam and the subsequent flooding of a mine by the rush of the wild torrent, the breaking of a rope bridge hundreds of feet above a canon bed, leaving men and women fighting for their lives while swinging wildly between heaven and earth—these and hundreds of other hair-raising adventures beset the character in "The Fighting Trail" and make this Vitagraph's new serial one of the most daring and enthralling outdoor productions ever filmed.

Never, since the inception of the motion picture thriller, has there been such an absolute disregard for human life and limb as in this serial of the great outdoors. William Duncan, who directed and played the leading part, is a typical man's man, an athlete without fear and willing to go through any hardship or take any chance to make a story live and breathe for the public.

A stickler for realism, Duncan forbade faking and himself led in performing feats that would have caused the cancelling of his life insurance policies had there been an inspector nearby.

Carol Holloway, picked by Duncan from among thousands of applicants, is one of the most daring women appearing in pictures. Fearlessly she went through with any "stunt" the script called for.

"The Fighting Trail" is a big departure in serial making, in that 95 per cent of the scenes are exteriors. The whole picture was filmed in the very wildest reaches of the Sierra Navada mountains, far from civilization and the influences of city life.

A new jolly tomboy picture. "Bab the Fixer," in which the hoyden girl is the vivacious Jackie Saunders. You can book it August 13.

The newspaper critics, who are close to the fans, all over the country, are strong in their praise of Miss Saunder's work.

Jackie Saunders in "Bab The Fixer"

Jackie Saunders is a tomboy of an entirely new, but just as fascinating sort, in "Bab The Fixer," a five-reel comedy drama produced by Horkheimer and scheduled for release by the Mutual Film Corporation August 13.

"Bab" is a harum-scarum daughter of quarreling parents and declined quite firmly to fall for her mother's social ambitions. There is a dash of Wall Street and some of the wild west with a touch of Fifth avenue finishing school in the production.

"Bab The Fixer" provides Miss Saunders with a role most suitable to her talents and she has carried it out extraordinarily well. It gives her opportunity for full display of her turbulent energy and inexhaustible vivacity without overdoing the part.

She has given evidence, in her recent productions, of her wide talents and in "Bab The Fixer" she is as much at home among the luxurious apartments of Fifth avenue as she is in a corduroy skirt on the ranch.

Sherwood MacDonald, director of "Bab the Fixer," is a director of nation-wide fame, having handled several of the Saunders successes.

As a director and author Mr. MacDonald has been connected with the production of many successful picture plays, including "Ill Starred Bobbie," "Message from Reno," "Adventures of a Madcap," "Rose Among the Briars," "Web of Crime," "Straws in the Wind," "Maid of the Wild," and more recently, "Sunny Jane' and "A Bit of Kindling," Mutual-Horkheimer successes starring Miss Saunders.

Lee Arthur, the author, is a short story writer of some fame, having written several popular stories for Adventure and other magazines devoted to outdoor happenings. Mr. Arthur submitted his idea for "Bab The Fixer" to Miss Saunders several months ago and later went into collaboration with her in preparation of the script.

Newspapers, dramatic and photoplay publications have been generous in their praise of Miss Saunders. Among the things which have been said are:

The American Drama says:

Miss Saunders', "A Bit of Kindling," reminds us of the Russian drama, because it isn't acting that makes it go but that touch of nature sedulously nurtured by a girl who loves nature.

The Alto, Texas, Herald, says:

Jackie Saunders in "The Checkmate" again convinces her Texas friends that they were correct in their original estimate of her ability to interpret the homely human emotions that live in Texas.

The Liberty, Missouri, Advance, says:

Miss Jackie Saunders in "Sunny Jane" is worth traveling over the county line to watch for an hour or two. Miss Saunders is already an institution in Missouri.

The Alliston, Ontario, Herald, says:

Jackie Saunders in "The Wildcat" seems to strike a popular chord in Ontario, and since this is the third play in which the young star has been seen here, her popularity may be considered established.

The Oelwein, Iowa, Independent, says:

Miss Jackie Saunders,' "The Tomboy of the Screen," as they call her, is for more entertaining than are the vampire ladies, apparently considered by metropolitan producers to be the last word in desirability.

The Milton, Delaware, Times, says:

Miss Jackie Saunders is gaining new popularity with each appearance in her "Tomboy" plays. In "The Wildcat," now being shown, she is especially attractive.

National Association Meets

The members of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held a meeting in New York, at the Association's headquarters, 805-806 Times building, on Monday, August 6. The session was a continuance of that held in Chicago at the time of the national exhibitors' convention.

An account of the actions taken at the latter meeting appeared in the last issue of MOTOGRAPHY. The next issue will carry the story of the continued session.

Newspaper Man Joins Goldwyn

Frederick A. Van Ness, a well known newspaperman, has resigned from the editorial staff of the New York Evening Journal to join the publicity department of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation as assistant to L. L. Arms, editorial director. Van Ness will edit and have charge of the Goldwyn exhibitor press sheet service which will be inaugurated with the release of Mae Marsh in "Polly of the Circus," on September 9. This is the opening production of the big new organization.

WHERE'S THAT SUMMER SLUMP

World Pictures Corporation Not Affected by Hot Weather—New York Exchange Broke All Records Last Week

"One of the undeniable fascinations of the picture business," said William A. Brady, director general of World Pictures, "is the element of surprise which is so frequently in evidence that nobody engaged in this industry need complain of monotony.

"The surprise which attracts the attention of World executives at this particular moment is exceedingly agreeable. Everybody familiar with any branch of theatrical amusements is of course aware that the hot weather months are detrimental—often disastrous.

"This is the annual condition which closes most 'regular' theaters altogether and makes it hard for the managers of those motion picture houses remaining open to make both ends meet. The manufacturer of photoplays in turn looks for a marked shrinkage in the volume of his business with the approach of the heated term—which is 'natural cards,' as the sporting element would say.

"It may be readily imagined that when we in the World concern found there was no shrinkage at all in our gross output, and an actual gain in some quarters over the best part of the year, we were shaken completely out of any complacency or lassitude that might have been imposed upon us by the thermometer.

"In the New York exchange, for example, the business for the week ending July 14 broke every record of this branch for a period of similar duration, winter or summer, from the very beginning of World Film Corporation activities.

"In some of our other exchanges also an unexpected growth was noted, while in none was the looked-for slump recorded.

"Seeking to account for this unforseen state of affairs we have reached the conclusion that our policy of dependable pictures and loyalty to the program system are the principal reasons for this increase.

"Similarly, at the business end of World Pictures an efficiency basis has been reached which certainly is not exceeded anywhere else. The selling force is a body that challenges comparison—and, having the regular pictures, at regular intervals, this force has built up a regular clientele of satisfied exhibitors who know what they are going to get, when they will get it, and what their patrons will think of it."

Madge Evans in "Corner Grocery"

Little Madge Evans will be the co-star with Lew Fields in "The Corner Grocery," shortly to be published by World-Pictures Brady-Made. Many of Mr. Fields' most effective scenes are with the little orphan girl who finds a way into the affections of the gentle hearted old storekeeper of this comedy of the screen, with its remarkably skillful blending of broad humor and tender pathos.

It is said by those who have witnessed the early private showings of the picture that all the essential qualities of Adolph Phillip's speaking play have been preserved in the transition from stage to film.

The appearance of little Madge as co-star with Mr. Fields is a reminder that the diminutive screen actress is a very much occupied young lady these summer days. Her first starring vehicle, "The Little Duchess," is the current offering of World Pictures, showing a child as the pivotal personage in a distinctly human drama peopled almost entirely by grown-ups.

The appearance with Mr. Fields will follow this publication after a brief interval, and not long afterward little Madge will play the entirely striking role of the child in "The Burglar."

Then will come the photoplay upon which the tiny Miss Evans is working at present, the tentative title of which is "When Carol Took the Subway." This may be changed. The picture is being directed by Harley Knoles, whose filming of "The Little Duchess" was uncommonly effective.

$250,000 A WEEK

Not Star's Salary But Amount Los Angeles Picture Plants Expend in Running Costs—$424,500 Improvements Since January

Most people know that Los Angeles is the film capital of the world, but few people realize just what extent the development of the industry has reached in the city of "lost angels."

Eight new producing companies have located there very recently and they are constantly increasing their plants and expenditures. It is estimated that the film companies of Los Angeles spend an average of a quarter of a million dollars every week.

That the picture industry is making a sure and substantial growth and that the buildings being erected are becoming more and more of a permanent character, is proved by the figures given by the Los Angeles industrial bureau. The list, which follows, shows the construction work of some of the larger companies since January 1, 1917:

Picture Plants and Additions

|---|---|
| Famous Players-Lasky Corp. | $ 90,000 |
| William Fox Studios | 75,000 |
| Sanborn Laboratories | 50,000 |
| Universal Film Mfg. Co., Universal City | 40,000 |
| Universal Film Mfg. Co., Hollywood | 20,000 |
| New York Motion Picture Co | 32,000 |
| Keystone Film Co | 30,000 |
| Pacific Film Laboratories | 20,000 |
| Bernstein Film Productions | 20,000 |
| Fine Arts Film Co | 20,000 |
| Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co | 20,000 |
| Vitagraph Co. | 4,000 |
| Christie Film Co | 3,500 |
| | $424,500 |

"A gratifying condition is the tendency exhibited by the big companies to use stone and steel in their construction work," says the Motion Picture Times.

Film Men Aid New U. S. Loan

W. F. Keohan, acting director of publicity for the United States Liberty Loan of 1917, has notified Motography officially that there will be a new issue of the big government loan in the near future. Begin now to get some funds together to absorb some of the bonds when they appear. All financial authorities are agreed that they are the best sort of investment, for they are absolutely sure and solid, and they are, of course, an essential in the speedy winning of the war.

Film men in every branch of the industry are preparing to support the new loan with the same thoroughness with which they aided the first one.

Lois Weber is cutting her first independent production, which will be released very shortly.

ARTCRAFTS FOR SEPTEMBER

"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" for Mary Pickford, Fairbanks in Fourth Artcraft Release and Elsie Ferguson in "Barbary Sheep."

September will see three Artcraft releases, the stars of which will be Mary Pickford, Elsie Ferguson and Douglas Fairbanks, in the order named.

"We feel very certain," said President Greene, "that never before have three such important releases, featuring three such famous stars, been offered in one month to motion picture exhibitors by any distributing organization. It is an indication of what Artcraft is now in position to do, in the way of keeping the progressive exhibitor supplied with the highest class of productions.

"'Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm,' directed by Marshall Neilan, is the sixth picture released by Artcraft in which Mary Pickford has been the star. It would be difficult for me to over-state the enthusiasm with which exhibitors the country over have written to us concerning the results that have attended the exhibition of these Mary Pickford productions. 'The Poor Little Rich Girl,' according to hundreds of letters received, surprised even Miss Pickford's warmest admirers by the new note she struck in her artistic depiction of Miss Gates' unusual creation. As for 'The Little American,' it makes us very proud as well as happy to know that we and the exhibitors who are showing this picture are placing before the American public a story that has been acclaimed as one of the most stirring incentives to patriotic effort that these times have witnessed.

"'Barbary Sheep' is going to be a revelation in many ways. Director Maurice Tourneur has reproduced Algeria itself for the background of the Robert Hichens story, and the first appearance of Elsie Ferguson on the screen is going to prove that her beauty loses none of its radiance through reproduction by the camera.

"Of the Fairbanks picture nothing need be said save that it is another Fairbanks picture. 'In Again—Out Again' and 'Wild and Woolly' proved to exhibitors that Mr. Fairbanks was offering to them through Artcraft the greatest work he has ever done, 'Down to Earth,' our August Fairbanks release, is bound to be another big hit, and from what we know of the September production, it will give the star greater opportunities than he has ever had before.

George M. Cohan and Anna Nilsson, his leading lady in "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

"We expect to be able to announce shortly the approximate time of release of the Geraldine Farrar picture, 'The Woman God Forgot,' the first William S. Hart feature, and the first of the special Cecil B. De Mille productions, 'The Devil Stone.'"

HOFFMAN EXCHANGE SYSTEM

Independent Distributing Organization Being Formed —Heads of Many Branches Already Appointed —Middleman to Be Eliminated

An independent distributing organization which bears evidence of developing into one of the largest, as well as the most efficient concerns of its kind, is now being formed by M. H. Hoffman, Inc., and the basis of it is service for exhibitor and patron.

"Mr. Hoffman's idea," said P. V. R. Key, manager of sales and advertising, "is to eliminate all middlemen and to give the exhibitor the best product obtainable at the lowest price consistent with quality—the Foursquare doctrine—which Mr. Hoffman has promulgated and which is being accepted everywhere as something to tie to.

"The motion picture industry knows what Mr. Hoffman has always stood for. It is aware that he appreciates that to make the most satisfactory headway he must help make headway for the exhibitor. This has furnished the impetus for Hoffman-Foursquare exchanges better designated, I may say, as Hoffman-Foursquare service stations.

"The same methods that have made Mr. Hoffman a conspicuous personality in the industry surround his procedure in establishing each of the Foursquare service stations. He has already selected a number of able men to take charge of the different branches of the new distributing company.

"Mr. Hoffman is holding open the door for the independent producers, and he will give the exhibitors what they feel they should have, and at figures that will make everyone happy."

Russian Films Ready

From the offices of the Russian Art Film Corporation comes the announcement that within a few weeks a dozen separate and distinct personalities of the screen, entirely new to the American theater, will be launched in the United States. This announcement, following a year in which not a single pronounced success has been achieved by a hitherto unknown cinema star in this country, will be received with enthusiasm by exhibitors and their patrons. They will be glad to know that there is really something new under the sun and that the American tendency to subordinate the story and make the star supreme is to be offset by the contribution to American productions of more than fifty masterpieces of Russian literature prepared for the screen by the distinguished players of the famous Moscow Theater.

Several weeks ago N. S. Kaplan, who has spent many years of his life in Europe, reached New York with several trunks full of film. From this mass of material the task has been accomplished of sorting, cutting and assembling a dozen picture plays which will be released as a premilinary Russian repertory. This task is now so well in hand that the time is not far distant when the exhibitors of the nation will be able to obtain for their theaters these unusual productions.

Jack Mulhall is the star of "The Midnight Man," the Butterfly picture scheduled for release August 13.

TRIANGLE, FULL SPEED AHEAD

Past Week the Busiest in the Annals of the Company —Six Productions Near Completion—Several Near Casualties

The past week, although the hottest of the California summer, has been one of the most strenuous in the history of the Triangle West coast studio, six plays being put through the final scenes and several more going into production.

The company headed by Belle Bennett and Roy Stewart, under the direction of Jack Conway, holds the record for intensive work. They spent the week on the hot sands of the Mojave desert, where scenes for a new western drama are being filmed. During the course of production two men were injured and another was prostrated by the heat. One of the particularly trying ordeals was the filming of a sandstorm. It was intended this should be manufactured by aeroplane engines, but, instead, nature staged a real one, and the players were compelled to travel for twenty miles while the cutting grit stung their faces and beat through their garments. At the Triangle ranch studio of Hartville, Conway planned a riding scene in which several cowboys, headed by Stewart, were to leap from the loft of a stable into the saddles of their horses and race down the mountainside. Stewart and four of the "punchers" made the hazardous jump successfully, but one sustained a broken ankle and another received internal injuries when he landed on his stomach on the saddle pommel.

Margery Wilson, with Director Tom Haffron and company of supporting players, returned from Felton, California, where the exterior scenes of the new mountain play starring her were filmed.

Olive Thomas, whose latest starring play, "An Even Break," has just been released, has been working day and night on a new story, which was written by the star and Director Lynn Reynolds. Some time this week the company expects to journey to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado for filming the final scenes.

An elaborate Egyptian setting has taken its place among the habitats of all nationalities that dot the Triangle ranch. It is designed as a background for the new play in which Louise Glaum will assume a role similar to her noted "Wolf Woman." Owing to weird lighting effects devised by Director Walter Edwards, it was necessary for the star and her company to be at work virtually every evening for the past week.

Bessie Love, under the direction of Charles Miller, who produced "The Flame of the Yukon," is busily employed on "Pernickety Polly Ann," in which she has the role of an orphan adopted by a New York millionaire. This will be the next Bessie Love feature to follow "Wee Lady Betty."

First Falcon Feature August 17

As the first considerable addition to its product General Film begins releasing the Falcon Features, four-reel dramas, on August 17. The Falcon features are being presented with strength of story as the foundation of their merit. However, groups of noted stars will be featured in the various releases. These include Henry King, Ruth Roland, Margaret Landis, Philo McCullough, William Conklin, Vola Vale, Jack Vosburgh, Ethel Ritchie, Kathleen Kirkham, Neil Hardin, R. Henry Grey, Monroe Salisbury and Daniel Gilfether. New releases will be made weekly. Each Falcon feature will be by a well known author and will have stood the test of magazine publication before screening. Every Falcon feature will be an individual production, and each will have a different star. Although all the stories will be dramas, the atmosphere will vary. In some of the stories adventure will be the main theme, in others, romance, in others mystery.
